Her example is worthy of imitation, and her many virtues deserve to be recorded, and will long be held in grateful remembrance by those who knew her, and have felt the force of her numerous excellences. She was in many respects a remarkable woman, possessed of a strong, clear, and well-balanced mind—a tender and generous heart, a masculine energy, combined with a singular tact for business. Always actuated by the highest and best of motives—she was admirably qualified for the position assigned her by Providence, and the result was, she was generally successful in her many undertakings. To all the rest, was superadded a zeal and readiness for every good work, whichever ardent piety incited a constant desire to promote the various interests of humanity and religion. She loved her Church ardently but her Christian charity was not limited thereto; she honored the Christian character, under whatever denominational peculiarity she found it, and many of other Protestant churches, with whom she was associated, confer the same distinction on her in a preeminent degree. The Sunday school and Missionary interests were peculiar objects of solicitude with her, both of which have surely missed her services, because physical infirmities, and family affliction compelled her for the last few years, almost wholly to retire from the active scenes of busy life. Yet her generous heart never ceased to sympathise with these important interests, and her hand was felt when unseen, supporting these and other claims of the church, as well as relieving the wants and ministering to the necessities of the needy. She did not wait for the cry of the needy to come to her door, and then doled out, as with reluctant hand, a scanty pittance to meet the wants of the moment, and thereby quiet conscience. On the contrary it may truthfully be said of her, "The cause which I (she) knew not I (she) searched out," and by such earnest and active benevolence, caused many a "heart to sing with joy"—see Job xxix 12-16. The whole paragraph may, to very large extent, be applied to her, as the crowning beauty of her character. She bore a prominent part in founding and sustaining that noble institution—the Protestant Orphan Asylum, and her name as well as her exertions and personal influence contributed largely to the desired consummation. Always a member of the Board of Managers, and for many years the principal officer, she labored assiduously for its success, and in the final disposition of her property, she left it, we learn, a handsome bequest, that it might share with heirs and legatees of the good things that God had so liberally bestowed upon her. While this perhaps was her favorite charity, she nevertheless was liberal to others, and always contributed largely to their support. The Benevolent Association of Ladies, that cared for the poor and destitute widows of the city, of which she was a prominent and active member, always met with a hearty response from her, in all its calls for assistance. Likewise to the many cases of individual indigence, that applied almost daily to her for relief,—she was wont to afford it often to the full extent of her ability? Can such a woman pass away from the walks of men without leaving the world "the poorer thereby?" Though by the peculiarity of her disease, her brain being much involved, we were deprived of her dying testimony—we, nevertheless, have her often repeated declaration, up to the time of her last sickness, that she was willing and waiting for the summons, and would hail the messenger with joy. Such a life crowned with such a declaration, needs no further testimony, that she is with God.

T. W. D.

THE BALTIMORE EPISCOPAL METHODIST will be issued in this city the first of next month. Its publication will be under the management of the Rev. John Poisal, Dr. Thomas E. Bond and Rev. S. S. Roszel, Editors. The "Episcopal Methodist," of Richmond, Virginia, having been transferred to Baltimore, Bishop Doggett and Rev. J. E. Edwards will continue their services as Editorial correspondents. Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D., General Agent. The best talent of the Southern Church will be employed upon its columns. The publisher has the pleasure to announce that contributions may be expected from Bishop Pierce of Georgia, Bishop Marvin of Texas, Bishop McTyeire of Alabama, Bishop Wightman of South Carolina, D. Summers of Nashville, Dr. Marshall of Mississippi, Dr. Huston of Kentucky and others.

The contributions of some of the most eminent men of other denominations will also enrich its columns: Rev. Dr. Palmer of New Orleans, Dr. Borgett of Mobile, Dr. Bullock of Baltimore, Prof. McGuffy of the University of Virginia, Rev. Peyton Harrison, and others.

It is designed to make the paper the great organ of the Episcopal Methodist Church, yet in no partisan sense will it be denominational. The General Conference which recently met in New Orleans and the whole people of the South concede to Baltimore a claim and prestige as the proper place for its publication. No pains or expense will be spared to make it a first-class Journal and a welcome visitor to every Christian household. The names of the gentlemen who will have the Editorial management of the paper, and the corps of able coadjutors associated with them are the best pledge to its patrons, that they will find the "Episcopal Methodist," in its spirit and teaching, the advocate of conservative principles and a bulwark of defense against the dangerous tendencies of the times.

We deem it proper to assure our friends, that the salutary measures of reform, which were adopted by the late General Conference, meet the cordial approval of the conductors of this paper. As it will represent every State and Conference in the South, it will afford the best advertising medium in all our business and social relations. It invites a renewal in a stronger form of those commercial and fraternal ties which must bind Baltimore and the South more closely together.

This important organ of communication between our respective communities, will be published regularly one week on fine paper, large type and quarto size at $4 00 per annum, or $2 00 for six months, invariably in advance.

Office of publication, 332 W. Baltimore Street Selby & Dulaney, where subscriptions and advertisements may be left. All the members of the Southern General Conference are authorized Agents. The preachers of the several annual Conferences and clergymen generally, are requested to act as agents for this paper.

THOS. E. BOND, Editor.
S. S. ROSZEL, Associate Editor.
JOHN POISAL, Publisher.

Baltimore, June 11th, 1866.

GEO. H. VINTEN,
PAPER WAREHOUSE,
No. 110 Poydras street, between Camp and St. Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 34, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams' Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons Type. ap7-1y

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 27.
WHOLE NUMBER 583.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, JULY 21, 1866.

$5 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE
OFFICE—114 CAMP STREET.

From Dr. Stevens' Centenary Sermon.

CATHOLICITY OF METHODISM.

METHODISM, ARMINIAN AND CALVINISTIC.

But why recall these facts? To boast? Far otherwise. Nor only because they are grateful illustrations of the success which we this year commemorate, but for two much more important reasons:

First, to remind ourselves, and, as far as may be, all our brethren of the common evangelical Protestantism of the age, that we methodists, distinctively so called, can claim no exclusive glory in this great religious history; that if we stand conspicuously on the platform, it is yet, in an important sense, a common platform. We may have too much ignored this fact. They are mostly distinguished from us by their Calvinistic, as we from them by our Arminian proclivities. We forget that Calvinistic Methodism, as represented by Whitefield and the Countess of Huntingdon, was an energetic power of the religious movement of the last century, is still such in some parts of the common field; that Methodism, as an evangelical revival, was not a dogmatic paroxysm; that the Calvinistic divergence of Whitefield from Wesley never really broke the moral unity of the movement down to the deaths of the two great founders, if it did disturb its ecclesiastical unity; that the two parties felt that they had one work in spite of their differences, and exchanged pulpits, and cooperated, and rejoiced together in their common work, and that Wesley refused to recognize the Calvinistic questions, pro or con, as condition of membership in his societies. They, on the other hand, have too much forgotten that they had an honorable share in the great movement; that, however their ecclesiastical histories may antedate that movement, yet from it dates chiefly their modern spiritual life and activity; that Whitefield, the Countess of Huntingdon, the Hills, Howell, Harris, Berridge, Shirley, Censtic, Hervey, Madden, Venn, Jay of Bath, Toplady, Romaine, and Newton of Olney, with his friend Cowper, were both theirs and ours, all in the language of Newton, "glorying in the name of Methodist;" that, in this country, Whitefield and his coadjutors, the Tennents, Blair Rowland, Frelinghuysen, and Davies, led them in their modern evangelical march; that by the labors of these men, Nassau Hall, of Princeton, arose, receiving a Methodistic baptism at its birth; that Davies, its president, was a correspondent of Wesley, and pronounced him the "restorer of religion;" that Dartmouth, (of Hanover, N. H.,) like Princeton, received funds from the English Methodists, and bears the name of one of the few British Methodists who was "noble"—the man who, as Cowper sung, that their and our Cowper, under the influence of Newton, his methodistic pastor (who first introduced his poems to the public), celebrated the movement as a common one in words which we can all yet sing:

> "Wore a coronet and prayed;"

> "God gives the word; the preachers throng around;
> Live from lips, they spread the glorious sound:
> That sound bespeaks salvation on her way,
> The trumpet of a life-restoring day!"

that while he portrayed, in verse which will never die, Whitefield and other Calvinistic Methodist leaders, he equally revered Wesley, and portrayed him as > "A veteran warrior in the Christian field,

> Who never saw the sword he could not wield.
> Whose fragrant memory will outlast the tomb,
> Embalmed forever in its own perfume."

METHODISM OF NECESSITY CATHOLIC.

But this general review is relevant to a second important purpose—to remind us Denominational Methodists, that our mission reaches far beyond our organic limits. Our ecclesiastical organization is inestimably important; it has been one of the chief means of our power, and, therefore, of our more general mission; but let us be careful that it tend not to narrow our horizon, and lead us to forget the wider and sublimer agency of our cause. We are an ecclesiastical organization—a sect, if you please—but we are an anomalous one, and God made us such, and designs us to continue such. While we hold steadfastly to our peculiar theology and methods, as sources of energy and success, let us bear in mind the original lesson of our mission, that our work is not so much the extension of a sect as "the spread of scriptural holiness over the land," and that we are an organization only for this purpose; that we are pledged by our earliest vows to stand up everywhere and always for Christian Catholicity; that no sincere overture of Christian fraternization can ever be repelled by us. He has never understood the historical significance of Methodism who looks at its sectarian growth as the chief aim of its labors; he has never truly appreciated its organic system who sees in it only the means of maintaining and expanding its organization. It has sublimer prerogatives; the provocation of all surrounding sects to zeal and good works; the emancipation of the religious world from the fetters of unessential dogmas and perverse traditions; the spread, not so much of technical theology as of vital religion; the substitution of this in the place of creeds and traditions; the diffusion of popular religious thought; the rescue of the common degraded masses to holy living and eternal salvation.

In this our hundredth year we should remind ourselves more profoundly than ever, that our work, as at the beginning, is a catholic and a universal one; that however strong our hosts, we are not an army by ourselves, but are in the grand line of battle of general evangelical Christendom; that be we the artillery or the cavalry, or whatever else, in the common field, we move in harmonious cooperation with the whole evangelical host, that be it our work to dash upon and scatter the columns of the enemy, or thunder them out of the way, it is but to clear the way for the advance of the whole evangelical array; that if we allow our own and other regimental flags, for convenience in the field, we insist that none other than the common banner of the cross shall wave at headquarters over us all; and that when the victory shall be won, we shall be ready, if not to cast away our distinctive flags, yet to hang them up, not at our altars, but from the roofs of our temples, and have none wave without, over all the city of our God, but the universal ensign of the common faith.

Down to his last hour Wesley never lost sight of this catholic mission of Methodism. When about seventy-six years old he wrote: "The remark of Luther, that a revival of religion seldom continues above thirty years, has been verified many times in several countries; but it will not always hold. The present revival of religion in England has already continued fifty years. And, blessed be God! it is at least as likely to continue as it was twenty or thirty years ago. Indeed it is far more likely, as it not only spreads wider, but sinks deeper than ever. We have, therefore, reason to hope that this revival will continue, and continually increase, till the time when all Israel shall be saved, and the fulness of the Gentiles shall come." Meanwhile Methodism was in full organization, and he ceased not to consolidate it continually. He saw that, in order to accomplish its general work, it must itself have a peculiar and powerful apparatus. The Church of God had seldom or never seen an abler organizer than John Wesley, nor had it ever seen a more catholic one; and there is no truer expression of the historical significance of Methodism than that it was the depreciation of ecclesiasticism and the appreciation of religion.

I wish not, then, by these remarks, to restrict our denominational vision, but to enlarge it; not to impair our esprit de corps, or our practical system, but to ennoble them by a sublime consciousness in the church of a great and peculiar destiny. We are not a locomotive dragging a single car, in a rivalry of speed, with other lines; the train behind us reaches out of sight; the route before us circuits the world! If we presume to deem ourselves the locomotive, let our engineers never forget their responsibility for the whole train and the whole route. Let them see to it that the fires be kept up, and all the surrounding mountains kept awake with the echoes of our movement. Let us accept Isaac Taylor's prophecy, "that the Methodism of the last age points forward to the next coming developments of the powers of the Gospel!"

The Word "Selah."

The translators of the Bible have left the Hebrew word Selah, which occurs so often in the Psalms, as they found it, and of course the English reader often asks his minister or some learned friend what it means. And the minister or learned friend has most often been obliged to confess ignorance, because it is a matter in regard to which the most learned have by no means been of one mind. The Targums and most of the Jewish commentators give to the word the meaning of eternally, forever. Rabbi Kimchi regards it as a sign to elevate the voice. The authors of the Septuagint translation appear to have regarded it as a musical or rhymical note. Herder regards it as indicating a change of tone; Matheson as a musical note, equivalent, perhaps, to the word repeat. According to Luther, and others, it means silence! Gesenius explains it to mean: "Let the instruments play and the singers stop." Wocher regards it as equivalent to sursum cordâ—up my soul! Sommer, after examining all the seventy-four passages in which the word occurs, recognizes in every case "an actual appeal or summons to Jehovah." They are calls for aid and prayers to be heard, expressed either with entire directness, or if not in the imperative "Hear, Jehovah!" or "Awake, Jehovah!" and the like, "still earnest addresses to God that he would remember and hear, etc. The word itself he regards as indicating a blast of trumpets by the priests. Selah, itself, he thinks an abridged expression used for Higgaion Selah—Higgaion indicating the sound of stringed instruments, and Selah a vigorous blast of trumpets.—Bibliotheca Sacra.

A PERSIAN FABLE.

BY MRS. ELLEN HUNTINGTON GATES.

In the pleasant land of Persia
Grew a rose tree, tall and fair,
Never were there sweeter roses
In the wide world anywhere.
Proud it swung its crimson censers,
Till it seemed that odors rare
From a thousand golden vials
Angels hands had emptied there.

Came a lady, tall and stately,
Paused to view a tree so rare,
Heard the wild birds singing o'er it,
Twined its buds amid her hair,
When, down looking, for a moment,
Loud she cried; "Alas! alas!
Here among these regal blossoms
Grows a tuft of common grass!"

Stooping forward to uproot it,
Then there came a cry of pain.
Faint and low, yet deep it entered
In the lady's heart and brain;
And the lesson which it taught her,
She could never quite forget—
Even when she bowed to worship
'Neath the lofty minaret.

"Spare me, spare me," thus it whispered.
"I may be of low degree—
But the stars look down from heaven,
And the rain drops fall on me;
If you will but breathe my fragrance,
It to you will plainly show,
Though I am but grass so humble,
I among the roses grow."

—Sunday School Times.

Rules for Ministers.

A correspondent of the Northern Christian Advocate suggests a few rules which ministers of all denominations would do well to follow. He says:

Never make an apology in the pulpit; you will lessen yourself by so doing. Don't make long introductions to your sermons; a portico should never be as large as the house. Do not make a repeater of yourself, by repeating the same thoughts in your firstly, secondly, thirdly, lastly, and in conclusion. Never defend yourself in the pulpit against any evil thing said of you. You are set for the defence of the gospel, and not of your own reputation. Keep your account with God and not with men, and he will defend you. Don't preach long sermons, they do no good, but often do harm. Every moment you detain your hearers after they become weary, you damage them and yourself also. But the length of a sermon is not always measured by the time taken in its delivery. A sermon that has neither height, depth, or breadth, must necessarily be a long one. Or a sermon which does not interest the hearer will always be a long one. As long as you can hold the fixed attention of your hearers it will be safe to go on, but when you can neither gain nor retain such attention, close as soon as possible. Give your hearer as many thoughts in as few words as you possibly can. Never shun to declare all the counsel of God, for you may safely preach a whole gospel everywhere.

Occupation.

Occupation! what a glorious thing it is for a human heart. Those who work hard seldom yield themselves entirely up to fancied or real sorrow. When grief sits down, fold its hands, and mournfully feeds upon its own tears, weaving the dim shadows that a little exertion might sweep away, into a funeral pall, the strong spirit is shorn of its might, and sorrow becomes our master. When troubles flow upon you, dark and heavy, toil not with the waves—wrestle not with the torrent—rather seek by occupation to divert the dark waters that threaten to overwhelm you into a thousand channels which the duties of life always present. Before you dream of it, those waters will fertilize the present, and give birth to fresh flowers that they may brighten the future—flowers that will become pure and holy, in the sunshine which penetrates to the path of duty. Grief, after all, is but a selfish feeling; and most selfish is he who yields himself to the indulgence of any passion that brings no joy to his fellow men.

Beautiful it is to understand and know that a thought did never yet die; but as thou, the originator thereof, hast gathered it and created it from the whole past,—so thou wilt transmit it to the whole future. It is thus that the heroic heart, the seeing eye of the first times, still feels and sees in us of the latest, that the wise man stands ever encompassed and spiritually embraced by a cloud of witnesses and brothers: and there is a living literal communion of saints, wide as the world itself, and as the history of the world.—Carlyle.

The man of thought strikes deepest and strikes safely.—Savage.

New Theory Respecting the Cholera.

A work was published in 1855 by Dr. Pettenkober, Professor of Chemistry in the University of Munich, entitled "Investigations and Observations in regard to the Propagation of Cholera, with Reflections on the Proper Means of Arresting its Progress." The author was engaged for a lengthened period by the government in investing the progress and mode of propagation of the disease in Bavaria; and this volume of facts is the result of his and other physicians' researches, not only in Germany, but in England and India.

Dr. Pettenkober claims to have established the following facts:

1. That it is not contagious, in the usual sense of the word; but that it can, nevertheless, be carried from one place to another.

2. That it always follows the usual routes of commerce.

3. That no elevation above the level of the ocean furnishes a guaranty against the disease, nor is any depth necessarily exposed to its ravages.

4. That no contagious matter is floating in the atmosphere, and that consequently the disease is not propagated by floating currents of air.

5. That it is not propagated though the water.

6. That it is propagated through the earth.

7. That the earth receives and develops the cholera contagion from the excrements of diseased persons.

8. That the excrements from a diseased person thrown into a sink or privy are capable of transforming the whole mass into a hearth of cholera contagion.

9. That the gases disengaged by the decomposition of organic substances, especially of excrement, penetrate the earth, rise to the surface, and become then the cause of fever and of cholera.

10. That there has not been a single case of cholera observed in Bavaria that could not be traced to that species of infection.

11. That the stools of persons afflicted with cholera, or that peculiar species of diarrhea which usually precedes cholera, are more infectious than of those who are actually seized with the disease.

12. That cholera is always carried to a place where it has not yet appeared by a diseased person, and communicated through excrements brought in contact with the earth; and that there is no other way of propagating the disease. Immediate contact with the patient, inhaling the air of the sick room, washing the dead body, nay, even dissecting it after death, does not communicate the disease.

13. Not every species of earth acts on the process of decomposition in like manner, and the capacity for spreading the contagion in the manner above stated varies in consequence with the composition of the soils on which dwellings are built. On rocky foundations, granite or sandstone, cholera never becomes epidemic. An alluvial soil, underlaid with lime or clay, or any other cause which keeps the ground moist, may become a teeming womb for the cholera contagion.

14. The cholera poison may be in a person from one to twenty-eight days without manifesting itself. This fact furnishes a measure for the distance to which it may be carried from one place to another.

15. The disease, which is not communicate by contact, is carried to the inmates of houses, sleeping in rooms exposed to the cholera poison as above engendered.

16. If the cholera, as proved in London, is more intense and fatal in the plains than on elevations, it will, on investigation, be found that it is owing to the better drainage, by which filth is removed before it is decomposed, or before it enters, as in damp or wet soils, into process of fermentation. Dr. Pettekober found some of the worst cases of cholera on hills where the privies of houses still higher situated emptied into sinks or sowers of improper fall.

17. To prevent contagion, the stools of cholera patients must be disinfected before they are emptied. The best disinfecting agent is vitriol of iron. Chloride of lime only purifies the air, but does not destroy the cholera poison.

18. When strangers from cholera districts are expected to arrive, the privies of hotels and boarding-house, where they are expected to put up, ought to be disinfected with vitriol of iron, say once a week. In the rooms and corridors of hospitals, turpentine may be spread on paper and exposed to the atmosphere. The ozone (electrified oxygen) thus given out is the best purifier of the atmosphere.

19. Care must be had not to allow any linen to be washed which is soiled with the excrements of a cholera patient. The process of maceration to which soiled clothes are usually subjected is capable of developing and communicating the disease in its worst form. Jamesson found the same truth in 1817, '18, and '19 in India, without tracing it to its source.

20. There are no other sanitary regulations capable of preventing or arresting cholera in its progress than those which have reference to cleansing and purifying those places which serve to collect or convey human excrements.

A Walk Across Europe by a Boy.

A feat of juvenile courage and perseverance has just been accomplished by a French boy of 13, which is worth mentioning. Three months ago, dissatisfied with his treatment by an uncle in Paris, he started from the latter capital with 66 francs in his pocket to go to his mother, who is married to a second husband, a French workman in the employ of Shah and Teherean. With the aid of a map and guide book, the little adventurer tramped right across Europe, receiving such hospitality by the way that, on reaching Constantinople, he had still nearly half his francs remaining. After a short rest in Pera he crossed the Bosphorus, en route for Persia, but a little beyond Scutara was stopped by some Turkish policemen and brought back until an interpreter was found. His story being thus learned, he was passed over to Peru and placed in charge of the French Consul, in whose custody he now is, unable to understand why he should have been interfered with, and angrily impatient to pursue his journey. Love for his mother, and a keen yearning for her protection, rather than any mere wild impulse of boyish adventure, seem to have been his chief motive throughout.

OUR WONDROUS ATMOSPHERE.—The atmosphere rises about us with its cathedral dome, arching toward the heavens, of which it is the most familiar synonym and symbol. It floats about us like that grand object which the apostle John saw in his vision—"a sea of glass like unto crystal." So massive is it, that when it begins to stir, it tosses about great ships like playthings, and sweeps cities and forests like snowflakes to destruction before it. And yet it is so mobile, that we have lived years in it before we can be persuaded that it exists at all, and the bulk of mankind never realized the truth that they are bathed in an ocean of air. Its weight is so enormous that iron shivers before it like glass; yet a soap-bubble sails through it with impunity, and the tiniest insect waves it aside with its wing. It ministers lavingishly to all the senses. We touch it not, but it touches us. Its warm south winds bring back the color to the pale face of the invalid; its cool west winds refresh the fevered brow, and make the blood mantle in our cheeks; even its north blasts brace into new vigor the hardened children of our rugged climates. The eye is indebted to it for all the magnificence of sunrise, the full brightness of midday, the chastened radiance of the gloaming, and the clouds that settle near the setting sun. But for it the rainbow would want its "triumphal arch," and the winds would not send their fleecy messengers on errands round the heavens. The cold would not either shed snow-feathers on the earth, nor would drops of dew gather on the flowers. The kindly rain would never fall, nor hail or un, nor fog, diversify the face of the sky. Our naked globe would turn its tanned and unshadowed forehead to the sun, and one dreary, monotonous blaze of light and heat dazzle and burn up all things.

Were there no atmosphere, the sun would in a moment set, and, without warning, plunge the earth in darkness. But the air keeps in her hand a sheaf of his rays, and lets them slip but slowly through her fingers; so that the shadows of evening are gathered by degrees, and the bowers have time to how their heads and each creature space to find a place of rest, and nestle to repose.

In the morning the gairish sun would at one bound burst from the bosom of night and blaze above the horizon, but the air watches for its coming, and sends at first one little ray to announce his approach, and then another, and by and by a handful, and so gently draws aside the curtain of night, and slowly lets the light fall on the face of the sleeping earth till her eyelids open, and, like man, she goeth forth to her labor till the evening.

Damascus is the oldest city in the world. Tyre and Sidon have crumbled on the shore; Baalbec is a ruin, Palmyra lies buried in the sands of the desert; Nineveh and Babylon have disappeared from the the shores of the Tigris and Euphrastes. Damascus remains what it was before the days of Abraham—a centre of trade and travel, an island of verdure in a desert, "a predestined capital," with martial and sacred associations extending beyond thirty centuries.

From the Watchman.

Southern Methodist Bishops.

The following list presents the names and dates of the ministerial advancement of all the bishops of the Southern Methodist Church now living:

JOSHUA SOULE,
Born in Maine,	1781
Entered the Ministry,	1799
Ordained Deacon,	1801
" Elder,	1803
" Bishop,	1824
JAMES OSGOOD ANDREW,
Born in Georgia,	1794
Entered the Ministry,	1812
Ordained Deacon,	1814
" Elder,	1816
" Bishop,	1832
ROBERT PAINE,
Born in North-Carolina,	1789
Entered the Ministry,	1818
Ordained Deacon,	1822
" Elder,	1824
" Bishop,	1846
GEORGE FOSTER PIERCE,
Born in Georgia,	1811
Entered the Ministry,	1830
Ordained Deacon,	1832
" Elder,	1834
" Bishop,	1854
JOHN EARLY,
Born in Virginia,	——
Entered the Ministry,	1807
Ordained Deacon,	1809
" Elder,	1811
" Bishop,	1854
HUBBARD HINDE KAVANAUGH,
Born in Kentucky,	1802
Entered the Ministry,	1823
Ordained Deacon,	1825
" Elder,	1827
" Bishop,	1854
WILLIAM MAY WIGHTMAN,
Born in South-Carolina,	1808
Entered the Ministry,	1828
Ordained Deacon,	1830
" Elder,	1832
" Bishop,	1866
ENOCH MARVIN,
Born in Missouri,	1823
Entered the Ministry,	1841
Ordained Deacon,	1843
" Elder,	1845
" Bishop,	1866
DAVID SETH DOGGETT,
Born in Virginia,	1810
Entered the Ministry,	1829
Ordained Deacon,	1832
" Elder,	1833
" Bishop,	1866
HOLLAND NIMMONS MCTYEIRE,
Born in South-Carolina,	1824
Entered the Ministry,	1845
Ordained Deacon,	1848
" Elder,	1849
" Bishop,	1866

Synopsis of Art and Science.

It is a curious fact that Humming Birds are rarely, if ever, found in Oriental countries. The dryness of certain caverns, or parts of caverns, is due to the hygroscopic properties of Nitrate of Lime. For the same reason, the bodies of animals in such places resist decay. The eyeless fish which are found in subterranean rivers, are viviparous, or give birth to their young alive. Oviparous fish do not multiply when excluded from light. The experiment was made in the catacombs in Paris.

In supplying a city with water, it is estimated that each individual will require about four gallons and a half of that fluid per day, for drinking, washing, etc.

The strata of rock of the greatest thickness are made by the lowest animal life.

As a rule, the oldest strata of the Earth's crust have the greatest dip.

The highest mountains were upheaved last. The Rocky Mountains were created, so to speak, at a much later date than the Cumberland and Alleghanies. These last may have been originally as high, perhaps higher, than the former when first upheaved. The hills are not everlasting when subjected to atmospheric and aqueous influences.

Geologically, America is a much older continent than Europe. This is the New World in point of European colonization only.

Water deprived of air, and other impurities, will not boil at 212 degrees, and when it attains a temperature of about 260 degrees, it passes into steam with explosive violence.

Absolutely, there is no such thing as a Cold-blooded Animal. Most of the animals have a temperature higher than that of the medium in which they live. The lower animals can not adapt their systems to changes of temperature. If the temperature of the body of man were reduced as much by changes of atmospheric heat, as that of a hybernating animal, he would speedily find himself completely narcotised by a slight reduction of temperature.

The skin of all animals is essentially of the same chemical composition. That of a rhinoceros and that of a man differ in thickness only.—Louisville Industrial Gazette.

Our dispositions will be suitable to that which we most frequently think on; for the soul is, as it were, tinged with the color and complexion of its own thoughts.—Antonius.

THE TOWER OF BABEL.—The tower of babel, on which late accounts announce that a cross was recently placed by a missionary, consists now of only two of the eight stories formerly erected. The remains are, however, visible from a very great distance. Each side of the quadrangular basis measures two hundred yards in length, and the bricks of which it is composed are of the purest white clay, with a very slight brownish tint, which in the sun assumes a wonderfully rich hue, scarcely to be imitated by the painter. The bricks, before being baked, were covered with characters, traced most surely by the hand in a clear and regular style. The hitmen, which served for cement was derived from a fountain which still exists near the tower, and which flows with such abundance that it soon forms a stream, and would invade the neighboring river did not the natives from time to time set fire to the stream of bitumen, and then wait quietly until the flames should cease for want of aliment.

STATISTICS OF WAR.—A German savant, M. Haussner, has recently published some remarkable statistics, showing the sad effects of war. He states that the European wars from 1815 to 1864 cost the lives of 2,762,000 men, and this figure does not include those who died from epidemics created by war. The Crimean war destroyed over a half million of men. The total loss of life in Europe of the wars from 1792 to 1815 was 5,340,000. The Crimean war cost six and half billions of francs. The impending war, should it continue three years, would nearly bankrupt one-half of the European powers.

ANOTHER SUBMARINE CABLE.—The commander of the steam cutter Dix Decembere, belonging to the Electric Telegraph Company of France, which vessel was about to sail from Toulon to Ajaccio, to lay down the electric cable between Corsica and the Sanguinaires Islands, has suddenly received counter orders. She is forthwith to enter the port of Toulon to take on board twenty-two thousand yards of electric cable, manufactured at the works there on account of the Italian government. By further instructions the captain of the Dix Decembre is bound to sail within three days, and to lay the cable across the entrance to the Straits of Bonifacio in order to establish a communication between Italy and the Island of Sardinia by Leghorn, Genoa and Corsica.

WHAT WRITING REQUIRE STAMPS.—1st. Instruments of writing, dated before October 1, 1862, do not require a stamp.

2. Those dated between October 1, 1862, and August 1, 1864, may be stamped either before or after use by the Court, Register, or Recorder.

3d. Those dated since August 1, 1864, and not 12 months old, may be stamped before a U. S. Collector, without payment of penalty of $50.

4th. Those dated after August 1, 1864, and more than 12 months old, can be stamped upon the payment of the penalty of $50.

And every assignment of a note, which assignment is dated since October, 1, 1862, without regard to the date of the note, is to be stamped as an agreement, namely, five cents only, no matter how large or how small the note may be.

All persons having notes unstamped should have them attended to at once. A receipt for money or property, over $20, no matter what the amount, requires only a two cent stamp.

THE NATURE OF DIAMONDS.—Experiments show that diamonds cannot be produced by Plutonic agency, as they become black when subjected to a high degree of temperature. They are, on the contrary, of Neptunian origin, and were at one time in a soft condition, is proved not only by the impressions of grains of sand and crystals on the surface of some of them, but also by the inclosure of certain foreign bodies, such as other crystales, germinating fungi, and even vegetable structure of a higher organization. If these conclusions be accepted, confirming and extending as they do the views held by Newton, Brewster and Liebig, diamonds seem to be the final product of the chemical decomposition of vegetable substances.

TWO SORTS OF ATHEISM.—There are two sorts of atheism, one well known, that will not believe in God at all, the other hardly less dangerous, that will not believe in Him adequately. The first denies Him a place in life, the last denies Him an effectual cooperation, but a genuine faith insists at once on both.

Flowers never put on their best clothes on Sundays, but wear their spotless raiment and exhale their odor every day.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Derman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Liane Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 21, 1866.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has always been well known in this community as the very best advertising medium by which the business men of the city could bring their merchandise, trades, professions, and the like, before country readers in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and a large portion of Texas.—This is easily understood when it is remembered that the four hundred preachers who are scattered throughout these States, in the Rio Grande, East Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montgomery and Mobile Methodist Conferences, are all, more or less, active agents for the paper; and when it is also remembered that our paper circulates among a large class of people who seldom see any other New Orleans paper.

The terms of advertising are as follows:

	1 Month.	6 Mos.	12 Mos.
One square....	$ 5 00	$20	$30 00
Two squares....	7 50	25	40 00
Three squares..	10 00	30	50 00
Four squares...	12 50	35	60 00

Larger advertisements in proportion.

TO OUR AGENTS AND SUBSCRIBERS

1. The price of the paper is THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE: and it will be sent for 12 months only, unless the subscription price is renewed. We propose to keep no other books than the one containing the names of subscribers and their address. Due notice will be given in the paper a few weeks previous to the end of the subscription.

2. All travelling Preachers in the several patronizing Conferences throughout the Southwest are our Agents. They will receive a paper for five subscribers.

3. If money forwarded by mail is registered at the Postoffice when it is mailed, we will take the responsibility of its safety. But where it can be forwarded by private hands, the security is greater.

4. Be explicit in writing names and offices and routes—especially in directing to the "NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," as the Church North has already issued a sheet in this city entitled the "New Orleans Advocate."

Address Rev. J. C. KEENER, D. D., or Rev. J. B. WALKER, D. D.

PREMIUM TO AGENTS.

We offer Agents of the New Orleans Christian Advocate a PHOTOGRAPHIC PICTURE OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE of the M. E. Church South, held in New Orleans, for every FIVE subscribers they may forward to us; and this in addition to the commission already offered.

We will forward them by express, or in such way as they may direct.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27.—REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS.—By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, J. B. WALKER, L. PARKER, Executive Com. Joint Board of Publication.

The Mails—Notice.

We are glad to notice the extension of the mail service, after the first of July. Now that Post-offices and duly qualified Post masters may be found in many parts of the States of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, we expect a rapid and considerable increase in our subscription list.

If any regular traveling preacher in either of our patronizing conferences will forward his name and the route and office which lead to him, we will send him the paper upon his own terms.

DOCTOR OF DIVINITY.—We notice that the honorary degree of D. D., was conferred upon Bishop Marvin, by Trinity College, of North Carolina, at its recent commencement.

FRATERNIZATION.

Dr. Whedon and Dr. Wise of the Northern Methodist Church are still estimating "the proposition to pray" which was made by the N. Y. Conference East to the Southern Methodists. Dr. Whedon explains: that he proposed; as a sinner, to pray with a sinner. Dr. Wise considered it to be the proposition of one Christian to pray with another Christian; and as such he could not endorse it. In fact nothing that looks like endorsing the Church South, could be favor. Repentance and confession must precede all real piety: the Southern Methodists have not shown signs of either Dr. Whedon replies, that being possibly a greater sinner than Dr. Wise, he could propose prayer consistently; he had once apologized for, and defended slavery; had afterwards attacked proslaveryism in a spirit too passionate, had possibly "mixed the malign with the moral."—Moreover, "he says, "I had belonged to a Church which organically kept hold of slavery, under less compulsion than the Southern Church, until revolution destroyed it. I am therefore organically a sinner. I do not feel, therefore, that either I or my Church (with exception of Dr. Wise and a choice few) can claim to be so transcendently immaculate as that we may not bow at the same altar with the Church South, and pray for the pardon of sins, some of which we see, and some of which, perhaps, our obstinate self-conceit will not let us see, and so be penitent for. Herein I do not stain the honors of the heroes of the historic anti-slavery contest. I only claim that we are not so superlatively pure, even touching slavery, that we may not bow beside the South before God as fellow sinners."

We possibly may do the Doctor injustice by not quoting to greater length from an article which certainly displays a good spirit and much Christian magnanimity.

It is quite illustrative of the accurate analysis of poor human nature which our Saviour gives in the parable of the two men who went up into the Temple to pray—the heartiness with which the Pharisee thanked God that he was not as "this Publican,"—that a man should account himself as "too immaculate" to pray beside a sinner, in God's temple.

While these two holy men are discussing the difficulty there may be in praying with the Church South, they seem to overlook the fact that we have some religion of our own, which makes it difficult for us to pray with either or both of them; that it requires more of the spirit of Christ for us to pray with them than they can possibly exhibit in praying with us or for us. Let them, in the honesty which they profess, decide. The sin of slavery they got rid of by getting rid of us—unwillingly; so much of the slave territory as was retained by them, was held most willingly—and the slavery on it—till the war settled the question. So far we are even. When an "effectual door" seemed open, they forced our ministers out of their pulpits at the point of the bayonet, by military order, and held our houses of worship in all the principal towns of the South, until obliged to give them up by President Johnson. Is this true or not? Let Dr. Whedon and Dr. Wise pause, before prayer, a moment, to consider and answer. If true, which is easier, for them to pray with us, or we with them? We believe that really it is very difficult to pray heartily with a man, or for a man, whom you have treated with wilful injustice, and it is fully as hard to consent to pray with a man from whom you have suffered injustice, when, as Dr. Wise would say, "he has shown no disposition to confess himself wrong or to deplore his folly;" but, harder still, to let him pray for you. If we knew of a single instance where the Church North had voluntarily retired from our churches, or had retired directly upon the end of the war, then there might be some credit given to the declaration that they simply took the churches to advance loyalty. However much sin "rebellion" may contain, "loyalty" can be no excuse for taking the private property and the altars of an enemy. Let those learned and holy men remember that "rebellion" against the Government was not "rebellion" against the M. E. Church North; and it may help them to imagine how much grace is required in our people to consent to pray with them. It may possibly suggest to them that there is not quite as much religion in their offer to pray for us, as there would be if they had done less to us. Let them pause a moment, and ascertain if the Church South has done any violence to the Northern Methodist Church, at any time, in any way.—When they measure what has been suffered at our hands, it would be well to reverse the question. This is the really insoluble portion of this problem of prayer. The Church North acts, and looks, and talks, as if it had demeaned itself in a commonly honest and even brotherly way toward us. It comes forward with a solemn manner and proposes prayer, though this very moment it holds thousands of dollars' worth of our church property, and is trying to wrest thousands more from us. As hard as it may be for such people to pray, it is exceeding hard to hear them at it. They ask us to repent; all we ask of them is to restore.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

The Bishop of Natal, Dr. Colenso, the representative of the free thinking party in the Church of England, has issued a book of Hymns, in which the name of Christ does not appear. His curious apology is.

A violent attack (as you will see in the Witness) has just been made upon me with reference to my new hymn book, which, strange to say, I find does not contain the name "Jesus," or "Christ," from one end to the other. This was quite unintentional on my part, and has arisen from the fact of my having rejected hymn after hymn which contained prayers to Christ, which I do object to on scriptural and apostolical grounds, as I hope to set forth in a sermon; and others in which the name of Jesus is used familiarly and irreverently; and others in which some objectionable doctrine is taught in the hymn throughout, or in some verse of it.

After having read every morning of his life, "O Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the world, have mercy upon us miserable sinners," "Christ have mercy upon us," he now conscientiously refuses prayer to Christ.

The ground taken by the Spectator is a very simple and intelligible one. It is "impossible for any Church which believes in the incarnation as a fact, not to base its spiritual and devotional services on that teaching." If Christ be really God manifest in the flesh, then prayer to Christ is the natural and proper devotion of Christians.

It remains to be seen whether there is salt enough in the political Church of England to correct the infidel writing of this Bishop of Natal.

The Rev. Dr. Deems, in a letter written from Baltimore defines the "Watchman:"

It does seem to be the most difficult thing to eradicate the idea that THE WATCHMAN is a "religious" paper in the technical sense. It is no more so than the Tribune, the Times, the World, or the Round Table, or Child's Home Gazette, or Willis's Home Journal It is a Literary and Political Family Newspaper, conducted on Christian principles and removed from partisanship.

RELIGION IN MARIETTA, GA. — A Methodist minister writes that he has just "closed a meeting of considerable interest, resulting in the addition of fifteen members, which, added to six previously received, make twenty-one additions for the year. The condition of religion in Marietta is indeed very good, and there are grounds to hope for a brighter day to this cruelly oppressed people."

A Spanish service has been inaugurated in connection with Dr. Hawks' congregation, now worshiping in University Chapel, New York. At this service the Book of Common Prayer is used. The sermon is also in Spanish, and the preacher is the Rev. Angel H. De Mora.

Several "Episcopal-Methodist" (Southern) churches have been organized on "the Peninsula." We have learned that there are three on Easton District.

THE HOME MONTHLY: Devoted to literature and religion. Edited by Prof. A. B. Stark, and Rev. Felix R. Hill. Nashville, Tenn.: Printed by A. H. Redford, agent, Southern Methodist Publishing House, 1866.

This very excellent Magazine makes its appearance, and pleasantly surprises with its strong family likeness to the "Home Circle," our old favorite. Its subscription price is $2 00 per annum; or $1 50 for six months, in advance. Address Rev. Felix R. Hill, P. O. Box 391, Nashville, Tennessee.

We have read this first number entirely through, and shall be satisfied, notwithstanding the apology of the editors, to compromise upon it for an average of interesting matter.

Contents: Reading, Recollections of the War, Petroleum of Louisiana, Poets Laureate, The Conflict, The Conquest, The Crown, Rural Life, Augusta J. Evans, The Southern Novelist, Money at Interest, A Ride on Skins down the River, The Little Child's Prayer, The Sickle and the Sword, Home vs. the Springs, The Constitution of a Church, The Three Sisters, The Angel's Gift, and Editorial Department.

Its taste, variety, and quantity of valuable matter, constitute it just such a family monthly as our people need.

Baltimore Episcopal Methodist.

The first number of this paper has reached us. It was lately the Episcopal Methodist of Richmond, under the editorial control, of Drs. Edwards and Doggett. The title indicates the change of domicil. Now published by Rev. John Poisal, Revs. Thos. E. Bond, M. D., and S. S. Roszel, Editors. Bishop Doggett and Dr. Edwards will continue their services as editorial correspondents. It is published on fine paper, large type, and quarto size, at $4 per annum. This specimen number pleases us much. We will venture to say it is very nearly what a church paper should be. The typography, the literary merit, the tone and spirit are all satisfying. Every column tempts our scissors. All hail and welcome to the Baltimore Episcopal Methodist! Ever prosper the enterprise of our noble brethren of Baltimore! The salutatory is more than able. But it must speak for itself, so far as our space will permit. We can give our readers only the concluding part:

The Episcopal Methodist desires to promote peace, love, and charity; to bind up the heart-wounds of our lacerated communities; to change cursing for blessing, and the temper of strife for the spirit of benevolence. But we do not mean to confound evil with good, and to protect wrong-doers from the inconveniences of complaint, or the punishment of resistance. The Prince of Peace drove a morally incorrigible crew out of the temple with a whip; and as sin does not grow better with age, we may not expect that such people will be got rid of by milder means now. We hope never to give occasion of offence to any, but "it needs be that offences come." Religion, in this world, is a forced state, and can have no peace without peril to existence. He who would have the truth must contend for it; and the Gospel has no respect for any man, or any set of men, who make the basis of their Christianity to consist in keeping aloof from contests, upon the issue of which the purity and power of Christianity depend. Such people find a cheap exhibition of grace in rebuking the earnestness of men to whom the Church is more precious than an hereditary pew, and truth more dear than Sabbatical cushions; but it is a grace much more epicurean than Christian, and is much more correctly catalogued by the public than the exhibitors suspect. This may suffice for what St. Jerome called his "prologus galeatus," or helmeted preface.

We hold to what is good and what is true: we will consciously attack neither; but, by God's help, we will fearlessly defend both. We are explicit, because we would deceive nobody. We do not intend to weary our readers with unprofitable doctrinal controversies, nor demoralize them by indecent quarrels. We will not war with our sister Churches. We desire, above all things, not to perpetuate that sectional hatred which is fast hardening into permanent hostility between the two great geographical sections of our unhappy country. Our desire is positively and earnestly the contrary to this. But we will not glove the treacherous hand that asks to be clasped, only that it may crush and disable forever. We will not commend the poisoned cup, because it is tendered us for wine. We will not silently permit the great conspiracy of the age to go on to consummation until our Church and country are hopelessly subjugated by an unholy confederation of ecclesiastical pride and jacobinical socialism. We can do but little to prevent these things. The multitude, when well fed, never thinks. Whether it be capable of thinking, we do not know; but it has never given sensible sign of it. That it can be roused to see the danger to its own liberties, which, by the infallible justice of the Almighty, is the inseparable accompaniment of self-lending for the enslavement of others, we dare not hope. Against all appeals to reason and conscience, it lifts up its buttered bread and laughs or growls according to individual nature. But there are men who think and there are multitudes whose bread is not buttered, and there is hope in them; above all, there is hope in God, who will preserve His own truth, though "the seas roar and the mountains shake with the swelling thereof."

It is a solemn time for men. It is a time which calls loudly for every man to find his work and do it. We think we have found ours. We will do it, and may God give us prosperity!

DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

TO THE PREACHERS AND MEMBERS OF THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

DEAR BRETHREN: The time is near at hand when your respective Conferences will convene. Please observe—

1. That you are respectfully requested to organize all the missionary ground in your bounds into regular missionary work, as far as practicable, both among the whites and colored, and report accurately to your Annual Conferences.

2. Please to take up your missionary collections in due time, keeping a correct account as to what portion is raised for Domestic, and what for Foreign Missions. Do not fail. Make the effort everywhere, though your prospects of success are not encouraging. Give every member and friend of the Church an opportunity of contributing much or little, as each may have the will or ability. Our missions at present look to small contributions, but many contributors, for support.

3. We beg the hearty co-operation of the laity, and especially of local ministers and official members of the Church.

Remember that nine-tenths of all collected for Domestic Missions is to be expended in the bounds of your respective Conferences. Now, dear brethren, do not let this simple request pass unnoticed. Souls are perishing for lack of knowledge. Please do your duty, and your reward shall be given.

J. B. McFERRIN, Sec'y.

Mansfield College Commencement.

Rev. Charles B. Stuart, President of this institution, was in the city last week. We learn through him that the examination which began on the 23rd of June, was well attended and creditable. The commencement exercises took place on the 28th. The annual address was delivered by J. Pinckney Harris, Esq., of Shreveport, which was regarded by all as an effective and eloquent effort. Five young ladies were graduated, by whom appropriate essays were delivered.

Bishop Marvin was present, preaching on the nights of the 25th and 26th, besides making an impressives address on commencement day. His presence and labors contributed greatly to the interest of the occasion. Eighty nine pupils were in attendance during the past session, all remarkably studious and well behaved. The institution will be refurnished and opened for pupils in the last of September next. The prospects of the College are encouraging, and we predict for it, under the present competent management, a large and increasing patronage. President Stuart and his wife are tried instructors, of long experience, and will be ably assisted by as many additional professors as circumstances require.

Death of Elbert A. Holt.

The Montgomery papers announce the decease, in that city, of this estimable and useful man. We cannot but mourn the loss of a warm-hearted, affectionate kinsman, and an earnest, useful Christian. He was a man of strong convictions, and much practical sagacity. He possessed in an eminent degree the qualities which make one successful in life. He was also a man of warm and quick feelings, which responded promptly to the claims of kindred and friendship, and still more readily to the exhibition of a Saviour's dying love. For many years he was a devoted member of the Methodist Church, and sometimes he preached to the congregations of neighbors and their servants who assembled in a church near to his country residence. But a short time ago we enjoyed the pleasure of a long ramble with him through the streets of Mobile, when he told us of the precarious condition of his health, and then went on to speak at length of his hopes and prospects for the future beyond the grave. He was full of glowing, trustful confidence, founded simply upon the merits and mediation of our Saviour Jesus Christ. We feel entire confidence that the hopes which he then so calmly and yet so fervently expressed, have been more than realized in the vision of celestial glory.

At the time of his death he was the President of the Alabama Bible Society.—Presbyterian Index.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

HELP YOUR PASTOR.

By being considerate as to his work—there are few who are fully considerate in this regard. Not that they mean wrong, but there is want of just views of what the pastor has to do.

Some may regard him simply as a preacher—in the act of preaching—talking twice or thrice a week—lecturing at the prayer meeting, leading a class. These are estimated as so many hours of occupation. There must be much leisure where so few hours of the week are taken up in public services. The toil of preparation—the investigation—the reading and study, are forgotten. As if the mind could be kept in working order without the tonic of mental discipline, and as if sermons, worth hearing, spring from the dust, and are born in the hour of delivery. How much time is needed to prepare the sermons which must be delivered, week after week, and month after month to the same congregations? Specially if they be different sermons as well as different texts?

Some may lose sight of the preacher, and look only to his work as pastor—visiting so many sick people, burying so many dead, and making calls, for prayer and social converse, upon a given number of families. No very hard work this, and never enough of this done. And it would be light if pastoral visiting were all, or half that a preacher has to do. Consider also among how many this sort of labor must be distributed. Not to be monopolized by one, nor by a few, but justly divided amongst many. May there not be over exaction here? Demanding too much, where all that is possible is already conceded?

Your pastor is the head of a family. There are claims here upon his time—a good deal of table-serving, cares, anxiety, and manifold engagements. To neglect his own household would be to deny the faith and make him worse than an infidel. In the range of general knowledge, literature, science and theology, there is continual progress. Of old books and new there are many, and your preacher ought to be acquainted with them. Intelligent people must have intelligent preachers. And in order to this, preachers must give attention to reading. Wesley required his preachers to study five hours a day. This may be regarded as the minimum. With a moderate capital in the way of early education, more than this is required, that a preacher may sustain himself in a station or circuit for any length of time.

There is also need of relaxation. The meetings that are rest and pleasure to you, are exhausting labor to the preacher. His severest labors you never see—the brain toil and agony of the study, and the concern and deep solicitude for the Church which find utterance in the wrestlings of the closet. The lawyer, the teacher, the merchant, have their vacations and seasons of rest. Should the preacher have no remission from toil? Help the preacher—your pastor—by being considerate of his work. Look at it, not in one, but in all its parts. Let there be a sympathetic and kindly appreciation of it as a whole.

Help by your personal offices and prayers. In the pastoral field prosper you can do much to open his way to the people, by introducing him to families, and by seconding his visits there, by your own intercourse and example. Every member of the church should be a co-worker with the pastor here—exerting himself to extend the influence of the church, by seeking those that may be led to the house of God, and identifying them with the congregation. Instead of exacting so much pastoral time for yourself, contribute some of your own time and influence to this very work.

The social gifts and influence of church members need to be more consecrated to this end. You may thus help your pastor in the circles where he visits, and you may exert a saving influence in families where he has no entrance. Consecrate your social relations and your personal intercourse to God and the Church. Your pastor does not like to blow his own trumpet. He feels even a delicacy in asking the people of the world to hear him preach. There should be no glorying in men. But help you may give in this direction; you may uphold and extend his influence, and largely swell the number of his hearers.

And the Methodist preacher, more than others, has a claim for this sort of assistance. He does not send himself, he is amongst you in obedience to the appointing power; and, by the brevity of his pastorate, is more dependent upon your aid in attaining to social influence and usefulness. Help him, therefore, by all the character, position, and social influence that you have. Strengthen his hands in the pastorate, as coworkers with him in this important field. Help him to hunt up the stray sheep, to minister to the poor, the afflicted, and to increase the number of those that wait on his ministry.

And in the pulpit help him. By your punctual attendance. Every additional hearer contributes to the general interest of public worship. Every intelligent and appreciative hearer adds much: and if he be a prayerful hearer, still more. By being punctually present you help your pastor to preach. He feels that there are prayerful and appreciative brethren about him, and he preaches better for it. Apart from all considerations of good or edification to yourself, if your presence help him to preach, is it not your duty to be there, not merely as a hearer, but as a helper? As a helper ought you not to be before the pulpit when your pastor is in it? Your pastor must have an invulnerable sensibility, who does not feel some slight discouragement and down-heartedness, when his members, absent themselves voluntarily from the public service. If it is his duty with pains-taking to prepare a sermon and to preach it, it is equally the duty of his brethren, by their prayers and presence, to help him in the proclamation of the Gospel. The utterance of the pulpit then becomes the utterance of many, and the travail of one carries soul is shared by the church.

By your presence you may thus help your pastor to preach, but by heartily engaging in the public worship you may help him more. In our simple liturgy we ought to retain the scriptural response. Therein you may help the public prayer. How much it helps the preacher to hear the audible amens, plenty of them and frequent rising up from the pews? Without them he might hope that others are praying with him, but with them he knows it. This amen as a congregational liturgy is almost dying out in some quarters. May it live, for the sake of the preachers, be revived. Not the half suppressed and inarticulate sigh, but the plain, broad, sonorous AMEN of our fathers.

In the singing, too, you may help your pastor. Learn to sing, and sing. It is a great evil for a congregation to depend upon the preacher for singing. They ought to do it themselves. Every Christian should feel bound to help in this part of worship. And good congregational singing will help the preacher. Many a good sermon has been spoiled by the discord, feebleness and deadness of the singing. If the preacher has not been paralyzed by it, the hearer has, and the sermon is lost. Whatever may be the drawing power of the pulpit, bad singing and feeble singing may repel full as much.

Singing must be made the aid and the help of the pulpit, and in order to this it must be singing "with the spirit and with the understanding also." The interest and usefulness of nearly every means of grace depend greatly upon the singing. Go then to the house of God, to the prayer meeting and to the class room, determined to contribute your part in this act of worship. Learn to sing, meet as a church to practice. Do it for conscience sake, as a high duty you owe to God, and thereby help your pastor.

In these and many other ways you may help your pastor. Help him. Do not encumber—do not embarrass his work: but help him in it. Regard yourself not simply as a beneficiary of this ministry, but as an assistant and coworker with him in the Gospel filed.

THE CONFEDERATE DEAD.—Major General Sheridan has just issued a General Order from his headquarters in this city, forbidding the erection of any monument within the limits of this department, "intended to commemorate the late rebellion," and, further, he prohibits the reorganization of former Confederate soldiers, "for whatsoever purpose."

Bad thoughts quickly ripen into bad actions.—Bishop Porteus.

WEEKLY SUMMARY OF NEWS.

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Attorney General Speed has resigned. Judge Stansbury of Ohio, or Browning of Illinois, will be his successor.

The resignation of Secretary Harlan is an event to be duly expected.

Notwithstanding the Republican caucus on Saturday night voted to adjourn on the 23d, it is believed the session will be prolonged until August 1st.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—The President having, on Friday, signed the internal revenue bill, the bureau at once commenced its compilation with the laws of which it is amendatory, and the preparations of instructions and regulations under the same.

The nomination of A. W. Randall, as Post master General, was referred to the Postoffice Committee, as is usual in such cases.

Attorney General Speed's letter to the President, tendering his resignation, is very emphatic in its disapproval of the President's policy.

A. Heydreck has been recognized by the President as Belgian Consul at Galveston.

The elaborate report of the Committee on Foreign Affairs will be presented early this week. It strongly sustains the Monroe Doctrine. There is a large majority in Congress who endorse this and are ready for measures more effective than the mere declaration of the principle.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—The President has returned the Freedmen's Bureau bill to the House of Representatives without his signature. He says the legislation it proposes is not consistent with the welfare of the country, and that it falls clearly within the reasons assigned in the veto message of a similar measure in February. He refers to that document for his objections. He says that the act now in force will extend some months beyond the meeting of the next Congress, and if additional legislation be required, Congress can then mature a bill. He opposes it as a class of legislation unwise, as setting up military tribunals which are liable to come in conflict with the civil law and unnecessary as the laws of each State protect the person and property alike of white and black. He also objects to it on the score of economy. The acts of violence which are made the pretext for the bill, he contends are confined to State or section, but are common throughout the country, and in consequence of the agitation and derangement incident to a long and bloody war. While such occurrences are to be deplored, they furnish no reasons for a continuance of the Bureau beyond the time fixed in the original act. The conduct of agents is likewise noted as leading to fraud, corruption and oppression. He further urges as another reason against the necessity of the legislation contemplated by this measure, that reference may be had to the civil right bill, now a law of the land, and which will be faithfully executed as long as it shall remain unrepealed, and may not be declared unconstitutional by the courts of competent jurisdiction. Its provisions he declares furnish full protection to all persons, without distinction, and although it did not receive his approval, yet he considered its remedies far preferable to those presented in the present bill. The provision relative to a confirmation of certain sales of sea lands, is considered unwise, partial and unconstitutional. In conclusion he again urges the danger of that class of legislation as tending to keep the public mind in a state of uncertain expectation, disgust and restlessness, and finishing false hopes to classes of persons of support and maintenance, regardless of the pursuits of a life of independence or labor, and regardless of the constitutional limitation.

The Freedmen's Bureau Bill was put on its passage in the House immediately after the reading of the President's veto message, and passed by the requisite vote—ayes, 103; nays, 33. It was immediately sent to the Senate, which body also passed it by a two-thirds vote—ayes, 33; nays, 12. The bill is therefore a law.

In the House, Mr. Farnesworth offered a resolution calling on the President for copies of the opinions of the members of the Confederate Cabinet on the status of Confederate leaders, immediately preceding the surrender, which was adopted.

WASHINGTON, July, 17,—In the last Republican caucus, Mr. Boutwell gave the following reason why Congress should not adjourn: A distinguished gentleman from the South was in town, from whom he had learned that the Louisiana Convention would meet on the 30th, for the revision of the State Constitution, and that an amendment would be adopted disfranchising rebels and enfranchising the loyal inhabitants without distinction of color. If Congress should be in session when the Constitution should be adopted, it could, in accordance with the precedent established in the Rhode Island case, accept and thus give it validity as the Constitution of the State. In the Rhode Island case the Supreme Court decided that it was for Congress to decide which was the Constitutional Government of any State in which doubts existed. If Congress should not be in session, a long time must elapse before action could be taken. The new government of the State might fail to get a foothold, and the country would experience a very serious calamity.

Mr. Ashley, of Ohio, asked whether the gentleman supposed a new constitution would be adopted without being submitted to the people of the State.

Mr. B. replied he did not know how that might be. It might perhaps be submitted to the loyal people of the State.

Mr. Ashley said that to await for the convention to act, and tho people to vote, would take us over to October, at least.

Gen. Banks also favors waiting for Louisiana. The "distinguished gentleman" is Judge Howell.

WASHINGTON, 17.—The following dispatch was received to-day from Major Gen. Thomas:

NASHVILLE, TENN, July 14.

Lieut. Gen. Grant—Some of the members of the House of Representatives of the Tennessee General Assembly conduct themselves in a very refractory manner, absenting themselves to prevent a quorum, thus obstructing business. The Governor cannot manage them with the means at his disposal, and has applied to me for military assistance. Shall I furnish it?

G. H. THOMAS,
Major General Commanding.

The following answer was immediately given:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 17.—Gen. Grant will instruct Gen. Thomas that the facts stated in his telegram do not warrant the interference of the military authorities. The administration of the law and the preservation of the peace in Nashville belong properly to the State authorities, and the duty of the United States forces is not to interfere in any way in the controversy between the political authorities of the States, and Gen. Thomas will strictly abstain from any interference with them.

E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—In the Senate, a bill was passed, appropriating $50,000 to the Portland sufferers. The House resolution to adjourn on the 25th, was laid on the table. The bill to fund the national debt was taken up, and an amendment was adopted prohibiting the depositing of money in national banks, where there was a United States depository. The bill was passed. It provides for the payment of $180,000,000 annually on the principal and interest of the United States debt. Another provision authorizes an excess of gold to be sold for the United States notes in open market, when the sum in the treasury is about $50,000,000.

Mr. Trumbull offered a joint resolution recognizing Tennessee as a State, and as such, entitled to all the guarantees and rights, which was ordered to be printed.

In the House, Mr. Stevens offered a resolution, the Senate concurring, that when Congress adjourns, it adjourn to meet on Saturday, December 1st, unless sooner called together, which power, in case of emergency, is hereby granted to the presiding officers of both Houses. Some objections being made to considering the resolution now, Mr. Stevens withdrew it, but gave notice that he should offer it to morrow.

Mr. Bingham called up the resolution, months ago reported from the reconstruction committee, providing for the admission of Tennessee into the Union. Mr. Stevens opposed it by a motion that it be laid on the table, which failed.

Mr. Bingham offered a substitute, to at once restore the State to its proper relations to the general government.

Pending the subject, the House adjourned.

This new-born zeal was superinduced by the reception of a telegram from Gov. Brownlow, that the House of Representatives of Tennessee had ratified the constitutional amendment by 43 against 11.

WASHINGTON, July, 19—Gov. Brownlow's dispatch to Forney, announcing the action of Tennessee on the constitutional amendment, was as follows: "The battle has been fought and won. The constitutional amendment was carried in the House by 43 against 11. Two of Johnson's creatures refused to vote. Give my respects to the dead dog at the White House."

To day, on Steven's extraordinary resolution, Speaker Colfax expressed the opinion, although it was a new question, that if the two Houses took a recess they could authorize their presiding officers to call them together at some day during the recess. This resolution contemplated an indefinite and conditional recess. If Congress adjourned sine die, no power but the President could convene them in advance of the regular session. Mr. Trimble suggested, sarcastically, that it would be well to provide, in the resolution, that if the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives disagreed as to whether they could reconvene Congress, there should be some umpire to decide the interesting little differences. The Speaker said that by the terms of the resolution, the recess could not be terminated and Congress again convened, unless the presiding officers of both houses agreed. The resolution was withdrawn to be renewed.

There was some excitement in the House over the announcement that Tennessee had ratified the constitutional amendment. The efforts of Bingham to have the State at once restored to her practical relations with the Union, was strongly opposed by Stevens and his followers. The Republicans, with the Democrats who acted on the other side, were in the majority, and prevented an adjournment, and voted down all other motions made by Stevens. Mr. Bingham finally got his resolution, to admit the Representatives from Tennessee, before the House, when this body adjourned. The question will come up to-morrow. The House agreed to the Senate amendment of the consular and diplomatic bill, abolishing the office of minister of Portugal. This is done to express the opinion of the radicals against Harvey, the present minister, on account of his telegraphing, in 1861, the sailing of the vessels sent to furnish supplies to Maj. Anderson, at Fort Sumter.

FOREIGN.

A great battle occurred on the 3rd July near Ludilz. The Prussians gained a complete victory, capturing 14,000 Austrians. The loss on both sides are terrible. Austria has sent in a flag of truce.

Austria has agreed to the cession of Venetia and accepted Napoleon as mediator. Napoleon immediately communicated with the belligerents.

The Prussians carried Gitschen by storm, after an obstinate defense, and a junction was effected between the army of the Elbe, under Prince Frederick Charles, and the army of Silesia, under the Crown Prince. Five thousand prisoners were captured at Gitschen, and the losses by the Austrians in the series of combats are altogether estimated at 20,000 killed and wounded, and 15,000 prisoners. In the battle of the 28th and 29th, the corps of Austrians, under Gen. Goblentz, was nearly broken up. It lost four guns and eight flags.

It is officially denied that the Prussians lost 18 guns as stated by Vienna dispatches.

The Austrians have retired to a strong position between Josepstadt and Koneggratz. Their retreat is said to have been precipitate.

The Army of the Elbe has advanced beyond Gitzchen. The King of Prussia was at Glizchen on the third on a visit to the army.

The London Times says: "Horrible as the carnage has been, it is a mere prelude to the pitched battle now unavoidable in which a quarter of a million of men will be engaged on either side."

King Victor Emanuel sent a telegram congratulating the King of Prussia on the victory of his arms.

The operations between the Italians and Austrians is confined to skirmishing. No engagement of importance has occurred in that quarter. The Italians are preparing for another onslaught, and the soldiers are eager for the fray.

Berlin dispatches, of the 1st, give official accounts from the Crown Prince, giving the result of three days' combats. The fighting of the 5th Prussian corps, which has been engaged, cannot be too highly estimated. On the 27th, it was opposed by the 6th Austrian corps, which was used up on the 28th. The 6th Prussian corps was commanded by Archduke Leopold and Gen. Testely, nail the fighting on those days was over extended lines. Goblentz's corps was broken up, losing heavily in guns, killed, wounded and prisoners. The Austrians have evacuated Oswecin. Dresden is being fortified.

The Prussian march in Bohemia is thus far triumphant.

Benedek is concentrating his forces for a great battle.

The Austrian loss was 4000, besides the prisoners captured at Hitschen. The Prussian loss was heavy. Several Austrian regiments were nearly decimated on the 28th. A Hungar battalion was annihilated to the last man.

The Austrians claim a minor success at Turnau on the 30th.

A Berlin dispatch of the 3d says: Notwithstanding the arduous campaign and sanguinary fighting the Prussian army is in high spirits and excellent condition.

Benedek was compelled, in consequence of the retreat of the Austrian and Saxon troops, to abandon his operations near Gitschen and concentrate at a distant point.

The Austrians claim the capture of 4000 men and 14 guns at Custozza. The Austrian Hussars advanced on the Italian territory near the Mincio, but were driven off. The division that suffered the most at Custozza is not dispirited, and wishes to be placed in front at the next battle.

The Paris Moniteur, of the 5th, makes the following announcement: After having maintained the honor of his arms in Italy the Emperor of Austria concurred in the ideas expressed in Napoleon's letter of June 11th to his Minister of Foreign Affairs, cedes Venetia to the French Emperor and accepts his mediation, for concessions of peace.

Napoleon hastened to respond to the summons, and immediately communicated to the Kings of Prussia and Italy, in order to bring about an armistice.

The battle of Luditz lasted twelve hours. The Austrians were completely routed, losing 14,000 prisoners and 106 cannon. Three Archdukes were wounded. Princes Lichtenstien and Undischer are prisoners.

The London Times says the war is virtually ended.

Garibaldi attacked the Austrians at Monticello on the 30th, and was repulsed. Garibaldi was wounded in the thigh.

Derby's Cabinet has been installed.

It is rumored Archduke Albert supercedes Benedek in command of the Austrian army.

The Austrians have evacuated Lombardy.

LIVERPOOL, July 5.—Prussia and Italy have accepted the proposed armistice, upon condition that Prussia shall retain her present military position, and that her troops shall be supported by the counties occupied. Austria is not to increase her army in the field. Italy is to occupy one fortress in quadrilateral. Italy, in her reply, demanded two fortresses.

Vienna telegraphs report good prospects of an armistice for six weeks.

Hostilities have not been resumed. The Austrians continued to retreat without molestation. The Prussians had advanced further into Bohemia. There has been severe fighting on the frontiers of Venetia and Tyrol.

The shore end of the cable was successfully laid on the 6th. The old cable had been tested and found in perfect condition.

The Prussians had gained another victory, defeating the Bavarians at Diembach.

The people of Italy and Prussia are said to be strongly opposed to the armistice; desiring the terms to be dictated to Austria at Vienna.

Vienna dispatches say Gens. Clain, Gallias and Krayenalgne, and Field Marshal Stein will be court-martialed.

The King of Prussia has ordered the release of all prisoners, paroling them not to serve during the war.

Heavy cannonading was heard in the direction of Konigratz on the evening of the 7th, and it was believed the Prussians were storming that forth.

At Berlin, the statue of Frederick II was crowned with laurels, in honor of the victory.

A Trautenau dispatch says the victory against the Austrians was decided by the army of the Prince Royal succeeding, by great efforts and forced marches, in reaching the battle ground in season to direct the attack against the right wing of the Austrians. The king decorated the prince on the field with the order of military merit.

The Tyrolese priests are inciting the peasantry against Garibaldi, by proclaiming his force as bandits and denouncing him as an anti-Christian.

La Presse, semi-official journal of Paris, of July 6th, says King Victor Emmanuel has not acceded to the armistice proposed through France. He alleges as his reason that he has to consult with his ally, the King of Prussia. In consequence, the Italian government has been advised that it will have to cease immediately every act of hostility against Venetia, it being French territory.

A French commissioner is going at once to Venetia, to assume its government in the name of the emperor. Orders have been issued to the French squadron in the Mediterranean immediately to repair to Venice, and hoist the French flag instead of the Austrian upon all fortified posts on the Venetian coast. The cession of Venetia to France is complete and definite without any other condition on the part of Austria, except to withdraw the guns and all munitions of war found in fortified places. Within forty-eight hours the whole of Venetia will be French territory, and it will depend upon the good will of France either to keep or part with it.

La Presse further says that it is the intention of Austria to continue the war against Prussia if she perseveres in her intentions as asserted in her project of federal reform communicated to the governments of Northern Germany. The Emperor Francis Joseph declares his resolution to transfer his capital to Pesth, should he be unable to defend Vienna, and to call to arms the white population of his States.

Judge Harbeson, of the Louisville city court, has excluded negro testimony on the ground that Congress cannot unanul a law of Kentucky which forbids the introduction of such testimony against white people.

There were five cases of cholera in Brooklyn and two at New York last week.

Roberts, the Fenian president, was indicted to-day by the grand jury for violation of the neutrality laws.

The shippers' warehouse at Mobile last Tuesday was destroyed by fire with 1000 bales of cotton, involving a loss of $150,000, which is covered by insurance.

Kossuth has, it is said received a great number of invitations from Hungarians to put himself at the head of a revolution in Hungary, in case war continues.

Late advices from the plains report great excitement in the Blue country in consequence of a large body of Indians who manifest hostile intentions. The whites beyond Blue river are abandoning their homes and crops. A raid of two thousand Indians from Blue river to Smoky Hill valley is seriously apprehended. There are but few troops in the threatened locality. Gen. Pope was to be at Santa Fe on the 15th of this month.

A Liberal Donation.

Mr. C. H. McCormick of Chicago, has recently given another instance of his enlightened liberality. The Union Theological Seminary at Hampden Sidney, Prince Edward County, Virginia, connected with the Presbyterian Church, has suffered the loss of about one-third of its permanent funds by the disasters of the war. Dr. Smith, one of the Professors of that institution, is now in this city, soliciting aid toward repairing the loss and otherwise enlarging the endowment of the institution, to place it on a scale adapted to the increased expenses of the times. We understand he has received a letter from Mr. McCormick, informing him that he gives to the Seminary thirty thousand dollars, the endowment of a Professorship. Dr. S. has received, also, very liberal aid in his enterprise from several of our leading men in benevolent operations. He can be addressed, care of Turnbull & Baxter, No. 96 Duane street, or at his lodgings, No. 166 Jay street, Brooklyn.

Mr. McCormick has also added five thousand dollars to his contribution of ten thousand for the endowment of a Professorship in Washington College, Lexington, Virginia, of which General Lee is President. The chair is filled by Prof. R. S. McCulloch, formerly of Columbian College, New York. It is well known in Presbyterian circles that Mr. McCormick endowed the Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church, Chicago, with one hundred thousand dollars in 1859, and the Assembly, at its recent meeting, appointed Dr. E. D. McMasters the Professor of Theology in that institution. Thus the money of a native of Virginia, a decided conservative, is perverted to sustain an institution whose professors are of a Radical stamp. We are not surprised that Mr. McCormick prefers directing his benefactions in a channel more congenial with his tastes and antecedents.—New York News.

The Assistant Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau in Alabama forwards to the Commissioner his estimate of the number of rations it will be necessary to issue to the destitute people of the State in the month of July, 1866: Huntsville, 4,800; Demopolis, 660; Tuscaloosa, 1,020; Talladega, 1,170; Selma, 1,380; Montgomery, 2,850; Greenville, 750; Mobile, 1,635. Total, 15,000.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

We have no material change (save the Price Current of Wednesday) to notice in the general market since our last report, operations having continued on a limited scale in nearly every branch of trade, but in our leading staple the movement has been more animated, and under the influence of the foreign news prices have improved 1 to 2c per lb.

COTTON.—On Monday there was no improvement apparent until the accounts from Liverpool by the Nova Scotian, noticed above, gave an additional impulse to the demand, and 1600 bales changed hands at prices showing an improvement of 1 to 2c per lb, Good Ordinary commanding 28 to 30c and Low Middling 32 to 34. Yesterday the market opened with a very fair enquiry, but the movement being checked by the stringent pretensions of factors, many of whom asked above our outside figures, the sales were confined to 1000 bales, at full prices.

TOBACCO.—The receipts have again decreased and are now small, but the stock on hand is fair and the assortment is good. There has again been a fair enquiry on foreign account, but the prices offered are mostly below the views of holders, who are very firm in their asking rates. We quote a firm maket at the following rates:

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused..	4 to—	—to 5c, Currency.
Good do	5½ to 6	6½ to 7
Common Leaf	7½ to 8	9 to 11.
Fair.....	12 to 13	14 to 15
Good.....	15 to 16	16 to 17
Fine.....	17 to 18	18 to 19
Choice Selec'n	20 to —	21 to 25

SUGAR.—Supplies of the domestic production is about exhausted, but that of the foreign production is fair. The market has continued dull, and what little is doing is mostly in a retail way. There were a few small retail sales at previous prices; viz.: 12½ to 13¼c for Common Louisiana, 14c for Fair 14½c for Fully Fair, 15c for Prime, 16 to 17c for Yellow Clarified and 17 to 17½c for White. Cuba Sugar has been retailing slowly at 13 to 13¾c for No. 12; 14c for No. 14, 14⅝ to 15c for No. 15.

MOLASSES.—The market is bare of Louisiana, but the supply of Cuba is fair. Cuba Molasses is retailing at 55c per gallon. There have not been any round sales but a cargo could not be bought under 55c per gallon, and that price was refused yesterday for half a cargo.

FLOUR—The receipts continue light and the stock on hand is small, but the demand is limited and only local and prices have further declined 25c per bbl. The sales on Saturday and Monday were at $9 25 for Superfine, $11 to 11 15 for Fine, Extra, $13 to 13 25 for Good Extra and $14 to 14 25 per bbl for Choice Extra. Yesterday there was a better demand but at a reduction of 25c per bbl on the foregoing prices, and 3000 bbls were sold to dealers in small lots at $9 to $9 25 for Superfine, $10 for some on its merits, $10 75 for Low Extra, $11 25 to 12 for Good Extra and $13 to $14 per bbl for Choice Extra.

BACON—Sugar-cure Hams are in good supply, but there are not many Sides on hand and Shoulders are scarce, and although the demand is only at retail, still better prices have been obtained. There have not been any wholesale transactions, excepting 50 tcs good Sugar-Cured Hams to arrive, at 26c per lb. A lot of 25 casks Shoulders sold on the spot at 17½c and 10 and 20 do at 17½c per lb. Shoulders are retailing at 17½c Ribbed Sides 20½ to 21c, Clear Sides 22c and Sugar-cured Hams 25½ to 26½c per lb. Round or larger lots could be purchased from ½ to 1c per lb below the above figures. The market is bare of plain Hams.

PORK.—There is a good stock on hand but the market is dull, there being no demand for round lots. Holders are very anxious to realize $35 per barrel for Mess, which may be quoted at $35 50 per bbl. It is retailing slowly at $35 25 to $35 50 per bbl.

GREEN MEAT.—The market is bare. The last sales were retail at 16½c per lb for Shoulders.

LARD—Is in good supply but is not in demand and sells only in a retail way at 23 to 23½c per lb for Prime in tierces and 24½c in kegs. Prime in tierces has been freely offered from first hands at 23½c per lb without selling.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—We have again to note a dull market at previous prices. Northern Butter is selling at 40 to 43c and Western at 28 to 32c per lb. Common Butter is very dull at 19 to 21c per lb. Cheese is in good supply but very little in demand. It is selling slowly at 15 to 18c for Western and 15 to 20c for Northern, and English Dairy at 25 to 26c per lb.

CORN—The demand has continued good and the receipts being small prices have advanced 5c per bushel for Mixed and 5 to 10c for White. Yesterday 10,000 sacks were sold at 87½ to 90c for Mixed, 92 for Yellow and $1 05 to $1 10 per bushel for White.

OATS—Are in fair supply and continue in moderate demand at about previous prices. Yesterday the market was quiet but firm at 52½ to 53c per bushel for Choice.

BRAN. Continues in moderate supply and demand and prices are unchanged. Yesterday 600 sacks sold at $1 12½ per 100 lbs.

HAY.—There is a good stock on hand but sales are slow. Yesterday 103 bales New York sold at $21 per ton.

INDIA RAGGING. The stock is small and holders are asking 33c per yard. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 31½c in rolls, an advance of 1c, and 33c by sales.

BALE ROPE.—The market is quiet. The last sale was 18c per lb. Dealers are obtaining 18½c per lb. Iron Cotton Ties are selling at 12c per lb.

COFFEE. There has been a better demand for the country which dealers have continued to supply at 24½ to 28½c per lb currency for Ordinary to Prime Rio.

GUNNY BAGS.—There are not many in the market. They sell in a way at 35c a piece.

STAR CANDLES.—Are in fair jobbing demand and there have been small sales at 20c per lb for 12 oz, 21c for 13 oz, and 25c for full weight.

SOAP.—A lot of 100 boxes Palm sold at 7½c per lb; subsequently 8c was obtained.

RICE.—There is no Carolina in market and no India in first hands. The latter is selling from second hands at 9 to 11c per lb. Louisiana commands at 11½ to 13c per lb.

WOOL.—There is very little in market. The last sales were at 18 to 19c for unwashed Texas. All descriptions are in request.

SALT.—Round lots of Liverpool Coarse and Fine are yet quoted at $1 65 per sack, while dealers have been obtaining $1 85 to $1 95 for Fine.

NAVAL STORES.—With little on hand and in the absence of important sales we continue to quote Common and No. 2 Rosin at $4 50, No 1 at $9, Virgin dip $10 to $12, Pitch $6, Tar $2 50 to $4 per bbl; Spirits Turpentine command 90 to 92½c per gallon.

HIDES.—Are in fair demand, but there are not many on hand and only small sales are making in consequence at 9c for Green Hides, 10c for Kip Skins, and 12 to 13c per lb for Dry Hides.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $3 to $3 10 for St. Louis and $3 25 to $3 50 for Louisville. Onions $1 00 to $1 25 per bbl. Apples $4 to $5 per bbl.

POULTRY & EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $12 00. Geese at $10 00 and Turkeys at $30 00 per dozen. Western Eggs are selling at $18 to $22 per bbl.

BEANS.—Are dull at $5 to $7 per bbl.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY,
Tuesday evening, July, 17, 1866.

Arrived since our last: 1480 Texas Beeves, 307 calves and yearlings, 31 hogs and 20 milch cows.

Sold, 981 Texas beeves, 258 calves and yearlings, 114 hogs, 2121 sheep and 5 milch cows.

Stock on sale: 1611 Texas beeves, 136 calves and yearlings, 118 hogs, 4939 sheep and 31 milch cows.

Western Beef, choice per lb net.....	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net..	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head.....	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head.....	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head.....	$15 to 20
Hogs per lb gross.....	12 to 14
Sheep in lots per head.....	$2 25 to $4 25
Creole Sheep, per head.....	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head.....	$3 25 to $4 25
Choice Sheep, per head.....	$6 to $8
Milch Cows, choice per head.....	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head.....	$50 to $80
Yearlings, per head.....	$10 to $14
Calves per head.....	$7 to $11

MONETARY.

Statement of New Orleans Gold Market week ending Friday July 20th, 1866.

EXCHANGE.—Domestic opened this week at ¼ premium, week ending at par with downward tendency.

FRIDAY, JULY 13TH, 1866,
Gold, 150; 152; 151½; 152¼; 152; 151; 151½; 151¾; 152; 150¼.

SATURDAY, JULY 14TH.
Gold, 151; 150½; 150; 150½; 150¼.

MONDAY, JULY 16TH.
Gold, 150; 148.

TUESDAY, JULY 17TH.
Gold, 146; 151½; 147; 147.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 18TH.
Gold, 148; 149; 148; 148.

THURSDAY, JULY 19TH.
Gold, 148; 146; 148; 148.

Reported by
WM. S. MOUNT, Manager.
The City Bank of New Orleans,
15 Commercial Place, New Orleans.

THE BALTIMORE EPISCOPAL METHODIST will be issued in this city the first of next month. Its publication will be under the management of the Rev John Poisal. Dr. THOMAS E. BOND and Rev S. S. ROSZEL, Editors. The "Episcopal Methodist," of Richmond, Virginia, having been transferred to Baltimore, Bishop Degget and Rev. J. E. Edwards will continue their services as Editorial correspondents. Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D., General Agent. The best talent of the Southern Church will be employed upon its columns. The publisher has the pleasure to announce that contributions may be expected from Bishop Pierce of Georgia, Bishop Marvin of Texas, Bishop McTyeire of Alabama, Bishop Wightman of South Carolina, Dr. Summers of Nashville, Dr. Marshall of Mississippi, Dr. Huston of Kentucky and others.

The contributions of some of the most eminent men of other denominations will also enrich its columns: Rev. Dr. Palmer of New Orleans, Dr. Burgett of Mobile, Dr. Bullock of Baltimore, Prof. McGiffy of the University of Virginia, Rev. Peyton Harrison, and others.

It is designed to make the paper the great organ of the Episcopal Methodist Church, yet in no partisan sense will it be denominational. The General Conference which recently met at New Orleans and the whole people of the South, concede to Baltimore a name and prestige as the proper place for its publication. No pains or expense will be spared to make it a first-class Journal and a welcome visitor to every Christian household. The names of the gentlemen who will have the Editorial management of the paper, and the corps of able coadjutors associated with them are the best pledge to its patrons, that they will find the "Episcopal Methodist," in its spirit and teaching, the advocate of conservative principles and a bulwark of defense against the dangerous tendencies of the times.

We deem it proper to assure our friends, that the salutary measures of reform, which were adopted by the late General Conference, meet the cordial approval of the conductors of this paper. As it will represent every State and Conference in the South, it will afford the best advertising medium in all our business and social relations. It invites a renewal in a stronger form of those commercial and fraternal ties which must bind Baltimore and the South more closely together.

This important organ of communication between our respective communities, will be published regularly one a week on fine paper, large type and quarto size at $4 00 per annum, or $2 00 for six months, invriably in advance.

Office of publication, 332 W. Baltimore Street Selby & Dulaney, where subscriptions and advertisements may be left. All the members of the Southern General Conference are authorized Agents. The preachers of the several annual Conferences and clergymen generally, are requested to act as agents for this paper.

THOS. E. BOND, Editor.
S. S. ROSZEL, Associate Editor.
JOHN POISAL, Publisher.
Baltimore, June 4th, 1866.

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams' Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons Type. up7-1

THE NEW ORLEANS
Christian Advocate
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY
At Five Dollars per annum, in advance.
OFFICE 11½ CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

This religious Journal is specially devoted to the interests of the Methodist E. Church South, and is the official paper for the Mobile, Montgomery, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences. Some of the ablest writers in the Church are regular contributors to its columns.

Its weekly summary of news is carefully compiled, and contains all the current intelligence about home as well as abroad.

Its "Commercial Column" will always be found reliable.

Hereafter, the "Corner for Children" will receive particular attention, as also that portion of the paper intended for selections of choice reading.

LILIENTHAL'S
GREAT PHOTOGRAPH
OF THE BISHOPS.

This is a decided success. The artist has fixed the noble features of these distinguished divines in the highest style known to the art. Every family of our Church would like to have one. As mementoes to leave among our friends, they will be invaluable.

They will be sold at a low price, and the proceeds of the sale will be donated to benevolent objects. The plate belongs to a party who aims to promote a cause all will heartily approve. They may be had hereafter at the Book Room, 112 Camp street. There are nine Bishops present—all the college, except the venerable Soule. Address orders to Rev. R. J. HARP. Price $3; wholesale price $2 50. my5 tf

GENERAL CONFERENCE
Pic-Nic Photograph
140 PICTURES FOR $3.

One hundred and forty Bishops and Delegates to the General Conference of the M. E. Church South, including almost the entire body, taken in
ONE GROUP,
at the City Park, during the elegant Pic-Nic entertainment given them by the ladies of New Orleans, by the accomplished artist Theodore Lilienthal, in various positions—standing, sitting on benches, boxes, and on the ground.

These Pictures, though small, (as they must be to embrace so many in one group,) are, with two or three exceptions, very distinct, and when viewed through a magnifying glass—which can be obtained for $2—have a remarkably life-like appearance.

For sale at the Branch of the Southern M. E. Publishing House, No. 112 Camp st., up stairs.

Liberal arrangements made with wholesale dealers, for cash. Sent by Express. C. O. D. Price $3; with neat frame and glass, $6.

Address ROBT J. HARP, Agent,
je2 Lock Box 814, New Orleans.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,
HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD.
Established, August, 1861.
Destroyed, May, 1863.
Re-established, January, 1866.
SALES ROOMS,
C. E. CATE & CO.,
18 CAMP STREET, 18
Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURES to the various styles of
LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,
Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

feb17 C. E. CATE & CO.
18 Camp st., N. O.

PAYNE, HUNTINGTON & CO.,
Cotton Factors,
No. 72 Union Street,
NEW ORLEANS.
J. U. PAYNE, G. W. HUNTINGTON,
W. C. H. DAMERON, H. M. PAYNE.
je23-1y

TOM HENDERSON, late of Henderson, Terry & Co. SAM HENDERSON, late of Violett, Black & Co.
TOM & SAM HENDERSON,
COTTON FACTORS
AND
General Commission Merchants,
100 COMMON STREET,
je9 1y New Orleans

J. C. M'ALLISTER, late of Memphis, formerly of Jackson, Miss.
E. M'NAIR, late of Arkansas, formerly of Miss.
H. GARDES, late of Washington, Arkansas.
M'ALLISTER, M'NAIR & GARDES, Wholesale Grocers, 74 Common Street New Orleans, La. sp7

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY
Established in 1837.
VANDUZEN & TIFT,
Of the late Firm and Successors to G. W. COFFIN & CO.,
102 & 104 East Second street,
Cincinnati, Ohio,
Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.
Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our Improved Rotary Yoke.
All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.
Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. je16

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This Institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A seperate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address fl-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles st., corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered in 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no copying from books.
Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law; English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages; Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics and Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.
For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address
f3 1y GEO. SOULE, N. N.

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M.,	President, Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs. A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Croyden Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Mary S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The duties of the Classical Department are performed by the President until the chair is filled.
The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one, but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.
Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bedclothing.
Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.
The next session commences 10th September.
Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to jy14 6m A. J. WRIGHT, Pres.

J. B. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.
JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.
Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans. ap14-1y

R. K. WALKER. 1866. M'KNIGHT. J. P JOHNSON.
R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondelet street, New Orleans
jan 20-1y

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c.
Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.
Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

GEORGE L. HILL, ATTORNEY at Law, Marshall, Texas. Collections made in Eastern Texas and West Louisiana. mar27

WATTS, GIVEN & CO., Padncah, Ky. WATTS, CRANE & CO. New York.
W. C. WATTS & CO., Liverpool, England.
GIVEN, WATTS & CO., COTTON Factors & General Commission Merchants, No. 103 Poyd

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

How to Honor a Mother.

In the north of Enrope is a mountainous country called Sweden. Its winters are long, snowy and cold. Its summers are short, but very lovely and sweet-aired, especially in the valleys between the high mountains.

The inhabitants of that country are noted for their industry, virtue and contentment. One morning, a long time ago, a certain king of Sweden, called Gustavus the Third, was riding through a village in one of the beautiful valleys, not far from Stockholm, the capital city. As he passed along, he saw a young girl filling a pitcher with water that gushed from the cool rocks which overshadowed the roadside. He stopped at the fountain and asked the girl for a drink. She knew not the stranger, but gracefully stepped forward and lifted the pitcher to his lips as he sat upon his horse. She was evidently very poor, but her kindness, so tenderly expressed upon her countenance, together with her artless, unembarrassed politeness, at once attracted the King's attention, and touched his heart. Judging by her appearance that she was a child of poverty, he told her, that if she would go to the city, he would find her a pleasant home.

"Ah! good sir," answered the girl, "Providence places me here, and I am not anxious to change my position in life. I am content, and if I were not content, it would be impossible for me to accept your kind offer."

"Indeed! Why not?" said the king in some surprise.

"Because my mother is poor and sickly," she replied.

"And you remain at home to take care of her."

I am her only help and companion, said the girl, looking upon the ground with a genuine modesty that won the sympathies of her royal auditor. "I am happy in my lot, and am thankful that I can take good care of and comfort the one so dear to me. No offer, however tempting, could induce me to leave my mother."

"Where is your mother?" inquired the king, becoming more interested in the noble girl.

"In yon little hut by the side of the road," said she, pointing toward the humble dwelling. It was a low, thatched building, covered with moss and vines, very neat and clean, but so old and weather-worn that it afforded but a poor shelter in time of cold and storms.

Gustavus alighted from his horse, and followed the girl into the hut, to see her mother. He found her sick and suffering, lying upon a bed of straw—a pale, thin woman—sinking under her infirmities, and looking forward to the grave only as a bed of rest. The king was almost overcome at the pitiable sight, and said, while tears came into his eyes—ah, yes, and those tears were more beautifully radiant and glorious than the brightest dazzles that ever glanced from his crown of diamonds—

"I feel sorry, mother, to find you so destitute and afflicted."

"Yes, yes, my dear sir," said the lady in a feeble voice; "but I am so glad that God has given me an affectionate daughter. She is always trying to relieve me, and is my constant comforter. May God in his love remember and bless her—my dear child: and her voice was checked back by sobs, and her face was covered with tears.

The good king wept with the poor widow.

What a sight! How the angels of heaven hovered over that lonely hut, breathing joy unspeakable into three hearts—the suffering woman's, the sympathising king's and the final daughter's. The monarch never received such a blessing on his throne in the palace, as there in the lone hut by the wayside! He handed the daughter a purse of gold, and directed her to a better house, where she and her mother might be comfortable, saying as he departed:—

"Go on, my young friend, in your way of dutiful love and care, and you shall lack for nothing while I have means to help you. I am your king.—Farewell!"

Gustavus ever remembered the poor family, and made provision to have a sum of money regularly sent to the woman for her support; and at the mother's death he presented the daughter with a handsome fortune.

Young readers, for your parents' sake, and Christ's sake, but also for your own sake, remember the command, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

Trifles are sometimes very expensive. A boy at Portland, Maine, threw a fire-cracker into a pile of shavings a few days ago, and it cost the city about ten millions of dollars.

Life is often a constant struggle for riches, which we must soon leave behind. They seem given to us as the nurse gives a play-thing to a child to amuse it until falls asleep.

A fluteless flutest is spoken of in Havre as performing wonderful things. He makes a flute out of his left hand, which he holds to his mouth, using the right hand in lieu of stops. The notes he produces are not to be distinguished from those of the real instrument. His name is Fereyra.

(From the French of Napoleon Roussel.)

THE CHRISTIAN CATHOLIC.

In a retired village of —— [illegible] ved, not long ago, a good cure amongst some two or three hundred parishioners. One Sunday, after coming from mass he reflected upon the little benefit which his auditors had probably derived from it, he found himself in the midst of some dozen of his people, who were chatting before the door of the church. It occurred to him, that, by a familiar conversation with these simple villagers, he might be more useful to them than by chanting to them the vespers in Latin. He halted, therefore, amongst them, seated himself upon a stone, and, his two hands supported on the head of his walking-stick, he commenced thus in a good-natured tone:—

"Tell me, John, are you a Christian?"

"Why, yes, Mr. Cure," replied John, all amazed.

"And how did you become a Christian?"

"Because—because you baptized me when I was quite little; and so I am a Christian."

"Well, but my good fellow, do you think that that thief, whom the police arrested last month upon the highway, and who was condemned yesterday to ten years in the galleys, for having stolen £800 from our notary—do you think that that robber was a Christian?"

"Most certainly not!"

"However, like yourself, he has received that baptism which renders you a Christian?"

"Yes."

"And why?"

"Because I.—Ive made my first communion."

"Well, you have heard speak of Cartouche?"

"Yes, sometimes; was he a Christian?"

"No he was a brigand, like Mandarin. Well now, my friend, Cartouche and Mandarin had both received their first communion; so you see, also, that the communion does not make the Christian?"

Our worthy peasants regarded each other, not well knowing what their cure was after. He continued:—

"Mr. Schoolmaster, you can better inform us, I dare say, what renders you a Christian?"

The schoolmaster, persuaded that the cure had selected him to decide the difficulty to the satisfaction of all, was, for the moment, greatly flattered to hear himself thus appealed to; so, after having coughed, and cleared his throat, he replied:—

"I am a Christian, 1st, because I go every Sunday to mass; 2ndly, because I go to confessional every month; 3rdly, because I observe the penances imposed; I repeat my paternosters; I keep the fasts—Lent, and all the rest."

"Your answer is longer than the others (the pedagogue looked well satisfied with this commencement): but it is worth no more (the master betrayed his vexation); for you must remember," continued the cure, "that all the heretics condemned by the church, all the hypocrites who trade in religion, all who go to mass, fast, recite their paters, observe their penances; and yet neither these heretics, nor these hypocrites, are Christians."

The auditory was thoroughly taken by surprise—every one feared to be questioned; a child of ten years of age present was alone unconcerned: it was to this child the cure addressed himself.

"Tell me, my little Joseph, what must one do to be a Christian?"

"Sir, we must love the blessed God, and be very good."

"Blessed art thou, heavenly Father," exclaimed the pastor, raising his eyes to heaven; "for that thou hast revealed to babes the things which thou hast hid from the wise and prudent! Yes, my friends, that which makes the Christian, is the feeling of his heart. He who has confidence in Jesus Christ to obtain for him forgiveness of his sins, and who, thus pardoned, loves God with all his heart, and his neighbour as himself, he is a Christian: in two words—religion consists not in the ceremonies performed by our feet, our hands, or our mouths; it is in the sentiments of faith and love of our hearts."

The cure here ended his conversation, and withdrew. These words, which so completely astonished our good peasants, will not so much surprise the reader, when he learns that our cure, for some times past, has devoted himself to the reading of a great volume, inherited from an uncle, and that that study in which he was seen to be engaged morning and evening, preceded and followed by prayer, had caused him more than once to forget his breviary, and had sensibly modified his religious opinions.

He thought he saw, in his church, more than one thing which was not good; yet, not being at present quite clear about it, he continued, at the same time, to read his book, and to say the mass.

But, this time, he had wounded the self-esteem of the schoolmaster, who, to revenge himself, reported the said conversation to the vicar; he spoke in his turn to the Bishop, and the following Thursday the cure received from his superior, who was also his uncle and his friend, the letter now to be read:—

"My dear nephew, and brother in Jesus Christ,—it has been told me, that last Sunday you held in your church a conversation, the consequence of which will be to bring into contempt all the holy practices of our church, and which puts the salvation of man beyond the influence of the priest. You are aware how dangerous such doctrines are. I wish to believe that your words have been ill understood, and that, without doubt, you meant to say that all these practises ought to be accompanied by the sentiments of the heart; but that ceremonies and sentiments are equally necessary; that if faith, if repentance, be necessary on the part of the believer, the intervention of the priest is no less necessary to receive that faith, to receive that repentance, and to fulfill the ceremonies of baptism, confirmation, extreme unction, &c., without which there is no salvation. I hope, then, that you will reply in this sense, and, at the same time, thus explain yourself in your next exhortation at mass.

"I salute you," &c.

The cure read and reread this letter: he found something which hurt his heart and his understanding; however, he scarce knew how he should reply.... He did not reply; he waited, and during that time it was noticed that he shut himself more frequently in his study to pray and read his folio, as was apparent from the end of his garden towards which his window looked. At length, after some weeks of study, here is the answer he sent:—

"My Lord, and dear Uncle,—I said that all the ceremonies of the Church help nothing for salvation; and to day, after having prayed to God and read his word, I say again, they help nothing. There are only three ways by which salvation can be obtained:—either by ceremonies alone—and in this case the greatest villains would be saved, whilst dying in impenitence (that which you would admit no more than myself); or, the religious ceremonies and the sentiments of the heart are equally indispensable—that which you believe to be true, and that which I am about to show to be false. If baptism, confirmation, fasts, mass, extreme unction, &c., are indispensable in order to be saved, the adultress whom Jesus Christ pardoned, the thief to whom our Saviour made promise of paradise, St. Stephen, who died a martyr, are consequently not saved; for, in the time of the adultress, mass was not said; the thief had no time to be baptized; St. Stephen did not receive extreme unction.

"If the ceremonies of the Church are indispensable for salvation, Christian sailors, cast by a shipwreck into a desert isle, Christian prisoners dying in heretical countries, or savages who may have been converted by the simple reading of the Bible, and who should stay in their country far from every priest and every sacrament; all these men, notwithstanding their sentiments, their faith, their love, would not then be saved, because they have not done that which they could not do.

"If our ceremonies were absolutely necessary to salvation, it would only need that a bad priest should refuse, by caprice or hatred, the sacraments to his parishioners, that they might be damned. If you reply that these are only exceptions, and that, in these cases, men may be saved without our religious ceremonies, I answer, These practices are not, then, necessary; one may be saved sometimes without them, and if sometimes, why not at any time? If the grace of God sufficed for St. Stephen, why shall it not suffice for me? If one may be saved without the absolution of a priest, in a desert isle, why not in my village? Is God less powerful in one age than in another, in one country than another? And my dear uncle, that which simple good sense tells us, the word of God tells us also. Listen to these words:—'To what purpose the multitude of your sacrifices, saith the Lord; incense is an abomination unto me; cease to do evil, learn to do well, seek judgment, judge the fatherless,' &c. 'The Lord,' says King David 'takes no pleasure in sacrifices. 'The sacrifices acceptable to God are, a broken spirit.' 'The Lord regardeth the heart.' However, my lord, think not that I wish to abolish all ceremonies: there are some which I believe were established by Jesus Christ himself, and which, for that reason, are good and useful. But it is one thing to say that a ceremony and a sacrament are useful, another to assert that they are indispensable. Wine is useful to life, when it fails, one can dispense with it; whilst water is indispensable, and, if it fails, we die. But if we follow the consequences of this unfortunate principle admitted by our Church, of the necessity of the sacrament and of the priest for the salvation of believers, you will be alarmed at the abuses to which it gives rise.

"Our Church has declared ceremonies necessary, and the heart of man, naturally corrupted, has seized upon this principle with eagerness, and has pushed it farther. The more outward worship appeared indispensable, the more he believed he could dispense with the worship of the heart; so that each has now learned how to reserve to himself his favorite passion, whilst imposing on his body a few extra ceremonies. For man will consent willingly to all privations, to all sacrifices, provided that you leave him at liberty to preserve the idol of his heart; one avarice, another pride, a third impurity. He will give you his time, his money, his exertions; he will submit himself to fasts, to abstinences, to confessions, &c. He will regard all these as good, useful, necessary, indispensable for salvation; he will even attach to these more importance than you desire, and that precisely so much the more easily to satisfy his dominant passion. My lord, this is a truth of which I have seen a thousand instances in my Church; I avow that I have myself experienced the same thing more than once. I have remarked, after attending mass in the morning, that I have thought myself authorised to act more freely in the evening.

"More than once I punctiliously observed Lent, in the secret hope of making up for it afterwards. At other times, tempted to sin, I gave way more easily, thinking, that, on confession, I should obtain absolution. After confession, I felt more at ease. It seemed as if my conscience, lightened by the absolution of the priest, could well now afford, without much risk, to charge itself afresh with some little sin. Oh, my lord, how deceitful and desperately wicked our hearts! One must study oneself with care to discover it; but be sure if others have not discovered it in themselves, it is because they are willing to be deceived. Let no man tell the people the whole truth; let no man say the ceremonies are good, as external signs, to symbolise, the sentiments within us: but that, after all, they are but symbols; that baptism by water is only an image of the purification of our heart from all its vices; that the Lord's Supper is only in remembrance of the great sacrifice of Jesus Christ, who died to redeem us from our sins.

"Let us tell them, indeed, that their attention should be directed within them, and in studying themselves, they will recognise the truth of these words of the New Testament:—'Men being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness maliciousness, full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity, whisperers, backbiters, haters of God,' &c. (Rom. i. 29) And when these unhappy sinners shall feel deeply their spiritual misery, let us disclose the treasure of salvation; let us announce to them that an expiatory sacrifice has been made for them, and that, according to the word of God, Christ has borne our sins upon the tree, that his blood has been shed for the remission of the sins of many; tell them that God gives them that heaven which they have not merited; and if they dare not believe in such a benefaction, open the Bible before them, and let them there read for themselves those sweet truths which have too long remained concealed: 'You are fully justified; you are saved by grace, by faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God.' God grant, my dear uncle, that these promises of the Bible may rejoice your own heart even as they have mine!

"Accept," &c.

Three days after, my lord sent one who should replace our cure, and invited him to pass some weeks at his dwelling. The bishop was a respectable old man—sincere and of good faith. He had never cherished the least doubt against the authority of his holy Mother Church; also as a respectful and submissive son, he subjected his body to its most minute observances—his health had even suffered thereby. Ever seeking an internal peace which he could not find, experiencing the want of assurance of his salvation, he added pilgrimages to fasts, to pilgrimages haircloth next his skin; and all this greatly fatigued his body, and tranquillized his soul but little. He ceased not to ask himself, if he had done sufficient to gain heaven; and he trembled at the thought that he was still, perhaps, some steps off, perhaps at the threshold, but still exposed to fall into hell! Then, fresh abstinence, fresh fears; and thus life flowed away, divided between the sufferings of his body and the anguish of his soul. One may suppose, in such a case, to what intent he has summoned the poor cure; he hoped to lead him back to opinions more comfortable to those of the the Church, from which he saw him wandering rapidly. The cure accepted the invitation of his bishop, who at first said very little, but received him with kindness.

The following day, in order to be more quiet, my lord resolved to start with him for the country, having no other witnesses than three or four children, who were watching their flock, a few steps beyond.

During a walk in the park, he broached at length the great subject.

"Tell me, my dear nephew, where did you pick up these doctrines, so opposed to those of the Church? Is it not Satan who has suggested them?"

"No, my lord; it is the Bible."

"That is why you have distributed one hundred copies of this book in your parish, according to what I have heard?"

"My lord, I thought to do no harm in placing the words which God has addressed to all, before the eyes of the faithful."

"But do you not perceive that the simple people cannot understand this book, which ought only to be read and explained by the priest?"

"No, I do not see that; and I find, on the contrary, God has judged that all are able to comprehend it, since he recommends it to be read by all. Thus Jesus said to the Jews: 'Search the Scriptures.' The Psalmist said: 'The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.' Moses desires the king to read the law every day of his life. He says to all people: 'Put my word in your heart, bind it on your hands, inscribe it on your houses.' St. Luke commends the inhabitants of Berea, 'because they compare the preaching of Paul with the word of God. St. Paul, writing his Epistles to different churches, addresses himself not only to the priests, but says: 'To you who are at Rome.' 'To all those in Achaia.' And if all the Israelites of the time of Moses, all the Jews of the time of Christ, all the inhabitants of Rome and of Achaia might read the Bible, I see not why all the Christians of our day should not also read it."

"But do you not know," replied the bishop "that the Bible is obscure, and cannot be understood by all?"

The cure smiled, and replied: "You shall judge." At the same time he beckoned to the children who tended the flock to approach; and when the little ones of ten or twelve years stood in a semicircle, near the bishop, the cure said to the youngest:—

"My child, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, and with all thy mind!' Do you understand me."

"Oh! yes, Mr. Cure! we must love the blessed God."

"And you, my child, listen: 'There is none righteous; there is none that doeth good.' Do you understand?"

The child cast down his eyes; he had so well comprehended these words, that his conscience had caused him to apply them instantly to himself; and as he had just been striking one of his companions in a quarrel, he answered:—

"It was he who began; he gave me a kick too."

"It was much more your fault," said the other.

"No!" said a little girl, "it was both of them."

"Well, my little friend," said the cure, "Attend; 'Christ has died for our sins; there is no more condemnation for those who are in Christ; believe in the Lord Jesus and thou shalt be saved.' What does that mean, my child!"

"It means that God will pardon our sins if we love Jesus Christ."

"Now you," said the cure to the fourth; "'If any lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all liberally.' 'Pray without ceasing.' What do these words mean?"

"Wait! that means that we must pray God to make us very good."

"Quite right, my children; fight no more; love Jesus Christ, who has died to obtain the forgiveness of your sins; ask God to make you very good, and you will go to heaven."

The children escaped, quite delighted.

"Well," said the cure to the bishop; "it appears that these children have understood my words well enough."

"It is not astonishing," said the latter; "they were so simple."

"Yes; but those words, so simple, were precisely those of the Bible. If these children have understood them, I suppose that their fathers and mothers will understand them likewise."

"Yes; but all the pages of that Bible are not so clear as those you have quoted."

"I grant it; but even if the simple believer had understood these four passages only of all the Bible, would it not be worth his while to read it? Moreover, experience and good sense unite to affirm, that after the Bible has been read some time, with prayer, the most simple reader will very soon see an passage help him to understand another less clear; that which he has learned will help the understanding of that which remains to be learnt, and then these obscurities will be completely cleared up. When a friend addresses us a letter of which some words are effaced, we do not on that account reject the sheet of paper; we read a second time, a third time, until that which precedes, or that which follows, helps us to understand the difficult words."

"But," answered the bishop, somewhat perplexed in raising all these difficulties, "is it not better to submit the Bible to the interpretation of the councils, whose decisions are directed by the Holy Spirit, according to the promise of Jesus Christ?"

"But," returned the cure, without hesitation, "why should the Holy Spirit, who can direct the decisions of councils, not direct also the thoughts of the simple believer who shall implore it with humility? for that promise was not made alone to councils, but to as many as the Lord should call."

"But, then, if each one may read and interpret the Bible, you will have as many creeds as individuals; whilst in submitting the Bible to the interpretation of councils, you will have a uniform faith."

"I doubt it; for how will uniformity be attained better by reading the decrees of the councils than by reading the Bible? Will it be easier to understand the Latin, of the Council of Trent, than the Latin of the Vulgate?"

"No; but the priest is there, to interpret the decrees of the council to the simple believers."

"But, then, will it be easier to make the believer understand the French of his cure, who speaks in the pulpit, than the French of De Sacy, who speaks through the translation of the Bible? Latin for Latin, French for French. I like better to read the text than the commentary. The Bible is worth more than the explanations; unless we pretend that, when God speaks, men know better what he intends to say than himself, and that men have a greater capacity to make themselves understood."

"Finally," said the bishop, with impatience, "what do you wish to conclude from all that?"

"I conclude, that since the Bible is the word of God, every man is bound to go and draw from that word the rule of his faith and conduct, without any one having the right to impose another upon him; and that, if the simple believer ought to listen to his pastor, it is only so far as his pastor speaks conformably to the Bible. Then the faith of the Christian will be an enlightened faith, and so much the more firm as it shall be more intelligent. Then the Christian shall be able to say in his conscience that he obeys God rather than men, since he searches in the book which all Christian communions (the Catholic, Apostolic, and Roman Church the first) are obliged to recognise as the source of all religion—as the word of God. Is it not at the source that the water of a rivulet is most limpid? Does not each step that it proceeds over the dirt and mud of this earth contribute to pollute it? Well; in the same way, will not religion be most pure at its source in the mouth of God, and will not every step made in passing from mouth to mouth tend to corrupt it? Give, then, the Bible to the people, and then they will understand that it is not certain vain ceremonies that save the sinner, but the blood of Christ alone, and the renewal of the heart by the Holy Ghost."

The cure spoke with such warmth, that the bishop saw he could never succeed in inducing him to abandon this new course by mere persuasion. He brought into play, therefore, turn by turn, the fear of hindering his advancement in the Church, the menaces of the condemnation of Rome, &c. But all availed nothing; the cure returned always to this response: "Show me by the Bible that I am mistaken, and then I shall be ready to submit," And he supported, with resignation, all the petty persecution raised against him.

A few months later, the bishop fell seriously ill; he grew worse day by day. The fear, or rather the certainty of an approaching death, doubled his terrors on the uncertainty of his salvation. He endeavoured to assure himself, and wondered that he was unable. In vain he repeated to himself that but few saints had submitted to austerities so severe and so numerous as he; continually his conscience reminded him of his sin, and made him fear that he had not yet performed sufficient penances for the expiation of his faults before Him "whose eyes are too pure to regard iniquity." In this state of trouble he recalled the calm, the peace, which the cure seemed to enjoy when with him; and the thought that that serenity of soul was, perhaps, the fruit of his new convictions, and that, after all, there might indeed be something there good and true—that thought brought light to his spirit. At the hour of death, one is little troubled about proprieties before the world which we should have observed in a state of health. My lord! summoned his nephew, and sent to say, that he desired to converse with him upon serious subjects. The cure betook himself to the dying man. On seeing him first enter, "Welcome, said the bishop; take a seat and let them leave us alone for a few minutes." When all had withdrawn, and the cure, having closed the door, reseated himself by the bedside of his uncle, the latter said, in a sorrowful and solemn voice:—

"My dear friend, I have no time to lose, and without going out of my way, I come to the question at once. You know my life, you know that I have acquitted myself scrupulously in the duties of my religion; and yet I confess that in the moment of appearing before God, even after having received the holy sacrament for the last time, I tremble at the thought of appearing at the tribunal of my Judge! Something more powerful than myself tells me that I am not ready to appear, and I feel that I do not enjoy, in my last hour, that Christian calmness which sees death approach without fear, which welcomes it even with joy. I have observed in you, dear brother, this precious calm; and even harassing you for your doctrines, I was internally struck by the composure which they produced in your soul. Oh! I pray you, tell me quickly how you have obtained it."

"Look here," replied the cure; I have been myself in the state of mind in which I find you now. In studying my life, I discovered each day new imperfections; the more I constrained myself to live holily, the more I felt sin weigh on my conscience. If I performed a good action in the eyes of the world, I felt that it was bad in the sight of God, because vanity and pride had always a share therein. If I forced myself to make a resolution in the sight of God, at the instant when deciding to do good, I found an interested motive enter to urge me also, and thus pollute the source. Finally, I came to hate myself. I held life in horror; and what contributed to increase my terrors was, that I found in my Bible-readings such declamations as these: 'The wages of sin is death!' 'Cursed is every one who continueth not in all things written in the Book of the law to do them!' 'Whosoever shall have kept the whole law, and yet have offended in one point, is guilty of the whole.' One day I thought I should lose my senses, and in despair I cast myself on my knees, striking my breast and exclaiming, 'O my God! take pity on me. I am a great sinner; what must I do, what must I do to be saved?' On the instant I raised myself, opened my Bible, cast my eyes upon it, and there I found these words which I had just uttered, 'What must I do to be saved?' Struck by the coincidence, I hastened to read the words following. It was precisely the reply to our question, thus: 'Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.' 'Believe, and thou shalt be saved,' said I. 'What! it is sufficient to believe?.... I thought I must have misunderstood; I re-read these words, and I found again and again: 'Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.' In order to throw light on this thought, I looked at other passages of my Bible, which treated the same subject, and which were indicated by references. I found a great number, the sense of which was always, 'Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, thy sins shall be pardoned, and thou shalt receive eternal life.' I confess, however, that this faith which was required, this salvation offered so freely. All this was at first in my head without entering my heart: when one day the word of gospel, 'saved by grace,' fell like light into the depth of my soul. 'Grace! oh! I understand,' cried I; I was condemned to hell as a brigand upon the scaffold, and when about to perish, my king sends me a pardon!'

"'I understand I owed to my master a heavy debt of sins, and my God has cancelled them! He confers a favour—grace! Oh, understand this word,' How sweet it is! how powerful to chase all fear from my heart! Now, living or dying, I am saved! What love has God has had for me! and to-day I am saved. What love I must have for him! How pleasurable to do his will! How willingly I would sacrifice myself to his service, and to the welfare of my brethren, who know not yet what this grace is—the pardon, the love of God!' Grace! this word encompassed all my soul, and then, an ever-increasing peace spread itself through my heart. I experienced the reality of that promise of Jesus,—'I give you my peace; not as the world giveth: let not your hearts be troubled, neither be afraid.' Since that time I have had no greater happiness than to labour to effect the will of my God. Doubtless, I fall still frequently into sin; but I never rise without trembling, and without finding, even in those falls, new strength by which to hold faster for the future. Since that time, I feel as if consumed with desire to make known that good news to my brethren, and I am happy, indescribably happy, when I see my words fall in a heart well prepared, and another soul escaping hell by turning to the Saviour."

"But, dear brother," interposed the bishop, moved by these words of fire, "who guarantees you that that assurance of your salvation which you believe you experience, is truly a reality ratified in heaven by God himself, and that it is not purely the fruit of your imagination?"

"I have for my guarantee the witness of the Holy Spirit which I bear in my heart, and which made St. Paul say, 'That the spirit of God witnessed with his spirit that he was adopted of God.' I know that the world may tell me that this is still the fruit of my imagination. But what matters what the world says and thinks? It is sufficient for me to feel, myself, that it is otherwise. I say to all, Ask God for his spirit to enlighten you; you will then learn how to sanctify yourselves. If my counsel be put in practice, the truth will soon be seen, and I bless my God. If they believe me not, and mock at me, I am not the less assured of my salvation. I pray for the unbelievers, and I hope always for him: I know that God can convert him even at the last hour. Yes, my dear uncle, it is not in yourself that you must seek your salvation—your works, always imperfect, will never give you security. You need a Saviour, powerful, perfect, holy. You need Jesus Christ, Son of God, God manifest in the flesh. It is only with such a support that you will no longer fear to fall, and such an advocate with God, that you will be assured against condemnation."

During the following days the two friends had several conversations. The bishop grew weaker, but, at the same time, his soul seemed to renew its strength: he listened much more than he spoke. He made his nephew read him different parts of the New Testament; among others, the Epistle to the Romans, and that to the Galatians. At length, one Sunday evening, as his nephew, kneeling at the foot of his bed, concluded a prayer in these words—

"My God, we look not to ourselves, nor to our works, but solely to Jesus Christ for our salvation."

The bishop raised his eyes to heaven, whilst pronouncing these words—"Amen? Lord! Amen!" he breathed forth his last sigh.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 28.
WHOLE NUMBER 594.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, JULY 28, 1866.

$5 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE
OFFICE—119 CAMP STREET.

OUR GERMAN CORRESPONDENCE.

GOTTINGEN, June 27, 1866.

EDITOR ADVOCATE: What, though German music, through Beethoven and Mozart had attained to such exquisite perfection?—the bugle and drum are now the only instruments that are used. Yea, the land of Luther and Melancthon, the land of Kant and Hezel, of Neander und Ewald, the land of unsurpassed erudition,—this land has now become the slaughter pen for patented tyrants and despots. At the unjust bidding of unprincipled potentates, are brothers led to battle against brothers, friends against friends.

In vain do men seek for any other cause of this war, but the Prussian ambition to unite Germany into one empire, and over which king William I. is anxious to preside. This you call good and proper. It is; for to coming generations it may prove of incalulable benefit; but at present—to the fifty million Germans now living — it will prove a calamity. Such bloody battles as in America have been recently fought, may indeed not be witnessed here; nevertheless, inasmuch as the country is so marvelously thickly settled, and the people are generally so very poor, here will be far more actual suffering here than you witnessed during "the rebellion."

It is now only a week that hostilities commenced, and already has Prussia wrested from Austria the territory of her principal allies, viz: Hanover, Saxony and Hesse Cassel. The armies of the two latter did indeed succeed in uniting with that of Austria, under the renowned Marshal Benedek, but the Hanoverian army, 22,000 strong, is near Gotha, entirely surrounded by the Prussians, and will be forced to capitulate. Austria has certainly failed in fulfilling her promises to Luckless George V., who, with his son, is with his army surrounded, and forced to surrender. Although the Hessian army escaped, the Elector was captured at his castle "Wilhelm's Hohe," by the Prussian force under Gen. Boyes. On yesterday the Elector passed through here under heavy escort, on his way to a Prussian fortress at Stettin.

Gen. Falkenstein is the Prussian military commander of Hanover, carrying on the government on a fearfully oppressive plan. The taxes have already been more than double, and all the cities are forced to bring in heavy contributions. An order from him issued to-day, speaks for itself:

"I command:

I. That no articles as advertisements be inserted in a newspaper which are not previously endorsed by my subaltern officers.

II. The violater of this order will be fined $100, and imprisonment at fort. ——GEN. V. FALKENSTEIN."

Privately this General tells the people that his present despositism was like some painful operation of a surgeon: it is necessary to ensure the rights of the people?—to ensure the Prussian success.

As a correspondent it is very unfortunate for me not to be able to sympathise with either of the belligerents; for when such sympathy exists, opinions, through prejudice, become quickly definite, decided, and are therefore definitely expressed. With all my christian charity, I cannot discover that either of the belligerents cared for the people. The war, believe me, is a war of potentates, and who use their soldiers as machines to carry out their wild schemes. Would that God delivered Germany from the existing evil!

Several of the German minor monarchs, such as the Dukes of Oldenburg, Mecklenburg, and Coburg, and a few others, have entered into league with Prussia, and have already expressed their willingness personally to forego any privileges of sovereignty, so far as they conflicted with the organization of a new German general government. The Duke of Coburg is elder brother to the deceased Prince Albert of England, and is the only German monarch who is praised for advocating liberal views.

Prince Frederick William commands the extreme left wing of the Prussian army, and after seizing the kingdom of Saxony without opposition, is advancing against Bohemia, where at present a battle with the bulk of the Austrian army is very imminent.

The news of a bloody encounter between the Italians, under La Marmora, and the Austrians under Prince Charles, near Vienna, where the latter had been eminently victorious, has been fully confirmed. The battle took place on the 24th inst., it being the anniversary of the Battle of Solferino. Impetuous volunteers avail not against veteran regulars. The Austrians made 2,000 prisoners. The expedition of Garibaldi through the Tyrol to Bavaria is so impracticable, that it is fully believed, it was assigned him by his king simply to place him out of the way of the other generals, by whom he is cordially hated.

The American sympathies with the king of Italy, are doubtless entirely misplaced. For seven years he has now dominated over the country of Cesar, and all he has thus far accomplished was, to bring the same to the verge of national bankruptcy. Not even in Austria are the finances in a worse condition. Statistics show that for the last seven years of peace, his expenditure has more than doubled his income.

The Venetians have little cause to desire to be united with Sardinia. It would be to change despotic masters.

Yours,

J. B. A. AHRENS.

FREE THINKING IN SCOTLAND.

The proceedings of the Established and Free Assemblies recently held in Edinburgh, show clearly, even to us at this distance, that Scotland cannot look for exemption from the severe conflict of theological thought through which England is passing. In England the opposing forces are in close conflict, while in Scotland we only hear in the meantime the random shots of the out-lying pickets.

Any one cognizant of the atmosphere of thought that has for the last fifteen years filled the Scottish Universities, especially the University of Edinburgh, will not now be taken by surprise at the issue towards which matters seem hastening in the Scottish Churches. The body of doctrine embodied in the Scottish Philosophy as taught by Sir Wm. Hamilton, is undoubtedly the safest system of speculation of the present day. Whatever fault may be found with the details of the Common Sense School of Sir Wm. Hamilton, this cannot be denied that it teaches clearly the limits of human enquiry and the point in human knowledge beyond which it is madness to seek to go. This is true. And Sir William Hamilton and his expounders deserve the gratitude of all men for having again built up the barriers against universal scepticism, which had, since the days of Reid and Stewart, begun to crumble down. With the metaphysical body of doctrine taught in the Scottish Universities there can be, therefore, little or no fault found. It is in the spirit engendered in the pursuit of this doctrine that the danger lies. The gold the adventurous miner brings home from the fields of the gold country is a valuable commodity, and it would be cant or folly to treat it as tinsel. As far as this result reaches, the miner may not have laboured in vain. But for all this the miner may have contracted such wicked habits while digging out the gold that the possession of it may have been purchased at a dear price. The Scottish Philosophy is undoubtedly gold of no mean purity; but in its pursuit many a promising student has lost his ardent piety and child-like faith. Of the Scottish Universities, especially since the revival of the Scottish Metaphysics, as Mr. Spurgeon hinted before the Free Church general assembly, it may be well remarked that "here lies the heart of many a promising young student."

It is unnecessary to explain here how it is that the eager study of the speculative questions raised by Mental Philosophy is fitted to engender in the mind doubts before which nothing is safe or sacred. We state a fact that is well known. The witnesses of this fact are found in three classes that each year go out in large numbers from the Colleges of Britain. One class, the smallest we are glad to believe, go out confirmed infidels. Another class, a very large and influential class, go forth with a certain measure of faith in the Bible, and a certain amount of reverence for Christ, but it is a faith they feel equally in the writing of Shakespeare, and a reverence that Socrates shares with Christ. These young men are today, to a large extent, the editors and contributors of the newspaper and periodical press of Britain. A third class enters the church, but they enter with a grudge against the Confession of Faith that meets them on the threshhold. They sign the Confession very much in the spirit of the Aberdeen Professor who, to his signature appended E. E., that is Errors Excepted. For the sake of salary or status they profess a general regard for the doctrines of the church, but lose no opportunity of silently and secretly throwing discredit on them. Dr. McLeod, Professor Lee and Principal Tulloch are the champions of this Broad School, which prevails to an alarming extent within the bounds of the Established Church. What matters may grow to, it is hard to say. The probability is that if this negative Theology prevails to any large extent in the Established Church so as to control the action of its General Assembly, a very large number will feel compelled to leave the body. The Established Church is, however, in the main sound, and possesses able champions of the good old ways, who as yet are more than the matches on the floor of the Assembly for the Free Thinkers. Should Norman McLeod and his party be hard pushed, one ignorant of the men might expect that that clique would have the manliness to come out and with Gilfillan of Dundee, Waddell of Glasgow, and Colenso of Natal, retire to a Theological cave of Adullam, where they would be in a position to receive every one that is in distress, every one that is in debt, and every one that discontented. But such a manly, honest course none need ever expect from that school. There is little of the hero, and less of the martyr in the Editor of "Good Words." As long as his efforts are confined to words, he may do well enough: but when it comes to deeds we will find that his decided belief is that discretion is the better part of valor.

This partial unsettlement of belief amongst the young men and rising thinkers in Scotland, in the church and out of it, is only a temporary disturbance of the steady progress of true christianity in that land. "Truth like a torch, the more 'tis shook it shines." As long as man is encompassed with pain, sickness, death, there is little danger that subtle, unstable, and prond free-thinking will permanently withdraw the popular heart from the grand old doctrines that have, since the world began, cheered and sustained man in his chequered pilgrimage. The needle of the compass is not more true to the pole than are the deepest instincts of man's heart when stirred by sorrow and suffering, to all the teaching of the word of God. The thirty-three years that remain of this century will witness in Scotland, as well as in England, a severe conflict of thought. The great doctrines that our fathers were wont to take on trust will be subjected to an ordeal of fire. But there is nothing to fear in the result. The wood, hay, and struhble, will be burnt, but the gold, the silver, and the precious stones, will come out uninjured.

Let us not suppose that the wave that is now passing over Britain will subside before it reaches this distant colony. Our turn will soon come. In view of this, two questions are of great interest to us, the spontaneous search and demand for such a being, and in that measure developing his rational possibilities. And if this be so, if creation philosophically involve a descending movement on the Creator's part proportionate to the ascending one contemplated on the Creator's part,—then it follows that creation is not a simple, but a complex process, involving equally a Divine action and a human reaction, or the due adjustment of means and ends; and that no writer, consequently, can long satisfy the intellect in the sphere of religious thought, who either jauntily or ignorantly overlooks this philosophic necessity. This, however, is what Messrs. Strauss and Renan and the author of Ecce Homo agree to do; and this is what makes their several books, whatever subjective differences characterize them to a literary regard, alike objectively unprofitable as instruments of intellectual progress.

I look upon every true thought as a valuable acquisition to society, which cannot possibly hurt or obstruct the good effect of any other truth whatsoever: for they all partake of one common essence, and necessarily coincide with each other: and like the drops of rain which fall separately into the river, mix themselves at once with the streams and strengthen the general current.—Middleton.

Thoughts are but dreams, till their effects be tried.—Shakspeare.

From the Nashville Christian Advocate.

THE SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY.

The first week in July was truly a gala time in the quiet town of Greensboro. On Sunday, in the morning, Bishop Wightman, as Chancellor of the Southern University, delivered a masterly discourse, commemorative of the virtues of one of the founders and and ex-president of the Board of Trustees of this Institution, Robert A. Baker. The preacher gave us a fine portraiture of this great nobleman of the Church. The discourse was delivered by special request of the Trustees and Faculty of the University, and its publication in the columns of this paper has been called for by the Board. Our readers will find it on the first page of our present issue. The sermon was preached in the Chapel of the University, and was followed in the afternoon by another, worthy of the reputation of the preacher, the Rev. R. K. Hargrove, President of Centenary Institute. At night, the Rev. C. D. N. Campbell, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Selma, gave us a capital discourse in the Presbyterian Church.

On Tuesday morning we had a most delicious treat—an oration before the Clariosophic Society, by the Rev. C. D. N. Campbell. In it the young men had their capacities and responsibilities marked out to them in a most felicitous and impressive style. The address seemed to imprint itself on the mind of every hearer; but we hope soon to have it in print, that its power for good may be extended and continued. The Society, by special resolution, requested its publication in the Nashville Christian Advocate. The exercises of the occasion were increased in interest by excellent music, and fervent devotions conducted by Bishops Andrew and Paine.

On Tuesday night the Clariosophic Society had its Exhibition, which comprehended, with prayer, music, etc., the following Addresses by members of the Society: Literary Fashion; by J. W. Sunipey; The Man and the Book, by D. M. Callaway; Objects of Life, by W. S. Wightman; Talent and Genius, by T. W. Dyer; I seek a Man, by T. J. Seay; I Seek a Woman, by W. Walker. These orations were characterized by more than an average amount of masculine vigor and felicity of conception and delivery. As all these young men are devoted members of the Church, we trust the Lord will call and qualify them for the work of the ministry—three of them, indeed, are sons of ministers, and one—the first named—is already a preacher.

Train up thy hardy soldiers, Lord,
In all their Captain's steps to tread;
Or send them to proclaim thy word,
Thy gospel through the world to spread.

On Wednesday morning the graduating exercises took place. Excellent addresses were delivered by Thos. J. Happell and Elliott N. Hutchinson, who took the Degree of A.M. Darby M. Callaway, Heman Bangs Magruder, Thos. J. Seay, and Thos. O. Summers, Jr., graduated in Latin and Greek. J. L. Borden graduated in Latin. T. P. Crutcher, D. M. Callaway, J. W. Sampey, T. J. Seay, W. Walker, and W. S. Wightman graduated in Chemistry. The Baccalaureate Address of Chancellor Wightman was worthy of the man and of the occasion. By a special resolution of the Board of Trustees, its publication in the Christian Advocate was requested.

There was a good attendance of the members of the Board, whose business was dispatched with harmony and satisfaction. The President, the Hon. Joseph T. Taylor, is is eminently adapted to his responsible position in the Board. The vacancies occasioned by the death of Brothers Baker and Goodman, were filled by the election of Mr. Carey W. Butt, of Mobile, and Dr. F. M. Peterson, of Greensboro. The Board has made provisions for the employment of another professor to teach Modern Languages, Hebrew, etc., as Chancellor Wightman will not be able to devote his whole time, as heretofore, to the University. The Board has secured his services for the present year, so far as may be compatible with his Episcopal duties, which, until the Conference sessions, will be in the neighborhood of the University. He positively declines to receive any salary from the Board. The excellent character and deportment of the students, testified by the Faculty and citizens, elicited a highly complimentary resolution from the Board of Trustees. We must say that we never knew a set of students study better, and deport themselves more decorously, than those who have just left the halls of the Southern University. Many of them have joined the Church during the session, and nearly every one seems impressed with the superlative importance of a thorough Christian education.

Among other praiseworthy acts of the Board, we may note the conferring of the degree of D.D. upon Bishop Marvin, and the Rev. W. H. Anderson, of the Louisville Conference. This is the first time the Southern University has exercised its prerogative of conferring degrees. The Board was unanimous in its vote; and it is hoped that it will continue to be sparing and discriminating in the bestowal of its honors.

On Thursday night the students, assisted by the ladies of Greensboro, gave an elegant and most sumptuous entertainment in the University building. The guests were variously estimated at from five to fifteen hundred persons. The venerable Bishop Andrew and other dignitaries were in attendance. Lemonade, ices, a world of confectionery, meats, etc., were there—together with the feast of reason and the flow of soul—but, as a matter of course, no inebriating beverages or dissipating dances. The buildings being beautifully illuminated, made a fine display.

The Commencement Exercises of the Preparatory Department took place before our arrival: we understand that the preps have been doing remarkably well, under the management of Professor A. H Hutchinson, A.M.

ECCE HOMO.

A SURVEY OF THE LIFE AND WORK OF JESUS CHRIST.

The merits of this book are popular and obvious, consisting in a strain of liberal, enlightened sentiment, an ingenious and original cast of thought, and a painstaking lucidity of style, which leaves the writer's meaning even prosaically plain. There is a good deal of absurd and even puerile exegesis in its pages, which makes you wonder how so much sentimentality can co-exist with so much ability; but the book is vitiated for all purposes beyond mere literary entertainment, by one grand defect, which is the guarded theologic obscurity the writer keeps up, or the attempt he makes to estimate Christianity apart from all question of the truth or falsity of Christ's personal pretensions towards God. The author may have reached in his own mind the most definite theologic convictions, but he sedulously withholds them from his reader; and the consequence is, that the book awakens and satisfies no intellectual interest in the latter, but remains at best a curious literary speculation. For what men have always been moved by in Christianity is not so much the superiority of its moral inculcations to those of other faiths, as its uncompromising pretension to be a final or absolute religion. If Christ be only the eminently good and wise and philanthropic man the author describes him to be, deliberating, legislating, for the improvement of man's morals, he may be very admirable but nothing can be inferred from that circumstance to the deeper inquiry. If he claim no essentially different significance to our regard, on God's part, than that claimed by Zoroaster, Confucius, Mahomet, Hildebrand, Luther, Wesley, he is to be sure still entitled to all the respect inherent in such an office; but then there is no a priori reason why his teaching and influence should not be superseded in process of time by that of any at present unmentionable Anne Lee, Joanna Southcote, or Joe Smith. And what the human mind craves, above all things else, is repose towards God,—is not to remain a helpless sport to every fanatic sot that comes up from the abyss of human vanity, and claims to hold it captive by the assumption of a new Divine mission.

The objection to the mythic view of Christ's significance, which is that maintained by Strauss, is, that it violates men's faith in the integrity of history as a veracious outcome of the providential love and wisdom which are extant and operative in human affairs. And the objection to what has been called the Troubadour view of the same subject, which is that represented by M. Renan, is, that it outrages men's faith in human character, regarded, if not as habitually, still as occasionally capable of heroic or consistent veracity. We may safely argue, then, that neither Strauss nor Renan will possess any long vitality to human thought. The are both fascinating reading;—the one for his profound sincerity, or his conviction of a worth in Christianity so broadly human and impersonal as to exempt it from the obligations of a literal historic doctrine; the other for his profound insincerity, so to speak, or an egotism so subtile, so capacious and frank, as permits him to take up the grandest character in history into the hollow of his hand, and turn him about there for critical inspection and definite adjustment to the race, with absolutely no more reverence nor reticence than a grain buyer shows to a handful of wheat, as he pours it dexterously from hand to hand, and blows the chaff in the seller's face. But both writers alike are left behind us in the library, and are not subsequently brought to mind by anything we encounter in the fields or the streets.

The author of Ecce Homo does no dishonor to the Christian history as history; however foolishly he expatiates at times upon its incidents and implications; much less to the simple and pefect integrity of Christ as a man, but no more than Strauss or Renan does he meet the supreme want of the popular understanding, which is to know wherein Christianity has the right it claims to be regarded as a final or complete revelation of the Divine name upon earth. We think, moreover, that the reason of the omission is the same in every case, being the sheer and contended indifference which each of the writers feels to the question of a revelation in the abstract or general, regarded as a sine qua non of any sympathetic or rational interconrse which may be considered as possible between God and man. We should not be so presumptuous as to invite our readers' attention to the discussion of so grave a philosophic topic as the one here referred to, in the limited space at our command; but surely it may be said, without any danger of misunderstanding from the most cursory reader, that if creation were the absolute or unconditioned verity which thoughtless people deem it, there could be no ratio between Creator and creature, hence no intercourse or intimacy, inasmuch as the one is being itself, and the other does not even exist or seem to be but by him. In order that creation should be a rational product of Divine power, in order that the creature should be a being of reason, endowed with the responsibility of his own actions, it is imperative that the Creator disown his essential infinitude and diminish himself to the creature's dimensions; that he hide or obscure his own perfection in the creature's imperfection, to the extent even of rendering it fairly problematic whether or not an infinite being really exist, so putting man, as it were, upon 1st. Are we fostering a newspaper periodical press that can be relied on for help when the conflict begins? 2nd. Are we giving our rising ministry the thorough training that will fit them to take the field with confidence against the most intellectual and cultivated form of infidelity that ever attacked the essentials of the Christian religion.—Montreal Review.

Ancient Music.

The disentombing of Assyrian sculptures and the deciphering of Assyrian and Egyptian inscriptions, has opened new fields of investigation in almost every department of knowledge. Among the branches of science which have shared in these discoveries, that of music has benefitted largely. The accounts of ancient musical instruments were vague, and our ideas especially of Hebrew music were confused, till recently sculptures and paintings have been brought to light, which delineate the ancient musical instruments of the early Oriental nations, and in some cases veritable specimens have been disentombed. Such, for example, is an Egyptian harp found in Thebes with its strings yet perfect enough to vibrate again after a silence of 3,000 years.

The most recent investigations prove that the parent of all known musical science was Assyrian. From the Assyrians, the Hebrews and the Egyptians, and indeed all Eastern nations, derived their knowledge of music. The unveiled monuments show that in the time of Sennacherib, music was a highly cultured art, and must have existed through generations. This polished nation used a harp of twenty-one strings, the frame of which was four feet high, which accompanied minstrel songs, or was borne in the dance. The lyre of tortoise shell, the double pipe, the trumpet, drum, and bell were common. Even of the bagpipe representations have been discovered, though none of stringed instruments like the violin played with a bow.

In all delineations of social or worshiping assemblies, musical instruments very like our modern ones have a prominent place. The Hebrew music at the time of the Exodus was purely Egyptian; but it was much modified subsequently by association with Asiatic nations. In the Temple of Jerusalem, according to the Talmud, stood a powerful organ consisting of a wind-chest, with ten holes containing ten pipes, each pipe capable of emitting ten different sounds by means of finger holes, so that a hundred sounds could be produced by it. It was provided with two pair of bellows, and ten keys, so that it could be played upon with the fingers. According to the Rabbins, it could be heard at a great distance from the Temple. The organ question has agitated the Scotch churches for many years; but we have never heard this interesting fact produced in favor of the use of the organ in public worship.

In a recent work by Carl Engel the whole subject of the music of the ancients, both vocal and instrumental, as it is illustrated by the discoveries of the last few years, is ably elucidated; and those who are fond of musical research, can, find no better volume than this to furnish both entertainment and instruction. As yet no other edition than that of John Murray of London has been published.

A Barometer which every body can Afford to Keep.

To save himself the trouble of carrying an umbrella, for four or five hours, while riding on horseback, on cloudy, threatening days, the writer had been in the habit of consulting the Barometer of a friend. The following communication in the Scientific American has furnished him with a storm-glass of his own, which makes him quite independent in this respect. We have tried it now for about two months, and find it to be very reliable:

"Dealers in philosophical and optical instruments sell simple storm-glasses which are used for the purpose of indicating approaching storms. One of these consists of a glass tube ten inches in length and three-fourth of an inch in diameter, filled with a liquid containing camphor, and having its mouth covered with a piece of bladder perforated with a needle. A tall phial will answer the purpose nearly as well as the ten inch tube. The composition placed within the tube consists of two drachms of camphor, half a drachm of pure saltpetre, and half a drachm of the muriate of ammonia, pulverized and mixed with about two ounces of proof spirits. The tube is usually suspended by a thread near a window, and the functions of its contents are as follows:—If the atmosphere is dry and the weather promises to be settled, the solid parts of the camphor in the liquid contained in the tube will remain at the bottom, and the liquid above will be quite clear; but on the approach of a change to rain, the solid matter will gradually rise, and small crystaline stars will float about in the liquid. On the approach of high winds, the solid parts of the camphor will rise in the form of leaves and appear near the surface in a state resembling fermentation. These indications are sometimes manifested twenty-four hours before a storm breaks out! After some experience in observing the motions of the camphor matter in the tube, the magnitude of a coming storm may be estimated, also its direction, inasmuch as the particles lie closer together on that side of the tube that is opposite to that from which the coming storm will approach. The cause of some of these indications is as yet unknown; but the leading principle is the solubility of camphor in alcohol, and its insolubility in water, combined with the fact that the drier the atmosphere the more aqueous vapor does it take up, and vice versa.

Here, then, is a storm glass, so cheap, that the poorest can afford to have one; and simply as a matter of curiosity, to say nothing of convenience, it is well worth keeping.—Calendar.

Rules for Sedentary People.

H. T. Tuckerman, in one of his essays, describes an interview he had with Sismondi, in the course of which Tuckerman spoke of the difficulty of combining mental toil with health. To this Sismondi said:

"There is vast error on this subject. Be assured that we were intended for intellectual labor, and that there is a way of making it subservient to health. I will tell you a few rules founded on experience: Vary the kind of work—let it be research one hour, meditation another; collation to-day, and revision to-morrow: do this on system: give the first part of the day to the hardest study, the afternoon to exercise, and the evening to social intercourse; let the mind be tasked when the brain is most vigorous, that is, after sleep; and woo the latter blessing not in the feverish hours of thought and emotion, but after the gentle exercise of the mind which comes from pastime and friendliness."

He considered occasional travel and prudent habits the best hygiene for a man of sedentary pursuits; and the great secret both of health and successful industry, the absolute yielding up of one's consciousness to the business and the diversion of the hour—never permitting the one to infringe, in the least degree, upon the other.

When we have found God, there is nothing worth looking for in men; we must then give up our best friends, for the good friend is in the heart, the spouse who is jealous, and will have everything else put out.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, - - - - JULY 28, 1866.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has always been well known in this community as the very best advertising medium by which the business men of the city could bring their merchandise, trades, professions, and the like, before country readers in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and a large portion of Texas.—This is easily understood when it is remembered that the four hundred preachers who are scattered throughout these States, in the Rio Grande, East Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montgomery and Mobile Methodist Conferences, are all, more or less, active agents for the paper; and when it is also remembered that our paper circulates among a large class of people who seldom see any other New Orleans paper.

The terms of advertising are as follows:

	1 Month.	6 Mos.	12 Mos.
One square....	$ 5 00	$20	$30 00
Two squares....	7 50	25	40 00
Three squares..	10 00	30	50 00
Four squares...	12 50	35	60 00

Larger advertisements in proportion.

TO OUR AGENTS AND SUBSCRIBERS

1. The price of the paper is THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE: and it will be sent for 12 months only, unless the subscription price is renewed. We propose to keep no other books than the one containing the names of subscribers and their address. Due notice will be given in the paper a few weeks previous to the end of the subscription.

2. All travelling Preachers in the several patronizing Conferences throughout the South-west are our Agents. They will receive a paper for five subscribers.

3. If money forwarded by mail is registered at the Postoffice when it is mailed, we will take the responsibility of its safety. But where it can be forwarded by private hands, the security is greater.

4. Be explicit in writing names and offices and routes—especially in directing to the "New Orleans CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," as the Church North has already issued a sheet in this city entitled the "New Orleans Advocate."

Address Rev. J. C. KEENER, D. D., or Rev. J. B. WALKER, D. D

PREMIUM TO AGENTS.

We offer Agents of the New Orleans Christian Advocate a PHOTOGRAPHIC PICTURE OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE of the M. E. Church South, held in New Orleans, for every FIVE subscribers they may forward to us; and this in addition to the commission already offered.

We will forward them by express, or in such way as they may direct.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27: —REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS.—By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, } Executive Com.
J. B. WALKER, } Joint Board of
L. PARKER, } Publication.

The Mails—Notice.

We are glad to notice the extension of the mail service, after the first of July. Now that Post-offices and duly qualified Post masters may be found in many parts of the States of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, we expect a rapid and considerable increase in our subscription list.

If any regular traveling preacher in either of our patronizing conferences will forward his name and the route and office which lead to him, we will send him the paper upon his own terms.

THE NEW DISCIPLINE.—Orders for this publication may now be sent to the Depository in this city, as the Agent has just received advices from Nashville that a large quantity are on the way here.

THE SAVIOUR IN THE HOUSE.

PART I.

The Holy Spirit has seen fit to record one visit of many which the Saviour doubtless made to the house of Martha and Mary. It is delightful to imagine him in the house of his friends, as were these two sisters. The Saviour of Men in the family—how the heart unites with the imagination to produce a picture of that Divine form amid the every day scenes of human life! This could scarcely have been the occasion of a first visit; for Martha speaks to him as one quite familiar, and he replies as if the habit of her domestic care had come under repeated view. At the first introduction of the Saviour, it is quite likely that she was fully attentive to the words of the distinguished Teacher, but now, at a later period, when better known, she received him more as a friend.

The Master's comprehensive and sifting estimate of her character would have surprised greatly upon a first acquaintance, but such is evidently not his object; though her heart was "naked and opened unto the eyes of the Saviour," then, as afterward, he choses rather to correct than to surprise. It is also not improbable that Mary, at the first, was fully as much overwhelmed as her elder sister at the thought of entertaining so distinguished a Guest; and at the momentous and blessed hour when Jesus first crossed their threshold, there was but little difference noticeable between the welcome, the attention and the care of the two sisters.

And when, by and by, the knowledge of that Great Friend became familiar, and his illustrious presence had oftentimes graced their humble abode, each of the sisters displayed her regard for him in a characteristic and widely differing way. That one should have exclusively listened and the other exclusively served, is unlikely in any other supposition; but it is quite natural that the bent of the one—"given to hospitality"—should lead her to be "cumbered about much serving;" and that the other, in the spirit of faith, of true contentment, and in a placid repose, should at length be found, forgetful of the more common demands of friendship, in rapt attention, "at Jesus' feet."

It is this distinct development of lawful care on the one hand, and of holy contentment on the other, that attracts the notice and receives the award of the Master. These two principles sometimes are found in the same house, but never in the same heart. "Man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward." It is no marvel, then, if even our best affections should strengthen and multiply our cares. The love we bear those of our blood, the claims of life upon strength and mental forecast, the "honest things" which must be provided, the education of dear ones dependent, not to mention higher trusts of State or holier of Church, all tend to fill the heart with care even in the presence of the Saviour, until it is pierced with many cares, as we see the hand of a child filled with splinters. These cases are so unavoidable, so proper in themselves, and they exercise such noble parts and qualities of the soul, that one is often ready to appeal to the Saviour not only for vindication but relief, and say: "Carest thou not that I serve alone?" To one whose heart inclines that way, the air, earth and sea are not so full of poetry as they are of trouble. And the question is, how far the sympathising Saviour will be touched with these our infirmities, and share with us these troubles—for "he careth for us."—There is no doubt that in the real and deep troubles of the soul the Saviour is nigh—amid the raging of the waves—when "all the waves and billows" threaten to go over our frail bark, then he will appear and speak to us. In those "calamities" we must run to him until the storm be overpast. "Let not your heart be troubled," "believe in me," are words enough to assure us in the most trying moments of our history. Yet there is a great deal of trouble of a lawful kind which he refuses to share—yea for which he chides: "Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things.". We may make an idol of care, of honest care, as much as of any other thing which has good in it. If one could overlook the Saviour in a too great anxiety to entertain the Guest, we may easily toil for those we love, and think for them, and we may yield to the daily pressure of home-care, until the Saviour is almost displaced thereby. The time, the thought, the energy of our lives are exhausted in this direction; and the Saviour is not heard. We commune not with him in prayer, and we fail to grow up into the great faith that there is "but one thing needful." He does not fill our sky, our land, our sea. He is not to us "all in all."

It is the tendency and the result of care that decide its character.—Nothing is harmless that robs us of Christ, however innocent in itself. The home, the small cares of housekeeping, have cheated many a good wife and fond mother out of life—the life of faith. Care is the offspring of distrust. Not until the "many things" of care are solved into the "one thing needful" of faith, is the heart released from the bondage of death. Who has not seen a man live with Care: when he walked, Care walked beside him; when he sat, Care sat; and when he slept, Care pretended to sleep with him.—Like a spectre, Care watched at his dying bed. When at the last the poor wretch aroused, he bitterly cried: "Away from me! thou hast robbed me of all my life and all my hope." But even then Care gave place only to Death.

To drive this "skeleton" from the house, the Saviour warns: "Martha, Martha, set your affections not on things of the earth, however good." The Saviour enters that we may sit at his feet and feel the power of his presence. He affectionately dissuades from some of the offices of kindness, lest in our care for him, we neglect to love him. "Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen."

THE SMILE OF DEATH.

The face of the dead is not unfrequently clothed with a smile. Even the soldier killed in battle is sometimes found with this expression. In the last moment of life, and with the last breath, this smile is often seen to break suddenly and luminously upon the features, and to spread a more than earthly light over the countenance, that, but a moment before, was drawn and contorted with pain.

This phenomenon is perhaps confined to the believer and to little children—such is our observation. But the peculiar smile that thus lights up the dying, and lingers for many hours upon the face of the dead, is doubtless remembered by many a bereaved heart. This is the soul's last impress upon the features which have reflected its thoughts and emotions, and it surely indicates some wonderful and joyous feeling.

As it is the last, so it must be made just as the union of the spirit with the body ceases, and just as the light of Eternity dawns upon the soul. Not yet disengaged, but loosening from the instrument which, in life, has reflected every joy and sorrow, the soul stamps upon the almost forsaken tabernacle, the first glimpses of the heavenly rapture. It is just then that the interior sight begins to look out, the heaven opens, and the inheritance of light, now breaking upon the soul, leaves a trace of its beauty upon the medium of expression.

This phenomenon doubtless marks the period of pain, and may largely grow out of the transition from suffering to perfect release from all bodily uneasiness. But there must be release also from moral and mental suffering. The out-look of the soul must be one of pleasure, and of conscious happiness. This smile is perhaps the nearest to any thing like manifestations which come back to us from the world of spirits. It is only in this transition state, between the embodied and disembodied, that it is possible. There is a moment, but a moment perhaps, when the chasm is bridged, when the two elements of the visible and invisible are united in one life and consciousness; and when both worlds are open to the soul.

Without placing too much importance upon the mere circumstances of dying, there is yet comfort and encouragement here. Death may not be the dark and fearful thing we have imagined, when it is the time of the sweetest smile that ever glows upon the face. Scriptural assurance and promise are strikingly confirmed: "I will fear no evil." "He that believeth in me shall not see death." Christ has destroyed him that has the power of death, and delivers from the fear of it. "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!"

Perhaps it is not doubt of their salvation, but something in the mysterious and untried passage of dying that terrifies. Says some timid believer: "I feel that all will be well, but there is something in the struggle that brings misgiving. There is something so solitary—there is about it an awful isolation. I have never been there before. None have returned to tell me what dying is." But we have seen just such fearful ones die. They never had assurance satisfactory to themselves until this hour came. But they had it then; and the heavenly light was in their last look.

Thousands of people just as good as Enoch and Elijah have died. There were reasons why two men of all the human race should not die. These reasons could not have been altogether in their transcendent merit and holiness. Was it a peculiar privilege, and to be generally desired? If we knew better what death is, perhaps we should say not. To them it may rather have been a sacrifice, but accompanied with glorious compensation. Apart from grace, death is doubtless fearful enough—whether as a leap in the dark, or as a certain and fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation. But Christian dying, with the supports of grace, the indwelling Spirit, the ministry of angels, and the life immortal spreading out before us, must be rather a privilege. The smile of death tells us this. How many of these smiles does memory recall. Amidst scenes of sadness and sorrow, where there was much of the repulsive, and the heart-rending, the clouds have opened, and this heavenly light has flashed upon the scene. It has helped to confirm our hopes of the loved spirit, which consciously and tenderly, to us has raised this signal of joyous victory; and it has left upon the stricken heart, not the ruder and repulsive memory of features distorted and wasted by suffering, but of a face whose last office was to tell us of the rapture of heaven.

SATISFIED HONOR.

Austrian honor is satisfied by the victory of Custozza, and she cedes Venetia to France—that France may make her own bargain and give it up to Italy. Thus thousands of lives have been sacrificed upon a point of honor, just as deliberately and coolly as if that many men had been slaughtered on the altar of pagan worship.

Montezuma sacrificed twenty thousand human beings to the sun annually. How many will be sacrificed to honor before these Christian nations will be done? The cession of Venetia before the war began, would have been an act of political justice, and by satisfying Italy, would have prevented her alliance with Prussia, and the war would not have taken place at all. The Austrian Sovereign, in effect, avows that the loss of Venetia was contemplated from the first, that it was the intention to give it up, but that honor demanded a fight first.

A few thousand men must be killed, several thousand homes must be made desolated, and thousands of immortal souls must be sent unprepared and suddenly into Eternity, before an act of right and justice could be performed. Now that a point of honor has loosed the dogs of war, they cannot be so easily withdrawn from the taste of blood. Neither Prussia nor Italy are disposed to stop, and eastward the Russian bear begins to growl. Turkey, too, with the bone of contention, Roumania, between her and the Bear, is beginning to be exercised. All Europe is likely soon to be in the squabble, and a general war seems to be at hand. Millions of men may have to be slaughtered before this complication can be settled. And all of this is brought about, that a point of honor, which looked to no material advantage, might be satisfied. We are assuming that this declaration about satisfied honor is sincere. It may not be so, but the lesson is very much the same. There must be a sentiment to which hypocrisy, even, addresses itself. Here is human sacrifice—on the largest scale, human victims immolated, and at the altar of something called honor. Austria says, "I intended to give up Venetia all the time; but it was needful that these thousands of people should be butchered before it could be done consistently with my honor."

The presiding elder of Glascow district, Louisville Conference, reports over 700 conversions and additions since the conference session.

THE NEEDLE GUN.

The greatest battle of these days was fought recently, between the Prussians and the Austrians. It was in Bohemia, the land of Huss, and is called the battle of Sadowa. Twelve hours—a July day—it raged, the combatants were the flower of European discipline, and the numbers engaged probably exceeded those engaged in the heaviest battle of Lee and Grant.

The success of the Prussians in this and other recent conflicts, is attributed in no small degree to the use of the needle gun, which the Austrians have not. Napoleon, who is always on the alert, has ordered the French army to be furnished with this weapon as soon as possible.

What is the needle gun? Does it shoot needles, or some other sharp thing? Here is a description of it, which we find in the Paris Correspondence of the New York Times.

A friend furnishes me the following description of the needle-gun, which he asserts is not superior to the American breach loaders: "This arm, already adopted in the Prussian army, is a carbine or needle-gun, that is to say, a central-gring gun, being loaded from the breach, on a system similar to that of the guns which are beginning to be used by our great amateurs of the chase. The cartridge is placed in the chamber with the rapidity which is required to discharge the gun of Lefauchex, and all other pieces in which the barrel is discharged or displaced by a simple movement. This barrel receives its charge and is restored to its place in a few seconds. The firing, in place of being determined by the employment of a cap, as in our fire-arms, is produced by the contact of a needle with the cap, which cap is placed in the centre of the cartridge and the movement of this needle is produced by the play of the battery which works upon a strong spiral spring placed behind the lock of the gun. This spring runs through the powder and pushes against an explosive lozenge, cap or priming placed between the charge and the ball. The firing then is central, interior and instantaneous. The powder taking its full force of expansion at a time, the charge may be less considerable: the piece being rifled, the precision is much greater. This portable fire-arm being light does not fatigue the soldier, and being loaded by the breach and the priming being attached to the cartridge, the discharges may succeed each other in as rapid succession as those fired from a revolver. Such is the murderous weapon which has excited so much ridicule in so many military circles in Europe, and of which Prussia is making such terrible use to-day to her own aggrandizement."

PERSONAL.

A letter from BISHOP MARVIN dated Marshall, July 14th, gives cheering news. He says: "I am in the midst of a protracted meeting. I am about closing my labors among them, and removing my residence. The church is wonderfully revived. The work is a deep one. The Church has humbled itself before God in dust and ashes, and He has poured out his Spirit in great measure. All that come to the altar are converted, and most of them in a day or two. There seems to be a wonderful degree of faith in the Church which commands the presence of God in such a manner as to make faith easy to the penitent."

In a letter from Bishop KAVANAUGH, dated Versailles, Kentucky, to a friend in this city dated July 2nd, we are glad to learn that though he recovered his strength very slowly, he now is well and on the day previous had preached twice.

Bishop Early.

We learn from our exchanges that Bishop Early has so far recovered from the effects of the great injuries he received from the accident on the Danville railroad, several weeks since, that he left Richmond Friday for his home in Lynchburg. The Bishop is still suffering from the hurt in his side, and also from Neuralgia. He is remarkably cheerful, though he is very feeble. He does not murmur, is not the least impatient, but illustrates a grateful and resigned spirit. The shock to his system is fearful, and his recovery is a proof of the great strength of his constitution and vigor of his unconquerable will, which by the blessing of Divine providence, have stood so many severe trials.

MADISON COLLEGE, located at Sharon, Madison county, Miss., is to be revived. The trustees are taking the necessary steps to have the college building thoroughly repaired. The Rev. H. F. Johnson, of the Mississippi Conference, has been tendered the presidency.

Sharon Female College.

MR. EDITOR: The examination and commencement exercises of Sharon Female College, (Madison county, Miss.,) closed yesterday. The college has progressed very well, under the presidency of the Rev. S. D. Akin. He opened the institution on the 2nd of Jan., 1865, with eleven pupils; during the past term he had about ninety. This speaks well of the president and his assistant teachers.

The examination passed off very pleasantly, and was attended by a large concourse of people. Some excellent compositions were read, and some of them were read exceedingly well. I am tempted to make special allusion to a few, but I refrain.

On Monday night three prizes were distributed to those who had made the most improvement in penmanship. The successful contestants were Misses Martha Parker, Lela E. Johnson, and Jessie K. Akin.

Miss Pattie Cross, of Sharon, Miss., graduated. She will never reflect discredit on her Alma Mater. Her essay and valedictory showed a well cultivated mind and heart.

The commencement address was delivered by the Rev. Levi Pearce. It was just such a one as you would expect from him—strong, pointed and practical.

I can cordially recommend Sharon Female College to all having daughters to educate. I visited it frequently during the past term—the course is full and the teaching thorough.

H. F. JOHNSON,
Chairman of Vis. Com.

Sharon, Miss., July 19, 1866

THE SECRETARY FOR DOMESTIC MISSIONS, Dr. McFerrin, writes a very interesting letter to the Memphis Christian Advocate, in which he says:

I was very much pleased at the progress of the work among the colored people in the bounds of the Somerville District. They have a regular organized church at La-grange, and several on the Macon and Wesley Circuits, and in the neighborhoods of Mount Zion, Covington and Raleigh. Brother Moss thinks that by the meeting of the Annual Conference he will have a full Presiding Elder's District organized in the bounds of his work. He is now taking steps for the organization of Quarterly Conferences among this people. Already, at some points, they have experienced revivals among the blacks. It was delightful to witness the cheerful hope among our brethren in reference to the future of our beloved church. Let us all go to work in earnest, trusting in God, and Zion will soon be "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."

Sunday was a delightful day. It was spent in Somerville, long noted as a place of intelligence and generous hospitality. By appointment, the writer delivered the "Commencement Sermon," in the large chapel of Dr. Rivers' Seminary. The crowd was very large and the interest general. The Doctor has a very flourishing school, and is doing good service in the cause of education. We have no better "educator" in the West than Dr. Rivers. Besides, he is an active, faithful, successful minister of the gospel, exerting a powerful influence upon the community where he resides. At night I delivered a Missionary address at the Methodist Church and took up a very good collection for Domestic Missions. In our appeals we do not urge very large contributions from individuals—except in cases where persons have been exempt from the general ruin that has spread over our country—but we do insist that each member and friend of the church shall contribute, as he has the ability, and that we are not to withhold our contributions because they are small. The fact is, Mr. Editor, we have heretofore relied too much upon large donations, liberal subscriptions, and have not made our people all feel their responsibility. We must go to work on a different principle, we must strive to enlist all our people in the great movements of the church, and make each feel that he has an interest in every enterprise that looks to the conversion of the world and the elevation of our race.

OUR GERMAN CORRESPONDENT.—We have already enriched our columns by quoting from the pen of PROFESSOR AHRENS. We are happy to announce him as a regular correspondent of the Advocate. He will favor us with weekly letters. Being in the neighborhood, if not in the very atmosphere of the continental war, his opinions will be worth much to us, as well as his information. He is a Methodist preacher, a German and a highly accomplished gentleman; besides has resided long enough in this country, to understand our language and people.

The following from the "Times" shows that the Editor has not become familiar with the name of the Northern Methodist sheet, and has confounded it with the New Orleans Christian Advocate:

The New Orleans Christian Advocate, which assumes to be in part, at least, a religious journal, has reached its twenty-seventh number. John P. Newman, D. D., is the responsible editor. He is a smooth, oily-tongued, polished speaker, slightly pumpous, inclined to pulpit theatricals and devotedly attached to that new Apostolic order—"The Blood-hounds of Zion." The reverend gentleman inaugurated the fashion of displaying flags in our Methodist churches, of converting the pulpit into a political rostrum, and seemed highly delighted when his partisan auditors filled his religious ears with noisy demonstrations of applause. In bold stretches of imagination, this political pulpit orator has few equals. About a year ago he published an account of some religious exercises at which he had assisted, but his description was so ornamented with imaginary scenes and incidents that one of his companions and reverend brothers felt called upon to publish in our columns a lengthy corrective communication. Assuming to be a follower of "the meek and lowly One who, "when he was reviled, reviled not again," and who commanded his people to love their enemies, he demands something more than an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. To show the spirit which animates Dr. Newman, as a journalist, we give the following from yesterday's Advocate:

"Harpers' Weekly is doing more by its pictures to expose the sickly and unwise sympathy expressed for the traitor, Jefferson Davis, than any hundred journals in the land. In the numbers for June 30th, and July 7th, are two notable pictures; one is entitled "The contrast of suffering—Andersonville and Fortress Monroe," and the other, "Why he cannot sleep." In the delineation of these pictorial representations, the artist was inspired, and he impresses the mind more powerfully than he could have done by an elaborately written argument on the guilt of the prisoner and the punishment due his crimes. The morbid sympathizers with this great bad man, should carefully study these remarkable pictures, and learn therefrom that justice no less than mercy has claims upon society."

The Congregational Church and Secret Societies.

The General Association of Illinois appointed last year a special committee consisting of Rev. Henry Beecher, Prof. Samuel C. Bartlett of the Chicago Theological Seminary, and President Blanchard of Wheaton College, to make a report upon the relation of oath-bound secret societies to Christian Society. The committee have lately reported, and their report was adopted by the General Association with little or no opposition.

The report, drawn up by Prof. Bartlett, states that there are some legitimate concealments of an organized character, such as the privacies of the family and of business firms, the temporary concealment of public negotiations at critical stages, the occasional withdrawal of scandals which could only disturb and demoralize communities, and the secresy of military combinations; and that organizations whose whole object and general method are well understood and are known to be laudable and moral — such as associations for purely literary or reformatory purpose — are not to be sweepingly condemned by reason of a thin veil of secresy covering their precise methods and procedure; yet the outer veil of secresy is deemed to be unwise and undesirable, inasmuch as it holds out needless temptations to deeds of darkness, and gives unnecessary countenance to other and unlawful combinations; and whenever the act of membership involves an unconditional oath or promise of submission, adhesion, and concealment, under all circumstances, that compact is a grave moral wrong. In regard to Masonry the report says: "Then there are certain other widespread organizations—such as Free Masonry,—which, as we suppose, are in their nature hostile to good citizenship and true religion, because they exact initiatory oaths of blind compliance and concealment, incompatible with the claims of equal justice toward man and a good conscience toward God; because they may easily, and sometimes have actually, become combinations against the due process of law and government; because, while claiming a religious character, they, in their rituals, deliberately withhold all recognition of Christ as their only Saviour, and Christianity as the only true religion; because, while they are, in fact, nothing but restricted partnerships or companies for mutual insurance and protection, they ostentatiously parade this characterless engagement as a substitute for brotherly love and true benevolence; because they bring good men into confidential relations to bad men; and, because, while in theory they supplant the Church of Christ, they do, also, in fact, largely tend to withdraw the sympathy and active zeal of professing Christians from their respective churches."

WEEKLY SUMMARY OF NEWS.

Mr. Seward has addressed a letter of extraordinary significance to Senator Doolittle on the subject of the proposed Union National Convention which we give entire.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, July 11, 1866.—Sir: Excuse me for expressing surprise that you ask me whether I approve of a proposed Union National Convention at Philadelphia. After more than five years of disturbance by civil war, I regard a restoration of the unity of the country its most immediate as well as its most vital interest. That restoration will be complete when loyal men are admitted as Representatives of the loyal people of the eleven States so long unrepresented in Congress. Nothing but this can complete it; nothing more remains to be done and it is nothing more is necessary. Every days' delay is attended by multiplying and increasing inconveniences, embarrassments and dangers at home and abroad. Congress possesses the power exclusively. After a session of seven months, Congress still omits to exercise that power. What can be done to induce Congress to act? This is the question of the day. Whatever is done must be done in accordance with the constitution and laws. It is in perfect accordance with the constitution and laws that the people of the United States shall assemble by delegates in convention, and that when so assembled they shall address Congress by respectful petition and remonstrance, and that the people by their several States, Districts and Territories shall approve, sanction and unite in such respectful representations to Congress. No party could do this effectually or even seem willing to do it alone. No loyal or popular organization could do it effectually. It is the interest of all parties alike, of all the States and of all sections; a national interest, the interest of the whole people. The convention may not succeed in inducing Congress to act, but if they fail the attempt can make the matter no worse. It will be a lawful and patriotic attempt made in the right direction; an effort to be remembered with pride and satisfaction whether it succeeds or fails. The original union of the States was brought about by movements of the same character. The citizen who objects to the convention is bound to propose a better plan of proceeding to effect the desired end. No other plan is offered or even thought of. Those who oppose it seem to me to manifest at least unconcern, if not opposition to all reconstruction, reorganization, and reconciliation between the alienated masses of the American people. To admit that the Convention will fail would be to admit that the people of the United States are deficient in either wisdom or the virtue necessary to continue the existence of the Republic. I believe no such thing. A great political writer says that the Government is a severe religion, and that the people of every country are divided into two classes, each maintaining a distinct political faith. The one class always fearing the worst that can possibly happen, and the others hoping under every circumstance the very best that can in any event happen. Without accepting this theory as absolutely true, I think that all men do generally act from a motive to guard against public danger, or else from a positive desire to do good. Both classes may therefore favor the attempt to restore the unity of the country.

WM. H. SEWARD.

To the Hon. J. R. Doolittle, Chairman Executive Committee.

The events at the North are rapidly shaping themselves for trouble. The conflict is for the spoil. Who shall hold and control that immense power and wealth lodged in the Government at Washington. The Radicals are determined, cost what it may, to keep in power. They are ready to sacrifice the Constitution, the Sovereignty of the States, both Northern and Southern, the great doctrine of taxation only with representation, the liberty of persons, of the press, and every principle that may oppose itself, or even stand in their way to universal ascendency.

Against them the President opposes his whole strength. Montgomery Blair, who doubtless speaks advisedly, in a speech at Reading, Pa., on the 19th July, predicted that, should the radicals carry the October election, there would be the establishment of two Presidents and two Congresses, for the radicals would immediately impeach President Johnson and turn him out; while on the other hand, the Democratic members of Congress would unite with the regularly elected members from the South. He also warned his hearers that they were on the eve of another civil war. The battle-field would be in the North, while the South would remain a unit.

The designs of the Radicals are well known to Mr. Raymond of the New York Times, a prominent Republican member of Congress. Upon the resolution recently forced through the house, calling on the States to organize, discipline and equip their militia, and directing that two thirds of the arms, ordnance and ammunition now under custody of the General Government be distributed among the States—among the loyal States at once, among other States not until further orders, Mr. Raymond says, this "is the first step towards preparation for another civil war." He adds:

Most of the leading and reflecting Radicals in Congress take this view of the political future: If the Fall elections result in the choice of Northern Democrats enough to constitute, when added to the members from the Southern States, a majority of the House, they assume that this majority, thus constituted, will claim to be the Congress, and will act accordingly, and that they will be recognized by the President as the body to which he will send his message, and whose sessions he will, if the necessity should arise, protect by military force. They assert, on the other hand, that the Union members from the loyal States—if they constitute a majority from those States—will claim to be the only legal Congress, and will, if necessary, invoke an insurrection of the people to maintain them in that position. They do not in the least conceal their purpose, in the event of such a collision, to appeal to force, and to "drive the rival Congress, with the President and his Cabinet and supporters, into the Potomac," to use the language of one of the ablest and most sincere of their number. If you will recall the remarks of Mr. Boutwell, of Massachusetts, in last week's first caucus, you will see this movement clearly foreshadowed, indeed avowed. He declared his belief that an issue of force was rapidly approaching, and that we must be prepared to meet it. He acts, and all who co-operate with him in these measures profess to act under the apprehension that the President intends to resort to force—that he means to disperse the present Congress on its re-assembling in December if it refuses to admit the Southern members; and Mr. Farnsworth ascribed to Mr. Seward the declaration that this Congress should never reassemble unless the Southern members were admitted—in support of this belief. I need scarcely say that Mr. Seward never made any remark of the kind, nor that the project ascribed to the President is purely an invention, or at best the crazy dream of a politician nightmare. But in either case it serves the same purpose. It covers, and is held to justify, the determination to arouse the North, and prepare for a resort to force upon the assembling of the Fortieth Congress in extra or in regular session; and this determination is avowed. And the resolution to which I have referred, for an organization of the militia and a distribution of arms in the Northern States, is the initial step to its execution.

It is impossible to shut our eyes to the fact that a GREAT CONSPIRACY against the Constitution and the Government in its present form, is now developing. That small parties of these conspirators are in many of the prominent places of the South, under various guises, reporting, watching, distorting the truth, fomenting discord between whites and blacks, between the North and the South; professing peace, war is in their hearts. Their importance is derived from their connection with their principals at Washington, and their quality as spies. It becomes every man who heartily wishes well to the whole country, to look well to these characters, as capable of evil; to sustain the President by wisdom and moderation, and a firm advocacy of the constitution of the United States as it was, recognizing the Sovereignty of the States, and the distinct rights of the Executive, the Judicial, and the Legislative departments of the General Government. In the Providence of God, the Southern States may yet prove to be the bulwark of the Constitution and the Union.

CITY NEWS.

Coming nearer home, on the evening of the 24th a mass meeting was held in Lafayette square, by the friends of the President to sustain the National Convention about to be held at Philadelphia.

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The President has signed the joint resolution admitting Tennessee, but says the preamble consists of statements, some of which are assumed, while the resolution is merely a declaration of opinion. It comprises no legislation, nor does it confer any power which is binding upon the respective Houses, the Executive or the State. He further says the right of each House under the Constitution to judge of the qualifications of its own members is undoubted, and his approval or disapproval of the resolution could not in the slightest degree increase or diminish the authority in this respect conferred on the two branches of Congress, but he is earnestly desirous to remove every cause of further delay, whether real or imaginary, on the part of Congress to the admission of the loyal Senators and Representatives from Tennessee. Notwithstanding the anomalous character of the proceedings, he affixes his signature to the resolution; at the same time his approval is not to be construed as an acknowledgment that Coogress has the right to pass laws preliminary to the admission of the representatives from any of the States nor is it to be considered as committing him to all the statements in the preamble, some of which are without foundation. Among them he states that there is reason to believe the Tennessee Legislature has not ratified the late amendment passed by Congress. A part of the message was greeted with derision and laughter by the radicals, and with applause by the Democrats. Subsequently the Committee on Elections reported favorably on the credentials of the Tennessee members, an invitation was extended to them to come forward to be sworn. Maynard, Taylor and Snoks appeared and took the oath. This was followed by much applause, and the new members received the congratulations of the Speaker and others.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—A board of officers has been appointed by the Commissioner of Freedmen's Affairs for the purpose of revising the regulations for the government of the Bureau, to meet the requirements of the recent act of Congress extending the duration of the Bureau two years. Gens. Tilson, Sprague and Gregory constitute the board.

The Secretary of State gave a dinner party to day to the Tennessee delegation. Among those present were ex Gov. Sharkey, of Mississippi, and ex-Gov. Parsons, of Alabama.

When the credentials of Senator Patterson, of Tennessee, were read, Mr. Sumner moved their reference to the Judiciary Committee, with instructions to inquire whether he could take the oath. Sumner said he was a Judge under the Confederate Government, and therefore disqualified. After considerable discussion, the motion was agreed to.

The Senate has confirmed Major Gen. Sherman Lieutenant General, vice Grant, promoted, and Rear Admiral Porter as Vice Admiral, vice Farragut, promoted.

FOREIGN.

The Paris Moniteur of the 14th says negotiations were still pending, and the best feeling prevailed between Prussia and France; but the latest advices seem to indicate that the war will continue.

The Prussians occupied Prague and are still advancing.

Benedek's army is organizing and is 160,000 strong, exclusive of the cavalry and artillery. They are on the line of Olmutz and Brunn.

The Prussian headquarters on the 12th were only three miles from Brunn.

The Prussian under Mantenffel attacked the Bavarians at Kissingen. The latter defended their position ten hours and retreated to take a position on the Main.

The Bavarian commander, Zeullen, was killed. The loss was heavy.

The Vienna Press of the 14th says the proposed mediation of Napoleon has ended for the present and Austria must trust to her own strength and resources. She is resolved to fight to maintain her position as a great power.

The London Times declares England cannot follow Napoleon in an intervention calculated to aggravate present evils.

The Moscow Gazette asserts that Russia does not want a change in the European boundaries, and cannot submit to the dictatorship of France.

Russia is despatching troops to the Silesian frontier.

The Italians have occupied Padua; notwithstanding the French fleet has gone to Venice, Italy persists in advancing toward Venice.

A dispatch from Florence, Italy, of July 13, says the Court of Berlin has declared to the Italian Cabinet that an armistice, on the basis of the cession of Venetia, is admissable. The Italian Government, in its reply, is said to have announced its resolution to continue offensive operations against the Austrian Empire, without relaxation, in conformity with the engagement mutually entered into by Prussia and Italy, until both these Powers shall have obtained from Austria satisfactory terms for the conclusion of peace.

The Emperor of Austria is making concessions to Hungary. He announces that conscription is suspended, and calls upon the Hungarians to volunteer.

The Prussians were defeated in a sanguinary conflict at Aschaffenberg, and marched towards Frankfort, which was evacuated by the Federals. The Diet had removed to Augustenburg.

The Prussian headquarters were at Brunn. It was reported the Russians occupied Iglau.

The London Times thinks the Prussians would be before Vienna by the 7th, and doubts that the Austrians can withstand the victorious Prussians.

Cialdini occupied Padua and Vicenza, towns on the railroad to Venice.

It was declared in diplomatic circles at St. Petersburg that Russia has no present intention to abandon her neutral attitude, and will not, excepting a foreign power shall intervene in the affairs of Germany.

Unless Cialdini is dislodged from Padua and Vicenza, on the railroad to Vienna, he will prevent the Austrians from recieving any aid in the impending battle with the Prussians.

The London Times believes the repeated Austrian losses in Bohemia will deter the Emperor from a final encounter near the capital, and that an interview between the two monarchs will take place before the Prussians shall be ready for the onset.

The Austrian Emperor told his people that Vienna should be treated as an open city, and that he would limit the operations to a defence of the line of the Danube, which might bring the Prussian attack on Florisdoff, two or three miles from the gates of Vienna, where the Austrians have an intrenched camp.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

Most branches of trade (says the Price Current of Wednesday) continue inanimate. Nothing worthy of notice is doing in Sugar and Molasses, and operations in Western Produce have been mostly confined to the supply of jobbers or home consumption; but the movement in our leading staple has been comparatively active, and until yesterday at fuller prices than could have been realised last week.

COTTON.—We noticed in our last report that, after a moderate business on Friday, the market closed at 20 to 21c for Low Ordinary, 25 to 28 for Ordinary, 29 to 31 for Good Ordinary, 32 to 34 for Low Middling, and 35 to 36 for Middling, since which there has been a continued fair demand, and prices have ruled more in favor of factors. We repeat our quotations of last Saturday as follows:

Low	20 to 23
Ordinary	25 to 28
Good Ordinary	29 to 31
Low Middling	32 to 34
Middling	35 to 36

TOBACCO.—The stock on hand is fair. There is some enquiry on foreign account, but holders are very firm in their views and ask mostly higher prices than buyers are willing to pay. We continue to quote a quiet but firm market at the following rates:

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused	4 to—	— to 5c,	Currency.
Good do	5½ to 6	6½ to 7.
Common Leaf	7½ to 8	9 to 11
Fair	12 to 13	14 to 15
Good	15 to 16	16 to 17
Fine	17 to 18	18 to 19
Choice Select's	20 to —	21 to 25

SUGAR.—The supply of the domestic production is about exhausted, but that of the foreign production is fair though not large. The market has continued dull, and what little is doing is only to a retail way. Prime to Choice Porto Rico and Cuba are retailing 16, 16½c, Yellow Clarified at 17 and White at 17½c per lb.

MOLASSES.—The market is nearly bare of Louisiana, but the supply of Cuba is fair. The demand is limited, being only local and confined to a few distillers. The only sale since our last review was a cargo of 300 hogsheads Cuba at 50c per gallon.

FLOUR.—The supplies are small but the market has continued very dull. The demand is limited and confined to dealers, and prices have ruled more in their favor. The grades below Superfine are altogether neglected, while Superfine and those above are difficult to dispose of. Yesterday the market was quiet with sales, to dealers, of 800 bbls. in lots at $8 to to $8 75 for Superfine, $10 to 10 50 for Low Extra, $12 12½ for Good Extra, and $12 75 per bbl for Choice Extra.

BACON.—The market is well supplied with Sugar-cured Hams, but there are not many Sides and Shoulders on hand. Yesterday a lot of 10 casks Shoulders sold at 17½c per lb.

PORK.—Extreme dullness has continued to prevail. There has not much offered at retail Round lots of Mess could be purchased readily at $34 per barrel.

GREEN MEAT.—The market is bare of Sides and Hams. There are some few Shoulders on on hand, which are retailing at 17½ to 18c per lb.

LARD.—Is in good supply but the market continues extremely dull and there is no demand for round lots or for export. The retail demand is supplied by dealers at 23c per lb for Prime in tierces and 24½c in kegs.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—Is a fair stock of Butter on hand. The demand for Western is good but Northern is neglected. Northern Butter is selling at 40 to 43c and Western at 25 to 35c per lb. Cheese is in light supply and fair demand. It is selling at 15 to 18c for Western and 15 to 20c for Northern, and English Dairy at 25 to 26c per lb.

CORN.—The supplies are barely sufficient for the demand, which continues good, and prices have ruled more in favor of sellers. There were sales on Saturday and Monday of 6,000 sacks at 90 to 92½c for Mixed, Yellow Mixed and Yellow, and $1 10 to $1 12½ per bushel for White. Yesterday the supplies being very light the sales were confined to 2000 sacks at 90c for Yellow Mixed, 92½ for Yellow and $1 12½ for White.

OATS.—Are in fair supply and moderate demand at about previous prices. Yesterday 1500 sacks sold at 52c and 133 sacks at 52½ per bushel.

BRAN.—Is in fair supply but little in demand. There were sales on Saturday and Monday of 1000 sacks at $1 12½ per 100 lbs.

HAY.—There is a good stock on hand but sales are very slow, and only in a jobbing way. Yesterday 390 bales Prime Ohio sold at $23 and 50 at $23 50 per ton.

INDIA BAGGING.—Is scarce and is much in request. Holders are asking largely advanced prices. An offer of 33c per yard was refused for a lot of 100 bales on Monday, and 33½c was asked, while subsequently 33½c was refused for a lot of 50 bales and 34c asked. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 32c in rolls, and 34c in bales.

BALE ROPE.—The market continues quiet. A lot of 200 coils sold on Monday at 18c per lb. Dealers are obtaining 18½c per lb. Iron Cotton Ties are selling at 17c per lb.

COFFEE.—Has been in fair demand for the country. The medium grades are in fair supply but the lower and higher grades are scarce. The demand is supplied by dealers at 27 to 27½c per lb currency for Low Fair to Fair Rio.

GUNNY BAGS.—There are not many in the market. They sell in a limited way at 37c a piece.

STAR CANDLES.—Are in fair jobbing demand and there have been small sales at 20c per lb for 12 oz, 22c for 14 oz, and 25c for full weight.

SOAP.—Palm is jobbing at 8c per lb.

RICE.—There is no Carolina in market and no India in first hands. The latter is selling from second hands at 9 to 11c per lb. Louisiana commands 11½ to 13c per lb.

WOOL.—There is very little in market. The last sales were at 18 to 19c for unwashed Texas.

SALT.—Round lots of Liverpool Coarse and Fine are quoted at $1 75 per sack, while dealers have been obtaining $1 85 to $1 95 for Fine. There is only one cargo of Turks' Island on hand. It is held at 65c per sack.

NAVAL STORES.—The stock on hand is small, but there is very little in demand. Sales are making in a small way as follows: No. 2 Rosin at $4 50, No 1 and Virgin dip at $8. Pitch $6, Tar $2 50 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine commands 65 to 72½c per gallon.

HIDES.—Are in fair demand, but there are not many on hand and only small sales are making in consequence of the for Green Hides, 10 to 10½ for Kip Skins, and 12 to 13c per lb for Dry Hides.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $2 to $2 70 for St. Louis and $3 25 to $3 50 for Louisville. Onions $3 25 to $3 50 per bbl. Apples $3 to $4 50 per bbl. Cabbages 18 to 25c a piece.

POULTRY & EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $12 00. Geese at $10 00 and Turkeys at $30 00 per dozen. Western Eggs are selling at $18 to $20 per bbl.

BEANS.—Are dull at $5 to $7 per bbl.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY,
Tuesday evening, July, 24, 1866.

Arrived since our last: 818 Texas Beeves, 1304 calves and yearlings, and 20 hogs.

Sold, 1052 Texas beeves, 499 calves and yearlings, 72 hogs, 50 sheep and 17 milch cows.

Stock on sale: 1090 Texas beeves, 941 calves and yearlings 80 hogs, 5248 sheep and 23 milch cows.

Western Beef, choice per lb net	—	to	—
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	—	to	—
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35	to	50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20	to	35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$ 9	to	20
Hogs per lb gross	12	to	13
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25	to	$4 25
Creole Sheep, per head	—	to	—
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25	to	$4 25
Choice Sheep, per head	$6	to	$8
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80	to	$100
Milch Cows, per head	$50	to	$80
Yearlings, per head	$10	to	$14
Calves per head	$7	to	$11

MONETARY.

Statement of New Orleans Gold Market week ending Friday July 27th, 1866.

FRIDAY, JULY 20TH, 1866,
Gold, 150; 148.

SATURDAY, JULY 21ST.
Gold, 149; 147; 147½.

MONDAY, JULY 23RD.
Gold, 148.

TUESDAY, JULY 24TH.
Gold, 150; 148; 148½.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 25TH.
Gold, 149; 148.

THURSDAY, JULY 26TH.
Gold, 147; 147½.

Reported by
WM. S. MOUNT, Manager.
The City Bank of New Orleans,
15 Commercial Place, New Orleans.

OBITUARIES.

ALBERT JEFFERSON TULLY, son of J. A. and Sarah Jefferson Tully, was born in Tuscumbia, Ala., on the 1st day of October, 1826; and died on the morning of the 12th July, 1866, of disease of the heart. The deceased was for more than twenty years a resident and merchant of New Orleans, and for the same length of time, was an exemplary and useful member of the M. E. Church, South. As Sabbath School teacher and superintendent he was active and devoted, and for a considerable time he was an industrious and capable Steward in one of the charges of this city. Up to the breaking out of the war, by industry and enterprise he had greatly prospered in business, and was liberal and generous in his prosperity. As a son and brother, he was a model of filial and fraternal tenderness, unselfish in ministering to others, and blessing them with unwearied kindness. In the war he was actively employed, usually as a volunteer, and had the reputation of being one of the best scouts in the army. He returned to New Orleans, at the close of the war, broken in health and fortune. A spiritual cloud hung over the last months of his life. He died suddenly, snatched from the midst of life and business, unexpectedly to himself and to his friends. But a few days before his death, he declared to some of his friends that his only happy days had been spent in the service of God, and the enjoyment of religion, and avowed his purpose to regain his lost assurance and comfort. His religious state was doubtless, in a great measure, owing to the wreck of his fortunes, the shattered condition of the nervous organization, and the mortal malady which for a long time preyed upon him. We knew him in years gone by, as the considerate friend, the devoted Christian, and the refined and generous collaborer in every good work. His was a clouded sunset, but one may not say more. "The judge of all the earth will do right."

L. PARKER.

July 23rd, 1866.

Died in the triumph of Christian hope, May 19th, 1866, at Lisbon, Claiborne Parish, La., Sister MARY E. MCGEHEE, consort of Major Samuel M. McGehee. The deceased was the daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Blackwell, of Elbert county, Georgia. Was born Nov. 12th, 1829, embraced religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, when about fifteen years of age, was married April 20th, 1852.

At the commencement of the late war, her home was in Jefferson county, Arkansas, but after the Federal army took possession of that part of the State, she moved to Lisbon, Claiborne Parish, La. She immediately attached herself to the church, and thus maintained her union with the people of God.

She was conscious of her approaching end, but met death without dismay. She bade her children and husband an affectionate farewell, and when asked if her sky was clear, replied "as clear as the noon day sun." Sister McGehee was an affectionate wife, a devoted mother, a true friend, an elegant lady, and a consistent christian.

N. A. CRAVENS.

The Southern and Memphis Christian Advocates please copy.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Departed this life in Ashley county, Ark., Friday morning, at precisely six o'clock, June 8th, 1866, after a short illness of two days and nights, Miss MARGARET ELIZABETH WILLIAMS, wife of Rev. Chas. A. Williams, in the full triumph of Christians Faith. When asked if she should die from this illness "where would she go, her answer was calm but firm, to Heaven." Often has she been heard to say: she did not desire to live in this troublesome world, and if it was not for leaving her little boy without a mother's care, and a mother's training, she would rather depart and be with Christ. She was born in Shelby county, Ala., June 25th, 1840. Was converted and converted under the preaching of old Father Bolding, at Reader's Spring Camp ground, at the age of eight years, and from that time till her dissolution lived a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South. She had lived with her husband twelve years and one week happily together, ever cheering him on in the path of duty. She has but gone before to beckon him to the heaven of Eternal Rest.

She leaves a little boy aged five years two months and three days, who will never experience a mother's love or a mother's care. Although youthful, being but twenty-five years eleven months and seventeen days old, she had long since discovered the vanity of all the worldly pursuits which have an end under the sun." She had much of the Ithuriel spirit; having given up the comforts of a settled home, and the pleasures of domestic life, to go forth with her husband to do good, and work in the Lord's Vineyard tho remainder of her days. Surely she has her reward. C. A. W.

The following tribute to the memory of Col. R. A. BAKER and DUKE W. GOODMAN, was paid by the Board of Trustees, of the Southern University of Ala., at its recent meeting:

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from us by death, since our last annual meeting, two members of the Board, to wit: Robert A. Baker and Duke W. Goodman; and whereas these brethren beloved were highly efficient members of the Board, and devoted friends of the Southern University, therefore,

Resolved, That we deeply deplore the loss which we have sustained in the death of Robert A. Baker and Duke W. Goodman.

Resolved, That the Southern University has sustained a great loss by this dispensation of Providence, to which however we bow with humble submission, knowing that God doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we tender to the stricken families of our deceased brethren our deep sympathies, and offer in their behalf our fervent prayers; and that the Corresponding Secretary be and is hereby instructed to transmit to them copies of these resolutions, and also to the Church papers for insertion in their columns.

THOS. J. RAMSAY.
Sec'y Board Trustees.

Greensboro, Ala. July 5th, 1866.

NEW DISCIPLINES.

The Agent at the Depository has just received the invoice of the first shipment of the New Discipllnes, from Nashville, on the 24th inst.

PRICE: SIXTY CENTS.

Thirty per cent. off to wholesale dealers and to Preachers who buy to sell again.

Address—
REV. R. J. HARP, Agent,
No. 112 Camp street, Lock Box 814,
jy28tf New Orleans.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE

HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,

REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.

Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.

Next annual term opens first Monday in September.

For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.

Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams' Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons Type. ap7-1

THE BALTIMORE EPISCOPAL METHODIST will be issued in this city the first of next month. Its publication will be under the management of the Rev John Poisal. Dr. THOMAS E. BOND and Rev S. S. ROSZEL, Editors. The "Episcopal Methodist," of Richmond, Virginia, having been transferred to Baltimore, Bishop Dogget and Rev. J. C. Edwards will continue their services as Editorial correspondents. Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D., General Agent. The best talent of the Southern Church will be employed upon its columns. The publisher has the pleasure to announce that contributions may be expected from Bishop Pierce of Georgia, Bishop Marvin of Texas, Bishop McTyeire of Alabama, Bishop Wightman of South Carolina, Dr. Summers of Nashville, Dr. Marshall of Mississippi, Dr. Huston of Kentucky and others.

The contributions of some of the most eminent men of other denominations will also enrich its columns: Rev. Dr. Palmer of New Orleans, Dr. Burgett of Mobile, Dr. Bullock of Baltimore, Prof. McGuffy of the University of Virginia, Rev. Peyton Harrison, and others.

It is designed to make the paper the great organ of the Episcopal Methodist Church, yet in no partisan sense will it be denominational. The General Conference, which recently met at New Orleans and the whole people of the South, conceie to Baltimore a name and prestige as the proper place for its publication. No pains or expense will be spared to make it a first-class Journal and a welcome visitor to every Christian household. The names of the gentlemen who will have the Editorial management of the paper, and the corps of able coadjutors associated with them are the best pledge to its patrons, that they will find the "Episcopal Methodist," in its spirit and teaching, the advocate of conservative principles and a bulwark of defense against the dangerous tendencies of the times.

We deem it proper to assure our friends, that the salutary measures of reform, which were adopted by the late General Conference, meet the cordial approval of the conductors of this paper. As it will represent every State and Conference in the South, it will afford the best advertising medium in all our business and social relations. It invites a renewal in a stronger form of those commercial and fraternal ties which must bind Baltimore and the South more closely together.

This important organ of communication between our respective communities, will be published regularly once a week on fine paper, large type and quarto size at $4 00 per annum, or $2 00 for six months, invriably in advance.

Office of publication, 332 W. Baltimore Street Selby & Dulaney, where subscriptions and advertisements may be left. All the members of the Southern General Conference are authorized Agents. The preachers of the several annual Conferences and clergymen generally, are requested to act as agents for this paper.

THOS. E. BOND, Editor.
S. S. ROSZEL, Associate Editor.
JOHN POISAL, Publisher.
Baltimore, June 4th, 1866.

THE NEW ORLEANS
Christian Advocate
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY
At Five Dollars per annum, in advance.

OFFICE 112 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

This religious journal is specially devoted to the interests of the Methodist E. Church South, and is the official paper for the Mobile, Montgomery, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences. Some of the ablest writers in the Church are regular contributors to its columns.

Its weekly summary of news is carefully compiled, and contains all the current intelligence afloat at home as well as abroad.

Its "Commercial Column" will always be found reliable.

Hereafter, the "Corner for Children" will receive particular attention, as also that portion of the paper intended for selections of choice reading.

LILIENTHAL'S
GREAT PHOTOGRAPH OF THE BISHOPS.

This is a decided success. The artist has fixed the noble features of these distinguished divines in the highest style known to the art. Every family of our Church would like to have one. As mementoes to leave among our friends, they will be invaluable.

They will be sold at a low price, and the proceeds of the sale will be donated to benevolent objects. The plate belongs to a party who aims to promote a cause all will heartily approve. They may be had hereafter at the Book Room, 112 Camp street. There are nine Bishops present—all the college, except the venerable Soule. Address orders to Rev. R. J. HARP. Price $3; wholesale price $2 50. my5 tf

GENERAL CONFERENCE
Pic-Nic Photograph

140 PICTURES FOR $3.

One hundred and forty Bishops and Delegates to the General Conference of the M. E. Church South, including almost the entire body, taken in at the City Park, during the elegant Pic-Nic entertainment given them by the ladies of New Orleans, by the accomplished artist Theodore Lilienthal, in various positions—standing, sitting on benches, boxes, and on the ground.

ONE GROUP,

These Pictures, though small, (as they must be to embrace so many in one group,) are, with two or three exceptions, very distinct, and when viewed through a magnifying glass—which can be obtained for $2—have a remarkably life-like appearance.

For sale at the Branch of the Southern M. E. Publishing House, No. 112 Camp st., up stairs.

Liberal arrangements made with wholesale dealers, for cash. Sent by Express. C. O. D. Price $3; with neat frame and glass, $6.

Address ROB'T J. HARP, Agent,
je2 Lock Box 814, New Orleans.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD.

Established, August, 1861.

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January, 1866.

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET, 18

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURES to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

C. E. CATE & CO.
feb17 18 Camp st., N. O.

PAYNE, HUNTINGTON & CO.,
Cotton Factors,
No. 39 Union Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

J. U. PAYNE, G. W. HUNTINGTON,
W. C. H. DAMERON; H. M. PAYNE.
je23-1y

TOM HENDERSON, Late of Henderson, Terry & Co.
SAM HENDERSON, Late of Violett, Black & Co.

TOM & SAM HENDERSON,
COTTTON FACTORS
AND
General Commission Merchants,
100 COMMON STREET,
je9 1y New Orleans

J. C. M'ALLISTER, late of Memphis, formerly of Jackson, Miss.
R. M'NAIR, late of Arkansas, formerly of Miss.
H. GARDES, late of Washington, Arkansas.

McALLISTER, McNAIR & GARDES, Wholesale Grocers, 74 Common Street New Orleans, La. ap7

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY
Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,
Of the late Firm and Successors to G. W. COFFIN & CO.,
102 & 104 East Second street,
Cincinnati, Ohio,

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. je16

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This Institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address

B-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles st., corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered in 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no copying from books.

Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law; English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages; Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics and Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.

For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address

f3 1y GEO. SOULE, N. N.

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY.—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M.,	President, Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Mnrio S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bedclothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September.

Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT, D.D.

D. G. HUMPHREYS, Pres. Board of Trustees.
jy14 6m

J. B. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.

JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.

Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans. ap14-1y

S. K. WALKER. THOS. M'KNIGHT. J. P. HARRISON.

R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondelet street, New Orleans. jan 20-1y.

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans; the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.

SALES ROOMS,

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c. Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.

Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

GEORGE L. HILL, ATTORNEY at Law, Marshall, Texas. Collections made in Eastern Texas and West Louisiana. mar27

WATTS, GIVEN & CO., Paducah, Ky. WATTS, CRANE & CO. New York.
W. C. WATTS & CO., Liverpool, England.

GIVEN, WATTS & CO., COTTON Factors & General Commission Merchants, No. 103 Poydras street, New Orleans. Parties shipping their Cotton to us, can make their election, and have their choice of this, the New York or Liverpool markets. Advances made on consignments to our houses, Watts, Crane & Co New York, and W. C. Watts & Co. Liverpool. feb3-1y

ROBERT L. WALKER,
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, 17 Carondolet street, New Orleans. ap21-1y

GARY W. BUTT. WM. FLASH. THOS. T. A. LYNN

BUTT, FLASH & LYON,
Cotton Factors, General Commission and Forwarding Merchants, corner Carondelet and Union streets, New Orleans.

Orders for all descriptions of merchandise will meet prompt attention.

Liberal advances made on consignments of Cotton and Produce to our care. ap14-6m

J. G. ELLIS. W. C. CHAMBERLIN

ELLIS & CHAMBERLIN, COTTON Factors and Commission Merchants, 23 Carondelet street. jan 20-1y

R. M. DENMAN. D. M. HOLLINGSWORTH

R. MARSH DENMAN & CO., Carriage Repository, corner Carondelet and

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

Make the Fountain Pure.

"Mamma," said a little girl to her mother one day, "won't you tell me how I can be good inside?"

"What do you mean?" asked her mother.

"Why, I mean I don't have right feelings in my heart. Papa calls me a good girl, and so does aunty, and most everybody; but I'm not good at all."

"I'm very sorry," said the mother.

"And so am I," said Kitty; "but I know my heart is very wicked Why, mamma, when I was dressed to ride yesterday, and the carriage came to the door, you remember papa said there was no room for me. Well, I went into the house, and when you came back aunty told you I had been very good about it. But she didn't know. I didn't say anything to her, but I went up stairs, and though I didn't cry, I thought very wicked things. I kicked the cushion about because I was so vexed; and I wished the carriage would upset and the horses would run away. O! mamma, won't you tell me how I can be good inside?"

Now, there are a great many children, and grown up people, too, who are like Kitty. They keep their lips from saying bad things, but they can't keep their heart from thinking and feeling what is bad. If we want to be good inside, we must get our hearts changed. None but Jesus can do this. He says: "A new heart will I give them, and a new spirit will I put within them." Make the fountain pure, then will the streams which flow from it be pure also.

The Sky Inside.

"I think the rain was very provoking," said Bessie Jones, looking out the window with an angry frown upon her brow. "It is very provoking. It always rains when I don't want it. It is spoiling the slides, and there wont be an inch of ice left in an hour to skate on. Now where's my fun this afternoon, I should like to know?"

"You can stay at home and sew," said her aunt.

"I want to skate," said Bessie. "This rain is very provoking."

"The provoking is all in your own heart, Bessie," said her brother. "If you only had blue sky inside, you would not mind the rain outside."

Yes, it is so. Blue sky inside, that is a sweet, serene temper, takes all the little disappointments of life without fretting.

How to Win a Child's Heart.—The heart of a child is easily won. It needs no besieging, no formidable preparation for a grand assault, no advancing by regular approaches. You have only to go, in the name of love, and demand a surrender; and without parleying, the prize is yours.

"Love begets love." Anger and hate beget anger and hate. Smiles are like musical voices amid the hills, which come back to those that utter them with all their original sweetness.

Did you ever smile on a child without receiving an answering smile? On the contrary, when you have looked down coldly, perhaps with a frown, into the eyes of a child, have you not seen the reflection of your manner and expression in the mirror-like face of the little one?

Love children, and they will love you. Let children feel that you care for them—that you sympathize with them in all their little sorrows, and rejoice with them in all their little joys, and that you are their true and unselfish friend; and in those feelings you have the key to their hearts.

One word for you, dear teachers. You want to be loved by your scholars; then love your scholars. If you do love them, it will not be necessary for you to say so, in order that they may be conscious of the fact. Children read hearts intuitively. They read your affections for them in every line of your face, in your moistened eye, in your unforced smile. They hear the declaration of it in every tone of your voice. They have the assurance of it in your manner—in your actions, which "speak louder than words."

Happy are ye who have the love of the little ones under your care. It is a fountain of no common joy to your heart, and it gives you an influence over them which can be obtained in no other way.

A Beautiful Answer.—A little girl in Yorkshire, once, when water was scarce, saved as much rainwater as she could, and sold it to the washerwoman for a cent a bucket, and in this way cleared near five dollars for the Missionary Society. When she brought it to the Secretary she was not willing to tell her name. "But I must put down where it comes from," said he. "Call it, then," said the little girl, "rain from Heaven."

Forgiveness.—A little blind boy was once asked what forgiveness was. He answered: "It is the odors which flowers breathe when trampled upon."

How admirable is that religion which, while it seems to have in view only the felicity of another world, is, at the same time, the highest happiness of this.

The Chinese population of San Francisco exceeds 58,000.

A Sketch of the Life and Death of the Rev. Green Millsaps.

BY A FRIEND.

The subject of this brief sketch was born in Copiah Co., Miss., Oct. 2nd, 1841,—was born again of the Spirit at a very early age, and attached himself to the M. E. Church. When arrived at more mature years, however, he became careless, and although exceedingly moral and correct in all his conduct and deportment, yet, to use his own expression, he became the "vilest of sinners," in consequence of having sinned against so much light—having slighted so many mercies, and done despite to the Spirit of Grace, which was constantly wooing him back to the Savior.

In July, 1860, he entered upon his collegiate course at Green Castle, Indiana, and vigorously prosecuted his studies, until the breaking out of the "rebellion," when, full of ardor and enthusiasm, he enlisted in the cause of the South—was wounded in the battle of Seven Pines, before Richmond, and as thoughts of eternity crowded upon his mind, he felt all the terrors of an awakened conscience, and resolved, if spared, to devote his life to the service of God. This wound not proving so serious however, as anticipated, he soon rejoined his command, and became almost as thoughtless as before, though he sometimes tried to pray, as his broken vows loomed up before him, reminding him of his unfaithfulness and heart-wanderings—causing him to feel himself a miserable sinner; and being unable to divest himself of the impression, that if he yielded to the teachings of the Holy Spirit, he must become a herald of the Cross, his timid nature shrank from performing the public duties that he felt would devolve upon him. Thus he struggled with the weakness of the flesh, and the strivings of the Spirit, until he was again brought to the verge of the grave, and once more resolved to consecrate himself to the service of his divine Redeemer, but such is the depravity of the human heart that it required another chastening, and not until a dear young brother—the playmate of his childhood, and the companion of his riper years—fell in the siege of Vicksburg, did he fully dedicate himself to God.

Now did he indeed lay all upon the altar, consecrating himself with all his redeemed powers, for time and eternity, to be wholly the Lord's; and for near two years there was never, perhaps, a brighter example of our holy christianity — exemplifying all the christian graces, and teaching, both by precept and example, the doctrine of holiness.

Last fall he received license to preach—was admitted in Conference held at Crystal Springs, Miss., Nov., 1864, and with a burning zeal for the salvation of sinners, and the advancement of the Redeemer's kingdom, entered upon the work of the ministry. Not long, however, was he permitted to labor in his Lord's Vineyard, for "Death, who loves a shining mark," chose him as his victim, and he returned home to die. A few extracts from his journal will show the state of his mind at this time. He says, "April 24th, retired to bed last night feeling at perfect peace with God and all mankind—with a 'conscience void of offense.' My heart seemed to be filled with God. 'Oh! for this love, let rocks and hills their lasting silence break.' Soon after lying down, I was taken with hemorrhage, but my peace was not disturbed, for when the grave appears just before me, my Savior speaks to my heart from the gospel, 'I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die.' Thank God, I have no fears of death or the grave, for, 'since Jesus hath lain there, I dread not its gloom,' and feel assured that these afflictions shall work out for me a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.' I am sure I am growing in grace—becoming daily better fitted for the society of heaven, for none but the pure and holy can ever be admitted there. In a letter to a friend, he says, "I am glad to hear you say, that you are earnestly seeking a holy heart, do not be discouraged—'Press on toward the mark for the prize.' Refrain from every thing in which you feel the least sense of condemnation. You will find it necessary to observe stated times for fasting and prayer. Redeem time by diligence in your domestic affairs, that you may have much time to devote to God and your little children do not neglect your servants—every Sabbath evening I call the colored children together, and try to teach them about God, and their duty to him, and to each other—teach them little hymns and prayers, etc."

It was his custom, before he joined the Conference, and after he returned home, as long as his strength would permit, to hold meetings with his father's servants once or twice a week—reading and expounding them the plan of salvation, and the way to heaven. The poor, the destitute, and afflicted were his especial care, and he was ever ready to administer, both to their temporal and spiritual wants. On Monday, the 23rd of April, he called to see the writer, and seemed unusually heavenly-minded and prayerful, and as was his uniform custom, wherever he went, held prayers with the family, which was his last public effort; and heaven did indeed seem near, while we listened to his earnest pleading, and joined with him, for the last time, in fervent supplication. The next day he was taken with hemorrhage from the lungs or heart, which increasing in violence, threatened immediate dissolution. The writer visited him at this time, and found him patient, calm and happy though unable to talk. On Sunday, the 7th of May, the eucharist was administered by Rev. Messrs. Nicholson and Bowen, a means of grace which he always much enjoyed.

In the evening, he had the colored children called in, to sing for him, and their ebony faces gleamed with delight, as they flocked in to do the bidding of their idolized young master. He continued to grow worse from day to day, unable to converse much, but would give a word of warning or reproof to every sinner or careless professor that came in. His patience and meekness through out his severe and protracted illness, was remarkable, and was a clear exhibition of the transforming power of grace.

On Friday evening, the 9th of June, the writer again visited him, and found him rapidly sinking. About one o'clock, he desired the family to be called in; when all were assembled, he requested us to come around his bed, and offer silent prayer. Never can the writer forget the impressive solemnity of that hour! After being thus engaged for a few minutes he requested us to sing,

"Loving Jesus, gentle Lamb."

And then took a most affectionate leave of each member of the family and the friends present — had the servants called up, and desired that they should pass through his room one by one, which they did, shaking hands with, and bidding them good-bye. He then wished us to sing,

"Jesus, lover of my soul," and seemed indescribably happy—praying most fervently for the church, and requesting us to tell all his friends to meet him in heaven; and now that his work was all done, he folded his hands across his breast, repeating several times with great emphasis, Come, Lord Jesus, come! Oh! never did the writer so fully realize the words of the poet, "The chamber where the good man meets his fate, is privileged beyond the common walks of virtuous life, quite on the verge of heaven." It was indeed a Bethel, in which the Shekinah of God's presence was gloriously manifested, and the notes of praise were heard in that chamber of death. An hour or two more, and the last battle of eternity was fought, the victory won, and the triumphant spirit entered upon its eternal rest. "Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ."

The Southern Churchman contains a letter from Gen. Fisk, of the Freedmen's Bureau, to Bishop Quintard, of Tennessee, proposing to transfer the Memphis Colored Orphan asylum to the care of the Episcopal Church. The following short extract will exhibit the spirit of the letter:

"I have regarded it as the imperative duty of the Christian ladies in the late slave States to take the initiative in the work of educating and Christianizing the Freedmen, and that all the aid extended to the cause by benevolent organizations in the Northern States, should be supplementary to the well directed efforts of their brethren in the South. Who can be better prepared successfully to conduct the work than those whose lives have been spent in intimate association with the colored people, and with whom they are to dwell in future?"

(From the French of Napoleon Roussel.)

THE CATHOLIC AUTOMATON.

A rich mechanician retired from business, and took a country house. The Cure of the place, whose church stood hard by the garden of the new parishioner, came to call upon him, and, after the accustomed introductory speeches, the conversation took the following turn:—

"I hope," said the Cure, "to have in you, not only a good neighbour, but a good parishioner."

"I, for my part, do not share that hope."

"How! will you not come to mass?"

"For what purpose; since you celebrate it in Latin, and I do not understand a word in that language?"

"Never mind that, it suffices to hear it."

"Oh, if to hear it be all, the thing is soon done."

"Of course. But you will also do well to come to vespers."

"I shall not understand a word of them."

"Still you will be present."

"So be it. Thus, by listening to mass and assisting on vespers on Sundays, I shall become a good parishioner?"

"Oh, but during the week you will also have duties to fulfil."

"What are they?"

"Why, for example, you must not eat meat on Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays."

"I do not see what good that will do my soul or my body—it will make me neither fatter nor holier."

"Never mind that, the church enjoins it."

"I hope then, that three days in the week will satisfy you, and that you will leave me the other four."

"Without doubt; except indeed the forty days in Lent, the Ember Week, and the vigils, at which seasons abstinence and fasting are incumbent."

"But what connexion is there between these fasts and holiness of heart and life?"

"I have already told you, that the church enjoins them."

"I own that I fear often to fail in my obedience to the church."

"In that case the church will not deal hardly with you, she will cancel your fault at the cost of a certain number Paternosters and Ave Marias."

"But surely, to thus to repeat the same words twenty or thirty times, is a very sure way to say them without attending to them; it is to degrade ourselves below a parrot, which at least thinks about the sound it utters, even if it does not understand it."

"You constantly revert to your fixed ideas of thinking, feeling, and understanding. The main point is the doing, executing, accomplishing. Whether you think about them or not, your Ave Marias are no less actually repeated."

"Good! good!"

"And besides," said the Cure, looking down demurely, "there is in every parish a pious man, whose prayers may be substituted for yours; and masses...."

"What! Latin words, rapidly chanted by an inattentive priest; can these have a certain efficacy in the matter of my salvation?"

"Certainly they can. The rapidity has nothing to do with it, nor has the inattention; the one thing necessary is, that the priest's primary intention should be to do what the church does; and provided that he do not look off the book, or omit one word of the service, he may get on as fast as he likes. The work accomplishes itself alone. In fact, our grand principle is just this: the value of an action depends upon its material accomplishment, and not upon the moral dignity of the person who accomplishes it; or, as our theological treatises express it, 'Ex opere operato, et non ex opere operantis,' which means that the value of a sacrament depends upon the action done, and not upon him who does it. Here is a case in point, quoted by one of our doctors: a criminal priest, being pursued by order of his bishop, took refuge in a baker's shop, and there, by way of revenge, he consecrated all the dough that it contained. Do you know what happened in consequence?"

"No."

"All that dough was transformed into the body of Jesus Christ."

"What! at a baker's?"

"Yes."

"By the hands of a priest who was a criminal?"

"Yes."

"In spite of the spirit of revenge which led him to think of such a consecration?"

"Yes, yes, yes—our theologians affirm it."

"And where are those theologians?"

"Those are the doctrines are taught in our seminaries."

"Here again, I have nothing to say in reply—and indeed, I begin now to understand the spirit of the church. For instance, this explains to me the virtue of baptismal water, of wax tapers, &c."

"Exactly so."

"Well, then, sir, I must tell you, that I have a cousin in England."

"What! in England? he is then a Protestant."

"Of course."

"You must convert him."

"That would not be very easy; and, indeed, I was just going to tell you, that I have heard him laugh at Catholicism a hundred times, and advance somewhat cogent arguments against its doctrines."

"In that case there is another method of conversion."

"What is that?"

"Look here, get this medal sewn inside his coat, without his knowledge, and be sure that sooner or later he will feel its good effects."

"In converting him?"

"Yes."

"Without his knowledge?"

"Certainly."

"But in order to change one's opinion, one must think!"

"I tell you, once more, that the medal operates of itself, and that the main point is, that it should operate, and not that your cousin should think."

"In this case I have no more to say. I own myself conquered."

"And your family, my dear neighbour, will, I hope, follow, your example."

"Oh, as for my family, they will be sure to do as I do."

"Thus, then, you are converted."

"We shall see. Good morning, sir." And without waiting for an answer, the mechanician withdrew. As for the Cure, who, during this conversation had been passing a rosary through the fingers of one hand, and with the other carelessly lifting, every now and then, a medal to his lips—he now withdrew, perfectly convinced that all this had acted ex opere operato.

After this conversation, days, weeks, months passed without the mechanician availing himself of his nearness to the church to go to mass or confession. Nevertheless the Cure had not lost all hope, for his neighbour had sent to ask him for a medal, and in the meanwhile was spending his time in fabricating a master-piece of mechanism, placed in a pavilion, at the end of his garden, built up against the church. This peace of mechanism was one of those men made of wood, iron, and leather, which, being set in motion by springs and counterpoises, move and speak like living beings. It was, in short, a first-rate automaton.

(To be concluded next week.)

How Stands the Glass.

When crossing the Banks of Newfoundland in a packet-ship, at a time when icebergs were abundant, the question was constantly addressed to the captain, "how stands the glass?" For it was by the dipping of the thermometer into the water, that the captain ascertained whether any of those dangerous ice-mousters were drawing near to us.

This is a fitting question for our churches just now—how stands the glass? The true thermometer of a church to indicate its spiritual temperature is its prayer-meeting. We have passed through the general "week of prayer," and during that week, how stood the thermometer? It was bitter as Greenland out of doors, but was it warm and melting in the circle gathered round the mercy-seat? A cold prayer-meeting marks a cold church. It is at once the cause and the consequence of spiritual declension.

If the prayer-meeting is thin and chilly, if the few who are there have left their hearts behind them in their houses, their shops, or their counting-rooms, then let the church understand that they are in the perilous region of the icebergs. The pastor of such a church carries a heavy heart. Conversions are rare. Backsliders multiply. The sanctuary becomes an orthodox ice-house.

The Italian Generals.—The principal Italian generals are thus described: Gen. La Marmora is a tall, thin man, with a long face and a prodigious nose. He has a great passion for his profession, and is an inflexible disciplinarian. General Cialdini is a good-looking man, below the average height, with a bushy moustache and imperial. He has keen, sparkling eyes. This officer is very popular in Italy, and the soldiers have great confidence in him. Gen. Durando is a fine old man, with a grand military aspect, and is greatly esteemed throughout the continent. Gen. Della Rocca, the king's principal aid-camp and intimate friend, is about 50 years old. His hair and moustache are quite white, and his general appearance is that of a dignified, aristocratic veteran.

Luck and Labor.—Luck is ever waiting for something to turn up. Labor, with keen eyes and strong will, turns up something. Luck lies in bed and wishes the postman would bring him news of a legacy. Labor turns out at six o'clock, and with busy pen or ringing hammer, lays the foundation of a competence. Luck whines. Labor whistles. Luck relies on chance. Labor on character. Luck slips downward to indigence. Labor strides upward and to independence.

Bulwer, the novelist, in a letter to a gentleman in Boston says:—"I have closed my career as a writer of fiction. I am gloomy and unhappy. I have exhausted the powers of life, chasing pleasure where it is not to be found." What an admonitory confession.

When a piece of iron is thrown in a trough where chickens drink water they are not affected with chicken cholera. A gentleman who has tried it, says that his chickens are thriving while those of his neighbors are dying daily. As the chicken cholera is raging to some extent it be well to try it. Iron will not hurt fowls, and a trial of it might be beneficial.

Selecting Grass Adapted to the Soil.

It is often important to select those kinds of grass that are adapted to the soil rather than to be at the expense of adapting the soil, by the application of expensive fertilizers, to particular kinds of grass which do not readily accommodate themselves to the soil. It is fair to assume that every variety of the cultivated grasses was designed to subserve some good purpose in the agriculture of our country; and, therefore, it will be the business of the agriculturist to become familiar with their characteristics, in order to adapt different kinds to different soils.

Prof. Gould has said on this subject: "A portion of the meadow grasses will only grow on alkaline soils; and some of these demand an excess of moisture, while others only put forth their full luxuriance when there is an excess of lime. Some grasses are adapted to the sunlight, while others love the shade. Some are valuable for hay, but not for pasture; and so forth. Some kinds are forced into great luxuriance by one kind of manure, which may operate almost like a poison on other varieties.

"One species of grass abounds in that kind of nutriment which will enlarge and strengthen the muscles; another, ill-adapted to nourish the muscular tissues, will lay on fat rapidly; while another, which is deficient in both these respects, is rich in those elements which support respiration and furnish the fuel for the production of animal heat."

When a farmer is about to introduce a new kind of grass, his first inquiry should be, Will it be adapted to my soil? or, will it flourish luxuriantly with the system of cultivation that I have adopted?

Certain soils on high table-land or river-bottoms may produce timothy grass four or five feet high, which will make three tons or more of hay per acre, while the soil not half a mile from it may be poorly adapted to timothy, or any other grass, but red or white clover. On these points, a little science and good common sense will often be of great advantage and profit.

Where the soil is not naturally dry, it will be utterly impracticable to produce a heavy crop of any kind of clover, either red or white, until the ground is relieved of its surplus water. Instead, therefore, of attempting to grow a crop of clover, on such ground, seeding withered top (agrostis vulgaris) will give eminently better satisfaction, as this kind of grass is better adapted to low and moist land than clover or timothy. Where the soil is composed mostly of a deep vegetable mold of a dark color, if pasture is the object, there are no other kinds of grass that will usually succeed better than orchard grass and timothy. The quantity requisite for an acre, where the soil is in a good state of fertility, is about six quarts of orchard grass seed. The last-mentioned grass seed weighs, in this state, fourteen lbs. per bushel, and the first forty-five lbs.

Every farmer should determine, if possible, by experiments and observation, what kinds of grass will succeed best on his farm, and give such the preference, whether grass is grown for pasture or for hay.

Protecting Trees from Worms.—The bandage system, which we were the first to suggest some fifteen years ago, and often referred to it since, is the only effectual protection we have against the operations of worms in fruit trees. We have not in not a single instance have we ever had a worm in our orchard or trees where this system was properly followed. It is simply to bandage the bottom of the tree with any kind of muslin or cloth and tie it, letting the bandage be about six inches above ground and two inches below. It should be applied in February, or as soon as the ground is in a fit condition to go upon. These bandages should be removed at the end of October. As long as this is continued we defy the worm. The bug lays its eggs an inch or two above the ground early in the spring, and that is as soon as the warm days in March will admit of its coming forth from its winter quarters; the eggs are soon hatched by the sun, being laid on the sun-side of the trunk, and the young grub finds its way down to the soft bark beneath the soil, where it gradually works its way in. The bandage prevents both the laying of the eggs and the descent of the grub. Let doubters try it. One man will bandage two hundred trees in a day. We have no doubt it will also protect the peach tree in the same way.—Germantown Telegraph.

Antidote for Snake Bites.—This is the Smithsonian antidote for snake and insect poison:

10 grains of iodide of potassium.
30 grains of iodine.
1 ounce of water, the solvent,

To be kept in a phial with ground glass stopper, and applied externally to the wound.

House flies may be effectually destroyed without the use of poison. Take a half-teaspoonful of black pepper in powder, one teaspoonful of brown sugar and one of cream tartar; mix them well together, and place them in the room on a plate, where the flies are troublesome, and they will soon disappear.

Salmon, Shad, Bass and Alewives.

The diminished supply of most species of fresh, water fish, particularly the salmon, is so serious, that unless there are more stringent laws regulating this fishery, they will soon disappear from our rivers. This process of extinction has been going on for years on the Hudson, Delaware and Merrimack and their tributaries, that recourse to breeding the fish must be had, as in China for years; also in Europe, in the middle ages, when a monk in France invented the process of artificially fecundating the eggs of fish. In this country, recently, Mr. Kellogg, of Hartford, Ct., first attempted this in 1855, by placing the fish in a small pond in Simsbury, Ct. Since that time, Treat & Sam, of Eastport, Me., having obtained the control of three large ponds having a common outlet into the river St. Croix, began their breeding operations in the spring of 1857, when a number of striped bass, alewives and shad were placed there alive; the shad and alewives spawned about the first of June, and in about three weeks millions of the fry were seen; the gate was then closed, and the growth of the young watched for three months, after which a portion of them were allowed to proceed down the river to the sea. The salmon spawned in November, and the eggs were hatched in the spring. Mr. T. did not see the young till the summer of '59, when they were above a year old, and were from ten to twelve inches long. The young were all allowed to follow their natural instinct, and to proceed to the sea at the proper season. Mr. T. confidently expected the return of fish, such as survived the danger of the sea, to deposit their spawn. I have not as yet learned whether his anticipations have been realized.—L. M. I., in Boston Cultivator.

Facts Worth Remembering.

"Cosmo," in the Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post, gives the following facts worth remembering:

It is worth while, for all farmers, everywhere, to remember that the rough culture is better than three mortgages on his farm.

That an offensive war against weeds is five times less expensive than a defensive one.

That good fences always pay better than lawsuits with neighbors.

That hay is a great deal cheaper made in the summer, than purchased in the winter.

That a horse who lays his ears back, and looks lightning when any one approaches him, is vicious. Don't buy him.

That scrimping the feed of fatting hogs is a waste of grain.

That over-fed fowls won't lay eggs.

That educating children is money lent at a hundred per cent.

That one evening spent at home in study, is more profitable than ten lounging about country taverns.

That cows should always be milked regularly and clean.

That it is the duty of every man to take some good, reliable entertaining paper, and pay for it promptly—of course.

Facts Concerning Human Life.

The total number of human beings on the earth is computed at 3,000,000,000 (three thousand millions), and they speak 3,064 known tongues.

The average duration of human life is 33 1-3 years.

One fourth of those born die before they are 7 years old, and one-half before the age of 17.

Out of 100 persons only six reach the age of 60 years.

Out of 500 persons only one attains the age of 80 years.

Sixty persons die every minute.

Tall men live longer than short ones.

Married men are longer lived than the single.

Rich men live, on the average, 42 years, but the poor only 30 years.

There is a drunkard to every 71.

Rushing Tomatoes.—Those who love good tomatoes will take pains to cultivate them so as to insure them, as near as may be, in their full perfection. There is no other fruit that delights more in air and sunshine than the tomato. They should have, therefore, abundance of room, and the vines sustained from falling to the earth. I have found stout brush firmly set round the plants to answer better than any other method. The branches have room to extend themselves as they like, while the limbs of the bush keep them in their positions. By this method the fruit is more fully exposed to the general influences of the air and sunshine, whereby it attains a more delicious flavor, larger size, and comes quicker to maturity.—Rural New Yorker.

Making a River Beautiful.—The people of San Antonio are damming the San Antonio River to make it again what Albert Sidney Johnson said it was once—"The most beautiful stream I ever beheld! it is so clear and of arrowy swiftness."

When God makes our cross a little heavier he means that we shall come to him for added strength to carry it. We must draw closer to the Lord our strength, and live more simply upon him. He has fullness without limit, and of his fullness shall we receive.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 29.
WHOLE NUMBER 585.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1866.

$3 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE
OFFICE—124 CAMP STREET

OUR GERMAN CORRESPONDENCE.

GOTTINGEN, July 7th, 1866.

EDITOR ADVOCATE: In vain the muses invite us to their bowers, in vain Minerva and Apollo smile,—Mars is king, Mars rules, is omnipotent,—all influential and popular. Why longer vainly advocate that mind is superior to matter, the intellect superior to the physical frame? The animal of man's composition rules, the passions reign.

Germany, the land of law, of exquisite refinement, is now, throughout its borders, echoing to the thunder of the cannon. From the pulpits, I hear nothing but sermons on the war; on the war, lectnre the Professors of the University; in the home circle, at public places, on the cars, in the omnibns you hear nothing but comments on the war and recent battles. I wonder if a lover could speak to his mistress of aught else but war, the German, the European war, which now is so seriously raging.

Of the battle near Gotha, between the Hanoverians and Prussians, I believe I made mention in my last. After 5,000 young men of both sides were killed and wounded, the blind and obstinate King of the former was compelled unconditionally to surrender himself his army. For the time being has been expatriated. It is that he will return and reign where his father, the former Duke of Cumberland, uncle to the Queen of England, came from—Great Britain. With him, Germany can spare some thirty-five other monarchs.

A telegraphic dispatch has just now arrived here, stating that the Prussian army, under Gens. Manteufel and Falkenstein, the same which whipped the Hanoverians, not beyond Gotha achieved another victory on yesterday, over the army of the Bund, commanded by the ancient Prince Charles of Bavaria, who, in the battle of Waterloo, was the prime of his life. The Prussian army appears really invincible: it conquers where it goes.

In Boliemia, on the 3rd inst., near Konigsgratz, the bulk of this army, under the Prussian Crown Prince, Frederick William, and his brother, Frederick Charles, has had a general engagement with the Austrians under Field Marshal Benedek, resulting in a brilliant victory to the former. The first report, that sixty thousand men of both parties were killed, wounded, and taken prisoners, has thus far not been contradicted. King William I. was himself on the field, supervising the manoeuvers of his legions. Both parties fought with unprecedented valor. Prussia secured in this engagement twenty pieces of cannon, and drove the enemy ten miles beyond the battle-field. In Berlin this victory has created intense pleasure. All the bells from the church towers were for twelve hours unremittingly ringing, not a pistol or gun was left unfired during the night the city was brilliantly illuminated, all the theatres open, and admittance gratis, and the King and Bismark his first minister, whom two weeks ago the Prussians would have gladly hung, poisoned or shot, are now the most popular men in the world.

A little pamphlet a week ago published at Berlin, and supposed to have been written by the celebrated divine Hengstenburg, is now creating great excitement in literary circles. It advocates the idea of consolidating all Germany into one large empire. The thoughts are very pointedly expressed, nor has the writer worn gloves when framing the epithets applied to kings and others. He speaks in this wise: In 1848 you talked (meaning the people at large) and labored, expending vast amounts of money and blood to secure the unity, the consolidation of Germany. But the cunningly nourwished rivalries between the thirty-six different monarchs in Germany frustrated your plans. Now, a liberal king, Wilhelm I, whose heart has bled for many years upon seeing the dissensions and misfortunes of his Fatherland, is attempting to carry out your programme. But, strange to say, thus far, you oppose his policy, because he is a king. Many kings have been great rascals, but does that show that King William may, in this instance, not have noble aims? The matter stands simply thus: If in 1848 you were right, then you are now asses for not supporting the king; and if the king is now wrong, then you were asses in 1848 for advocating what was wrong. Awake Germans! Like mad dogs, drive your princes to Mexico, and from thence in to the Pacific Ocean, and be no longer the laughing stock to all foreign lands! The cause of Prussia is the cause of Germany! Es lebe mein Vaterland!"

This, and more than this, have the recent victories brought about a reaction in favor of the Prussian Government. Might, you know, is always right, and he who is fortunate and successful never lacks friends.

But will the rest of Europe quietly look on, and allow Prussia, allied to Italy, to banish Austria from Germany, and to establish a new empire in the heart of Europe? Russia sympatizes with Austria, but Russia will not act. England, wrapped in its self-sufficiency and egotism, has found upon the calculation that war is an uncertain speculation, being content to be let alone. But what will Napoleon do? It is believed that he has entered into a recent treaty with Prussia, receiving the provinces of Rhinish Prussia, West of the Rhine, as a reward for his neutrality. This is very probable.

But suddenly a new phase has been ushered into the difficulties. This morning's news tells the world that the Cabinet of Vienna had applied to Napoleon for intervention, agreeing at the same time to abandon Venetia, since its military reputation in Italy during the recent victory had been established. In that case Italy would cease to be an enemy to Austria, and Prussia might find itself ere long more than matched.

Yours,

J. B. A. AIKENS.

SURGERY IN CENTRAL AMERICA.—Dr. Charles Dorat, an English Surgeon, now residing at Santa Anna, State of Salvador, Central America, has witnessed a novel suture. He writes to a friend in England as follows: I will mention a curious case of native surgery I witnessed a short time ago. The patient had received a serious stab in the abdomen, from which protruded about half a yard of intestines and a portion of omentum, the former having a longitudinal slit about three inches long. On my arrival I found that an Indian medico had sewed up the wounded gut with the nippers of a large ant. The insect, which is said to be very savage, was taken by the body, and its head presented to the united lips of the wound, which it bit and held fast. The operator, then, by a pinch of the fingers, killed the ant, leaving his head fixed to the gut. Another and another ant thus applied, to the number of a dozen or fifteen, effected this singular suture, the gut was then replaced and no inflammation ensuing, the man recovered speedily. This curious practice is said to be usual in this part of Central America.

VIRTUE.—Virtue is not a mushroom that springeth up of itself in one night, when we are asleep or regard it not; but a delicate plant that groweth slowly and tenderly, needing much pains to cultivate it, much care to guard a spirit that will be conjured away with a charm, slain by a single blow, or dispatched by one stab. Who, then, will be so foolish as to leave the eradicating of vice, and the planting in of virtue into its place for a few years or weeks! Yet he who procrastinates his repentance and amendment, grossly does so; with his eyes open, he abridges the time allotted for the longest and most important work he has to perform; he is a fool.

RECRUITING AND DRILLING.—A recruit is a valuable accession to the army, because he can be made a soldier. But he is only a recruit, and by no means an available soldier, until drilled. Recruiting without drilling, therefore, is a very useless thing. So it is in regard to the Christian army. Our brethren have been recruiting. We hope that they are now diligently engaged in drilling their recruits; teaching them personal duty, social duty, as soldiers of the Captain of our Salvation.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate

"The Treasure in Earthen Vessels."

The grand reason here assigned for the treasure being in earthly vessels is, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us. The significant fact that the treasure is in earthly vessels is suggestive of some useful reflection. The minister of the Gospel has a heavenly treasure, and the word of the Lord endures for ever; but the minister has it in an earthly vessel. Though called of God, though ambassadors for Christ, they are men of like passions with other men.—They are frail men, liable to temptation, perhaps the objects of greater satanic malignity and more subtle and seductive temptations, than ordinary combatants in the Church Militant. Special messengers from Satan were permitted to buffet Paul—may it not be so with other ministers?

The love of ease is as natural to ministers as to other men. The temptation to seek the quiet, the comfort, and the independence of a home, often powerfully and plausibly addresses itself to the mind of the minister. To those of them especially who have wives and little ones, and yet without home or "certain dwelling-place," to be wanderers on the earth is a condition of life painful to contemplate and often more painful to experience.

Dreams of ambition and aspirations for renown are as likely to assault ministers as other men. They will be tempted to share the glory with their Lord, and desire some of the excellency of the power which belongs to God alone.

Ministers are tempted to grow weary with unceasing toils and perpetual wanderings, and ungird their harness and lay their armor by, and turn to some other vocation more congenial with flesh and blood.

Such are some of the peculiar temptations which those who have the treasure in earthen vessels may anticipate. But, while ministers may hope successfully to resist these temptations, there are painful experiences incident to the condition of earthen vessels which they may not hope to escape.

Exhaustion and infirmity must come upon them as upon other men. Losses and bereavements must come into their houses and hearts as they come to others, for though they have a heavenly treasure, they have it in an earthly vessel. These afflictions in the history of the minister are specially intended to enrich their experience, "that they may be able to comfort them that are in any trouble by the comfort wherewith they are comforted of God."

From the fact that the ambassador for Christ has this treasure in an earthly vessel, he should learn the need of great prayerfulness and carefulness. Judas by transgression fell. "Demas loved this present world." Solomon, the wisest preacher on whose lips ever flamed the wisdom of heaven, proved recreant to his holy trust. In the long history of the Church not a few examples occur of those who have forgotten that they had the heavenly treasure in an earthly vessel, and have failed of that holy diligence which alone could secure the safety and honor of the treasure. As the tables on which the finger of God inscribed the immaculate transcript of his holiness were brittle tables of stone, it was needful that Moses should handle them with exceeding care; but Moses, in a moment of passionate forgetfulness, hurled them to the ground, and they were broken. So the tables on which God has written the call to this holy work are fleshly tables. Let the ministers of Christ be careful how they keep their vessels in sanctification and honor, and how they handle the word of God, lest they become castaways.

The fact that the minister has this treasure in an earthly vessel should admonish him to be diligent, for the vessels are frail and under the most favorable conditions of health and carefulness, must soon fail and perish. Each should ask himself the question, how many more years may my vessel last?—how many more years may I be honored to retain my commission, and cry, "Behold the Lamb?" Let each inquire, shall I, in ten, five, or one short year, be relieved of my position to bind and loose, remit and retain, and be called to the audit of life's dread account. If such are the solemn possibilities incident to the condition of an earthly vessel, how diligent should be the laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. Such a man should be earnest; he can never consistently be a trifler.—When the world's seductive voice calls to rest and ease, let the messenger of God, the minister of the Church, be prompt to reply, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Master's business?" The man truly called of God has no time to be seeking the fruitions of earthly ambition, no time for sinful pleasure, no time to gather gold, while the voice of God is for ever sounding in his ear, "Go preach my Gospel!"

The ministers of Christ have the heavenly treasure in earthly vessels—and therefore their value and importance to the Church and to the world, arises not from themselves but from the heavenly treasure committed to their care. A serious recollection of this fact will be a powerful antidote against all temptations to official and spiritual pride. Whatever may be the power and efficiency of their ministry—whatever the honorable acceptation God may give them,—they must ever remember that they are but earthen vessels, and that the excellence of the power is of God and not of them.

The minister of the Gospel is but an earthen vessel, yet he has committed to him God's richest gift to man. What an honor is this! An honor angels are not permitted to enjoy. Once were the angels honored to proclaim the "glad tidings," and then only to a few poor shepherds who watched their flocks by night; but so delighted were they, that they shouted "Glory to God in the highest!" To this "high calling"—this work honorable and glorious, ministers are called, called from all the common-place materialities of life, and separated to the Gospel of God. No other man in any of the walks of life is called to so exalted and responsible a trust. Does the philosopher call the flaming lightning from the skies? You handle the more powerful and illuminating word of God, whose entrance "giveth light to the understanding."—Does the harnessed warrior flash on bannered fields his shining blade, and shout to glorious war? You are called to wield the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, quick and powerful, piercing even to the dividing asunder of the soul and spirit." Does the adventurous navigator discover and open to the oppressed and overcrowded millions a new continent, as the gift of his glorious enterprize and toil? You tell of life and immortality, and point to fairer worlds on high. Ye are the honored almoners of God's bounty, to distribute the blest and broken "bread of life." It is your blessed function to bear to sin sick souls the sovereign balm for every wound—the cordial for every fear. Let not the minister weary in well doing, or complain at his lot, but rather give all diligence, and feel that an honor unutterable has been conferred on a worm of the dust to utter God's awful and glorious name.

W.

There are only two genuine remedies for sorrow—prayer and work. Trust in heaven and keep doing is the best recipe for every human care. There are no wounds of the spirit which it will not heal.

Samuel Smith, of Bristol, died on Thursday of last week, aged eighty-eight, and his wife, aged eight-six, died the day after. The couple had been married for sixty-seven years, and, during the whole time, had been separated only three days. The funeral was observed on Sunday, and they were both buried in the same grave.

CONTROVERSY.—Wesley, very near the close of his life, made this public declaration: "In the younger part of my life I was fond of controversies, but I have now lived long enough in the world to know better."

We may owe it to our enemies to forgive; we owe it to ourselves not to forget.

SAVING MINISTERS.

It has been lately proposed in the papers, as a means of preserving clergymen for a longer use, to a greater age, while they are young they should not be expected to do so much as is required of them; that for the first five years of their ministry only one sermon on the Sabbath should be given. Not one minister in a million is ever disabled by hard study, or dies prematurely from that cause. A far better plan would be to require them to preach every day and sabbath too, for the first years of their ministry; and, "as ye go, preach;" take circuits and preach in destitute places, five, or ten, or fifteen miles apart; a sermon a day on an average the year round; and two or three on Sabbath, the oftener the easier. The advantages are, that they would become acquainted with the country, would be brought into personal contact with a great variety of persons, would see human nature in its multitudinous phases, and thus, in after-life, would be able to read a book more instructive to them than any other except the Bible; and reading it well, would put in their hands a key which would unlock the human heart, and give them so complete an access to it, that the people would say, "Never man spake like this man;" "He told me all that I did." Patrick Henry owed his greatest power to what he learned of nature by talking to all sorts of people in his little country store. Another advantage is, that this daily active life, breathing pure air almost all of daylight, would enable them to work off that diseased bodily condition which is generated in theological seminaries, and would so knit and compact the constitution, so renovate it, not only by exercise, but by the change of food and association, as to lay the foundation for many years healthfulness in the future. It is impossible for an intelligent man to doubt for an instant that four or five years spent in riding every day on horseback, in the open air, with the accompanying and exhilarating mental exercise required in preaching, would be as certain to build up the constitution as spending from morning till night in confined rooms, and eating heartily all the time, without any systematic exercise, would pull it down and destroy it. There is nothing perplexing or mystic, or mind-racking in ordinary ministerial duty; it is more of calm contemplation, like that of the natural philosopher, the longest-lived of all other classes, as statistics say. They study the works of God; the clergy study his Word, which is a surer "word of prophecy" and a plainer. The destroyers of our clergy are not hard study; not the difficulties connected with their calling, but reckless and unnecessary exposures, wrong habits of eating, unwise neglect of wholesome bodily exercise, bad hours of study, and criminal inattention to the securement of those bodily regulations which are indispensable to health the world over. Preaching often does not kill. Look at the Whitefields and the Wesleys, and multitudes of others like them. Confinement does not even kill; Baxter, and Bunyan, many more, lived in jails for years together, and that, too without opportunities for exercise for their living was plain, and that not over-abundant, nor tempting either—Hall's Journal of Health.

A Peculiar Feature of the Gospel.

The perfect serenity with which the Gospels are written is to me the most striking proof of their inspiration. Remember the authors were deeply and personally implicated in the matters which they record. Remember that they had sacrificed everthing to the great cause which they maintain. Remember that Peter (from whom is supposed to have emanated Mark's Gospel,) and John were men of ardent feelings and of deepest affections. Remember that all the Christians of that day, but especially those who were taken to be ringleaders in the sect of the Nazarenes, were the subjects of every species of insult, slight, and persecution, which the combined malice of earth and hell could fling upon them. And then remember what the Gospels are; and that they are the plainest of the plain narratives, plain even to homeliness, untinted with a single hue of passion; that the writers do not appear in the character of advocates, whose aim is to maintain a cause, and to work up an interest in the hearer by large comments, and fervid declamation on facts; but that they confine themselves to the functions of mere witnesses, stating, in a passionless, emotionless way, without note or comment, what took place, extenuating nothing in their own party, and setting down naught in malice against their antagonists, mentioning their own faithlessness, and the denial of Peter, equally with the good traits of Nicodemus, Joseph of Arimathea, Gamaliel; and then it becomes apparent that, in order to enable them to write thus, the minds of the writers must have been lifted up above the storm and clouds of passion and prejudice, into that pure and serene light which enables us to descry all objects in their right and undistorted proportions—the light of Truth, or in other and better words, the light of God.—Goulburn's Introduction.

A Faithful Eldership.

We may assume as a fact that the ministry of our Church are not only duly acquainted with the proper demands of their calling, but that these demands are fully met and answered. The ability of one man, however, is not adequate to the supply of all the wants of a large congregation. He may speak into them the counsel of God, as the Spirit shall give him utterance. He may be wonderfully appreciative of the spiritual necessities of his people, and able to divide them their portion in due season, giving to the weak the sincere milk of the word, and to the strong that meat which may nourish their vigor and increase their power for usefulness in the Church. But there are many things which he cannot do alone, and for the accomplishment of which he must rely upon those who have been given to him as fellow-helpers in the Gospel. We are more convinced, with every year of our experience, that quite as much depends upon a faithful eldership as upon an able, zealous, and devoted pastor. Where these are combined in the same church, there may always be found a high degree of prosperity in its temporal and spiritual affairs. Where either is wanting, there need be no marvel if piety declines and the support of the Gospel diminishes, until leanness saps the strength of both pastor and people, and the church, which ought to be instinct with life and activity, is added to the long catalogue of those which have a name that they live and are dead.—N. C. Presbyterian.

The Libraries of the Old World.

Paris stands foremost of all the earth in respect to grandness of her libraries, thirty-two of which she possesses. Of these the Imperiale is the noblest institution of the kind ever founded, comprising 1,400,000 printed volumes 125,000 volumes of MSS. and 300,000 maps and charts—total, 1,825,000 volumes—nearly two millions! In that city the Arsenal Library contains 200,000 volumes; the St. Genevieve 250,000 volumes; the Nazarine, 200,000 volumes, and several others 100,000 or less. In Rome the Casantense (in the convent of Minerva) contains 120,000 volumes. The Imperial Library of Vienna possesses 300,000 volumes of priuted matter, and 16,000 MSS. The icy civilization of St. Petersburg warms into existence the Imperial Library with 42,000 volumes, the Academy of Sciences, 100,000, and the Hermitage 120,000. The Royal Library of aristocratic and classic Hague numbers 100,000 volumes of choice literature. The banking millionaires of Berlin take pride in their Royal Library, founded in the middle of the seventeenth century, and containing 600,000 volumes. Brussel's Public Library has 100,000 volumes; and also a Royal Library, established in 1837, containing nearly 100,000 volumes. The Public Library of Berne numbers 35,000 volumes; and Copenhagen boasts of 120,000 volumes in her University Library, while the Royal, occupying exclusively a large and elegant structure, claims 400,000 volumes, besides 15,000 MSS. In Trinity College University Library, at Dublin, there are 150,000 volumes; while the University Library of Edinburg, Scotland, numbers 100,000. The Royal Library of fashionable Marseilles contains 45,000; Basle, Switzerland, 50,000 volumes in her Public Library; and the National in Pracardo Commercio, of Lisbon, has 150,000. Old and absolute Spain, in the Madrid, where Gil Blas flourished in the olden time, the National Library, founded by Philip V. contains 130,000 volumes, while that of San Isidro, of the same city, has 66,000. And lastly, the British Museum of London contains 460,000 volumes of choice and rare collection, embracing history, biography, the arts and sciences.

Garibaldi at Home.

I was suprised to see a hearty, jovial man, with a great blonde beard. But for the eyeglass he used, and the stick he carried, there were no traces visible of the waves of time which have dashed against him, or of the cruel bullet which struck him at Aspromonte. He gave me his hand, and a hearty, sailor like grip into the bargain; and if it be snobbish to have wished to kiss that horny paw, I am glad to have been, for once in my life, at all events a snob most egregious. I suppose he wore the renowned red shirt; but this garment was not visible. His upper man was all swathed in one of those ample striped blankets, through a hole in which the head is passed, and which are called in some parts of South America gregos, and in Mexico serapes. As a head dress he wore a velvet cap of the porkpie form, and very coquettishly worked with gold embroidery. And if there be no peril of falling into the pathos by alluding to a hero's boots—I think there is no such peril for are not the boots of Napoleon an inseparable part of his dress?—I may mention that Garibaldi's extremities were shod in "double soled, square-toed lace-ups," the possession of a pair of which would have instilled great joy into the heart of a British peasant, but which would scarcely have excited the admiration of of Silver-stick in Waiting.—Letter from Italy.

The Poor in England.

In a recent number of Chamber's Journal we find an article giving a description of the condition of the dwellings of the poor in England, and their miserable mode of life. It is based on facts contained in a new book published in London under the sanction of the Society of Arts, entitled The House of the Working Classes.

The same fearful tenement houses which exist in New-York may be found in London, crowded even more excessively. "The virtues of chastity and purity are insisted upon from the pulpit on the seventh day in vain, to hearers who are doomed to lie three, nay, even six together in one bed, no matter what their sex or age, night after night."

"In these crowded cottages," it is further remarked, "it of course often happens that not only the sick and sound, but even the living and the dead, are lodged in the same room. The corpse lies with the sleepers until the burial day arrives, generally under the bed, to give more room, but sometimes actually upon it! Think what this must be in the heats of summer, when the malady has been loathsome and putrefaction is rapid, let alone the extinction of all reverence for the presence of Death! It is, in fact, the merest mockery to talk of Reverence under conditions where 'common decency between the sexes can not be said to be destroyed only because it never has (nor could have) existed.' Without entering into this part of the subject further, we may observe that the most unfavorable phase of the early development of the passions caused by overcrowding is 'a tendency to very early marriages, entered into with an utter absence of all provision for domestic comfort, and an entire recklessness about the future.' It is, indeed, almost a subject for congratulation that while not one fifth of the children of the rich die before the fifth year, more than one half of the children of the ill-housed poor are taken away from the miseries to come; if they attain maturity, their stunted and ill-developed forms have an average duration of life shortened by from twenty to forty years below proper period."

If we accuse the poor of producing their own mortality by these filthy and vicious habits, we should remember that these very habits are engendered by their miserable dwellings. The fault is not so much that of the tenant as that of the landlord and the builder of the tenement house.

"The gin shop is a haven of refuge from pestilence and discomfort. The unmentionable horrors of a poor man's house, always ill provided—often totally destitute of those conveniences without which education itself is vain to lift Humanity above the Swine, are not to be imagined by us, who can send our servant for the plumber at any moment. 'Nothing short of a tornado could ventilate' such dwellings—and their name is Legion; 'while in still weather, the atmosphere in them is unchanged and unchangeable.' Then, again, with respect to personal cleanliness, the complete washing of the body in a workingman's cottage is a problem of practical difficulty. There is no space, no privacy, and very seldom a proper supply of water. In thousands of instances, neither man nor wife is completely washed for months together. In such confined dwellings the washing of the clothes even—not a pleasant institution among ourselves, remember—is a domestic curse among the poor, costs twice as much as is necessary in labor, soap, and fuel, and drives Paterfamilias in despair to his Club—the Tap Room."

In order to improve public morals, we must begin with a purification of the smaller streams of individual character.

Many a sweet-fashioned mouth has been disfigured and made hideous by the fiery tongue within it.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shepard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, - - - AUGUST 4, 1866.

WANTED,

A FIRST-CLASS TEACHER OF MUSIC—one capable of taking charge of the Musical Department in a Female College. The best of reference will be required. For further information apply to me personally, or by writing, at this office, 112 Camp street; or to Rev R K Hargrove, Summerfield, Ala.

The Principalship of the Art Department of the Centenary Female College at same place is yet to be filled. Address same parties.

J. C. KEENER.

New Orleans, August 4th, 1866.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27. —REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS.—By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, J. B. WALKER, L. PARKER, } Executive Com. Joint Board of Publication.

The Mails—Notice.

We are glad to notice the extension of the mail service, after the first of July. Now that Post-offices and duly qualified Post masters may be found in many parts of the States of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, we expect a rapid and considerable increase in our subscription list.

If any regular traveling preacher in either of our patronizing conferences will forward his name and the route and office which lead to him, we will send him the paper upon his own terms.

Episcopal Visitations.

BISHOP PAINE will (D.V.) visit the following places, and preach, and ordain any preachers who have been elected to orders that may be present at the times specified, viz:

Carr's Church, Smith county, Miss, first Sabbath in September.

Jackson, Miss., Wednesday night, September 5th.

Crystal Springs, Thursday, September 6th, (in the day or at night, as may be thought best by those interested there.)

Brookhaven, second Saturday and Sunday in September.

Canton, Thursday night, September 13th.

Third Saturday and Sunday in September, at Wesley Chapel, in Holmes county, Miss., near Durant, on Miss. Cent. R.R.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE,—North Alabama. — This Institution which has been for years largely patronized by our people in Alabama and Louisiana, is now presided over by Rev. J. G. Wilson, A.M. We recommend it most heartily, and call the attention of our readers to the advertisement in this issue.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.—We call special attention to the advertisement of this well known and most excellent Methodist Institution, under the direction of Rev. Charles B. Stuart and his accomplished lady.

☞ Several original article are laid over till next week for want of space in this number—some obitnary notices among the number.

THE SAVIOUR IN THE HOUSE.

PART II.

Martha was no less than Mary a firm believer in Jesus as a Saviour and Friend. Her danger was in the direction of taking a one-sided view of Him who is our pattern, and who is therefore to be received in all his offices, in the full harmony of his perfect character. Her faith tended to the practical uses of godliness, profitable for the life that now is. But she was attempting that which has shipwrecked thousands. Lest her spiritual life should subside into a state merely tributary to the life that now is, the Saviour declares: That no offices of love or hospitality, however reasonable in themselves, no common business of this life, must be mentioned with those "good things" which the Holy Spirit has revealed unto us, and which he was himself then dispensing—"the better part." That where it is absolutely requisite to choose between the two, or to neglect the one because some other thing must suffer, in the discharge of duty, and because we are not adequate to both, then there is but the "one thing," and that only is and ever will be "the better part." It must be chosen at every sacrifice.

And the place which Mary gave to this "one thing" constituted the heart-wisdom of her choice. This is the great point, the importance she gave to her portion in Christ.—It was not only before etiquette, but before all things. Was there no time to sit, alas! not even at the Saviour's feet! Then she took the time. O weighty disturbance that prevents my "hearing his words,"—a guest, a garment, a book, a brief, a plough, these demand attention and may not be put off!

The great troubles of life are social, and the great pleasures, and so too the house is the very place to show our great devotion to Christ. At the table, in the parlor, and in the nursery, is the "candlestick" upon which the "candle" is to be placed, "that it may give light to all in the house." Little eyes drink in this light. Here the voice of the Saviour is heard, as Adam used to hear the voice of God in the Garden of Eden, morning and evening; and one, as Mary, has always time to hear the Saviour. The very countenances of parents teach their children; and cheerful looks, and sweet words, and true contentment at home, train the tender ones on Christ, as Eve laced the grasping tendrils on the bowers of Eden. For this a bustling religion has no heart; by anxious looks and frequent complaints, it raises a dissatisfied brood—long before the child can determine the exact meaning of care, it sees it sitting on the brow of father and mother, and its own face gathers in little furrows the undefined evil that is evidently abroad.

A constant sense of the presence of the Saviour is "better" than all this, and if our children can but see that we sit at his feet, all attentive to his word, they too will love the Divine Teacher. But if we leave the things of Christ to take their chances with the things of this life, as if the one was equal to the other, we shall have outwitted our own souls, and driven the Son of Peace from the house.

One who is now a living minister of the Gospel, was brought to repentance by the memory of his mother. Long after her death he recalled the blessed vision of a dear mother reading the Scriptures, as was her custom, after all had retired for the night; setting out the stand, putting on her glasses, and in the silence of that hour poring over the Word—the only believer in the family.

"Be careful for nothing; but in every thing, by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." Sweet counsel—oh that I could follow it! The only way possible for you is, draw so nigh the Saviour as to feel his care for you. It is only here, at his feet, that the spirit of contentment flourishes. The contented soul rejoices in the Word more than in "brooks of honey." He eats his food with gladness; he rejoices in the outgoings of the morning and the evening. All his springs are in Christ; the wavings of the forest, the smell of the field, the hymns of the birds among the branches, all the harmony and all the freshness of nature, fill his thought and being with unutterable gratitude to God. Want and care, and fear, are far, because God and Christ are near. The future is bright, for the new and holy City of God moves to meet him at his coming. He has no fear, for the mountain is full of chariots and horsemen of fire. He sees through the telescope the Plains of the Redeemed and the Gates of Praise:—All the universe pays tribute to him, for he receives its thousand utterances as so many praises to the Saviour who loved us, and who "redeemed us by his own blood."

This is the unfading good, the "better part which shall not be taken away,"—this rapture which is only felt at the feet of Jesus.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

The friends of Centenary enjoyed the pleasure of meeting once again in its classic halls, at the annual exhibition of the Preparatory Department, and of the two College Societies. During the war the town of Jackson was on the dividing territory between the two armies, and was held repeatedly by both. Subject to raids at any time, the place became too warm for the uses of a school. At one time the battle raged immediately about the College buildings, and it is of the good providence of God alone that they were not destroyed. Many of its students were in the army, indeed all who were capable of bearing arms. Its halls were therefore deserted, or only occupied as a military hospital. Directly upon the return of peace, it was opened under the superintendency of its old faculty. Since that time classes have been regularly taught by Professors Wiley, Potter and Miller. About sixty students have been in attendance, and at the usual time the people gathered, as a matter of course, to witness Commencement.

We always wondered at the audience which a Jackson Commencement, as by magic, evokes from the surrounding country; but never more so than on last Thursday.—Scarcely the least advertisement was made of the occasion, and we expected "a beggarly account of empty boxes." But to our surprise, the gathering, for brilliancy and numbers, was worthy of the best days of the College. It was difficult, in the presence of that fair, quiet, well-dressed company, to realize that there had been a war, or that nearly every individual there present had taken part in that great drama—had but just passed out from its scenes of rage and hope, of pain and grief, of daring and conflict. It was like standing on the beach amid the glassy lines and gentle ripplings of sea waves, as they kiss the shore, and there trying to realize the storm which has passed off in darkness, wrath and strength.

Yet the noble forms which we missed in that assembly told the great story sadly, truly enough.—Thank God, amid the worst disasters of time, youth revives, and faith is born anew, and hope anchors "within the vail." As yet, death has not quenched life, nor ever will.

While sitting on the platform, half listening to the speakers, we could but call up those venerable men whose very presence gave grace and dignity to these annual occasions. It was easy to see again the form of John Lane, great in the simplicity, the purity, and goodness of his nature; Dr. Winans, our Boanerges; the gifted Campbell, son of fire and love; the all-perfect Methodist preacher, Dr. Drake; and, alas, how many others who warmed into life, and sustained and surrounded with their strong arms this Centenary College! A few were present who still connect us with that glorious panel: the Hon. Edward McGehee and the Rev. B. Pipkin, both of them far advanced toward the mortal and immortal limit, yet active in soul, and not inactive in body. We could but regret that so few of the Preachers of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences were present. They should be there annually in force. Our institutions of learning need our support more than ever; and must have it, if we would succeed in building up the cause of God.

The exercises of a Preparatory Department have the happy effect of reversing life's wheel for five minutes, and throwing us back into a school-room about fifteen hundred miles and some thirty-five years distant. What so refreshing as the question: "What's banished from Rome?" or, "Can a Roman Senate long debate?" or that other aboriginal touch, "The rank thistle nodded in the wind,"—"the Indian lover wooed his dusky maid," "all this is past away, across the ocean came a pilgrim bark,"—which last reminded us that we saw a man, during the war, suddenly start up and wish that that pilgrim bark had sunk in the middle of the Atlantic ocean. We were surprised at him.

To listen to the boys, and live over again those eventful "exhibitions," is a very good annual habit, and quite compensates for attending an "examination." To spend an entire year without a "Phœnix!"—just think of it; who can envy that man? This bird belongs to our civilization as the Stork does to that of China, or the Ibis to the Egyptian. All speeches at literary clubs, at exhibitions, and at the hustings, go more or less upon this bird; and we suppose that its figure is stamped with more or less distinctness upon the mind of every Legislator in E Pluribus Unum.

The speeches were well committed and well spoken. "Cataline" was exceedingly well rendered, and the "Colloquy" a good thing, a very good thing—only the character of a pick-pocket or a drunkard should never be introduced upon the school stage; no youth should ever be associated in our thoughts with such a character, even in sport, for five minutes. Thus much for the future.

The young gentlemen of the Franklin Institute and the Union Literary Society acquitted themselves with much credit. They were specially happy in an unaffected manner and entirely free from rant. The subjects were well chosen and treated sensibly. There was no straining. Most of the speakers had been through the war, had seen life in its sober and sobering realities, and now were full young enough to enter upon the training of college life. We give the speakers and their themes:

PONOU AMOIBA SOPHIA—W. E. Atkinson, Jackson, La.

PRO PATRIA ET VIRTUTE—L. N. Dixon, U.L.S., Amite Co., Miss.

ETERNITY—F. D. Brane, F.I., Jackson, La.

EVILS OF WAR—C. N. Meryman, U.L.S., West Feliciana, La.

OUR COUNTRY: ITS PAST AND PRESENT STATE—C. W. Davis, F.I., Wilkinson Co., Miss.

AN APPEAL FOR CENTENARY COLLEGE—S. S. Norwood, U. L. S., West Feliciana, La.

INTEMPERANCE: THE DEMON OF DESOLATION—W. Y. Dixon, F. I., Jackson, La.

A GLANCE AT THE FUTURE —H. C. Rogers, U.L.S., Amite Co., Miss.

CHRISTIANITY THE GEM OF CREATION —G. P. Miller, F.I., Jackson, La.

STATE OF LOUISIANA—J. W. Shelmire, U.L.S., Jackson, La.

The College begins its next session on the first Monday in October, with a Freshman Class of eleven students. The institution is out of debt. Two-thirds of its Endowment Fund are secure. The indebtedness of the patrons of the College for tuition is in the way of collection, and we doubt not will be regarded by them as a debt of more than ordinary obligation. The Professors have shown great devotion to the institution, and must be paid.

The Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D., was introduced to the audience at the close of the exercises, as President of the College. In a pertinent and felicitous speech he assumed the responsibilities of the office, and called upon the citizens of the town, the friends of the College, and the students themselves to sustain him in the discharge of his duties. He announced that the following graduates had been elected to the degree of Master of Arts: E. S. Drake, E. R. Jones, C. Chamberlain, and F. W. Schwing

We felt, as the audience rose to depart, that Centenary had renewed its youth, and, with the blessing of our Heavenly Father, would again send forth its tides, in flood and power, for the enlightenment and salvation of the people.

HEALTH AND TEMPERATURE. — We have now entered the month of August, and our city was never in a more healthy condition. The bills of mortality are low for the large population and the season of the year. We can safely say that not a case of cholera or yellow fever has yet occurred. No epidemic of the latter need be apprehended now, as no sporadic cases have yet appeared. New Orleans is at this time healthier than any other large city in the United States. The heat has not been remarkable. The hottest day of the summer up to August 1st, was the last day of July, when the most reliable thermometers stood at 92 degrees at 2 o'clock P. M. During our hottest weather the thermometer has ranged from 80 to 90 degrees.

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

The event of the age has transpired. Hume's test of miracles would explode this great fact of a connection between Europe and America, so perfect, swift and subtle, that a whisper in the court of St. James may be heard by the President at Washington as readily as a message can be sent from the White House to the Capitol. Whose experience in the days of Hume would warrant him in believing a witness who should affirm it to be possible for a messenger to out-run the tide-wave, or leave the sun lagging behind! But so it is. The great truth is the great fiction to the ignorant sons of human philosophy. It is quite instructive to see with what scorn positive science displays this accomplished ocean-telegraph "in answer to the sceptical cui bono of those who are so apt to decry the aspirations of genius and the triumphs of intellect." In the hearts and thoughts of many how commonplace are those moral and religious systems of truth which stand still while the scientific and intellectual world are moving forward with such tremendous strides! It may not quiet such sceptics to aid them to the yet stranger fact, that no advancement ever was made by the human mind, in the discovery of moral truth. That nothing was discovered from the days of Moses until Christ, and then nothing from Christ until now—not a word, not a law, not a line. Nothing from Plato, nothing from Seneca, nothing from Greek or Roman, nothing from Egyptian or Syrian, from the myth-period or the historic-period, ancient or modern — nothing from papyrus, tablet, or obelisk; nothing in hyroglyphic, or in cuniform character, of any positive moral precept, apart from the Tables of Horeb, by the hand of Moses, or the Sermon on the Mount by the mouth of Christ. No other evidence is required to show that moral and religious truth lies entirely outside of the region of human discovery. That the man who looks for improvement and progress in religious truth, looks for it in the Divine mind, of which bible-truth is but a transcript.

How mercifully God withholds these great inventions and discoveries of science, which are a sort of half-inspiration, and from His great treasury deals them out to the successive generations of men, so that they constitute a wealth of children which may not be wasted by their parents. He thus protects posterity from the profligacy which would spend all it has in its own right, and then mortgage to the amount of thousands of millions, all the inheritance of children so far as that can be anticipated. The discovery of California, of Petroleum, of Chloroform, and the Telegraph, are the merciful gifts reserved by Heaven for this generation.

There is a great lesson of perseverance to be read and learned in the Atlantic Telegraph. We did Mr. Cyrus Field the injustice to class him among the great stock originators and manipulaters of Wall street. But there was a soul and purpose in the man which is worthy of imitation. We were rather doubtful of that solitary congratulatory message between the Queen and President Buchanan of 1858; we thought that may be it was an electric myth, as empty as some other "telegraphic" breathings we wot of. Mr. Cyrus Field knew that that message was a truth, and that knowledge urged him to the final success. The Crescent gives a summary of the various attempts which preceded the present brilliant achievement:

"The expedition which has just crossed the Atlantic is the fifth attempt of the kind. The first was made in the summer of 1857. The cable was coiled half on board the United States steamship Niagara, and half on the British steamer Agamemnon. They began to lay it in mid-ocean on the 26th of June, the Niagara proceeding toward the American coast, the Agamemnon toward Ireland. After the wire had three times broken, the attempt was given up. The following August it was renewed on a different plan. The shore end was made fast at Valentia Bay, and the Niagara began paying out on the 7th, the purpose being that the Agamemnon should begin operations when the Niagara had exhausted her half of the cable. On the 11th, after 335 miles had been laid, the wire broke again. The third attempt was made with the same vessels in 1858. The ends of the cable were joined in mid-ocean on the 29th of July, and on the 6th of August the two ships arrived simultaneously at their respective destinations.

"This was the partially successful effort which is identified with the name of De Sauty.

"Certain defects in the paying-out machinery, and the more serious faults in the construction of the cable itself were avoided the next time, and on the 21st of July, 1865, the Great Eastern left Valentia Bay with another telegraphic cable. An accident to the machinery caused the loss of the cable when the voyage was more than half over; they grappled it three times, in two and a half miles of water, but had no rope strong enough to lift it on board, and the enterprise was then abandoned for the year.

"The first undertaking was, but a crude affair in comparison with that of 1866.

"The cable, in 1858, had a breaking strain of a little over three tons, or was capable of bearing five miles of its own length in water. The present one will bear a strain of eight tons, or twelve miles of its own length in water. Then, a slight defect of insulation was fatal; now, so wonderfully have telegraphic instruments been improved that it is easy to work through a submarine cable with a foot of its copper conductors stripped bare to the water."

The existence of this sea-line of telegraphic wire, will greatly increase the military strength of Great Britain. Both ends of the electric chain are on British soil. Powerful forts will be built around them. In the event of a war with the United States, it will lessen immeasurably the difficulties which distance and the ocean present against Europe. But who can tell how soon this astounding element of strength may be balanced or may be neutralized by some still more astounding discovery in the immeasurable resources of the laws of the natural world. Thought always was swifter than light, but we have lived to see language only less swift than thought itself.

THE BEAUTY OF HOLINESS.

This is the beauty of God. The King in his beauty is the King in his holiness. It is therefore moral and spiritual: made up of those attributes which are perfections, and as a whole constitute "the perfection of beauty." God has manifested himself to us in this character. If we are attracted to him, if we find delight and satisfaction in him, it is because we are sensible of this beauty.

There may be the sense of the beautiful in the divine work, an admiring and appreciative feeling excited by the things that are made. The soul may even revel in merely sensuous conceptions of the glory with which God arrays himself in the heavens. It may dwell with pleasure upon the splendors of the throne, and the ineffable exhibitions of color, form and sounds which make up the visible features of the heavenly courts; and at the same time, there may be no perception of the real beauty of God.

Holiness is the beauty of angels, beyond the grace of form and motion; and the resplendent vestments, and the glowing liaments baptized in an eternity of light, is this beauty of holiness. The real angel is not the outward circumstances, but rather the inward life, the spiritual nature which only the moral eye can perceive. And so of man. He is capable of this beauty, and the religion which ennobles and saves him, is distinguished by it. It is the only beauty of our humanity.—Despoiled of it by sin, it is restored by grace. Holy living in a sinful world is inexpressibly beautiful; and a holy heart, with its sanctified tempers and affections, exceeds all jeweled adornments.

Holiness is the beauty of worship. The place may have exhausted the resources of architecture in its construction. The fretted vault, the dim religious light, the high sounding organ, and the impressive form, may all be there, but there is no beauty without clean hands and pure hearts. However comely, decent, or even imposing, be our worship, it is, in God's sight, a vile and loathsome thing, without the broken spirit, the contrite heart, and the earnest effort after a higher and purer spiritual life. God must be worshiped in the beauty of holiness; that is, in spirit and in truth, or he is not worshiped at all. All else is an offense and a mockery.

Holiness is the beauty of the Church.—"Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined." "A glorious Church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing," is the true Church of Christ. It is holiness that makes Zion, "beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth." The living spiritual temple, fitly framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord. This is the ornament and embellishment of Jerusalem which is from above. The kingdom of heaven is a pearl of great price. The holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, hath foundations garnished with all manner of precious stones, and gates of pearl, and golden streets. Holiness is the beauty of the Church militant and triumphant.

Holiness is the true and everlasting beauty, the only beauty that is a joy forever. All natural forms are but types of this, and are stamped with change and decay. Their office is to lead the soul to the higher regions of spirit life, and to the purity that sees God. To the besotted and corrupt soul, the beauty of the flowers, the landscape, and the glowing sunset is not felt. The pen of unsanctified genius may describe the visible phenomena, and a certain style of sentiment and emotion may be awakened, but the morally base are forever shut out from the inner sanctuary of material beauty. Blind to God, they must be blind to what is essentially beautiful.

And the beauty of holiness is felt only by the holy. To them this is the beauty of heaven, the loveliness of Christ, the attractions of a life of faith. To them the law would be repulsive if it did not require holiness, and the charm of redemption is the purity which it secures and demands. To the unspiritual the Saviour awakens no desire. Their language is, "He hath no form nor comeliness: and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him." Of holiness they may have some conception as it stands out in contrast to sin, and as it is exhibited in its antagonism to moral evil. They may have some apprehension of it as disclosed in the requirements of the law, and its searching analysis of the heart But the element of beauty which inheres in holiness is not discovered. The utility, the necessity, the reasonableness of holiness may be admitted, but its beauty is neither seen nor appreciated.

There are minds alive to the useful in nature, but dead to the higher functions of the beautiful with which this same natural world is invested. And there is possibly a lower plane of religious life, which stops at the profitableness of godliness, its benefits as exhibited in the industrial and social relations, and its more negative aspect of deliverance from the evils of sin, whilst the beauty of holiness is comparatively an undiscovered element in the spiritual life.

The beautiful is never superficial. The first glance at a work of art, or at a scene in nature, never takes it in. The beauty of holiness is the profoundest element of the spiritual life. Its perception is the deepest of spiritual perceptions. The thing itself lies in the depths of God, and is only discovered by the deep-sea soundings of the soul that hungers and thirsts after righteousness. Holiness to be desired for itself must be beautiful to the soul, and until this attribute is perceived in it, it is never fully sought, nor possessed. It is in this perception that the positive and upward flight begins, and where the heart, loosened from all lower ends, exclaims "I beseech thee, show me thy glory!"

DOLBEAR COMMERCIAL COLLEGE—The above well known institution had a monthly commencement on the 26th inst, and conferred diplomas on the following named gentlemen.

O. F. Childers.....Alabama.
F. L. Carr.....Mississippi
Z. Wardlaw.....Mississippi.
W. J. White.....Arkansas.
G. T. Crawford.....Louisiana.
W. A. Buckley.....Mississippi.
P. Tisne, Jr.....Louisiana.
T. Woodruff.....Alabama.

Making eight graduates in all. There were twenty graduates in the May class, and seventeen in the class for June—thus making forty-five graduates from this institution within the last sixty days. The service Mr. Dolbear thus renders the community in turning out so many young gentlemen thoroughly fitted for the pratical business duties of life, ought to be, and no doubt will be, duly appreciated. The curriculum of studies in this college embraces accounts, bookkeeping, penmanship, French, Spanish and German; the English, however, being paramount, and regarded as of the first importance, as it ought to be. The best proof of the excellence of Mr. Dolbear's system of instruction consists in the fact that his graduates all immediately obtain good situations on profitable salaries. President Dolbear, himself, delivered the address at the late graduation, and awarded the diplomas, Mr. O. F. Childers, of Alabama, one of the graduates, delivering the valedictory

WEEKLY SUMMARY OF NEWS.

The first item is the successful laying of the Atlantic Cable. Messages have been sent to and from Europe. They are now laying a cable across the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and when this is completed, the connection with the Eastern world will be perfect. A tariff of charges has been published for telegrams to Ireland, England, the continent, India Africa and everywhere else. Twenty pounds or about one hundred dollars for twenty words, is the rate for dispatches to England.—Something more for the Continent and India.

Our daily life now spreads out, and over the whole earth. The events of yesterday at the Antipodes comes to us in the morning papers at to-day. This is such a wonderful thing that every body is filled with a quiet consciousness of something they know not how to express. Space and time are annihilated together. The swift steamship moves but slowly upon the surface of the sea, tossed by its billows and driven by its storms, whilst through its still and awful depths, the thoughts and words are darting in a moment from continent to continent. Will this enterprise help on the cause of Christ, and the brotherhood of man?

The first message was news of peace. This is glad tidings, and we hope a happy omen for the Atlantic telegraph. May it in its office some day to tell us of universal peace, that the temple of the war-god is shut to be opened no more.

Details of the convention riot will be found in our columns. Peace was restored by the civil authorities. It was an outburst of rage and fury provoked by a band of conspirators, who incited the negroes to violence. The death of so many of these deluded victims is to be deplored. The negro is peaceable and harmless when let alone. He becomes turbulent and savage only when under the misleading influence of those incendiaries who seek their own aggrandizement at the expense of their country's ruin. After the riot was subdued, the city was taken out of the hands of the civil authorities, and placed under martial law. The parties arrested by the police have been indiscriminately released: and a military commission appointed.

Success of the Atlantic Telegraph.

NEW YORK, July 29.—Atlantic cable a success. The following has just been received:

HEART'S CONTENT, July 28th, 1866.—We arrived here at 9 o'clock this morning. All well. Thank God. The cable has been laid, and is in perfect working order.

CYRUS W. FIELD

HEART'S CONTENT, Friday, July 28, 1866, 9:30 A. M.—The Great Eastern has just anchored opposite the telegraph office. The cable was spliced on the Meteor, and will be here in three or four hours. The whole distance run is sixteen hundred and sixteen nautical miles. The cable payed out is eighteen hundred and sixty-four miles. The slack was a little less than twelve per cent. absolute distance.

HEART'S CONTENT, July 27, 1866

To His Excellency President Johnson, Washington, D. C.:

SIR—The Atlantic cable was successfully completed this morning. I hope that it will prove a blessing to England and the United States, and increase the intercourse between our own country and the eastern hemisphere.

CYRUS W. FIELD.

WASHINGTON, July 29, 1866.

Cyrus W. Field, Heart's Content:

I heartily congratulate you, and trust your enterprise may prove as successful as your efforts have been persevering. May the cable under the sea tend to promote harmony between the republic of the West and the governments of the East.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The following is the message of the Queen and the response of the President over the cable:

Osborne, July 28, 1866.

To the President of the United States, Washington:

The Queen congratulates the President on the successful completion of an undertaking which she hopes may serve as an additional band between the United States and England.

The following is the president's reply:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, July 30—11:30 A.M.

Her Majesty, the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland:

The President of the United States announces with profound gratification the reception of Her Majesty's dispatch, and cordially reciprocates the hope that the cable which now unites the Eastern and Western hemispheres may serve to strengthen and to perpetuate peace and unity between the Government of England and the Republic of the United States.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

FOREIGN.

LIVERPOOL, July 21.—The announcement that the Austrians had accepted the proposals for the suspension of hostilities caused great buoyancy in all the markets, the prevailing opinion, especially among the Germans, being that peace was almost certain to be concluded, and consequently there will be no resumption of hostilities. The Italian answer had not yet been received. There were no reports of further fighting.

LIVERPOOL, July 22.—In the great naval fight off Lize, the Italian iron clad Re Italia was sunk by collision nt the commencement of the battle. An iron-clad boat blew up with all on board amidst the cries of "Long live the King and Italy!" from the crew. The Italian account states that an Austrian man-of-war and two steamers were sunk.

Vienna dispatches say the Italian fleet was driven, and was being pursued by the Austrian in the direction of Ancona.

It is asserted from Paris that Austria has consented to retire from the German Confederation.

LONDON, Saturday Evening, July 28.—The latest reports from the seat of war state that peace preliminaries between the contending parties were progressing, but no details have been received.

LONDON, July 28.—An armistice of four weeks from yesterday has been signed by Prussia, Austria, Bavaria and other German States. The propositions embrace lasting peace over the whole continent of Europe.

The Tribune's special, dated Friday, night says: In the House of Commons, Lord Stanley said the Cabinet was anxious to remove any irritation growing out of causes connected with the war between the North and the South. If the American Cabinet presented claims to the English Government it was intended to issue a Royal Commission inquiring into the neutrality laws.

LONDON, July 30.—A great reform meeting was held to-day. Thirty thousand persons were present. Resolutions were adopted declaring they had no faith in the Government. Petitions were read which will be presented to Parliament demanding inquiry into the conduct of the chief of police. The procession was immense and passed off quietly.

Austria's naval victory was much overrated.

Hyde Park riots and movements to form exclusive reform leagues have perled the Derby Government.

Sinberg advices say that all the Russian soldiers on furlough have been called in. Military trains start every day from Warsaw to the Silesian and Gallecion frontier. Russian troops are marching from Padolia to Bessarabio.

The Spanish Government has prohibited the sale of newspaper in the public streets.

Several French newspapers have received Government warning for publishing false news.

The Moscow Gazette expresses entire sympathy with the Italian cause, and favors the annexation of Rome to Italy.

THE GREAT CONSPIRACY.

One act of the great drama which has evidently been cast with a view to political effect, was produced and suddenly brought to a close in this city, in the Mechanics Hall, on Monday last. The Clique, headed by R. King Cutler, was in effect defeated by the following telegram received on Subbath, the 29th:

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT TO LIEUT. GOV. VOORHIES.

WASHINGTON, July 28.

To Hon. Albert Voorhies, Lieut. Gov. of Lousiana:

The military will be expected to sustain, and not obstruct or interfere with the proceedings of the courts. A dispatch on the subject of the convention was sent to Gov. Wells this morning.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

The conspirators, however, met according to appointment, and we chronicle the terrible and significant events which followed, as they have been reported by the city dailies:

MEETING OF THE CONVENTION.

President pro. tem. Howell took the Chair at 12:10 o'clock, after which a prayer was delivered by Rev. Mr. Hortoo.

The roll was then called, and the following members of the old Convention found to be present: Robert W. Beanie, Terrence Cook, R. King Cutler, John L. Davies, James Duane, James Ennis, W. R. Fish, G. H. Flagg, Edmund Flood, Edward Hart, John Henderson, William H. Hier, R. K. Howell, George Howes, H. Mass, L. P. Normand, P. K. O'Connor, Benj. H. Orr, John Payne, Eudaldo G Pintudo, O. H. Poynot, Charles Smith' John A. Spelliey, C. W. Stauffer, W' H. Waters—in all 25.

As there was no quorum present, (a quorum is 76) R. King Cutler moved to send out the Sergeant-at-Arms for absent members, and a recess of one hour was then taken.

THE RIOT—LARGE NUMBER KILLED AND WOUNDED.

While the members of the convention of 1864 were in assession, an immense congregation of negroes, armed with clubs, was arrayed in front of the State House, where the convention was assembled. On every thoroughfare, blacks with clubs, in their lists, were tending in tides to the capitol.

Between 12 and 1 o'clock a procession of black people, armed with sticks and headed by a band of music, crossed Canal street in the direction of the State House. A gentleman, in passing them, was knocked down by one of them. Mr. Crevon, aid of the chief of police, witnessed the outrage, and, although assailed by several of the negroes, arrested the person who broke the peace and secured his imprisonment. The procession marched on. In the vicinity of the State House, as we have heard, some white and colored boys got into a quarrel. White men, standing on the steps of the State House, exhorted the negroes to kill every white person—man, woman or child—who interfered with them.

About this moment the police, apprised by Mr. Crevou of the dangerous state of affairs, came on the spot. The doors of the State House were immediately closed. Shots were fired on the police. Some five or six hundred persons, black and white, made a fortress of the State House. Twice or thrice they made offers of surrender, and, when the police advanced to receive the surrender, they were met with pistol shots.

A terrible excitement spread abroad. It seemed as if a war of races was precipitated upon the people with all its horrors. It was a day of anguish to every citizen of New Orleans. But in the midst of all that excitement we witnessed some beautiful instances of charity. A negro who had but one arm, and who, it may be supposed, lost his other arm in the federal army, was pursued by some boys, and the poor darkie was protected by a gentleman who had been a so-called rebel in the Virginia army.

The conflict in front of the house might be called a battle. The people inside were in a desperate situation. Occasionally a sally was made, with desperate resolution, but no sally could drive those men from their place. It was a field of capture or of slaughter, where resistance was offered.

The contest was carried on for about two hours. A number of policemen, whose names we have not learned, were wounded in the struggle. But they never gave an inch.

We have heard several circumstances, which, in the absence of authentic information, we do not report.

We saw a gentleman wearing the uniform of the United States, conspicuous among the gallant men who assailed the State House. Dr. Dostie was severely wounded, and his worst wound was from this soldier, a Massachusetts gentleman, who proclaimed that the white should be the ruling race of this continent.

Some twenty or thirty negroes were killed in this encounter.

The universal expression of sentiment was that of regret that the poor negro, who was incited to demonstrations of violence, was the victim of the contest, while the white man, who had inflamed him, escaped. Nevertheless, a few of those, who seemed to love incendiarism, met their fate.

Dr. Dostie is believed to be mortally wounded.

The life of Mr. Shaw, a member of the convention, and an office holder under General Butler, was saved only by the most strenuous exertions of the police. He was brought to the police station with a slight injury.

Mr. Michael Hahn was also somewhat injured but very slightly. In the melee he received a slight wound in the head.

Mr. R. King Cutler was arrested on the roof of the building, concealed behind some bricks, and did not look near so brave as either Hahn or Shaw.

Mr. C. B. Duplessies, one of the secretaries of the convention, was wounded—it is supposed mortally.

Mr. Edgar Henry Cenas, only son of one of our most respected citizens, was shot whilst entering the Mechanics' Institute with the police—the ball entering the right cheek half an inch above the corner of the lip, and passing through, made an exit near the vertebral column.

Police officer Sokulowski, an excellent public servant, received a wound in the abdomen as he approached the State House. His wound is regarded as dangerous.

Officer Hennessy, a very efficient officer, was also badly wounded.

Dr. W. H. Hire, a member of the convention, received some injuries.

Dr. Mercier and Mr. Hart and one or two other gentlemen of the medical profession, whose names we did not hear, were at the Station House attending to the wounded with tender assidnity.

Mr. John Henderson, jr., was there, and he seemed to be in a hopeless condition.

To sum up the casualties of the day, so far as we have been informed, about thirty negroes were killed and several white persons were dangerously wounded.

About six o'clock in the evening a section of artillery was placed on Canal street, and soon after, the mayor was informed that the military authorities would take possession of the city government. His office was then occupied by the military.

The prisoners arrested by the police during the day were discharged by order of Gen. Baird.

TELEGRAM FROM PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, July 30, 1866.

To Andrew S. Herron, Attorney General of Louisiana:

You will call on Gen. Sheridan, or whoever may be in command, for sufficient force to sustain the civil authorities in suppressing all illegal or unlawful assemblies, who usurp or assume to exercise any power or authority, without first having obtained the consent of the people of the State. If there is to be a Convention, let it be composed of delegates chosen fresh from the people of the whole State. The people must be first consulted in reference to changing the organic law of the State. Usurpation will not be tolerated. The law and the constitution must be sustained, thereby peace and order.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

SPECIAL TELEGRAMS TO THE N. O. TIMES.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—The Radicals are seeking to make great capital out of your riots, while the Conservatives here declare that the whole movement was concerted in Washington.

Gen. Banks is said to have stated that the Radicals wished anarchy and bloodshed in the South. It would be convincing proof that the Southern people were not fit to be in the Union.

He said it would be a great card for his party, and already they are howling tremendously.

WASHINGTON, August 1.—The President is overwhelmed with dispatches from New Orleans.

Many of them are evidently highly colored.

The President has advices of the action of the Grand Jury and the suspension by Gen. Baird of the writs for arrest in the hands of the Sheriff.

Gen. Baird is positively enjoined by the President from interfering with or obstructing the course of the the law, and the order to him will be sent to-day.

He is commanded to aid the authorities when called upon as per mention made in the authority delegated to Attorney-General Herron.

WASHINGTON, August 2.—Charges of a very serious nature are said to be preparing against Gov. Wells.

It is reported that Gen. Canby will produce very strong documents against him. Others are said to be preparing affidavits tending to show that Wells was largely interested in land and other schemes, and made use of this to further his own interests, to the detriment of the State and General Governments.

It is probable that all these charges will be sent before the Louisiana Legislature, when he is brought up for impeachment.

There are rumors of a new military commander for the Department of the Gulf. I regard nothing as more certain.

It is likely that Lieut. Gov. Voorhies will soon find himself in full possession of the Governor's portfolio.

The President will not tolerate the least partiality or departure from justice regarding the recent riot.

The civil authorities are expected to execute the laws against all offenders.

WASHINGTON, August 2.—The New York Herald, of to-day, has a long communication about the New Orleans riot, tracing its origin to the Radical Reconstruction Committee of Congress.

Howell, Lynch, and Hahn are said to be a committee of the Convention to negotiate with the Radical leaders.

It says Wells first pronounced the scheme of reconstruction revolutionary and tending to riots and bloodshed. The people would not submit to it. He would have nothing to do with it.

Being cajoled, flattered, and promised Congressional aid, he yielded.

When the committee was told it would lead to revolution, Thad. Stevens said "of course it is revolutionary: aint these revolutionary times?" Fessenden said "what if people do kick up row, all the better for us North.

A dispatch from Austin says: J. H. Bell, Secretary, of Texas, has been notified by the President that the Legislature would be permitted to assemble without hindrance on the 6th of August; also that Throckmorton would be inaugurated soon after, without interference, as Governor, and that the President has notified him that orders would be given for the transfer of the State Government to the elected authorities.

Great preparations are making for the Philadelphia Convention. It is anticipated that there will be fifty thousand people present. Virginia delegates were elected by the joint action of the Bell, Breckinridge, and Douglas Conventions of 1860. Members of the Convention are arriving in Washington daily. It promises to be a grand success. Efforts are making by the President's friends to induce Vallandigham not to attend. A great outcry is being raised by the Radicals against the Convention on account of some who have been extreme men in the past going there as delegates.

From Vicksburg.

MR. EDITOR: At the Third Quarterly meeting Conference for Vicksburg station, held on the 30th of June, 1866. The following resolutions were presented and unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the action of the late General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, held in New Orleans, in regard to lay representation, in the Annual and General Conferences of said Church, is most cordially approved, and its adoption very respectfully and urgently requested of the Mississippi Annual Conference at its next session.

Resolved, That the said General Conference, in recommending the extension of the right of the laity, to representation as proposed, has given another evidence of the unselfish and enlarged views of the ministry of the M. E. Church, South, which will be highly appreciated by its membership, and more fully than ever identify them with all the varied interests and success of their beloved church.

Resolved further, that the changes proposed as to the name of said church, the probation of its members—duration of the pastoral relation, etc., are fully approved by this Quarterly Conference, and their adoption by appropriate legislation recommended.

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to furnish copies of these resolutions to the N. O. Christian Advocate, and Episcopal Methodist published at Baltimore, Md.

R. D. HOWE, Sec'y.

Cotton in Turkey.

The cotton crop throughout Turkey will be much larger this year than any grown before, but the heavy fall in prices will have a serious effect. At present the price of cotton has fallen to eight piastres per oke, the rate some time since ranging as high as twenty-three piastres. Various circumstances combine to produce this unfavorable state of things, the monetary crisis and the full caused by increased imports from America being the principal causes.

Beautiful was the reply of a venerable man to the question whether he was still in the land of the living: "No; but I am almost there."

John Bright's remarks in the English House of Commons, in opposition to the law of primogeniture in the transmission of real estate in England may be regarded as the first direct warning of change given by the people of that country to the peerage and aristocracy.

Into a bell glass full of air a central tube is made to carry a slow current of hydrogen. At the end of the tube, which is carried nearly to the dome of the bell glass, electric sparks are made to pass. The hydrogen is immediately ignited, taking the form of small luminous spheres, which rush about in all directions. After a few seconds there are an infinite number of these little luminous globes, which seem to play at hide-and-seek without ever coming into contact.

THE POPULATION OF THE AUSTRIAN EMPIRE.—The empire of Austria consisted in 1857 of thirty-five millions of inhabitants, of which it lost about 2,726,000 by the peace of Villafranca in 1859. Austria still retains about thirty three millions, and of these two and a half are in Lombardo-Venetia. The other elements of the population are as follows: Germans, 8,000,000; Slavonians, 3,800,000; Poles, 2,000,000; Ruthenians, 2,800,000; Croatians, 1,400,000; Czecks and Slovacks, 6,000,000; Magyars, 5,000,000; Jews, 1,100,000; and Bohemians, 150,000. With religion, the population is thus divided: Catholic, 22,500,000; United Greeks, 3,500,000; Greeks, non-united, 3,000,000; Lutherans, 1,200,000; Calvinists, 2,000,000; Jews, 1,000,000. Austria proper contains little more than 2,500,000 inhabitants; Hungary, 10,000,000; Galicia, 4,000,000; Bohemia, 4,800,000; Austrian Silesia, 450,000. The population of Prussian Silesia consists of about three and a half millions. The territory taken from Denmark during the late war contained about 888,750 inhabitants, thus divided: Schleswig, 365,417; Holstein, 476,000; Lauenburg, 46,486.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

The principal feature (says the Price Current of Wednesday) in the market since our last review is the advance in our leading staple predicated on the gratifying news received through the Atlantic cable, that a treaty of peace had been signed between Austria and Prussia. It is remarkable that the first intelligence from Europe on the accomplishment of this truly great enterprise, the laying of the Atlantic cable, should be of such importance and so cheering in its character; for it is reasonably inferred that the treaty referred to its forerunner of a similar one with Italy, which would restore peace to Central Europe, stimulate manufacturing enterprise on the Continent, increase the demand for our leading staple, and cause a material advance in prices from the increased wants of consumers.

On Saturday there was a limited enquiry at the opening, but at a later hour the movement assumed more animation, and, notwithstanding the stringent pretensions of factors as well as the limited and poorly assorted supply offering, the sales amounted to 1800 bales at full prices, desirable and over-running list commanding outside figures, and, in some cases, stiffer rates. On Monday the previous demand was continued with a fair degree of spirit. Yesterday the market opened with a fair enquiry, but the movement was checked by the high demands of factors. We now advance our quotations as follows:

Low	22 to 25
Ordinary	27 to 29
Good Ordinary	31 to 32
Low Middling	34 to 36

TOBACCO.—The stock on hand is fair. There is some enquiry on foreign account, but holders are very firm in their views and ask mostly higher prices than buyers are willing to pay. We continue to quote a quiet but firm market at the following rates:

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused	4 to—	— to 5c.	Carreney.
Good do	5½ to 6	6½ to 7
Common Leaf	7½ to 8	9 to 11
Fair	12 to 13	14 to 15
Good	15 to 16	16 to 17
Fine	17 to 18	18 to 19
Choice Select	20 to —	21 to 25	—

SUGAR.—The supply of the domestic production is about exhausted, but that of the foreign production is fair though not large. The market has continued dull, and what little is doing is only in a retail way. Prime to Choice Porto Rico and Cuba are retailing 16, 16½c, Yellow Clarified at 17 and White at 17½c per lb.

MOLASSES.—The market is nearly bare of Louisiana, but the supply of Cuba is fair. The demand is limited, being only local and confined to a few distillers. The only sale since our last review was a cargo of 300 hogsheads Cuba at 58c per gallon.

FLOUR.—The supplies are small but the market has continued very dull. The demand is limited and confined to dealers, and prices have ruled more in their favor. The grades below Superfine are altogether neglected, while Superfine and those above are difficult to dispose of. Yesterday the market was quiet with sales, to dealers, of 800 bbls, in lots at $8 to to $8 75 for Superfine, $10 to 11 50 for Low Extra, $12 12½ for Good Extra, and $12 75 per bbl for Choice Extra.

BACON.—The market is well supplied with Sugar-cured Hams, but there are not many Sides, and Shoulders on hand. Yesterday a lot of 11 casks Shoulders sold at 17½c per lb.

PORK.—Extreme dullness has continued to prevail. There has not much offered at retail. Round lots of Mess could be purchased readily at $34 per barrel.

GREEN MEAT.—The market is bare of Sides and Hams. There are some few Shoulders on on hand, which are retailing at 17½ to 18c per lb.

LARD.—In good supply but the market continues extremely dull and there is no demand for round lots or for export. The retail demand is supplied by dealers at 23c per lb for Prime in tierces and 24½c in kegs.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—In a fair stock of Butter on hand. The demand for Western is good but Northern is neglected. Northern Butter is selling at 40 to 43c and Western at 25 to 35c per lb. Cheese is in tight supply and fair demand. It is selling at 15 to 18c for Western and 15 to 20c for Northern, and English Dairy at 25 to 26c per lb.

CORN—The supply is fair but the demand has fallen off. Yesterday the sales were at 82½ to 85c for Mixed, 85 to 87½c for Yellow, and $1 10 to $1 12½ per bushel for White.

OATS—Sold yesterday at 52c for Prime and 58c for choice.

BRAN.—Yesterday 500 sacks sold at $1 12½ per 100 lbs.

HAY.—There is a good stock on hand but sales are very slow, and only in a jobbing way at $23 to $24 per ton for Prime Ohio River.

INDIA BAGGING.—Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 33½c in rolls, and 36c in bales.

BALE ROPE—The market continues quiet, lots are quoted at 18c per lb. Dealers are obtaining 18c per lb. Iron Cotton Ties are selling at 12c per lb.

COFFEE—Is in fair demand for the country. The demands supplied by dealers at 27 to 27½c per lb currency for Low Fair to Fair Rio.

GUNNY BAGS.—There are not many in the market. They sell in a small way at 37c a piece.

STAR CANDLES.—Are in fair jobbing demand and there have been small sales at 20c per lb for 12 oz, 22½c for 14 oz, and 25c for full weight.

SOAP.—Palm is jobbing at 8c per lb.

RICE.—Is selling from second hands at 9 to 11c per lb. Louisiana commands 11½ to 13c per lb.

WOOL.—Supplies have been coming in quite freely. Buyers have withdrawn and the market is dull. There is a great deal of hurry Wool on hand but no demand for that description. The last sales of unwashed Texas were at 17 to 18c per lb.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $2 to $2 70 for St. Louis and $3 25 to $3 50 for Louisville. Onions $3 25 to $3 50 per bbl. Apples $3 to $4 50 per bbl. Cabbages 18 to 25c a piece.

BEANS.—Are dull at $5 to $7 per bbl.

SALT.—Round lots of Liverpool Coarse and Fine are quoted at $1.75 to $1 80 per sack, while dealers have been obtaining $1 85 to $1 90 per sack for Coarse in store and warehouse, and $1 95 to $2 for Fine.

NAVAL STORES.—Sales are making in a small way as follows: No. 8 $2 and $3, No. 2 Rosin at $4 to $5 No. 1 $5 to $6, No. 1 White $7, Pitch $5; Tar $2 50 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine commands 60 to 65c per gallon. At retail 65 to 70c per gallon.

HIDES.—Are in fair demand, but there are but few on hand and only small sales are making in consequence at 9½ to 9¾c for Green Hides, 10½ to 11c for Kip Skins, and 12 to 13c per lb for Dry Hides.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY, Tuesday evening, July 31, 1866

Arrived since our last: 1272 Texas Beeves, 625 calves and yearlings, and 577 sheep.

Sold, 806 Texas beeves, 241 calves and yearlings, 75 hogs, and 4 milch cows.

Stock on sale: 1421 Texas beeves, 828 calves and yearlings, 80 hogs, 5823 sheep and 23 milch cows.

Western Beef, choice per lb net	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$ 9 to 20
Hogs per lb gross	12 to 13
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Choice Sheep, per head	$6 to $8
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $80
Yearlings, per head	$10 to $14
Calves per head	$2 50 to $10

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,
GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught

TERMS:

Tuition fees per term,.....$40 00
Contingent fee,..... 5 00

Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month
aug4ft W M WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.

The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.

TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40.—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March.

Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.

Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.

Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.

As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.

W. H. N. MAGRUDER.
Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

S. H. KENNEDY & CO.,
General Commission Merchants and
COTTON FACTORS,
57 Poydras street.
Cotton Office—192 Common street—in charge of RICHARD J. NUGENT. aug4ft

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY: Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A. M., President; Mrs. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.

The Fall Session of this Institution will open on the 26th day of September next.

This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattrasses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.

The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:

For a session of four and a half months, payable one half in advance, and the remainder at the close of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks,	$67 50
Regular Tuition	25 00
Incidental Fee	2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of instrument	37 50
French or Spanish	15 00

Ornamental branches at usual prices.

☞ All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.

The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.

After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.

For other information address
CHARLES B. STUART, President,
aug4ft Mansfield, La.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE

HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,
REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.

Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.

Next annual term opens first Monday in September.

For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.

Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

NEW DISCIPLINES.

The Agent at the Depository has just received the invoice of the first shipment of the New Disciplines, from Nashville, on the 24th inst.

PRICE: SIXTY CENTS.

Thirty per cent. off to wholesale dealers and to Preachers who buy to sell again.

Address—
REV. R. J. HARP, Agent,
No. 112 Camp street, Lock Box 814,
jy28tf New Orleans.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD.

Established, August, 1861.

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January, 1866.

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET, 18

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURES to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

feb17 C. E. CATE & CO. 18 Camp st., N. O.

PAYNE, HUNTINGTON & CO.,

Cotton Factors,

No. 32 Union Street,
NEW ORLEANS.

J. U. PAYNE, G. W. HUNTINGTON,
W. C. H. DAMERON, H. M. PAYNE.
je23-1y

TOM HENDERSON, late of Henderson, Terry & Co.
SAM HENDERSON, late of Violett, Black & Co.

TOM & SAM HENDERSON,

COTTTON FACTORS AND General Commission Merchants,

190 COMMON STREET, New Orleans
jel 1y

J. C. M'ALISTER, late of Memphis, formerly of Jackson, Miss.
R. M'NAIR, late of Arkansas, formerly of Miss.
H. GARDES, late of Washington, Arkansas.

McALLISTER, McNAIR & GARDES, Wholesale Grocers, 74 Common Street New Orleans, La. ap7

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 110 Poydras street, between Camp and St Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons Type. ap7-1

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY

Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,

Of the late Firm and Successors to G. W. COFFIN & CO.,

102 & 104 East Second street,

Cincinnati, Ohio,

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. je16

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This Institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address

f3-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles st., corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered in 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no copying from books.

Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law; English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages; Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics and Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.

For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address

f3 1y GEO. SOULE, N. N.

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M., President,	Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Coryden Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preparatory and Primary School.
Miss Maria S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bedclothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September.

Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT.

D. G. HUMPHREYS, Pres. Board of Trustees.
jy14 6m

J. E. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.

JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.

Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans. ap14-1y

R. K. WALKER. THOS. M'KNIGHT. J. P JOHNSON.

R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondelet street, New Orleans
jan 20-1y.

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c. Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.

Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

GEORGE L. HILL, ATTORNEY at Law, Marshall, Texas. Collections made in Eastern Texas and West Louisiana. mar27

WATTS, GIVEN & CO., Paducah, Ky. WATTS, CRANE & CO. New York.
W. C. WATTS & CO., Liverpool, England.

GIVEN, WATTS & CO., COTTON Factors & General Commission Merchants, No. 103 Poydras street, New Orleans. Parties shipping their Cotton to us, can make their election, and have their choice of this, the New York or Liverpool markets. Advances made on consignments to our houses, Watts, Crane & Co New York, and W. C. Watts & Co. Liverpool. feb3-1y

ROBERT L. WALKER,

Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans. ap21-1y

CARY W. BUTT. WM. FLASH. THOS. T. A. LYON

BUTT, FLASH & LYON,

Cotton Factors, General Commission and Forwarding Merchants, corner Carondelet and Union streets, New Orleans.

Orders for all descriptions of merchandise will meet prompt attention.

Liberal advances made on consignments of Cotton and Produce to our care. ap14-6m

J. G. ELLIS. W. C. CHAMBERLIN

ELLIS & CHAMBERLIN, COTTON Factors and Commission Merchants, 23 Carondelet street. jan 20-1y

R. M. DENMAN. D. M. HOLLINGSWORTH

R. MARSH DENMAN & CO., Carriage Repository, corner Carondelet and Gravier streets, New Orleans. 13 tf

J. P. HARRISON & SONS,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

51 UNION STREET,—UP STAIRS,
New Orleans.

J. P. Harrison, (formerly of Payne & Harrison)
Edward Harrison,
J. P. Harrison, jun.,
Sidney Harrison,
John N. Harrison. July7 1y

WALLACE & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of DRY GOODS, and Manufacturers of Boots, Shoes, Hats, and Plantation Clothing

Slocomb's Buildings, my26 tf New Orleans.

W. A. BELL, FRED N. OGDEN, H. B. WITHERSPOON

WM. A. BELL & CO.,

General Commission Mer

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

A Saviour for Nine Years Old.

A little girl went to Church one Sabbath. She listened with all her might. Mr. Adams preached to grown up people, so I do not know how much of the sermon she took for herself: but when she camo home she said:

"Mother, is Jesus a Saviour for a little girl nine years old?"

Her mother, I know, said, "Yes, indeed." Jesus is a Saviour for a little girl nine years old. He knows just how you feel; he knows what vexes you. He knows your little trials and temptations. He knows what makes you glad and when you are happy. He can feel for you. He can carry your little sorrows for you. He can take away the evil of your heart, and give you his Holy Spirit to make you good and happy.

He is a Saviour, also, for ten years and twelve years; and for a child of one year, and two years, and so on all the way up. He was a babe in his mother's arms, and a boy at his mother's knee. He worked and studied and played as you do, and knows all about you; and he died upon the cross to save you, my little one. You needn't be afraid to go to him and tell him all your wants, and thank him for all your enjoyment. He is not a stranger to you. There is nobody in the world so much interested in you as he is; nobody watches you so constantly or loves you so tenderly; and though Peter and John and the other disciples saw him go up to heaven, yet he is still on earth, redeeming and blessing the children.

The Penitent Son and the Pious Father.

The son of a minister had by some means excited the displeasure of his father. His father thought it right to be reserved for an hour or two, and when asked a question about the business of the day he was very short in his answer to his son. An hour of two elapsed. The time had nearly arrived when the youth was to repeat his lesson. He came to his father's study and said:

"Papa, I cannot learn my lesson unless you are reconciled. I am sorry I have offended you. I hope you will forgive me. I think I shall never offend you again."

His father replied, "All I wish is to make you sensible of your fault. When you acknowledge it, you know all is reconciled with me."

"Then, papa," said he, "give me the token of reconciliation, and seal it with a kiss."

The hand was given and the seal most heartily exchanged on each side.

"Now," exclaimed the dear boy, "I will learn Latin and Greek with any boy," and fled to his study.

"Stop, stop!" said his father. "If what you have done be evil, God is displeased, and you must apply to him for forgiveness."

With tears starting to his eyes, he said, "Papa, I went to him first. I knew unless he was reconciled I could do nothing." And with tears now fast rolling he said, "I hope—I hope he has forgiven me; and now I am happy."

His father never had occasion to look at him with a shade of disapprobation from that time to death.

Dr. Miller's Duck Story.

The late Dr. Miller, of Princeton, as all his students will remember, abounded in anecdotes, which he related to his classes from year to year, to illustrate the points made in his lectures. One of them occurs to us, just now, as specially applicable to the new converts which have recently come into the Churches within the bounds of our circulation:

A celebrated judge in Virginia was, in his earlier years, skeptical as to the truth of the Bible, and especially as to the reality of experimental religion. He had a favorite servant, who accompanied him in his travels round his circuit. As they passed from court-house to court-house, they frequently conversed on the subject of religion, the servant, Harry, venturing at times to remonstrate with his master against his infidelity. As the judge had confidence in Harry's honesty and sincerity, he asked him a great many questions, as to how he felt and what he thought on various points.—Amongst other things, Harry told his master that he was often very sorely tempted and tried by the devil. The judge asked Harry to explain to him how it happened that the devil attacked him (Harry,) who was so pious a man, so sorely, whilst he allowed himself, who was an infidel and a sinner, to pass unnoticed and untempted. Harry asked, "Are you right sure, master, that he does let you pass without troubling you?" "Certainly I am," replied the judge; "I have no dealings with him at all. I do not even so much as know that there is any such being in existence as the devil. If there is any such being, he never troubles me." "Well," said Harry, "I know that there is a devil, and that he tries me sorely at times."

A day or two afterwards, when the judge had gotten through his docket, he concluded to go on a hunt for wild ducks on one of the streams which lay across his road homeward. Harry accompanied him. As they approached the river they espied a flock of ducks quietly floating on its surface. The judge stealthily crept up the bank and fired upon them, killing two or three and wounding as many others. He at once threw down his gun and made strenuous efforts, with the aid of clubs and stones, to secure the wounded ducks, whilst he permitted the dead ones to float on, for a time, unnoticed by him. Harry, as he sat in the seat of the carriage, watched his master's movements with deep interest, and when he returned said to him: "Massa, whilst you was a splashin' in de water after dem wounded ducks, and lettin' de dead ones float on, it jist come into my mind why it is dat de debil troubles me so much, whilst he lets you alone. You are like the dead ducks; he's sure he's got you safe. I'm like de wounded ones, trying to git away from him, and he's afraid I'll do it, so he makes all do fuss after me, and jist lets you float on down de stream. He knows he can git you any time; but he knows its now or never wid me. If you were to begin to flutter a little, and show signs like you were agoin' to git away from him, he would make jist as big a splashin' after you as he does after me."

The illustration struck the learned judge with great force, and led him to reinvestigate the grounds of his skepticism, and, through Harry's instrumentality, he was fully brought to sit with him at the feet of Jesus, and to learn of him. The illustration is a homely one, but it sets forth a great truth in the experiences of those who set out in the Christian course.—They must expect to be assailed by Satan as they never were before. If he fails of success in causing their fall by the use of one form of temptation, he will try another. He is a cunning old fox. He has tried so long, and had so much to do with men, that he is now an adept in devising means to ruin them, and make them as miserable and degraded as himself.—Young Christians, therefore, should not think it strange concerning the fiery trials which are to try them, as though some strange thing had happened to them, when they are assailed in new, and to them, hitherto unknown methods of assault. As long as the devil feels that sinners are safe, and that he is sure to get them at last, he allows them to float on quietly upon an unruffled current; but the moment they attempt to throw off his yoke, and to assert their independence of him, they must expect his wrath to wax exceeding hot, and his assaults to fall thick and fast upon their heads. They should not be ignorant of his devices. He goes about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour.—Pres. Herald.

A Singular Discovery.—News of the discovery of a mammoth in the frozen soil of arctic Siberia has just been received from the Imperial Academy of Sciences at St. Petersburg, to the satisfaction of palæontologists, who are hopeful that it will afford an opportunity for a complete and trustworthy description of the ancient creature. It was discovered in 1864, by a Samoyod, near the Bay of Tas, the eastern arm of the Gulf of Obi, imbedded in the earth, covered with hair, and the skin apparently entire. This state of preservation is due to the almost perennial frost which prevails on the northern-most coast of Asia, and it is to be hoped that partial exposure to the air will not, as in a former instance, have occasioned sudden decomposition. In February of the present year, the Academy above referred to commissioned a well-known palæontologist, one of their body, to visit the spot, and note its geology, together with every possible particular concerning the mammoth. We may therefore hope to have, in due time, a detailed report of the discovery, as well as the appearance of the animal, and should circumstances prove favorable, of the contents of its stomach. The subject is the more interesting, inasmuch as it involves the question of a change of climate since the age when the mammoth roamed along the shores of what is now a frozen sea.

Borax in California.—The borax of commerce has heretofore been chiefly manufactured from beracic acid, obtained in Tuscany. Borax has also been found in limited quantities in Thibet and China. A very abundant deposit of native borax has been discovered at Clear Lake, in California, and it is of remarkable purity. As taken crude from the earth, it is said to be superior to the best English refined borax. Clear Lake is about two miles in circumference, and being surrounded by high hills, it serves as a reservoir for the water that falls in the rainy season. In summer, the water is very low, and lumps of crytalized borax are taken out of the mud, and even the mud itself, to the depth of several feet, is found to contain a large per centage of borax. An artesian well was bored to the depth of sixty feet, in the bed of the lake, and a slight trace of borax was found even at that depth.

Do milliners know why they are called so? Not one in a million. The name comes from Milan, the city from which Milan-ary goods were first imported into England.

Always be quite as careful, in your business transactions, of taking credit as of giving it.

The losses by fire throughout the United States for the six months elapsed, amounts to $45,000,000.

(From the French of Napoleon Roussel.)

THE CATHOLIC AUTOMATON.

(Concluded from last week.)

The cure came a second time to visit his neighbour; the conversation again turned upon religion.

"Well, my dear sir, you are not often to be seen at mass, you have not yet been once to confession; and, moreover, I see the butcher enter your gate daily. I thought you had promised me that you would fulfill your religious duties."

"Sir, I always perform my duties."

"What! you have heard masses and assisted at vespers on Sundays?"

"Yes."

"In my church?"

"Yes."

"You have confessed and performed penances?"

"Yes, yes. I have done all that you required."

"But how then happens it, that I, the only priest in the parish, have not been aware of it?"

"You shall soon learn; come along with me."

The Cure followed his neighbour to the end of the garden, and there found himself face to face with a magnificent automaton, of five feet six inches, kneeling on a vesper-chair, with its ear close to the wall of partition between the pavilion and the church.

"What means this?" asked the Cure.

"It means that this automaton hears mass in my place each time you celebrate it in your church."

"You are jesting."

"By no means. Did you not tell me, that to understand mattered little, and that to hear was enough? Well, then, I can assure you that my automaton and I alike know nothing at all about Latin. The words of the mass strike upon my ear without entering my mind, or touching my heart, and in the very same way they strike upon the ear of my automaton, without entering into or touching his mind and heart."

"But...."

"Wait a moment; this is not all, allow me to push in this knob."

The mechanician pressed a spring, and instantly the lips of the automaton moved, and these words proceeded from them: "Deus in adjutorium."

"What!" said the priest, "he chants the vespers?"

"Certainly, and he does it in my stead."

"But it is not the same thing at all...."

"Excuse me; for my automaton chants in my stead, exactly as I should chant myself: that is to say, without understanding or feeling anything whatsoever; he makes a noise, and I should do no more. You see I remember your grand principle: Ex opere operato. All depends upon the accomplishment of an action, and nothing upon the moral dignity of him who accomplishes it."

"But, sir, even if this held good with regard to mass and vespers, that is not enough, for your butcher's daily visits convince me that you neither fast nor refrain from eating meat."

"You are mistaken; my automaton fasts daily, for he never eats anything at all, and, consequently, always refrains from meat."

"But it is you, sir, you yourself, and not your automaton, who ought to fast and abstain from meat, and, in case of forgetting these duties, to perform penance."

"As you shall see, all that is provided for."

The mechanician pressed a second spring, and the automaton began to repeat an Ave Maria, gratia plena, from beginning to end, passing a chaplet through its hands the same while, and doing this no less than ten times."

"But sir, you do not think...."

"On the contrary, it is the automaton that does not think. Have you not told me that thought was not necessary? Have I not seen a hundred times, a rosary told by devotees who were thinking about other things, looking in different directions, and even listening to a conversation? Is it not in the case of such a devotee as in that of my automaton?—Ex opere operato."

"But what then have you done with the medal you sent to ask from me?"

"Here it is; I have sewn it in the trowsers of the automaton, in order to convert my cousin in England."

"But again you are jesting."

"Not at all. Since the medal operates of itself, it can operate here as well as in London; and since it can convert a man who wears it without his knowledge, my automaton may very well stand in my cousin's place, for, I assure you, he has not the least notion that he is wearing it."

"But, at least it is essential that the person who sews the medal upon another, should do it with intention."

"So I thought, and hence in sewing it I had much intention; it is the same thing as if the automaton wore my cousin's dress."

"My dear neighbour, I see that it is useless to hope to bring you to a better way of thinking; but at least think of your family."

Sir, in constructing my automaton, I have thought of my wife and children as well as myself. My automaton replaces us all; its continual fasts suffice for my whole family. I wind it up every night; it goes twenty-four hours without stopping, and, like the most pious devotee, repeats mechanically masses, vespers, prayers, and all the rest."

"Well then, I catch you in your own words. In order to say mass it is necessary to be not only a devotee, but also a priest."

"That need be no objection; my automaton is an automaton Cure. If your criminal and revengeful priest was able to change dough into God—that is to say, if the evil sentiment existing in his heart offered no impediment to transubstantiation; still less will the absence of all sentiment impede it. If the mass of a wicked priest is valid, why should not that of a wooden priest be so? Thus, my automaton not only says mass for me and my family, but it is capable of doing so for all the sinners in the village."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean this—that I have understood that one priest could depute another priest to perform the masses he himself was engaged to perform, and that thus, without knowing anything about the sinner in question, the officiating minister no less effected his salvation. Thus I hope, sir, that you may be induced to make over to my automaton the completion of some of your masses."

Not a bad idea, thought the Cure. "Nonsense!" said he, aloud. "And besides, to catch you in your own arguments, I may tell you that your automaton, even were it able to replace you, could do nothing towards representing your family."

"You are much mistaken. I have baptized my automaton by all the names both of my wife and of my children. It is called John, Baptist, Peter, Francis, Julius, Eleanor, Adolphus, Durant."

"But one never baptizes wood!"

"You often baptize iron."

"How so?"

"Thus you baptize bells."*

"But in order to baptize, it is necessary to be a priest."

"Not so. Your church affirms that baptism is valid, even when administered by a heretic; and every day it is customary for midwives to sprinkle new-born babes; and you say that shuts them out of limbo."

"In spite of all that you can say, I repeat, that your automaton does not think."

"Nor does the priest, who rapidly runs through masses."

"It does not understand."

"Nor does the worshipper who listens to the mass, without understanding one word of it."

"It does not feel."

"Nor does the devotee who tells her beads half-asleep."

"It does not feel any love."

"Nor does the man who fasts and refrains from eating meat, without having a converted heart."

"It does not believe."

"Nor does my cousin, who was to be rendered believing in spite of himself, by the influence of your medal. Nor do the baptized bell, the holy water, and the consecrated taper. All of them, like my automaton, act on the principle—Ex opere operato. All those people and all those things are put in motion, without thinking or feeling, and their actions are good, you tell me, even when performed mechanically."

"But, sir, admitting that the duties of the mass, of prayer, and of penances, do accomplish themselves mechanically; at least, there is always a primary intention in the person who performs them; even if he does not think of them while doing them, he does so before he begins them. There may not be sustained attention, it is true, but there has been, at first, an intention of doing what the church does, and that is enough."

"Very well, reverend sir; and now I assure you, that if there has not been sustained attention on the part of my automaton, there has been in me a first intention each time that I pressed the spring that sets the machinery going. Thus both priest and devotee have had, in the first instance, intentions of working out their salvation, and that of others, and afterwards they have allowed their feet, their hands, and their tongues, to operate mechanically. Well, I have done the very same. I have had the intention of working my salvation, and that of others; my intention set my finger in motion, my finger pressed the spring, once pressed—with intention, be it understood—the automaton does the rest."

The Cure was silent.

"But enough of this," said the mechanician, "I hope you have understood my purpose. I never wished, reverend sir, to convert you to my faith, you who sought to win me over to your side. I have wished to prove to you the absurdity of your principle, Ex opere operato. I have wished to make you perceive the real worth of a church, where all proceeds passively, under the impetus given by its spring; where you believe, not because you have examined, but because you are told to believe; where you act, not spontaneously, but because you are driven to act—not by love, but by compulsion. Yes, the clergy of Rome is a great automaton, where faith and action are communicated as motion is to a machine. The Pope says, 'No salvation out of the pale of the church;' and the bishops—mere echoes of his voice—repeat, 'No salvation out of the pale of the church;' and the Cure says after them, 'No salvation out of the pale of the church.' The Popes, formerly Arians, are Trinitarians at present; and the bishops formerly Arians, become at present Trinitarians; in the same way that the Cures, formerly Arians, now profess themselves Trinitarians. If the Pope lift hand or foot, the bishops lift hand or foot, the Cures lift hand or foot. Is this life? No; it is mechanism! Are these men? No; they are automatons! Ah! reverend sir, I have no more confidence than you have in my compound of wood and iron; but in constructing this machine, I have sought to convince you that you ought no more to trust to mechanical acts, performed by hands of flesh, than to those performed by hands of wood. For my part, I believe that, in itself, an action has no value apart from that which feeling gives. Thus St. Paul says, 'Though I give all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, I am nothing.' (1 Cor. xiii. 3.) In short, if you want a decisive, a Divine sentence, listen to that of Jesus Christ himself:—'Not that which entereth into, but that which cometh out of the mouth, defileth a man.' (Matt. xv. 11.) You see that it is possible to put meat into our mouths without being defiled thereby. But would you know what it is that proceeds from man and defiles him? Jesus shall give the reply: — 'Murders, adulteries, thefts, false witnesses, blasphemies.' (Matt. xv. 29.) These are the works of which man is capable, this is what he can accomplish; and hence his works—far from saving — destroy him!"

"In this way, then, all men are lost by their works?"

"Without doubt, they are. But if they feel this, they can, at least, be saved by Jesus Christ."

"Thus, then, according to your system, as well as mine, man is saved by another than himself?"

"Yes; but by another who has felt, loved, suffered! Saved by God dying on the cross, and not by the mechanical performances of a priest. The salvation which Jesus confers fills me with gratitude; that which you profess to accomplish by your careless hands, your thoughtless lips, prompted by your corrupt heart, inspires nothing but disgust. Then I am told that Jesus so loved me as to pardon me, and confer upon me heaven. Then I feel, on my part, that I love Him, and that loving him, I am led to do His will. But you, who look for salvation from passive actions, material ceremonies, from a body without a soul, you can but remain unmoved after such mummeries, or else grow proud of having performed them, since, in your eyes, they rank as good works. Christ gives me life, and the gift appeals to my generosity; while you sell your services, and that sale only awakes my avarice. A mechanical work, done for me by a priest, cheats my conscience without changing my conduct; done by myself, it excites my self-complacency, and makes me forget that which it stands in lieu of, to wit—holiness of heart. Yes, here is the great danger of your mechanical performances—they leave the man as impure as ever; they acquit his conscience, without quieting his passions. By putting the material actions in the room of the spiritual impulse, you kill morality, and you replace it by mere outward movements, mere sounds, which have only an appearance of morality. Man becomes, beneath your hand, a mere corpse, inflated with air, or stuffed with straw—seeming alive, but being dead! Ah! leave man to himself; let him feel his sins, let him suffer from them; let him cry and weep till the very anguish of remorse bring him to the feet of Jesus Christ. Give him the Bible — that Word of God himself—and let him learn in its pages that a Savior has died for him, pardons him his sins, gives him heaven, ensures to him immortality! And he may see that the man who believes this, will do something better than mere mechanical works; better than burning wax tapers, gabbling Latin, sprinkling holy water, refusing meat on Saturday, to ask a double portion when Sunday comes.

"Deeply moved by the sacrifice of his God and Saviour dying to obtain heaven for him, that man will feel a necessity of imitating his Master, of sacrificing himself as He did, of loving God, and loving his brothers also; and that love will produce works far better, far holier, than those of this automaton—this faithful copy of your Roman Catholics."

I do not know whether the Cure understood these words spoken by his Protestant neighbour; but I have only to hope that the reader will know how to understand them; and if as yet their meaning be somewhat obscure, let him seek for a fuller comprehension of it by the assidnous study of his Bible, and by fervent prayer to God.

* And locomotives.—Vide ceremony of opening the last railroad in France: "Illustrated London News," August 30th.

A German Parable.

It happened once, in a hot summer's day, I was standing near a well, when a little bird flew down, seeking water. There was, indeed, a large trough near the well, but it was empty, and I grieved for a moment to think that the little creature must go away thirsty; but it settled upon the edge of the trough, bent its little head forward, then raised it again, spread its wings, and soared away singing; its thirst was appeased. I walked up to the trough, and there, in the stone work, I saw a little hole about the size of a wren's egg. The water field there had been a source of revival and refreshment; it had found enough for the present, and desired no more. This is contentment. Again, I stood by a lovely, sweet-smelling flower, and there came a bee, humming and sucking; and it chose the flower for its field of sweets. But the flower had no honey. This I knew, for it had no nectary. What then, thought I, will the bee do? It came buzzing out of the cup to take further flight; but it spied the stamina full of golden farina, good for making wax, and it rolled its legs against them until they looked liked yellow hose, as the bee-keepers say; and then, heavily laden, flew away home. Then said I—"Thou camest seeking honey, and finding none, hast been satisfied with wax, and hast stored it for thy house, that thy labor may not be in vain. This likewise, shall be to me a lesson of contentment." The night is far spent—the dark night of trouble—that sometimes threatened to close around us; but the day is at hand, and even in the night there are stars, and I have looked out on them, and been comforted; for as one set, I could always see another rise, and each was a lamp, showing me somewhat of the depth of the riches of the wisdom and knowledge of God.

Medical Use of Salt.

In many cases of a disordered stomach, a teaspoonful of salt is a certain cure. In the violent infernal agony, termed cholic, add a teaspoonful of salt to a pint of cold water—drink it down, and go to bed; it is one of the speediest remedies known. The same will revive a person who seems almost dead from a heavy fall.

In an apoplectic fit, no time should be lost in pouring down salt and water, if sufficient sensibility remains to allow of swallowing—if not, the head must be sponged with cold water until the sense returns, when salt will completely restore the patient from the lethargy.

In a fit, the feet should be placed in warm water, with mustard added, and the legs briskly rubbed, all bandages removed from the neck, and a cool apartment procured, if possible. In many cases of severe bleeding at the lungs, and when other remedies fail, Dr. Rush found that two teaspoonfuls of salt completely stayed the blood.

In case of a bite from a mad dog, wash the part, with a strong brine for an hour, and then bind on some salt with a rag.

In tooth-ache, warm salt and water held to the part remove two or three times, will remove it in most cases. If the gums be affected wash the mouth with brine. If the teeth be covered with tartar, wash them twice a day with salt and water.

In swelled neck, wash the part with brine, and drink it also twice a day, until cured.

Salt will expel worms, if used in a moderate degree, and help digestion, but salt meat is injurious, when used much.

A Submarine Novelty.

In New York recently, there was a private trial of the Pacific Pearl Company's Submarine Explorer, in the dock, foot of North Third street, Eastern District. The officers of the company and a few friends only were present. At 1:30 o'clock Julius H. Kroehl, engineer, with Frederick Michaels, August Getz and John Tanner, entered the explorer through her manhole, which being finally closed and the signal given the boat was submerged, and for an hour and a half she traversed the bed of the dock. During the submersion the friends of those on the boat exhibited considerable anxiety for their safety, but when at last she raised to the surface and engineer Kroehl and his companions emerged from her chambers (the former leisurely smoking his meerschum,) they gave vent to their feelings in repeated cheers.

They were again and again repeated, when the engineer held up a pail of mud which he had gathered at the bottom of the dock, showing conclusively the success of the experiment. This boat is thirty-six feet long, was built under the immediate supervision of engineer Kroehl, and cost about $75,000. Those who went down in her say that with the exception of a slight tingling sensation in their ears they felt quite comfortable and could remain submerged for days. This is more remarkable as the boat is perfectly air tight, the men depending on fresh air "manufactured" in the chamber of the boat assigned to them, and they live on the surplus of oxygen gas in the water, on the principle that fishes live. The boat is worked by a propeller moved by hand. The hull is of peculiar shape, constructed partly of wrought and partly of cast iron, and is divided into three chambers. The experiment was highly gratifying to the officers of the company present.

A Southern Rival of New York.—One of the old Virginia dreams, that somewhere near the mouth of the James a great city was sure to spring up, at last seems not unlikely to be realized. It is not to be at Norfolk, however, but at New-port News. From that harbor to Cincinnati, the distance is shorter by one hundred and ninety-three miles than from Cincinnati to Baltimore, and two hundred miles shorter than from Cincinnati to New York. Travel along the line is not affected by the inclemency of winter. Money has been provided by Northern capitalists, and within three years the Covington and Ohio Railroad is to be built, and the chain of communication completed by short links between Richmond and Lynchburg and Richmond and the coast. A French company has deposited $3,000,000 with the State government as security for the completion of the James river and Kanawha canal. Thus the new rival of New York is to be connected with the great West by the shortest railway and the best line of water communication.

Do good to him who does you evil, and by this means you will gain the victory over him.

THE NEW ORLEANS
Christian Advocate
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY
At Three Dollars per annum, in advance.

Office—112 Camp Street, New Orleans.

This religious journal is specially devoted to the interests of the Methodist E. Church South, and is the official paper for the Mobile, Montgomery, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences. Some of the ablest writers in the Church are regular contributors to its columns.

Its weekly summary of news is carefully compiled, and contains all the current intelligence silent at home as well as abroad.

Its "Commercial Column" will always be found reliable.

Hereafter, the "Corner for Children" will receive particular attention, as also that portion of the paper intended for selections of choice reading.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate has always been well known in this community as the very best advertising medium by which the business men of the city could bring their merchandise, trades, professions, and the like, before country readers in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and a large portion of Texas. This is easily understood when it is remembered that the four hundred preachers who are scattered throughout these States, in the Rio Grande, East Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montgomery and Mobile Methodist Conferences, are all, more or less, active agents for the paper; and when it is also remembered that our paper circulates among a large class of people who seldom see any other New Orleans paper.

The terms of advertising are as follows:

	1 Month.	6 Mos.	12 Mos.
One square....	$ 5 00	$20	$30 00
Two squares....	7 50	25	40 00
Three squares..	10 00	30	50 00
Four squares...	12 50	35	60 00

Larger advertisements in proportion.

TO OUR AGENTS AND SUBSCRIBERS

1. The price of the paper is Three Dollars per annum, in advance: and it will be sent for 12 months only, unless the subscription price is renewed. We propose to keep no other books than the one containing the names of subscribers and their address. Due notice will be given in the paper a few weeks previous to the end of the subscription.

2. All travelling Preachers in the several patronizing Conferences throughout the South west are our Agents. They will receive a paper for five subscribers.

3. If money forwarded by mail is registed at the Postoffice when it is mailed, we will take the responsibility of its safety. But where it can be forwarded by private hands, the security is greater.

4. Be explicit in writing names and offices and routes—especially in directing to the "New Orleans Christian Advocate," as the Church North has already issued a sheet in this city entitled the "New Orleans Advocate."

Address Rev. J. C. Keener, D. D., or Rev. J. B. Walker, D. D.

PREMIUM TO AGENTS.

We offer Agents of the New Orleans Christian Advocate a PHOTOGRAPHIC PICTURE OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE of the M. E. Church South, held in New Orleans, for every FIVE subscribers they may forward to us; and this in addition to the commission already offered.

We will forward them by express, or in such way as they may direct.

THE BALTIMORE EPISCOPAL METHODIST will be issued in this city the first of next month. Its publication will be under the management of the Rev John Poisal, Dr. Thomas E. Bond and Rev S. S. Roszel, Editors. The "Episcopal Methodist," of Richmond, Virginia, having been transferred to Baltimore, Bishop Doggett and Rev. J. E. Edwards will continue their services as Editorial correspondents. Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D., General Agent. The best talent of the Southern Church will be employed upon its columns. The publisher has the pleasure to announce that contributions may be expected from Bishop Pierce of Georgia, Bishop Marvin of Texas, Bishop McTyeire of Alabama, Bishop Wightman of South Carolina, Dr. Summers of Nashville, Dr. Marshall of Mississippi, Dr. Huston of Kentucky and others.

The contributions of some of the most eminent men of other denominations will also enrich its columns: Rev. Dr. Palmer of New Orleans, Dr. Burgett of Mobile, Dr. Bullock of Baltimore, Prof. McGuffy of the University of Virginia, Rev. Peyton Harrison, and others.

It is designed to make the paper the great organ of the Episcopal Methodist Church, yet in no partisan sense will it be denominational. The General Conference which recently met at New Orleans and the whole people of the South, concede to Baltimore a name and prestige as the proper place for its publication. No pains or expense will be spared to make it a first-class Journal and a welcome visitor to every Christian household. The names of the gentlemen who will have the Editorial management of the paper, and the corps of able coadjutors associated with them are the best pledge to its patrons, that they will find the "Episcopal Methodist," in—its spirit and teaching, the advocate of conservative principles, still a bulwark of defense against the dangerous tendencies of the times.

We deem it proper to assure our friends, that the salutary measures of reform, which were adopted by the late General Conference, meet the cordial approval of the conductors of this paper. As it will represent every State and Conference in the South, it will afford the best advertising medium in all our business and social relations. It invites a renewal of a stronger form of those commercial and fraternal ties which must bind Baltimore and the South more closely together.

This important organ of communication between our respective communities, will be published regularly one a week on fine paper, large type and quarto size at $4 00 per annum, or $2 00 for six months, invariably in advance.

Office of publication, 332 W. Baltimore Street. Selby & Dulaney, where subscriptions and advertisements may be left. All the members of the Southern General Conference are authorized Agents. The preachers of the several annual Conferences and clergymen generally, are requested to act as agents for this paper.

THOS. E. BOND, Editor.
S. S. ROSZEL, Associate Editor.
JOHN POISAL, Publisher.
Baltimore, June 4th, 1866.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 30.
WHOLE NUMBER 500.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, AUGUST 11, 1866.

$3 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE—112 CAMP STREET.

OUR GERMAN CORRESPONDENCE.

GOTTINGEN, July 13th, 1866.

EDITOR ADVOCATE: Napoleon I, with his new implements of war and daring marches, achieved successes, which hitherto had been impossible. Than he, no chieftain had created a more momentous epoch in the chronicles of arms. Empires vanished before his iron foot, and kingdoms ceased to be upon his approach. Kings were his prisoners, Dukes his hostages, and Emperors paid him homage. But so difficult was it in his day to move an army from place to place, that with all his alacrity it required him many years ere, through the victory of Austerlitz, he became master of Austria and the remainder of Germany.

Since 1809, the art of war has been greatly improved, so that at present, compared with the recent Prussian victories, achieved, as it were, within a few days, Napoleon's glory begins entirely to fade. It is but three weeks that hostilities commenced, and already the Prussian legions drive before them dismantled remnants of vanquished armies, already are Kings and Dukes without their thrones, and Austria, ancient, antiquated, corrupt, bankrupt, and despotic Austria lies prostrate at the feet of the victorious King William of Prussia.

The philosophy of the Book of Job has fully taught us that it is an easy matter to censure and blame the unfortunate, taking it invariably for granted that every misfortune was invariably merited. I am not like Job's friends: I have avowed, and still avow that, as it regards the primary cause of the present war, Austria has the legal right on her side. Prussia, right or wrong, wanted war. But, although, in the difficulty of the Elbo Duchies, which as you are aware brought on this war, Anstria was legally right, morally she was notwitstanding totally wrong. What then is Austria, and what has Anstria been since her first Ferdinand, imitating the glory of the Cesars, swayed his sceptre over all central Europe? Nothing but a military camp. What Austria was in the days of Tilly and Wallenstein, is Austria still in the days of Benedek. For three centuries Austria has subsisted by taking advantage of the natural prejudices of the various and different tribes under her sway. Hungarian troops were quartered in Italy, to keep that country quiet; Italians were forced to Hungary, who, as there was not the least affinity between them and the comrades of Kossuth, bravely brought them into subjection; Bohemian regiments were stationed in Germany, and German regiments in Bohemia;—thus has Austria lived, thus Austria was cruelly despotic, thus Austria wielded great influence, and thus Austria, at last, is forced to recognize the laws of Nature, allowing the boundary lines of nations to run where nature's God fixed them. Italy, thank God! is free from the Alps to the Adriatic; and Germany, God grant! that it too may become united, free, and happy!

Of course, Anstria will not become extinct, but Austria, with his "Concordat of 1859," will be shut up within her own precincts, giving us opportunity and time for political and ecclesiastical reformation and regeneration.

The stated policy of Austria, was the policy of the minor German monarchs, and hence their devotion to Francis Joseph, on the eve of this war. Why should there be one tear be shed over their downfall? as who would regret that others, at the "eleventh hour," undertake to espouse the cause of Prussia? Among the lattor is the grand Duke of Baden, the son-in-law of King William of Prussia. On the 14th instant, he withdrew from the "Bund," and refused to furnish his contingent to the Federal army under the ancient Prince Charles of Bavaria.

The Prussian army is divided in three main divisions, the first, composed of three corps, is under the command of Prince Charles, second son of King William; the second, of a similar number of corps, is commanded by the Crown Prince, husband to Queen Victoria's daughter; the third, composed of two army corps, is under the guide of General Von Falkenstein, and is the same which captured the Hanoverian army, and is now marching against Frankfort-on-the-Main, where the Federal army, composed of Swabians, part of Hessians and Bavarians, is now fortifying itself. The defeat of this last named body of men is almost certain.

The first two grand divisions of the Prussian army, happily united on the 3rd inst., near Koniggratz, where, and at which time they achieved such a brilliant success. Napoleon never fought a more decisive battle. Two hundred and fifty thousand men on each side were engaged; for eight long hours this bloody work continued, when suddenly the Austrian lines were broke, forcing Benedek to beat a precipitous retreat. At this moment the Prussian Hussars, as in the days of Blucher, hurried forward, and created fearful havoc. The Vienna "Freie Presse" admits a loss of not less than 60,000 men! Half of these are prisoners. To a great extent the brilliant Prussian victories are attributed to the excellency of the needle-gun, carried by the infantry. With this gun, a soldier can shoot thrice, while one with a muzzle loading rifle shoots but once. The war departments of France and England are now making arrangements to arm their troops with needle-guns. At present, as this gun thrice multiplies the actual strength of Prussia, Prussia is the most formidable nation in Europe. But so rapid has been the Prussian success that already the second act of the present European tragedy has commenced. In view of Benedek's disastrous defeat, Francis Joseph, in a fit of despair, and wounded pride, has ceded Venetia to Napoleon, requesting him, at the same time, to effect, if possible, an immediate armistice and peace. Thus matters are becoming more complicated; for, although both Italy and Prussia answers Napoleon that they are glad of his mediation, they are thus far very evasive as to a definite answer, at the same time hurriedly advancing to engage new battles and to win new victories. What will new Napoleon do? will he have recourse to forced intervention? But if so, will Russia look quietly on?—Austria, in this, acted really meanly. Is it not Italy to which Venetia belongs? Why then give it to Napoleon. Doubtless, Napoleon will return to Italy his acquired donation; but the Italians are unwilling to receive the same as a present, when through the Prussian victories, the stern necessities of war will sooner or later place it into their hands. Austria thinks that through this, Italy will be compelled to discontinue hostilities, and that then she might with all her force march against the legions of King William.

Affectionately,

J. B. A. AHRENS.

DIVINITY OF CHRIST.

A FRAGMENT.

Our faith rests firmly upon historic evidence,—no additional evidence could increase the strength of our belief in the existence of Alexander and Cesar, and that they once acted an important part in Greek and Roman affairs. We may affirm with equal confidence that no additional evidence could increase the strength of our conviction, that Jesus of Nazareth once lived, that he is a real historic personage.

As the ancient history, that satisfies us of the historic existence of Alexander and Cesar, also teaches us what their characters were, so the history that affirms the existence of Christ, also teaches us what manner of character he was.

What then was his character? It was one of immaculate purity, and perfect goodness. His life was a labour of love, he "went about doing good." He is the most perfect character in history. There is no reason to doubt the accuracy of the description of Christ's character. The invention of such a character (says Rosseau:) by unlettered Jewish fishermen, would be a greater miracle than the character itself. There is no beau ideal of moral excellence ever conceived by the great and world renowned masters of fiction, that will bear comparison with the sinless purity, unselfish devotion, and unparalleled philanthrophy of Christ.

Such a being could not have been an impostor; the supposition that the best of beings could be the greatest of impostors would be the most transparent and untenable of paradoxes. There is no escape from this conclusion. It is vain to say that Christ was a crazy, self-deceived philantropist. No! he is the calmest character in history. Never surprised, confused or hasty. Always self-possessed, ready and luminous. Profounder than all the philosophers, more original than any thinker, and more comprehensive in his beneficent plans than the most enterprising projector of benevolent schemes, and yet always as calm as conscious rectitude and infinite superiority could make him. No taunt, no wrong, no fear could for a moment distract his mind, or divert him from the grandeur of his redeeming mission, a mission embracing in its ample purpose all men, all time, and the everlasting ages to come. Such a character could not have been invented, could not have been simulated, it must have been real.

What then did this wisest and most sinless being claim to be? More than Moses claimed, who claimed nothing in his own name, but always said: "Thus saith the Lord." More than Mohammed said, who said that "there is one God, and I am his prophet."—Christ said "I and my father are one," "before Abraham was, I am." He said, "I am more to be loved than parents, than wife or child, houses or lands." In short, he claimed to be God, and demanded the supreme affection of the soul. Christ did not work his wonders as the prophets and apostles, in the name and by the authority of God, but in his own name, and by the exercise of his own power. He said to the Leper, "I will, be thou clean," and straightway he was made whole. He said to the winds and waves be still, and lo! there was a great calm. He said to the young man who lay dead upon the bier, "I say unto thee arise," and he lived, and to Lazarus, who had been "four days" dead, "come forth," and he lived, and came forth. He said of his own life, "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up again." He taught not as the Scribes and Pharisees, but as one having authority, not as the commentator and expounder of the Law, but as the Lawgiver himself. "I tell you, nay; but except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." "Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." To Nicodemus he said "he that believeth on him, (himself, the Son) is not condemned; but he that believeth not, is condemned already; because he hath not believed on the name of the only begotten Son of God."

Of Christ's historic existence, and immaculate character, there can be no doubt, (short of universal skepticism, in relation to all that lies beyond our personal knowledge,) of the impossibility of such a character being an impostor, there can be no doubt. Whatever, then, Christ claimed to be, he was, he is. He claimed to be God—and demanded the worship and supreme love of man. He was God manifested in the flesh.

W.

Though fifty-one years have elapsed since the battle of Waterloo, there still survive about 200 of the British officers who bore a part in that great conflict.

It is wiser and better to hold the torch of truth to the mind than the torch of persecution to the body.

A benevolent physician considers the poor his best patients, for God is the paymaster.

The love of pleasure betrays us into pain; and many a man, through love of fame, becomes infamous.

The Presbytery of Hopewell, Ga., a short time ago ordained three colored men to the work of the ministry.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

DISTRICT MEETING.

STARKVILLE DIST., MISS., CONFERENCE.

A meeting of the ministers, both itinerant and local, and official members of the M. E. Church, South, of the above Dist., was held in Starkville, Miss., commencing on Friday, the 13th of July. The object of the meeting was to bring together all the ministers and official members of the church within the district, to consider the great interests of the church, to interchange views as to the best methods of promoting those interests, to stir each other up, to provoke to good works and zealous efforts for the prosperity of the cause of Christ, and to cultivate and promote social feeling and harmony throughout the church. Of about forty ministers within the District, there were about twenty present and quite a respectable representation of the laity from the Circuits adjacent to Starkville. By solicitation, Bishop Wightman was present and presided over the deliberations of the meeting.

The following subjects occupied the principal time and attention of the meeting. The purchase and distribution of those books mostly needed by our people, Hymn books, Discipliucs, &c. The circulation of Church Periodicals. Ministerial support. The general state of religion within the bounds of the District. Sabbath Schools. The religious interests of the Colored Race. The education of the destitute and orphans of Confederate soldiers. Missionary collections, the promotion of personal holiness. After discussion and free interchange of views, the meeting resolved—

That each preacher and official member use his best efforts to procure and circulate our Books and Periodicals, by bringing the subject before the people, both publicly and privately.

That each minister, both itinerant and local, organize Sabbath Schools at all appointments, where a sufficient number of children can be obtained, and give his personal attention and supervision to such schools, and that these efforts be seconded by the hearty co-operation of all the official members.

The religious interests of the colored population shared largely in the deliberations of the meeting. The subject was forcibly impressed by earnest, practical remarks by Bishop Wightman, who explained the action of the last General Conference on this subject; and enforced the importance of immediate zealous action upon our part to save the negro from the clutches of those who, under pretext of laboring for his welfare, only seek foothold and influence among us, to enable them to accomplish the sinister, ambitious purpose of swallowing up the M. E. Church, South. The meeting, fully impressed with the importance of the subject, resolved to immediately put in operation and carry out the plan of General Conference, to continue to labor with and for them, to organize Sabbath Schools for their especial benefit, to take the pastoral oversight of them when they choose to remain as an integral part of our membership, and where they desire it, and their numbers justify, to organize them into separate congregations, charges, and Quarterly Conferences. This last has been already nearly consummated on the Attala circuit, where there is a large colored membership, and also at Starkville, and Pierce Chapel.

The consideration of the subject of Ministerial Support elicited the fact that the District, as a general thing, is far behind, in financial matters; while a few of the works have been sustaining their pastors adequately, others have done scarcely anything in this way.

The reports of the Pastors with reference to the general state of religion, showed that while almost a general dearth has spread over the District, yet there are signs of promise. The church is in a healthy condition, there is much vitality yet left, and there has been here and there some gracious effusions of the Spirit, which are good omens for a general and gracious revival during the present year.

With respect to the education of the destitute and orphans of Confederate soldiers, the church has done but little, scarcely anything. The plan proposed by the Annual Conference has not been carried out, and our church is far behind in this noble and important enterprise. The meeting resolved to take some steps to carry out the plan of the Annual Conference, but we fear but little will be accomplished.

The prospects for large missionary collections are quite discouraging, owing to the probable failure of crops throughout the District. Judging, however, from the tone and sentiment of the meeting, something will be done in this way.

Bishop Wightman gave the meeting an earnest, practical and eloquent address on the subject of Personal Piety, showing the great importance of a holy, consecrated ministry, as the best, most effectual, and only truly successful means of preaching the gospel with power and effect, and thereby promoting the cause of Christ. Every heart was made to feel and realize anew the importance of the truth urged by the Bishop, and we may hope to see abundant fruit of this appeal, in our own spiritual improvement, and in the prosperity of the cause we serve.

The meeting, impressed with the good results of its deliberations, recommended the holding of a similar meeting during the next year, and appointed Louisville, Winston Co., Miss., as the place of meeting, the time to be fixed by the P. E., and then adjourned on Saturday evening, sine die.

Bishop Wightman preached three times with great acceptability, earnestness, and power, and we hope with many gracious results. His visit here and intercourse with preachers and people has resulted in lasting good, and long endeared him to all our hearts. On Sabbath, after preaching from St. John, 6 chap. 28-29 vers., he ordained four Deacons, and three Elders, all belonging to the local ministry. The religious services of the meeting were protracted nearly two weeks under the direction of the P. E. of the District, assisted by all the Pastors of the different churches in the place, and resulted in much good, in the spiritual improvement of the church, in the conversion of quite a number, and in addition of ten members to the M. E. Church, South.

R. J. J.

Starkville, Miss., July 27, 1866.

Twelve Golden Maxims.

The following extracts are taken from a little work entitled "Miscellaneous, or Choice Observations and Pleasant, on the Virtues, Vices, and Humors of mankind, both Moral and Divine. Second edition: J. H." The initials J. H. are those of Joseph Hall, Bishop of Norwich, England, who died in 1656, aged eighty-two.

I.—ON DRESS.

In thy apparel avoid profuseness, singularity, and gaudiness; let it be decent and suitable to the quality of thy place and purse. Too much punctuality, and too much morosity are the extremes of pride. Be neither too early in the fashion nor too long out of it, nor too long precisely in it. What custom hath civilized, hath become decent; until then it was ridiculous. Where the eye is the jury, thy apparel is the evidence; the body is the shell of the soul, apparel is the husk of that shell, and the husk will often tell what the kernel is. Seldom doth solid wisdom dwell upon fantastic apparel; neither will the pantaloon fancy to be immured within the wall of grave habit.—The fool is known by his pied coat.

II—ON CONVERSATION.

Clothe not thy language either with obscurity or affectation; in the one thou discoverest too much darkness, and in the other too much lightness; he that speaks from the understanding to the understanding does best. Know when to speak, lest while thou showest wisdom in not speaking, thou betray thy folly in too long silence. If thou art a fool, thy silence is wisdom; but if thou art wise, thy long silence is folly. As too many words from a fool's mouth give one that is wise no room to speak, so too long silence in one that is wise gives a fool opportunity of speaking, and makes thee in the same measure guilty of his folly. To conclude, if thou be not wise to speak, be at least so wise as to hold thy peace.

III—ON BEARING ADVERSITY.

Has fortune dealt thee ill cards, let wisdom make thee a good gamester. In a fair gale, every fool may sail, but wise behavior in a storm commends the wisdom of a pilot.—To bear adversity with an equal mind is both the sign and glory of a brave spirit. As there is no worldly gain without some loss, so there is no worldly loss without some gain. If thou has lost thy wealth, thou has lost some trouble with it; if thou art degraded of thy honor, thou art likewise freed from the stroke of envy; if sickness hath blurred thy beauty, it hath delivered thee from pride. Set thy allowance against thy loss, and thou shalt find no great loss. He loseth little or nothing who keepeth the favor of his God, and the peace and freedom of his conscience.

IV—ON ANGER.

Beware of him that is slow to anger. Anger, when it is long in coming, is the stronger when it comes, and the longer kept. Abused patience turns to fury. When fancy is the ground of passion, that understanding which composes the fancy qualifies the passion; but when judgment is the ground, the memory is the recorder, and this passion is long retained.

V.—ON SECRET ENEMIES.

He that professeth himself thy open enemy arms thee against the evil he means thee; but he that dissembles himself thy friend, when he is thy secret enemy, strikes beyond caution, and wounds above cure. From the first thou mayest deliver thyself. From the last, good Lord, deliver thee.

VI.—ON LAW AND PHYSIC.

If thou study law or physic, endeavor to know both, and to need neither. Temperate diet, moderate and seasonable labor, rest and recreation, with God's blessings, will save thee from the physician; and a peaceful disposition, prudent and just behavior, will secure thee from the law. Yet if necessity absolutely compel, thou mayest use both; they that use either otherwise than for necessity, soon abuse themselves in weak bodies and light purses.

VII.—ON INCONSTANCY.

Be not unstable in thy resolutions, nor various in thy actions, nor inconstant in thy affections. So deliberate that you mayest persevere. Mutability is the badge of infirmity.

VIII.—CHARITY ALLEGORIZED.

Charity is a naked child giving honey to a bee without wings. Naked, because excuseless and simple; a child, because tender and growing; giving honey, because pleasant and comfortable; to a bee, because a bee is industrious and deserving; without wings, because wanting and helpless; if thou deniest to such, thou killest a bee; if thou givest to other than such, thou preservest a drone.

IX.—ON DIET AND REGIMEN.

If thou desirest to take the best advantage of thyself, especially in matters where fancy is most employed, keep temperate in diet, use moderate exercise, observe seasonable and set hours for rest, and let the end of thy first sleep raise thee from thy repose; thy soul the least incumbrance then, no noise shall disturb thine ear, no object shall divert thine eye; then, if ever, shall sprightly fancy transport thee beyond the common pitch, and show thee the magazins of high invention.

X.—HOW TO USE PROSPERITY.

So use prosperity that adversity may not abuse thee. If in prosperity thy security admits no fear, in adversity thy despair will afford no hope; he that in prosperity can foretell a danger, can in adversity foresee deliverance.

XI—ON BELIEVING AND COMMUNICATING NEWS.

Let the greater part of the news thou hearest be the least part of what thou believest; and let the greater part of what thou sayest be the least part of what is true; and report nothing for truth, in earnest or in jest, unless thou know it, or at least confidently to be so; neither is it expedient at all times, or in all companies, to report what thou knowest to be true; sometimes it may avail thee if thou seem not to know that which thou knowest.—Hast thou any secret, commit it not to many, nor to any, unless well known unto thee.

XII—ON CONDUCT TOWARD A FRIEND.

Hast thou a friend, use him friendly; abuse him not in jest or in earnest; conceal his infirmities, privately reprove his errors. Commit thy secrets to him, yet with caution, lest thy friend become thy enemy and abuse thee.

WONDERFUL STRUCTURE OF THE HEART.—An anatomist who understood the structure of the heart, might say beforehand that it would play; but he would expect, I think, from the complexity of its mechanism, and the delicacy of many of its parts, that it would always be liable to derangement, or that it would soon work itself out. Yet shall this wonderful machine go night and day, for eighty years together, at the rate of a hundred thousand strokes every twenty-four hours, having at every stroke a great resistance to overcome; and shall continue this action for this length of time, without disorder or weariness.

Each ventricle will at least contain one ounce of blood. The heart contracts four thousand times in one hour; from which it follows, that there passes through the heart every hour four thousand ounces or three hundred and fifty pounds of blood. Now the whole mass of blood, equal to the whole mass of blood, passes through the heart fourteen times in one hour; which is about once every four minutes.—Dr. Paley.

ETERNITY.

A philosopher, accustomed to algebraical calculations, having heard a sermon upon eternity, was dissatisfied with the suppositions and examples proposed by the preacher, and, returning home, and retiring to his study, he set himself to think upon the subject, and threw his thoughts together upon paper, as they arose, in the following manner: "1. Finite, or what has an end, compared with infinite, or what has no end, is nothing; a hundred millions of years, compared with eternity, are nothing. 2. There is more proportion between the least finite and greatest finite, than there is between the greatest finite and infinite; there is more proportion between an hour and a million of years, than there is between a hundred million of years and eternity; because the least finite makes part of the greatest, whereas the greatest finite makes no part of infinite. An hour makes a part of a hundred millions of years; because a hundred millions of years are only an hour repeated a certain number of times; whereas, a hundred millions of year makes no part of eternity; and eternity is not a hundred millions of years repeated a certain number of times. 3. With regard to infinite, the least or the greatest finite are the same thing; with regard to eternity, an hour or a hundred millions of years are the same thing; the duration of the life of a man, or the duration of the world are the same thing, because both are nothing, and nothing admits not of more or less. All this being evident and granted, I now suppose God to grant, you who read this, but a quarter of an hour to live, wherein to secure an eternity of happiness, and avoid an eternity of misery, and at the same time to reveal to you that the world itself should come to an end an hour after your death; I ask you, upon this supposition, what account would you make of the world and its judgment? What account would you make of its pains or pleasures during your lives? With what care would you not think of your obligations to employ yourselves for God, and every moment of your lives to prepare for death! 4. Fools that ye are, do you not perceive, with respect to eternity, the supposition I have just made is indeed a reality; that the duration of your lives, compared with eternity, is less than a quarter of an hour, and the duration of the universe less than an hour? I also make another supposition: If you had a hundred years to live, and, for your support the whole of this period, must only have what you carry off in the space of an hour from a treasury of gold and silver coin, the entrance to which should be left open during that hour, I ask in what would you employ the hour—in sleeping, walking, feasting, or diversion? Doubtless not; but in amassing riches, and even loading yourselves with gold in preference to silver. 5. Fools that we are, we must exist to all eternity, and during this eternity we should have the reward secured in time, and during the short space of our lives, and yet we employ not all our time in endeavoring to obtain a great reward. But, you will say to me, during our lives it is necessary to sleep, to drink, to eat, and to take some recreation. I grant it; but what hinders that, like St. Paul, you may do all for the love of God, and thereby obtain a recompense for all? It must be confessed that the passions are so lively, and the opportunities so seducing, that it is a wonder there should be one righteous man upon earth; nevertheless there are such, and this is the effect of the mercy of God, and the grace of the Redeemer. On the other hand, death, judgment, eternity, are truths so terrible that it is astonishing there should be one sinner upon earth: such, however, there are. This is the effect of these great truths being forgotten. Let us, then, meditate, watch, and pray that we may be of the number of the righteous in time and eternity." Such was the sermon our philosopher made for himself, and with which he was so satisfied that he read it every day. He did more: he profited by it, and led a holy life, conformable to the great truth he had continually before his eyes.—Dublin Pulpit.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Derman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery.
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, - - - AUGUST 11, 1866.

WANTED,

A FIRST-CLASS TEACHER OF MUSIC—one capable of taking charge of the Musical Department in a Female College. The best of reference will be required. For further information apply to me personally, or by writing, at this office, 112 Camp street; or to Rev R K Hargrove, Summerfield, Ala.

The Principalship of the Art Department of the Centenary Female College at same place is yet to be filled. Address same parties.

J. C. KEENER.

New Orleans, August 4th, 1866.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27. —REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS. —By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, J. B. WALKER, L. PARKER, } Executive Com. Joint Board of Publication.

The Mails—Notice.

We are glad to notice the extension of the mail service, after the first of July. Now that Post-offices and duly qualified Post masters may be found in many parts of the States of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, we expect a rapid and considerable increase in our subscription list.

If any regular traveling preacher in either of our patronizing conferences will forward his name and the route and office which lead to him, we will send him the paper upon his own terms.

Episcopal Visitations.

BISHOP PAINE will (D.V.) visit the following places, and preach, and ordain any preachers who have been elected to orders that may be present at the times specified, viz:

Carr's Church, Smith county, Miss, first Sabbath in September.

Jackson, Miss., Wednesday night, September 5th.

Crystal Springs, Thursday, September 6th, (in the day or at night, as may be thought best by those interested there.)

Brookhaven, second Saturday and Sunday in September.

Canton, Thursday night, September 13th.

Third Saturday and Sunday in September, at Wesley Chapel, in Holmes county, Miss., near Durant, on Miss. Cent. R.R

LADIES' FAIR AT GRETNA. — The good ladies of the Methodist Church at Gretna are making an energetic effort to raise money enough to pay off the indebtedness of the Church at that place; and for this purpose they will hold a Fair every evening for a week, commencing on Monday the 20th inst, in the Basement of the Church. Let there be a generous helping hand given the Gretna ladies on this occasion, by the folks on this side the river. As the Ferry will run till twelve o'clock at night, during the continuance of the Fair, the people from this side will have no difficulty in returning when they wish to go home.

Bishop Early is said to be yet in a precarious condition.

THE GREAT CONSPIRACY.

The extent of the plans of the men who are determined to overthrow the present form of our Government, is being revealed by telegraph. Having its origin at Washington, the Conspiracy seeks its first development in the new States. The excitable material supposed to exist in Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas, presented to the chief plotters the best opening for an overt expression. Distance from the centre would afford all the advantage of the obstacle which space presents to the transmission of correct information; it would serve to magnify or distort events into the shape most available for the purposes of the conspirators. The number and temper of the colored population in these States could be made to play an important part.—Various means might be employed to produce irritation and bring about a state of things which one of the Conventionists recognized with an oath when looking out of a window at the Mechanics' Institute, he was told that a negro had just been killed. He congratulated his friends upon an event which would decide the fate of the "rebels." On the Friday preceding, in that very room, a meeting had been held, composed principally of negroes; this meeting was addressed by Rev. Mr. Horton, John Henderson, jun., M. Hahn, and Dr. Dostie. The last named speaker went so far as to advise the negroes to assemble armed, in that place, on the next Monday, to resist by force of arms any authority that dared to interfere with the Convention. This was but one sentence of a number of the same character, and is in keeping with the whole tone of the meeting. After the meeting, the negroes formed in procession, with torches, and marched up the principal thoroughfares of the city yelling and shouting.

It was, therefore, with reason that another Conventionist endeavored to quiet the assembly during the firing on Monday, with the statement that all the negroes in the city were "organized."

Whoever supposes that these recent events are the sudden ebullition of passion unforeseen and unpremeditated, greatly misconceives their animus and history. It was not the movement of a mob, that frenzied force called into life without reason and spending itself without purpose. No, it was preconcerted, concocted, with malice prepense, with method; and then, at the propitious time as was thought, it was precipitated. An effort to overthrow the duly constituted State Government, and to usurp power, by working upon the antagonism between races, and by reviving the passions of the war. It was a plot gradually unfolded.—Starting in an attempt apparently too absurd to be serious, that of recalling an extinct Convention, that discharged its labors and had expired, amid universal detestation, two years ago; that was a military creation of Gen. Banks, and therefore of necessity ceased along with the other functions of that heated administrator of martial justice.

The original position of the Governor in regard to reviving the Convention of '64 is too well known to be repeated: and no man ever did more, at one time, to demonstrate its corruption. The very ordinary force of the chief actors of the KING-CUTLER-CLIQUE is equally patent. We may therefore reasonably conclude that of themselves these parties could never have attempted so barefaced an attempt to revolutionize this State. They must not only have had the backing of powerful conspirators at Washington, but have been themselves the tools of those conspirators. We must not be blinded by the remarks of a few influential Radicals, doubtless uttered to distract public suspicion. Villainy generally keeps up a pro. test sufficient to guard away for its own escape, as birds of prey post a watch. There are always a few of the party righteous enough to keep up a gentle disclaimer, while the rest go forward the more securely; in the end they all share the spoil.

The weight of this conspiracy cannot, in our opinion, be over-estimated. It involves the whole weight of the Radicals in Congress, many of the officers of the Government both of the State and War Departments, and is represented in the Cabinet itself. This opinion has not been hastily formed. The two great forces now at work in the Government, one of which is represented by the Conspirators, were very discernible a year ago to any observer who might be at Washington.

These forces have been augmenting in weight and hostility during the past year, and these events of the Mechanics' Institute were no matter of surprise to one party in Washington, but expected and impatiently waited for as legitimate symptoms of progress in the right direction. When the Committee of Congress was told that the Convention would lead to revolution, Thad Stevens said: "Of course it is revolutionary; ain't these revolutionary times?" Mr. Fessenden said: "What if people do kick up a row? All the better for us North."

The churchmen of the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches in the North are largely identified with this attempt of violent revolution. In fact these godly gentlemen who are scattered throughout the South, "taking ecclesiastical guardianship of hundreds of thousands of the freedmen of the South," have a very large interest in this new order of things which is to be precipitated. To use the language of a Northern Methodist paper:

"Our preachers will be there; they will be there chiefly, if not solely for the freedmen; they will be there as our representatives; they will be correspondents not only of the central authorities of the Missionary Society, but of our public journals; they will be a grand corps of not only local protestors of the colored population, but also of reporters to the North, to the National Government, and more or less to the whole world, of the treatment of these injured people. If for no other consideration, yet for this should the whole Methodist North sustain the scheme of the Missionary Society.—We confess that this is, to us, one of the most impressive recommendations of the revised Missionary plan. By it, our Church will stand up, through all the above "departments," the protectors of the negroes against whatever disguised slavery, serfdom, welfare, or other wrong the only semi-reclaimed whites may attempt to impose upon them."

They are on hand to open Conventions with prayer which are avowedly to subvert the reigning and constitutional government of the State; to take a "guardianship" of the negro which ends in madness, riot and blood. These gentlemen constitute no mean part of the extensive machinery in motion to fan the worst passions of the negro and to inflame anew the half-extinct coals of civil strife. The Lord judge between us and them! They are on hand, like Balaam, ready to curse from any platform upon which they can prophecy, and always climbing for some better stand-point of observation and hate. They utter "Psalms of cursing" and prayers upon the head of President Johnson and all in executive authority.

The hatred which these missionaries bare the President is in singular contrast to their great devotion to the "powers that be,"—their doctrino of "loyalty," now incorporated into their "Articles of Faith." In commenting upon the events of Monday, the 30th, and the President's telegram: "The military will be expected to sustain and not interfere with proceedings of the Courts,"—one of these "loyal" divines says:

"While indulging in this hellish wine of intoxication, in worse than Belshazzar revelry, 'they praised' Andy Johnson as the man after their own heart. His telegram, whatever may have been his purpose, had given them boldness, and to-day men who once wore the uniform of their country are lying cold and low, murdered by those who failed to vanquish them on the battle-field."

Not only do these men enter into this conspiracy, but they enter very largely into it. We may as well wake up to the fact that the front and power of fanatical Radicalism is in the Northern Methodist Church. It wields immense multitudes of the people, and its "Advocates" are not in any degree inferior for influence to the secular political press.

What the ultimate design of this Conspiracy is can be gathered at least in general terms:

1. To keep in power.
2. To have a Legislative Oligarchy—something after the style of the Roman Senate—which shall hold office for life, and be the supreme and absolute Power of the country.
3. To pick the bones of the South.
4. To pick the bones of the world.

To accomplish this they are ready to place the whole country under martial law, to impeach the President, to enfranchise the negro, to divide the public lands, to establish a tariff which will place the whole country under vassalage to the manufacturers of New England, New York and Pennsylvania; to explode if not all State lines, at least the existence of Southern States.

We believe these men have attempted too much; but it is evident that the country is but just entering breakers, which it can outlive only by the skill of the Pilot, the hearty co-operation of the People, and the mighty hand of our Heavenly Father.

WORSE THAN "POST-OAK."

The following is from a correspondent of the Charleston "Weekly Record:"

A gentleman, for near half a century a member of the Christian Church, said not long ago, "I cannot go to Church any more, have nothing now to pay the preachers," and in the very next breath inquired "how should he invest some nine thousand dollars," the product of corn and cotton he had saved from Sherman's raiders, "He was worried to know what investment was safe." How the mocking fiend must have grinned at this disciple of the lowly Jesus who said, "Take heed and beware of covetousness."

And this is from a correspondent of the "Southern Christian Advocate."

At dinner the table was laden with the good things of life. The Doctor, who by the by, was a steward of the church, said, "Sister——, if you had such food as this from now until October you would look and feel much better." Her heart sunk within her, and she was about to retort "Yes, and if you and the rest of the stewards had done your duty, I would have it;" but that text came to her mind, "a soft answer turneth away wrath." She barely answered, "I have no doubt I would."

In the afternoon when about to leave the very kind and generous wife of the Doctor went to the closet, and brought out stale bisenit, saying, "Here, carry these to them two sick children; I don't suppose they will mind the rat nibbles on them."

The "Sister" was the minister's wife. What is the matter in South Carolina and Georgia. Something has "naturally give out." Or, are these sporadic cases. We used to indulge the thought that the "Red River Conference" brother had colored a little too highly, or shaded too deeply his financial picture, but may be he only arranged it for a post-bellum light.

We subjoin the reflections of a correspondent of the "Richmond Christian Advocate, on the same theme. This money question has evidently assumed a good deal of importance religiously.

When Diogenes was once asked what kind of wine he liked best, he answered, that which is drunk at the cost of others. If some persons would candidly confess the truth, they would say that the kind of church they like best is one that is maintained "at the cost of others." The ruling maxim with many seems to be this: Keep what you have, and get what you can.

There are always a few liberal man, fortunately, in every church, but unfortunately only a few. They give to every church interest. Yet they are not the richest. We have never known but one solitary instance in all our ministry of the richest member being also the most liberal. Here is the great hindrance, therefore, to the prosperity of ecclesiastical enterprise; the wealth is kept back from God's cause. The church is not now too poor to meet the demands on her. She has many poor members, but she has also some rich ones, and if the rich and poor would unite, in true Bible liberality, in the support of her interests, we would soon see her powerful energies achieving the most excellent things.

DR. W. B. LINDSAY.

We deeply regret to announce the death of our friend and brother Dr. Lindsay. He died on Monday night, the 6th inst., after an illness of more than three weeks, in the sixtieth year of his age. The original disease was dysentery, terminating in typhoid fever. The Dr. has resided in this city more than twenty years, and was widely and favorably known as the attentive and skillful physician, and the benevolent and upright citizen. He has been at different periods connected with the Charity Hospital, for a long time President of one of our school boards, and has served in the State Legislature. He was a man of spotless character, full of kindness and benevolence, and of guileless spirit. Within the last two or three years Dr. Lindsay sought and found peace at the altar of public prayer. We were never more interested in any experience than in his as related by himself, at a love-feast, in this city some months ago. Those that heard it will never forget it. It sounded the key note of a most profitable meeting. None could doubt the thoroughness of his conversion. He joined our Church at the time of his conversion, and was a happy and joyous Christian until death. His end was peace. The community and the Church have lost a most valuable member. May God comfort and sustain the bereaved family.

WHAT IS IT?

Man-hu—manna, literally, What is it? Hence the name of that miraculous food. It fell around the camps with the dews of the night, and was like hoar frost. It came down silently under the light of the stars, and with the morning came the question. The supplies were exhausted, and it had been an anxious night in the tents of Israel. Whence bread for so many? As they stirred abroad, the dewy deposit excited attention and wonder. Nothing like it had been seen in Egypt, nothing of the sort in the wilderness hitherto.

The name of this heavenly food commemorates the curiosity of those it was sent to feed. Nothing more natural than the desire to know, but beyond the fact of its source and purpose there is no answer. The chemistry of the matter, the process of its creation in the atmosphere, and a thousand questions relative to the transaction, are left without explanation. It is God's bread and God's way of feeding you. That is all. And that was enough for them to know. If not all they could know, nothing more was necessary. Why should they fall out with the arrangement merely upon some speculative point, and starve, rather than eat what they could not altogether comprehend?

In our natural living we are usually content with such knowledge as is practical and needful. No man starves on a point in natural science, which is merely abstract. He is content to know all he can, and in the meanwhile to eat. It is not always so in matters of religion. God has provided the food of the soul. The facts of the gospel and their purpose are as plain as was the manna that fell about the camps. But many refuse to partake of the rich provision of infinite goodness, because some question of unsanctified speculation remains unanswered.

The Israelites were ignorant of the nature and uses of the manna. So much the name implies. Moses had his knowledge by direct revelation; the angels probably comprehended its character, as it is called "angels food," but the people needed light and instruction. It was a question of humility, and of felt ignorance. Thus the name of this typical and miraculous food perpetuates this farther and profounder truth, our ignorance, our dependence upon divine light, and the duty of humble inquiry.

Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. "What is it?" is the name of Gospel blessings. To know them and to have them we must inquire, seek, and knock. "The hidden manna" doubles and intensifies. Spiritual life is a treasure hid in a field. Mysterious is the aspect of gospel truth to the unconverted soul. The plainest texts lie about wrapt in the darkness of their spiritual import. The new birth, the life of faith, the inward crucifixion, the comfort of the Holy Ghost, are so many dark sayings. The true bread from heaven is given to the world: the gracious supplies distill around us; but we must have light and guidance to know and enjoy. Blessed is he who shall be taught by this name the way to God! That it is alone through inquiry and agonizing pursuit he can find the secret of the Lord, and the blessing of an assured and satisfied heart! These things are hid from the careless. They are like pearls under the sea, and like jewels in the mine.

There are manifold surprises to faith in the providence of God. "What is it?" is well directed towards all the events which transpire around us. Faith is not idle when employed in penetrating the lessons of natural and individual history. Our morning papers tell us of the falling of divine blessings, if we would but read them so. After the sad night watches of national trouble and personal suffering does the morning reveal nothing? And in the obscurity of affliction's hour, whilst faith tells us God is dealing with us, is there no voice of inquiry, What is it? And you have found that God's laboratory has been preparing the honey wafer, and sowing your path with food for the soul. The table has been spread before you in the presence of your enemies, and the cup, you thought to be empty, has overflowed. Deep and frequent should be these questionings respecting the divine providence. Hidden from others, you that seek will find and gather soul-food from every event.

These surprises are also in the experiences of grace. New and wonderful are the spiritual discoveries of the honest and earnest spirit. In the spiritual birth hour of the soul, and in the progress of this new life, there is no limit to the revelations of faith. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." The manna falls from a fresh sky, and covers a fresh field every day. As the glass of observation strengthens, new worlds of light appear, and the horizon at each step glows with newly risen stars.

What is it? The food of religious progress, the grace that sparkles with the freshness and purity of the morning, and the wondrous surprises which infinite goodness has prepared at every stage of our journey. This is it; and well may it be characterized by an exclamation of wonder. What was the typical manna in comparison? What so inconceivably glorious as the spiritual ministrations of the soul?

Because we cannot characterize this and the whole economy of salvation, and the glory that follows, worthily: we are permitted to conceive of them as a perpetual question. What is it? Thus we begin in our ignorance; thus we continue as farther discoveries open to the vision; and thus it will be when every cloud flock has melted in the golden sea. Eternity, the Eternal weight of glory, the King Eternal, immortal, invisible: progress in knowledge, happiness and holiness forever. What is it? May it not be the watchword of heaven, as disenthralled spirits stretch away into the unbounded fields of light?

HEALTH—CHOLERA.

We recently congratulated ourselves and our citizens upon the remarkable healthfulness of New Orleans. About that time the cholera was ascertained to be in our midst, and during the past week it has spread with great rapidity. The weather has been hot and dry, and this may have accelerated the progress of the disease.

For the time it has been here, it has been more fatal, and the cases have been more numerous, than in the Northern cities. There are reasons to apprehend that the disease will soon assume an epidemic form. It is not far from that point now. The city in many parts abounds in filth, and thousands of the poor are crowded together in dirty and uncomfortable tenements. Some streets and blocks are densely packed with idle and filthy negroes, who seem to invite the pestilence.

Besides it is the epidemic season—the time of year when the most fatal diseases usually prevail. Up to Tuesday, forty-seven deaths from cholera were reported for one week. The next report will probably exceed this number. There have been reports of yellow fever, but we think without foundation. There was certainly a case at the Quarantine Station, but it is doubtful whether any has appeared in the city. The mortuary report for one day of twenty-four hours ending at 6 A. M., of the 9th inst., shows 53 deaths, 18 of which were from Asiatic cholera, and 5 from cholera morbus and diarrhea. Most of the cases so far are to be traced to imprudence, neglect of the first symptoms, and to destitute and uncomfortable quarters.

The first cases reported were persons who did not come from infected regions, and they occurred almost simultaneously in different parts of the city. This seems to countenance the theory that the disease is atmospheric, traveling in currents or strata, and generally from east to west. Where local circumstances are favorable to the development of disease, as in crowded cities, and ships, there it spreads. No doubt the infection is increased and made more malignant by the number of its victims. We are inclined to think that prudent people have not much to fear from cholera. Very few who take care of themselves ought to die of it. We hear of very sudden deaths, and some are daily found dead in the streets. We cannot know the previous history of these cases, but we believe, in most instances, there was gross imprudence, and that there was premonitary diarrhea which might have been easily arrested.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. H. J. Harris writes us from Jackson, La., under date of August 2nd, the following interesting intelligence of the churches in his charge:

"We have cause of devout thankfulness to Great Head of the Church for the measure of prosperity we have enjoyed during the year, although we have had no extensive revivals. There has been a steady improvement, I am sure, in some important departments of Christian enterprize among us, especially the Sunday School. Both at Clinton and Jackson the S. Schools had barely an existence at the beginning of the year; now we have at each place a thorough organization, with efficient Superintendents and a corps of excellent teachers. The Schools number about eighty scholars each, and the necessary steps are being taken to furnish them with good libraries. We have also at Jackson inaugurated a sabbath-school among the colored people. Here the colored people have remained with us; at Clinton they chose to set up for themselves. We have had twenty-five accessions to the Church, and some twelve or fifteen conversions this year. Class-meetings have not been revived yet. We have a weekly prayer meeting at each place. The plan of Monthly Church Meetings has been inaugurated, and works admirably. Two weeks ago we had a most interesting Church Meeting at Clinton, and one previously at Jackson. Of all the improvements upon our system, by the late General Conference, I think this promises the best practical results."

From Macon, Miss., July 31, Rev. Josiah Bancroft writes:

"The Holy Spirit has been most graciously poured out upon us here. About forty persons have professed faith in the Saviour, and connected themselves with us, and the leaven is still at work. Bro. E. Calloway assisted much in the good work, and though among our oldest preachers he retains at least a portion of his youthful fire and efficiency. Bishop Wightman favored us with a visit during the latter part of the meeting, and, as usual, his preaching was marked with mighty though and glowing fervor. From various points, both in the Macon and Columbus districts, we have good tidings. Indeed we may exclaim, 'The Lord has done and is still doing great things for us.'"

PARHAM AND BLENT. — The card of this firm will be found in another column. These gentlemen are well known to us, as men of integrity and of business qualifications. Planters can place their business in no better hands.

CAMP MEETING.—Rev. Lewis Reed requests us to announce that a camp meeting will be held at Oakly Camp Ground, Franklin parish, commencing on Thursday, 27th September, and including the last Saturday and Sunday in the month. A general invitation is extended to the preachers and people.

Rev. Dr. Craven, President of Trinity College, N. C., has received the compliment of a unanimous election to the Presidency of Soule University at Chapel Hill, Texas.

Rev. Staunton Field, who had been for twenty-five years a minister in the Methodist Church in Virginia, died at Amherst C. H., on the 7th inst.

Mr. Cyrus H. McCormick has endowed a Professorship in the Union Theological Seminary, Virginia, by giving $30,000 for that purpose.

Rev. Dr. Robinson, Professor in the Baptist Theological Seminary, of Rochester, has brought himself under the denominational ban and been denounced as a rationalist.

The Memphis Advocate learns that in a few weeks Rev. S. D. Baldwin, D. D., of Nashville, will publish a new volume on prophecy. It will be finely illustrated, and will be entitled "America; or the Predicted Solution of Mystic Prophecy; the Restoration of America, immediately after the transformation of Italy, and the Fall of the Ottoman Empire."

The profits of Lord Derby's version of the Iliad amount to $1350, and have been given as a prize for the pupils of the Wellington College.

...infectants, and How to Use Them.

The following is a copy of a card upon disinfectants, just issued by the Board of Health of New York city, together with directions for their use. They have interest at this time, when the gradual increase of cholera in the country makes it scarcely probable that we shall escape its visitation :

1. Quick lime, to absorb moisture and putrid fluids. Use fresh stone lime broken; sprinkle it on the place to be dried, and in damp rooms place a large number of plates filled with the lime powder. White-wash with pure lime and not with kalsomine.

2. Charcoal powder, to absorb putrid gasses. The coal must be dry and fresh and should be combined with lime. This compound is the "cale powder."

3. Chloride of lime, to give off chloride, to absorb putrid effluvia and to stop putrefaction. Use it as lime is used, and if in cellars or close rooms the chlorine gas is wanted, pour strong vinegar or diluted sulphuric acid upon your plates of chloride of lime occasionally, and add more of chloride.

4. Sulphate of iron (copperas,) to disinfect the discharges from cholera patients, to purify privies and drains. Dissolve 10 pounds of the copperas in a common pailful of water, and pour a quart or two of this strong solution into the privy, water closet or drain, every hour if cholera discharges have been thrown into those places; but for ordinary use, to keep the privies and water closets from becoming offensive, pour a pint of this solution into every water closet, pan, or privy seat every night and morning. Always sprinkle a cupful of chloride of lime or lime powder in the same place, and chamber vessels are best disinfected in this way, by a spoonful of chloride of lime and a spoonful of the copperas solution.

5. Permanganate of Potassa—to be used in disinfecting clothing and towels from cholera and fever patients, during the night, or when such articles cannot be instantly boiled. Throw the soiled articles immediately into a small tub of water in which has been dissolved an ounce of the permanganate salt to every 6 or 8 gallons of water. A pint of "Labarraque's solution of chlorinated soda" may be used for the same purpose in the tub of water. Either of these solutions may be used in cleansing the soiled parts of the body of sick or dead persons. May also be used in bed pans.

For water-closets use 4 and 3; privies, 4, 3, and 2; bed-pans and close stools, 1, 3, and 5; cellars, 1, 2, 3; vaults and stables, 1 and 2, or 3 and 4, or any powders of coal-tar.

For disinfecting soiled clothing, bedding and carpets, boil whatever can be boiled, that has been soiled by cholera discharges. Use less solution of chloride of lime or chlorinated soda, a quart of either solution to ten gallons of water, if the articles are coarse and their colors of no consequence; but upon fine clothing that has been soiled in cholera or fevers, use the articles described under No 5, in the list above.

In sick rooms use 1, 2, or 3; ventilate the bed-rooms, cleanse and dry the closets, ventilate the beds and bedding frequently in the sun.

Finally, let fresh air and sunlight purify every place and thing they can reach. Open and dry your cellars and vaults. Flush the water-closets and drains daily before throwing in the disinfectants as directed on the card.—Let there be no neglect of domestic and personal cleanliness.

Report on the Riot to President Johnson.

STATEMENT OF LIEUT.-GOV. VOORHIES, ATTORNEY GENERAL HERRON AND MAYOR MONROE.

NEW ORLEANS, August 3, 1866.

To His Excellency President Andrew Johnson :

Sir—Your excellency is already in possession of the main facts as regards to the conspiracy which, by reviving the Convention of 1864, purposed to subvert the civil government of Louisiana.

An informal meeting of 29 members—150 being the whole number and 76 a quorum—proceeded to depose the President of the Convention, who considered the convention itself extinct and himself functus officio, and to elect R. K. Howell as President pro tem. They adjourned to meet again; and a proclamation was issued by the President pro tem., convening the convention to meet on the 30th of July last, and directing His Excellency, the Governor of the State, to issue writs of election to fill vacancies.

So far the whole matter was looked upon as a harmless experiment, although mischievously intended, the people being confident that the Governor would not condescend to notice this proclamation, and that in case the Convention would commit any act of interference, would at once have it disperse:

Unfortunately, however, after the lapse of nearly a month, the Governor issued writs of election to fill up fifty-one vacancies in that body; this document, to which the Secretary of State refused to give his attestation under the seal of State, was issued under the attestation of the Private Secretary of the Governor!

The people of the State became alarmed when no doubt could be entertained as to the fact that their Chief Magistrate had given willing aid and assistance to subvert the Government, the preservation of which was especially entrusted to his keeping. On Friday, 27th of July, a large meeting was held in the hall of the House of Representatives, professedly for the advocacy of universal suffrage, but in reality to organize for the meeting of the Convention on the Monday following. The object of this meeting was to arouse the passions and prejudices of the colored population, so as to make them the victims of a riot, by arging them headlong into a conflict with the State and municipal authorities. On the other hand we were determined to prevent riot and bloodshed, by pursuing such a course as would baffle the nefarious calculations of those agitators. Our remedy, and the only remedy, must be by recourse to the usual process of law—and even then to proceed in such a way as to fasten upon them the responsibility of all collision whatever.

The case was submitted to the Grand Jury, by the Attorney General, and in the meantime the Lieutenant Governor and the Mayor called upon Gen. Baird to ascertain whether, if a warrant issued upon a regular indictment, were placed in the hands of the Sheriff for the arrest of the members of the Convention, the military would interfere.

The answer was that the Sheriff himself would be arrested and that the Convention, meeting peaceably, could not be interfered with by the military in case he would proceed to disperse the Convention as an unlawful assemblage. The answer to this communication was, that, the meeting of the Convention being peaceable, could not be suppressed by the Mayor; and that the military authorities would prevent the interference of the city authorities.

It was suggested by the Lieutenant Governor that the city authorities under those circumstances did not intend to interfere to prevent the meeting of the Convention; but he proposed that in case a warrant of arrest were placed in the hands of the Sheriff, the latter, before attempting to execute it, would call upon the General, who, thereupon, would endorse his objections; and the matter would at once be submitted to the President. This arrangement was satisfactory to both parties. On the same day, the Attorney General and the Lieutenant Governor telegraphed to the President to ascertain whether the process of court for the arrest of the members of the Convention could be thwarted by the military. The answer was that, instead of obstructing, the military was expected to sustain the courts.

On Sunday (29) the State and municipal authorities called upon the press to advise the people as to the proper conduct to be held the next day, so as to avoid all collision and riot; and the Mayor issued his proclamation to the same effect. The press of the city, with the exception of the Radical organ, gave wise and salutary counsels to the public, inviting all good citizens to avoid congregating about the capital, and to demean themselves with prudence and discretion.

On the morning of the 30th the Lieutenant Governor called upon General Baird, to communicate to him the President's dispatch; and also inquired from the General if he would not have some troops in the vincinity of the Hall, to preserve peace and good order. General Baird answered that application had been made by members of the Convention for that purpose, and that his reason for not complying, was that he did not deem it wise appear to take side with either party, or to uphold the Convention. The suggestion was then made that to have too large a police force on the spot might be construed as meant to overawe the members, and that, insamuch as the civil authorities did not intend interfering with the Convention, until instructions received from the President as above agreed on, it was proper to have troops to co-operate with a small police force to preserve peace and prevent all possible attempt to bring about a collision. The suggestion met the approval of the General, who then stated that he would give immediate orders to have the troops in readiness.

Before the end of this interview it was again agreed upon between Geo. Baird and the Lieutenant Governor that whatever warrant of arrest might be placed in the hands of the Sheriff, would be submitted to him before any attempt to have it executed; and that, upon the endorsement of the General's objections, the matter would be referred to the President.

The Mayor being informed of the arrangement, had sent but a small police force to the vincinity of the Hall, and the troops that were to act in conjunction with the police were eagerly expected.

At noon information having reached the Lieutenant Governor that in the Third District there was a commencement of effervescence, and that large numbers of negroes were coming toward Canal street from above and below, he immediately sent a dispatch to the General, conveying this intelligence, and urging that the troops be sent without delay. About an hour afterward the riot broke out, ending in the dispersion of the Convention and the capture of the rioters, including several members of this body.

It is not our purpose to argue the question of fact as to the actual commencement of the collision, and to fix precisely the mode and manner in which it originated. We will, however, remark that the collision was, in every instance, brought about by the armed mob sustaining the Convention. Suffice it to say, that the civil authorities took all the precaution possible to prevent the outbreak; that they applied during three days previous to have the aid of military to preserve order at the place where the Convention was to meet; that the authorities, State and municipal, had come to an understanding to act in concert with the military for that purpose; that the citizens, no more than the police, contemplated to prevent the Convention to hold their meeting peaceably, and adjourn and disperse unmolested; and that the warrant for their arrest would have been submitted to the military, as agreed upon, although the President's dispatch to the Lieutenant Governor, and the subsequent one to the Attorney General, were imperative that the military must sustain and not thwart the courts.

The military authorities have been, for the three days previous to the riot, in constant communication with the Attorney General, the Lieutenant Governor and the Mayor, with the view of preventing the impending riot. These efforts were unsuccessful, and could not counteract the effects of the incendiary councils and appeals of those who, for sinister purposes, had in view this very result, in order to reap a political harvest. That the civil authorities have done their duty in this respect, is patent; that more could have been done by them is impossible, as they were not allowed to remove the cause of the riot, by taking the proper means to prevent the meeting of the Convention, and we doubt not for a moment that the military commander himself will be the first to corroborate these facts, and to arrest all calumnious imputations against the conduct of our people under these trying circumstances.

As regards the proclamation of martial law, the least that can be said is that it was inopportune; for the rioting had ceased completely, the police being masters of the situation. The colored population, as a body, did not participate in the disgraceful scenes, and freedmen in the vicinity of the riot were standing as lookers-on without being molested. The colored mob, in union with a few white rioters who were leading them in this affair, were no doubt well organized. That they were well armed is undoubted, since forty-two policemen and several citizens were either killed or wounded by them, although the conflict was over in less than two hours. Twenty-seven rioters were killed and considerable number wounded.

At dark, when all was over, when those of the mob were either dispersed or in prison, and tranquillity and order were restored, martial law was proclaimed, and the prisons, where the rioters were confined, emptied by orders from Headquarters. These measures were not intended for reviving the hopes of the outlaws, but were they not calculated to inspire them with false hopes? The very next morning the organ of the agitators was issued, containing as usual the most inflammatory articles, and so the succeeding issues.

Had the military, on Monday afternoon, taken a stand to co-operate with the civil authorities, instead of proclaiming martial law, the most beneficial effects would have been the result.

We remain, very respectfully,
Your obedient servants,
ALBERT VOORHIES,
Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana.
A. S. HERRON,
Attorney General of Louisiana.
JOHN T. MONROE,
Mayor of New Orleans.

FOREIGN.

LIVERPOOL, August 6.—Cotton sales to day, 8000 bales. Market closed flat, with a decline of 1-4d. per pound.

NEW YORK, August 6.—A special dispatch to the Herald by the cable, dated London, August 5th, says before the armistice had been extended to Bavaria, the Prussian army had progressed rapidly and secured a good footing. They are forcing a paper currency upon the people. By the agreement the Prussians are to occupy Wurtemburg, but the Bavarians are to retain the fortress of Meatz. The Bavarians left it yesterday, and the Wartembnrg troops will leave on the 8th inst. The river Rhine is reopened. During the last three days the Austrians have been pouring into the Tyrol, via Bavaria, to the number of about 40,000.

The Italian navy is to be reorganized. The court martial of Admiral Persiano, who recently commanded the Italian fleet, is progressing.

A new Italian loan of three hundred and fifty million dollars has been ordered since the signing of the truce.

There has been no further disturbance of the peace in London. The reform league has called a meeting at Hyde Park on the 30th ult., with the alleged consent of the Government. The military declared that no such consent had been given and warned the league against holding the meeting. They admitted the misunderstanding and resolved to abandon the meeting and hold it instead at the Agricultural Hall at Islington. The government gave its assent to a meeting at Princess Hill or other appropriate spot, but will not allow the royal parks to be used until the question of right has been determined. The government gave notice in the House of Commons of the necessity for a renewal of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in Ireland.

The truce expired on the 27th, but was prolonged to August 2d. A four week's armistice, commencing from the latter date, was concluded. It was also announced that the peace preliminaries had been signed and had reached Vienna for ratification by the Emperor of Austria. The union of the German States was not included in the armistice, and hostilities between them and Prussia continue.

The suspension of hostilities between Austria and Italy commenced on the 25th.

The following bulletin was posted on the Paris Bourse on the 29th :

"The plenipotentiaries of Austria and Prussia have signed an armistice for four weeks."

The Calir of Florence states that negotiations for the conclusion of an armistice had led to a result satisfying the dignity and interest of Italy.

The same paper says France has recognized the right of the inhabitants of Venetia to dispose of their own destiny.

Austria, it is said, has withdrawn her demand in reference to the intervention on the part of the Catholic powers in the Roman question.

Peace negotiations were to take place directly between Italy, Prussia and Austria.

LIVERPOOL, August 7, 6 P. M. (By the cable.)—The sales of cotton to-day amounted to 7000 bales, the market closing dull.

LONDON, August 8.—The relations between the Governments of Austria and Italy are assuming a threatening attitude.

In opening the Prussian Chambers the King said: "Now that I see assembled around me the representation of the country, my heart impels me to express first of all, from this place, my own and the people's thanks for God's gracious goodness, which has assisted Prussia amidst heavy but successful sacrifices not only in averting from our frontiers the danger of hostilities, but in enabling the army of the country by a rapid victory to add fresh laurels to interested fame and to smooth a course for the national development of Germany, accompanied by the visible blessings of God. The part of the nation capable of bearing arms enthusiastically embraced the summons to the sacred struggle for independence and fatherland. Our heroic army, supported by a few but faithful allies, has advanced from success to success, from victory to victory, in the east and west, in which precious blood has been shed, and the country mourns the loss of many brave men who died heroes in the flush of triumph, until our standard waved along a line extending from the Carpathian to the Rhine. It will be for the Government and representatives of the people in the united corporation to bring to maturity the fruit that must be gathered from the sanguinary contest, and prevent it from being scattered in vain. Loyal gentlemen of both houses of the Diet! My Government has been to look with satisfaction upon the financial position of the State. Careful foresight and conscientious economy have placed it in a position to overcome the great financial difficulties which have resulted as a natural consequence from the circumstances of the present time. Although material outlay was imposed upon the treasury during recent years by the war with Denmark, it has been found possible to meet the expenses hitherto incurred in the present war from the State revenue and existing balances, without imposing any other burden on the country than that of furnishing supplies in kind for war purposes which it is bound to provide by law.

LIVERPOOL, August 8.—The King of Prussia was at Berlin on the 5th. In reply to a congratulatory address, he said Prussia had drawn the sword not only for her own independence, but for the recognization of Germany.

The first had been achieved, and the second may be obtained.

BERLIN, PRUSSIA, August 6.—At the sitting of the Chambers to-day, the members cheered the King and the Prussian victories. Count Stolbert was elected President of the Upper House.

Prussia has positively declined the proposals of Russia for a Congress of the Powers which signed the treaty of Vienna.

VIENNA, AUSTRIA, July 6.—It is expected a definite treaty of peace will soon be signed by the Austrian and Prussian Plenipotentiaries at Pregno.

Italy is not included. If the difficulty relative to the armistice with Italy is not arranged within a few days, hostilities will be renewed.

FLORENCE, ITALY, July 6.—Italian and Austrian Generals have met at Camarin, in Austria, to negotiate. France takes no part in the pending armistice. Austria and Italy, if it can be arranged, will hold a separate peace conference with the concurrence of France.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

We have but little change to notice (says the Price Current of Wednesday) in the general market, operations in which have been on a limited scale, with the exception of Corn and Flour, the demand for which has improved, while the movement in our leading staple has been materially checked by the discouraging tenor of the dispatches received through the Cable as well as by the further decline in Foreign Exchange.

COTTON.—We noticed in our last report, that after a very limited business the market closed heavy at 27 to 29c for Ordinary, 30-to 32c for Good Ordinary, 34 to 36c for Low Middling and nominal rates for Middling. Yesterday, the market continued extremely dull, with the movement confined to a few brokers, who exhibited unwillingness to go on unless at greater reductions than factors would submit to, and consequently the day's sales summed up barely 600 bales at prices indicating a tendency in favor of buyers.

Low	20 to 23
Ordinary	25 to 28
Good Ordinary	30 to 31
Low Middling	33 to 35

TOBACCO.—Since our last review the only sale of any importance was a lot of 50 hogsheads Clarksville Leaf on private terms.

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused	4 to—	—to 5c,	Currency.
Good do	5½ to 6	6½ to 7
Common Leaf	7½ to 8	9 to 11
Fair	12 to 13	14 to 15
Good	15 to 16	16 to 17
Fine	17 to 18	18 to 19
Choice Selec'n	20 to —	21 to 25

SUGAR.—Extreme dullness continues to prevail and only a retail business is doing at 12¼ to 13¾c for Nos. 12 and 13 Cuba Sugar, 14 to 14¾c for Nos. 14 and 15, 15¼ to 16¾c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17¼c for Nos. 19 and 20.

MOLASSES.—There has been only a small retail business doing at 55 to 56c per gallon for Good Cuba. There is no demand for large or round lots, which are quoted at 52½c per gallon.

FLOUR—The supplies are small but amply sufficient for the demand, which is only local. Yesterday about 1600 bbls were sold, in small lots, at $8 37½ to $8 50 for Superfine, $9 25 for some on merits, $11 25 to $12 25 for Good Extra, $12 87½ to $13 for Choice Extra, and $15 per bbl for very Choice and Fancy Extra.

BACON—The market is well supplied with Sugar-cured Hams, but there are few Clear Sides and scarcely any merchantable Shoulders and no Ribbed Sides on hand. A brisk retail demand prevails and Inferior Shoulders have been selling at 17½ to 18c, Ribbed Sides at 21½c, Clear Ribbed Sides at 21¾, bright Clear Sides at 23½ and sugar-cured Hams 25½ to 26c per lb. Fancy brands command 27c per lb.

PORK—Has been more in request, an advance of 57c has been established. Dealers have been supplying the retail demand at $35 50 to $36 per barrel.

GREEN MEAT.—The market is bare of Sides and Hams. There are some few Shoulders on hand, which are retailing at 17¾ to 18c per lb.

LARD—There is only a retail demand which is being supplied by dealers at 21½ to 22c per lb for Prime in tierces and 23½c in kegs.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—Butter commands 40 to 43c while Western is selling at 25 to 35c per lb. Cheese is in light supply and better demand. It is selling at 18 to 20c for Western, and the same for Northern, and English Dairy at 25 to 26c per lb.

CORN—The supplies have been liberal and have exceeded the demand and prices for White have declined 2½ to 5c per bushel. Yesterday 3000 sacks were sold at 77 to 78c for Mixed, 80c for Yellow and $1 05 for White.

OATS—Are in fair supply but not much in demand. Yesterday 500 sacks sold at 50 to 52c per bushel, indicating a decline.

BRAN.—Yesterday 2000 sacks sold at $1 to $1 02½ per 100 lbs.

HAY.—The market is well supplied but is very dull. The last sales of St. Louis were at $13 25 per ton.

HOPS.—There are few Hops in the market, but there is little or no demand, and prices are nominal. Belgian are held at 80 to 83c, and American at 75c per lb.

INDIA BAGGING.—Is scarce and continues in request. Prices are still advancing. Yesterday 63 and 65 bales sold at 36½c per yard. Subsequently 36½c was refused and 37c was asked. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at the further advanced prices of 35c in rolls, and 37c in bales.

BALE ROPE—The market continues quiet, but steady and round lots are quoted at 18 to 18½c per lb. Dealers are obtaining 18½c per lb. Iron Cotton Ties are selling at 12c per lb.

COFFEE—There is very little in market and none in first hands. The demand for the country is being supplied at 27½ to 28c per lb, currency for Fair and Good Fair Rio and 29 for Prime.

GUNNY BAGS.—There are not many in the market. They sell in a small way at 37c a piece.

STAR CANDLES.—Are in fair jobbing demand and there have been small sales at 20c per lb for 12 oz, 22½c for 14 oz, and 25c for full weight.

SOAP.—Palm is jobbing at 8c per lb.

RICE.—There is no Carolina in market and no India in first hands. The latter is selling from second hands at 9 to 10c per lb. Louisiana commands 11 to 12c per lb.

WOOL.—Is in good supply but very little in demand. There is a great deal of Surry Wool on hand but no demand for that description. A lot of four thousand pounds Texas, unwashed and part burry, sold at 26c per lb.

SALT.—The stock on hand is small. Road lots of Liverpool Coarse and Fine are quoted at $1 75 to $1 80 per sack, while dealers have been obtaining $1 85 to $1 90 per sack for Coarse in store and warehouse, and $1 95 to $2 for Fine.

NAVAL STORES.—The stock on hand is small, but there is not much demand. Sales are making in a small way as follows: No. 3 $2 to $3, No. 2 Rosin at $4 to $5, No. 1 $5 to $6, No. 1 White $7, Pitch $6, Tar $2 50 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine commands 55 to 60c per gallon and at retail 65 to 70c per gallon.

HIDES.—Are in good demand, but there are but few on hand and only small sales are making in consequence of the advanced prices of 9¼ to 10c for Green Hides, 10½ to 11c for Kip Skins, and 12 to 13c per lb for Dry Hides.

ESCULENTS.—Sound Potatoes are selling at $2 50 to $2 75 per bbl, Onions $3 50 to $3 75 per bbl. Apples $4 to $5 per bbl. Cabbages 10 to 15c a piece.

POULTRY & EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $4 for the small and $11 per dozen for the large; Geese at $10 00 and Turkeys at $30 00 per dozen. Western eggs are selling at $9 to $12 per bbl.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY,
Tuesday evening, August, 7, 1866.

Western Beef, choice per lb net	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$12 to 20
Hogs per lb gross	12 to 13
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Choice Sheep, per head	$6 to $8
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $80
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12 to $25
Yearlings, per head	$10 to $14
Calves per head	$2 50 to $10

OBITUARIES.

Mrs. CATHARINE McNEIL was born in Bladen Co., N. C., of pious parents, who early instilled into her mind, the principles of religion, especially a strict observance of the sabbath, her parents being descendants of Scotch Covenanters.

She was married to John McNeil Feb., 1793, and removed to Lumberton, N. C., where she became awakened to the necessity of salvation, which she sought diligently, till the doctrines of election and reprobation came in upon her like a flood, but going to hear the Methodists, she was powerfully converted, and joined in with those who have ever proclaimed a free salvation.

In 1829, she started for La. and arrived in Springfield in 1830, where she found neither church nor gospel, yet going to work she formed a Sunday School, and sent for brother Matthews to come and preach for them, which he did, and a society sprang up, where she became a class leader herself. Removing in 1832 to Covington, she was again thrown out of the halts of the gospel, but sending for Bro. Raiford, a revival took place, and again a congregation and a house were raised to praise the Lord.

She lived to see her husband, and all her children but two, depart this life; and, amid all her trials and afflictions preserved a cheerfulness and faith which was refreshing to all who visited her.

She left a deep interest in the people of Covington, and made it a rule to use and spend the silent hour between twelve and one at night, in prayer for their conversion. She died June 29th, 1866, in the 93rd year of her age, being, indeed, like Deborah, "a mother in Israel." V.

Charleston papers please copy.

VINCENT WILLSON, was born in West Minster, near London, Nov., 1795, and departed this life in Covington, La., July 2nd, 1866, in the 71st year of his age.

Father Wilson was a man of deep and uniform piety; free, open and generous; never jesting or trifling, and yet remarkably pleasant and cheerful.

He was abducted from his parents in London, while quite a child, and carved to France, whence he left and came to New York; learned a trade; enlisted in U. S. army, and was ordered to Florida. When his term of service was on, he resumed his trade in Alabama, when hearing of a Camp meeting, went to see it, and was happily converted to God, and joined the Church. He then came to Louisiana, where he married his wife, Catharine Reber, and visiting his people in England, after an absence of forty years, was recognized, and received his portion of his father's property. Returning to America, he settled in Covington, in this State, where he has ever since remained to serve the Church, and adorn the gospel of Christ. He died as he lived, in peace with God and man, and is gone to reap a rich reward in that "house not made with hands eternal in the heaven." V.

Covington, July 19th, 1866.

☞ London papers please copy.

INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANO.

A lady whose high attainments as a composer and as a performer on and successful teacher of the Piano, can be well attested, proposes to give lessons to a few pupils in the city, commencing in September or October.

Reference; Rev J C Keener, D D; Rev J B Walker, D D; Rev L Parker.

For particulars address: "Pianist," Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

JOHN G. PARHAM, of New Orleans. SEVERLY BLUNT, of Hinds Co., Miss.
PARHAM & BLUNT,
COTTON FACTORS,
Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents,
No 26 Carondelet st (First Floor), New Orleans
aog11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY & CO.,
General Commission Merchants and
COTTON FACTORS,
57 Poydras street.
Cotton Office—192 Common street—in charge of RICHARD J. NUGENT. aug1ft

NEW DISCIPLINES.

The Agent at the Depository has just received the invoice of the first shipment of the New Disciplines, from Nashville, on the 24th inst.

PRICE: SIXTY CENTS.

Thirty per cent. off to wholesale dealers and to Preachers who buy to sell again.

Address—
REV. R. J. HARP, Agent,
No. 112 Camp street; Lock Box 814,
jy28tf New Orleans.

THE BALTIMORE EPISCOPAL METHODIST will be issued in this city the first of next month. Its publication will be under the management of the Rev JOHN POISAL, Dr. THOMAS E. BOND and Rev S. S. ROSZEL, Editors. The "Episcopal Methodist," of Richmond, Virginia, having been transferred to Baltimore, Bishop Hogget and Rev. J. E. Edwards will continue their services as Editorial correspondents. Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D., General Agent. The best talent of the Southern Church will be employed upon its columns. The publisher has the pleasure to announce that contributions may be expected from Bishop Pierce of Georgia, Bishop Marvin of Texas, Bishop McTyeire of Alabama, Bishop Wightman of South Carolina, Dr. Summers of Nashville, Dr. Marshall of Mississippi, Dr. Huston of Kentucky and others.

This important organ of communication between our respective communities, will be published regularly one a week on fine paper, large type and quarto size at $1 00 per annum, or $2 00 for six months, invriably in advance.

Office of publication, 332 W. Baltimore Street Selby & Dulaney, where subscriptions and advertisements may be left. All the members of the Southern General Conference are authorized Agents. The preachers of the several annual Conferences and clergymen generally, are requested to act as agents for this paper.

THOS. E. BOND, Editor.
S. S. ROSZEL, Associate Editor.
JOHN POISAL, Publisher.
Baltimore, June 4th, 1866.

J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.
JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.
Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans. ap14-1y

R. K. WALKER. THOS. M'KNIGHT. J. P. JOHNSON.
R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondelet street, New Orleans jan 20 1y.

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

BOOTH & CO. ARCADE, HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c. Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.
Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jae20-1y

GEORGE L. HILL, ATTORNEY at Law, Marshall, Texas. Collections made in Eastern Texas and West Louisiana. mar27

WATTS, GIVEN & CO., Paducah, Ky. WATTS, CRANE & CO New York.
W. C. WATTS & CO., Liverpool, England.
GIVEN, WATTS & CO., COTTON Factors & General Commission Merchants, No. 103 Poydras street, New Orleans. Parties shipping their Cotton to us, can make their election, and have their choice of this, the New York or Liverpool markets. Advances made on consignments to our houses, Watts, Crane & Co New York, and W. C. Watts & Co. Liverpool. feb3-1y

W. A. BELL. FRED N. OGDEN. H. E. WITHERSPOON
WM. A. BELL & CO.,
General Commission Merchants,
And dealers in Bagging, Rope, Iron Ties, Gunny Bags, Coffee and Western Produce,
41 NATCHEZ STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
Particular attention given to the filling of orders for Factors, for Country Merchants and for Planters. je30-1y

ROBERT L. WALKER,
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans. ap21-1y

CARY W. BUTT. WM. FLASH. THOS. T. A. LYON
BUTT, FLASH & LYON,
Cotton Factors, General Commission and Forwarding Merchants, corner Carondelet and Union streets, New Orleans.
Orders for all descriptions of merchandise will meet prompt attention.
Liberal advances made on consignments of Cotton and Produce to our care. ap14-6m

J. G. ELLIS. W. C. CHAMBERLIN
ELLIS & CHAMBERLIN, COTTON Factors and Commission Merchants, 23 Carondelet street. jan 20-1y

R. M. DENMAN. B. M. HOLLINGSWORTH
R. MARSH DENMAN & CO., Carriage Repository, corner Carondelet and Gravier streets, New Orleans. 13 tf

J. P. HARRISON & SONS,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
51 UNION STREET,—UP STAIRS,
New Orleans.
J. P. Harrison, (formerly of Payne & Harrison)
Edward Harrison,
J. P. Harrison, Jun.,
Sidney Harrison,
John N. Harrison. jely7 1y

PAYNE, HUNTINGTON & CO.,
Cotton Factors,
No. 32 Union Street,
NEW ORLEANS.
J. U. PAYNE, G. W. HUNTINGTON,
W. C. H. DAMERON, H. M. PAYNE.
je23-1y

TOM HENDERSON, Late of Henderson, Terry & Co. SAM HENDERSON, Late of Violett, Black & Co.
TOM & SAM HENDERSON,
COTTON FACTORS
AND
General Commission Merchants,
190 COMMON STREET,
je9 1y New Orleans

J. C. M'ALLISTER, late of Memphis, formerly of Jackson, Miss.
E. M'NAIR, late of Arkansas, formerly of Miss.
H. GARDES, late of Washington, Arkansas.
McALLISTER, McNAIR & GARDES, Wholesale Grocers, 74 Common Street New Orleans, La. ap7

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,
HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD.
Established, August, 1861.
Destroyed, May, 1863.
Re-established, January, 1866.
SALES ROOMS,
C. E. CATE & CO.,
18 CAMP STREET, 18
Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURES to the various styles of
LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF-WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,
Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.
C. E. CATE & CO.
feb17 18 Camp st., N. O.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,
GREENSBORO, ALA.
The exercises of this Institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught
TERMS:
Tuition fees per term, ... $40 00
Contingent fee, ... 5 00
Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month
aug4ft W M WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.
The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.
The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.
TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40.—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March,
Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.
Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.
Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.
As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.
W. H. N. MAGRUDER.
Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE
HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,
REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.
Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.
Next annual term opens first Monday in September.
For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.
Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE
FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A. M., President; Mrs. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.
The Fall Session of this institution will open on the 26th day of September next.
This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattresses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.
The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.
TERMS:
For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks,	$67 50
Regular Tuition,	25 00
Incidental Fee,	2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of Instrument	37 50
French or Spanish,	15 00

Ornamental branches at usual prices.
☞ All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.
The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.
After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.
For other information address
CHARLES B. STUART, President,
aug4ft Mansfield, La.

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This Institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address
f3-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles st., corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered in 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no copying from books.
Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law; English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages; Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics and Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.
For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address
f3 1y GEO. SOULE, N. N.

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY.—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M.,	President, Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Marie S. Max

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

Help from Above.

A number of boys were slowly walking home from Sabbath school, and speaking of some remarks to which they had just listened. The subject of their lesson had been "The sin of profanity," and their teacher had tenderly and earnestly expostulated with her class, some of whom, she had reason to fear, were not free from the shocking habit of swearing. As they were talking, one of them turned to a boy by his side, a bright lad of fourteen years, and said—

"George, how did you leave off swearing? I've tried and cannot; and I do not see how you did it."

"Ah! Johnnie," was the reply, "you don't seek help from above. I never should have left off swearing had it not been for the prayer, 'Lead me not into temptation.' God helped me when I asked him. I know he did; and he'll do the same for you."

You do not swear, I trust, my young reader; but George's advice will suit every other bad habit as well. Go to God with it, and you will be made more than conqueror through Him who hath loved you.

How Little Herman was Lost.

All this time no one had dared to ask Herman to own how he had happened to get lost. Even his mother understood him so little, as to dread hearing that he had willfully strayed away. One day, however, when he seemed strong enough to do so, she begged him to tell her all about it.

Herman told his story in his usual straight-forward way, though he made as little as possible of what he had suffered.

"Then, mother," he said, "as soon as I found I was not in the right path, I thought I should soon strike into it; I called and I called to father, but no answer came, and I kept hurrying on. Then I was hungry and ate my cake, or at least half of it; and the rest I saved for Bernhard. It is in my pocket, now; I did not want it after I got hurt.

"At last it began to grow dark, and I knew then that they had gone home, and that I was left there all alone. It seemed so dismal! I thought if I ever got home again I would not mind father's not liking me; it seemed such a nice home, with the warm fire, and the supper and all the faces I loved around the table! But it kept growing darker and colder, and I tried to find some sort of shelter, I was so tired, mother! When it got to be bed-time, I knew Minna and Bernhard were saying their prayers, and so I thought I would say mine. So I knelt down and prayed to our dear Lord to take care of me. After that it did not seem so dark and lonesome, but I had to keep walking and jumping, it was so cold. At last, the first thing I knew, I was falling; ever so far it seemed, and then I was sure my leg was broken, it hurt so.

"By and by I heard father's voice calling 'Herman!'

"And I was just going to answer, but I remembered that he would be so angry with me for getting such a fall, and I knew I could not walk home, and I didn't think he could carry me—O mother! I knew I wasn't worth carrying! So I kept still, and pretty soon I heard the sound of his steps going farther and farther off. Then it seemed darker and more lonesome than ever, and I called 'father!' with all my might. But he had gone. And after a while I got to thinking that if they should find me and carry me home, the doctor would have to cut off my leg, and then I should be such a plague to father. He never would want a boy with only one leg. So I thought perhaps the dear Lord wouldn't mind that so much; but would let me go to heaven just the same, and I asked him; but I don't remember what happened next, only I found the hole I had fallen into—for I thought it was a hole—sheltered me from the cold, and I thought God was very good to let me fall into such a nice place. By and by it began to grow light, and that made home seem nearer; but then I found I was lying on such a narrow piece of the rock, that if I had moved the very least bit I should have rolled off and gone down, down, ever so far, and been dashed to pieces. Don't you remember what a deep place it is, mother?"

Yes; Doris remembered only too well.

"It seemed to strange, continued Herman, "that I should have landed on that piece of rock, instead of going all the way down. But it seemed yet stranger that I should have lain so still all night, instead of rolling over and getting killed. It made me think, just for a little while, mother, that our good Lord did not care if I was a good-for-nanght, and made me keep still on purpose.

"Then I heard father calling again; but I could not get courage to answer him, for of all the bad things I ever had done, this was the very worst. To fall down into such a dangerous place, and break my leg! And I couldn't think of any way he could get me out, unless he came down where I was; and that would be dreadful. But O mother! when I heard your voice I couldn't help crying out, and wanting to see you. And now only think, I'm getting well, and father seems so kind. Why, when he saw me down in the crevice, he cried! Yes, I saw him! He cried, mother!"

By this time Doris had to run away and cry too. But she soon came back, and made Herman try to get to sleep, since recalling his sufferings thus had excited him painfully.

(From the French of Napoleon Roussel.)

HISTORY OF A PIECE OF WOOD.

"To the sea! to the sea?"—"No; to the gallows upon the Place Royale, to serve as an example for all heretics!" "No; let us make him leap over this rock to the bottom of the precipice! the crows will have time to avenge the good Mother!" "No; to the sea!" "No; to the gallows!" And everybody cried out, and pressed around the poor stranger, bruised with blows from the feet of the men—torn by the nails of the women. He went out from the chapel of the Virgin, where they said he had uttered a horrible blasphemy. Two monks led him to the dungeon of the Holy Inquisition. What was his crime? Let us follow the crowd, and we shall soon know. Whether from humanity, or the desire to preserve their prey for the next auto da fe, the two conductors did their best to protect the unfortunate man from the mischief the people would have done him in their fury; and they brought him at last to the court of the awful tribunal, which was then sitting. The people cried out constantly; they even threatened to enter by main force, if they did not punish him immediately for the outrage done to the Madonna. In order to appease them, the Grand Inquisitor imagined nothing would be better than to announce to the agitated populace, by one of his familiars placed on the great balcony of the palace, that the holy tribunal was about to be informed at once on this matter, and to pronounce judgment on the guilty—he meant sentence of death. Repeated and noisy hurrahs followed these words. Whilst the people indulge themselves with this joy and this pleasant hope, we will follow the unknown before the tribunal. Scarcely had he entered, accompanied by two monks, when the president is informed of the crime, and one of the two fathers speaks thus:—"This man is guilty of blasphemy. The faithful, assembled in the chapel of our Lady, prostrated before her, adored in silence. A priest prayed at the foot of her altar; the young attendants waved their censors in her presence; the organ played a hymn which was going to be sung in her honour; all were silently gathered: when this stranger, this heretic, this child of Satan, perhaps Satan himself, placed behind a column, advances pertly to our Holy Mother, raises the pure veil which conceals her celestial figure, and in letting it fall again, and drawing a sigh, exclaims, 'The idolaters! the poor idolaters!" Indignation seized all the judges; the president could not contain himself. "Who are you?" cried he to the accused. "William Knox, an English sculptor." "Whence do you come?" "From India." "What have you to reply to the accusation brought against you?" "Nothing; it is true." "Of whom did you speak, in saying, 'The idolators!' Of the Indians?" "No; of you." "Of us!" "Of yourselves." A movement of anger passed over the dark figures of the Inquisitors: the president gnashed his teeth, and, striking with his fist upon the tribunal, he continued: "Do you know that in an hour I can send you to serve as straw to light the auto da fe, which is prepared?" "You can only do what God pleases." "Ah, well! I tell you God wills that you should be burned alive; do you hear?" "That is to say, you condemn without hearing me." "No, me speak, and you shall burn afuo; wards." "Do you hearken, audter God judge us. The funeral pile that you wish to light for me in this world would be kindled for you in the other; now listen to my justification, and remember that, in deciding on my death, you declare your own sentence." "A truce to menaces; speak your defence." "Listen. Some years since, I set out as an officer in an English regiment, which was going to India. After a month's voyage, our vessel was shipwrecked on a desert island. The crew and the provisions were saved; but the ship, damaged in every part, was some days after swallowed up from our sight. Reduced to inactivity on this uncultivated land, I took a fancy to exercise my skill as a sculptor, hoping that Heaven would send us help. I felled a tree, stripped off its branches, and, from the long and rounded trunks, made two perfectly equal parts. I fashioned both, and at the end of a month, had made two bodies of a woman—just alike. My work was scarcely finished, when the cry, 'A sail! a sail!' struck my ear. A merchant ship was in sight, our signals were perceived, and the next day we were taken on board with good will by her Italian captain. All our crew tried to express their gratitude by words, gifts, or promises. As for myself, I had lost all, and had no other means of showing my gratitude to the captain than by offering my work. He accepted it with pleasure. I even saw him smile and stroke his forehead, like a man suddenly enlightened by a happy idea. I was happy in his happiness, and soon thought no more of my trunk of the trees. "What connection has this history with your blasphemy?" interrupted a judge. "Wait. Two years later, I visited one of the most renowned pagodas in India, where a great number of pilgrims resorted, who came to honour the Madonna of the Temple, called the Blessed, the Holy, and the very Holy. Entering into the sanctuary of the idol, something struck me that it bore a resemblance to the statue which I had fashioned with my hands in the unknown island. I approach, I look, I touch, and I recognise unmistakable, the half of my trunk of wood, adored by these poor Indians." "Speak, then about these poor idolaters," interrupted the president. "True; and, I cursed the day in which the thought of sculpturing this wood occured to me. I saw myself in some way an accomplice of pagan worship, and I asked pardon from God."——"You pray to God!—you blasphemer of his very Holy Mother? But come to the point, for your Indian history has nothing to do with your crime. Speak quickly, for time presses." "I pursued my military service, and some years after, returning to Europe, I landed yesterday in this town, and the first person I met on the wharf was the Italian captain who had received us into his ship. As I told him of my unexpected meeting with my work in the Indian pagoda, he said to me, with a smile which had recalled to me that which had accompanied his happy idea, that indeed he had found no better way of ridiculing these idolatrous priests, than of selling them as a goddess fallen from heaven, one of the Madonnas of which I had made him a present. I reproach the captain for such conduct; he departed with a burst of laughter, and said to me on leaving, 'You will see many more of them.' Curious by nature, and above all curious to know everything that relates to religious worship, I come this morning to visit one of your chapels. I enter, and I observe, that looks, incense, adoration, prayers, are all directed towards a white drapery, which appears to cover the mysterious object of the worship. I approach, I raise the veil, and I see"——"What do you see?" "The sister of the Indian Madonna, my own work, the other half of my bit of wood?" "Lie! Imposture! Our Lady is descended from heaven!" "Yes, like that of the pagoda." "It is the image of the very Holy Mother!" "Like that of the pagoda." "She merits our adoration!" "Like that of the pagoda." "No; one is an idol,—the other is the holy image of the Mother of God." "They both came out of the same trunk of the tree, and with their branches I lighted my fire." "But if your history be true, do you not understand that our prayers have sanctified the work procured by your heretical hands?" The Brahmins also made prayers to purify that which they brought of the captain." "But it is not the image itself that we adore; it is the Queen of heaven whom it represents to us." "The Indian priest also told me that it was the resemblance of the goddess who reigns over the universe." "But, ignorant man, do not you understand that the Indian priests are idolaters, and that we Catholic priests are worshippers of the true God?" "I understand still better that between them and you there is no difference, for once this same trunk of a tree, these same hands, the same iron has fashioned." "Silence, blasphemer! you deserve to be burned as an obstinate unbeliever!" I believe in God." "You will then be burned as a Deist." "I believe in Jesus Christ sent from heaven." "You will be burned as a Socinian." "I believe in Jesus Christ, the son of God, and Saviour of men." "Yes: but you do not believe in the Virgin, and you will be burned as a Huguenot." "I believe that the Virgin Mary conceived by the Holy Spirit." "Well, you don't"——"No, indeed, I do not worship a piece of wood any more in Europe than in Asia, not more in a chapel than in a pagoda, nor in the Romish church than in Indian worship; and nothing in the world will make me bow the knee before the piece of wood which I myself"——"Silence heretic!"

We must also be silent, and hear his sentence of death. An hour after, the stranger walked toward the funeral pile, along with other heretics condemned to the same punishment, and the joyous crowd followed them. Already the executioner was prepared to attach him to the fatal stake, when the stranger, turning to the people, made a sign with his hand that he wished to speak. "Listen! listen!" cried some voices. "Gag him!" said the executioner to one of his assistants. But he was too late; the curiosity of the crowd was awakened, and as they prepared to close his mouth by main force, the cries were redoubled.—"No, no! Listen!" Taking advantage of the moment, the unknown mounted on the pile, and addressed the eager crowd. "They deceive you; believe me, they deceive you. It is not the religion of Christ which they teach you; it is paganism christianized." "Silence! silence!" "Yes, yes; the same Paganism which the Bible anathematizes on every page. Open the law of your God, and you will find written there, you who prostrate yourselves before wood and stone, these words proceeding from the mouth of God:—'Thou shalt not make any graven image; thou shalt not bow down to them, nor serve them'* And you poor pagan Catholics, you do as the idolater whom the prophet Isaiah ridicules. He cut a tree from the forest; he burns part of it in the fire to warm himself, and, to cook the food of which he eats; 'and the residue thereof he maketh a god, even his graven image: he falleth down unto it, and worshippeth it, and prayeth unto it, and saith, Deliver me; for thou art my God.'"† Furious at the hearing of these words, a monk snatches a torch from the hands of the executioner, and brings it near to the base of the pile. "No! no!" cry the people on all sides, "let us listen to the end." "No!" cry other voices, "he is the blasphemer of our good Mother, whom they compel to kneel before the Virgin, the Mother of God, the Queen of heaven, the source of all the graces." "Well, then: listen to this Virgin Mary," interrupted the stranger; "listen to her. She herself is going to speak." Surprised with this announcement, always ready to believe the marvellous, the people imagined that the Virgin Mary was about to descend from heaven, to make herself heard. All their looks were directed to heaven, to see her arrive; and the malefactor, profiting by the silence, resumed:—"Hear what the Virgin Mary said; not words are written in the Gospel: 'My spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour. For he that regarded the low estate of his handmaiden.'† Thus, she whom you adore, herself says to you that she was drawn from a low estate, and that she is only the handmaiden of the Lord—and you dethrone God to place his handmaiden upon his throne; you keep the Saviour of the world in the swaddling-clothes of infancy, to make a woman reign. Restore each to his place; God upon his throne, Jesus on his right hand, and the Virgin Mary to the class of blessed women who bow and worship. Believe in God, who created you; believe in Jesus Christ, who can save you; but place yourselves beside Mary, created and saved like you? Jesus Christ is the son of God; the Virgin is the daughter of man; Jesus Christ is God. Mary is a woman, and if you can understand your privileges—if you have courage enough to break the yoke of your priest, and to place their words, not above the Gospel, but the Gospel above their words, you will see that the Gospel, the New Testament—the whole Bible condemns your idolatry, that everywhere we find in it—Worship God alone, believe in Jesus Christ; call upon the Holy Spirit: but that not a single word of worship, faith, or prayer, is required for the Virgin Mary. This is what the word of Christ says. If you do not wish to hear it, if you only listen to the voice of your Catholic Church; you are Catholics, but you are not Christians."

This time the monk succeeded; and whilst the crowd, attentive to these words, forgot all besides, he had set fire to the pile. The flames suddenly ascended, and the fickle multitude, who at all times prefer such spectacles to the words of truth, passed very quickly from this discourse, to the wish to see the appearance the martyr would assume in the midst of the fire, which already crackled in every part. The unknown joined his hands, raised a resigned look towards heaven, and his head fell motionless upon his breast. A few minutes reduced this body to ashes; but his soul escaped to go into heaven, to contemplate the glory of his God in heaven, and to enjoy his love, in the midst of the crowd of Martyrs, of Apostles, and by the the side of the Virgin Mary.

* Isa. xliv. 14—19. † Luke i. 47, 48.

Inordinate Anxiety.

There is no system but that of Christianity capable of teaching such lessons and instilling such principles as are necessary to restrain men from inordinate anxiety concerning worldly matters. It is the disposition of man almost universally to go beyond the limits of proper care in reference to the things of this world, and only so far as Christianity exercises its influence can we behold any proper restraint of this disposition. The objects with reference to which this disposition manifests itself are numerous and various; in fact, this disposition accommodates itself to circumstances, so that there is scarcely anything but may become the object of inordinate anxiety, in view of which, all who are not surrounded with proper restraints are in continual danger of becoming over-anxious about some worldly matter. While it is perfectly right in us to give due attention to worldly matters, it is entirely wrong to overstep the bounds of moderation by giving way to an exoited propensity of our fallen nature. There are those, however, who have grown very immoderate in their attachment to worldly interests, and manifest an unwarranted degree of anxiety concerning them. There are many evils connected with such a course, since it leads the mind and heart away from God, in whom man's highest interests are found, and without whom no real good can be realized or enjoyed. The worldly-minded are a sure prey to the evils of this course, and even those who profess the Christian religion are in danger of becoming over anxious about many worldly things, in consequence of which constant vigilance is essential. There is no good reason why a Christian should become inordinately anxious about any worldly matter, and indeed he can not do so without showing distrust in the faithfulness of that God who has said, "All things shall work together for good to them that love God, who are the called according to his purpose;" and yet there are many professed Christians who neglect that religion which is able to preserve the mind from distracting cares and anxieties, and who join in with the worldly-minded to murmur, and fret, and disquiet themselves concerning the things of time. When trying and difficult circumstances present themselves, the Christian should never step down into the ranks of the world, and suffer himself to be carried by a current of evil down the stream of worldly anxiety, into the sea of worldly wretchedness; but on the other hand, he should present the whole matter to the Lord, casting all his cares upon Him who careth for his people, and who hath said, "Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me." But, alas! how true it is, that in many cases God is left entirely out of the question! Look for a moment at the course pursued by many in our day, and then tell me, if you please, how much their conversation and conduct testify in favor of a true religious sentiment and feeling. They profess to be Christians, but overthrow that profession by the manifestation of an inordinate anxiety concerning worldly matters. O! that God would open the eyes of such as are blind to their own interests of the Church, and the religion of Jesus Christ, that they might see the folly of their course in being inordinately anxious about worldly matters!

Reader: Are you of that number whose minds are almost wholly taken up with worldly matters, and who cannot bear with Christian calmness and fortitude the trials and troubles of your day? If so, let me exhort you to a better state of mind, and a better state of feeling, by asking you to enter upon a better course of life. Go thou to the Lord—but your trust in him—serve him faithfully while you live—and with reference to the things of this world, "let your moderation be known to all men."—Presbyterian Witness.

* Ex. xx. 4, 5.

Sea Water as a Medicine.

While considering the curative powers of sea water as a bath, we must not omit to notice its internal use and efficacy in many diseases. Looking to its chemical composition, which shows it to be strongly saline, such results might have been anticipated, even from a direct experience. Sea water contains four per cent of salts, the chief of which are chloride of sodium or common table salt, sulphate of magnesia or Epsom salts, and chloride of magnesium or bitter purging salt, bromide, and, in minute proportions, sulphate of lime, chloride of potassium, carbonate of lime or chalk of magnesium. Iodine has been found in the waters of the Mediterranean. Sea water contains, also, certain animal and vegetable substances—some in solution, others in a state of mixture.

Sea water is drunk, medicinally, either as a purgative or an alterative. By the latter term we understand a medicine which produces a gradual change in the several organs of the body, and notably on the diseased one, without any immediately sensitive operation. A pint in the morning before breakfast in two doses, at half an hour's interval between them, will suffice to act freely on the bowels. When this quantity does not pass off readily, it is apt to heat and irritate, and to derange the system for the rest of the day. A preferable practice is to drink half a pint at bedtime, and the same quantity mixed with as much boiling water as is sufficient to warm it, on the following morning. Taken in this manner it hardly ever disturbs in the night, while it rarely fails, even in smaller doses, thus divided, to produce the desired effect. A purge of sea water, in the manner now directed, is a proper prelude to the bath, provided that a day be allowed to elapse before having recourse to the latter. The objections made to the drinking of water on the score of its disagreeable taste, and its liability to be spoiled by keeping, and hence the impossibility of using it at a distance, are entirely removed by filtration, and charging it with five times its volume of carbonic acid, as in making the soda of the shops. At the shore, the water should be procured as far ont at sea as possible, and then kept for twelve hours before being drank. During this time it purifies itself. Sea water as a purgative is best adapted to persons of a phlegmatic temperament and sluggish circulation, and torpid state of the bowels. It is, on the other hand, forbidden in hectic fevers, and in irritable and bilious habits.

As an alterative, sea water has been administered, with excellent effects, in many chronic diseases, or those of long duration unaccompanied by fever. We may specify first, and most emphatically, scrofula, a common indication and fruit of which is swelling and often inflammation and ulceration of the glands of the neck: also, disorders of the eyelids, swelling of the joints, worms, gravel, eruptions of the skin, some of which are attended with intolerable itching. The remedy has been found to succeed in cases of jaundice without fever; and in obstructions caused by gall stones; colic associated with constipation; also in palsy. We can speak positively of its beneficial operation as a tonic and alterative in dyspepsia. The dose will be from a tablespoonfull to a wineglassfull, according to the age of the invalid two or three times a day. In scrofulous swellings and sores, and in skin diseases, the internal use of sea water will be aided by its local application to the affected part by means of compresses frequently wet with the water. It may be added, that in all the diseases above mentioned, the fullest benefit will be derived from the internal use of drinking the water as an auxiliary to bathing.

The Niagara of the West—A World's Wonder—The Great Shoshone Falls.

[From the Salt Lake (Union) Vedette]

Away in the wilds of Idaho, mid way between Salt Lake and Oregon, the air is thundered and the earth is rent by a cataract as imposing as Niagara. Situated on the Sagebrush plains, between the Rocky Mountains and the Cascade Range, the Great Shoshone is a world wonder which for savage scenery and power sublime stands unrivaled in America. These falls of the Snake or Lewis Fork of the Columbia have been but a couple of years discovered, and have been seen as yet by scarce as many scores of white men.

This majestic masterpiece of nature's engineering lies a few miles off from the overland stage route, running northwesterly between Salt Lake and Boise cities, and half-way (or about two hundred miles) from those said capitals of Idaho and Utah.

Traveling by compass across the boundless sage plains where no living being breaks the desert stillness (save here and there a hissing snake, half hid between a regiment of horned toads and high range of ant hills), and the roar of the cataract which may be plainly heard at starting, has gradually died away. The sage plain remains unbroken to the view, and no appearance of any river. Still riding on, and suddenly, without warning, he reins up on the brink of a perpendicular precipice over a thousand feet in height; at the foot of which apparently unfathomed abyss Snake River seems but like a narrow silver ribbon. Down stream, about a half mile distant, a long monument of mist walls earth to heaven.

The river, about two hundred yards in width, coming slowly from the southeast, overtowered by perpendicular walls of bassaltic rock, over eight hundred feet high, suddenly expands into a basin of twice its width, and there is divided into a half dozen streams by dark looking rocks, which raise their gloomy crests above the sparkling surf of the maddened waters. Every stream rushes over a fall of thirty feet, and every fall is of a different shape, seeming fanciful and fluctuating, yet physically fixed, as they have ever been, while centuries, like shadows, have flown over them. The river, resuming its course, is again divided, and takes a second tumble of sixty feet still further, but this time by only three different streams. Three falls are the result; one on each side, unbroken and falling in solid sheets, the central one being formed by seven fan-shaped steppes of rock. From the one of these benches to the other underneath, the water falls in a smooth, transparent sheet, forming a cascade unsurpassed in the world, and contrasting strangely, by its dark, transparent color, with the rustling, roaring foaming streams surrounding it both above and at the sides. The river becomes once more smooth and dark in color. Its banks suddenly jut out from both sides, narrowing the channel to four hundred feet, and through this gap the confined mass of water precipitates itself in one whole volume, without break or hindrance, into an ominous abyss almost three hundred feet in depth. No pen can describe this scene. This is in reality the "Great Falls," and is well worthy of its name, leaping, as it does, from the loom of nature like a colossal sheet of silver.

Forming a slight horse shoe its central waters appear blue until they meet the spray that rises ever heavenward from the foot of the foaming cataract. The sides are flayed into foam, and remind one of the pictured avalanches of the Alps. Right on the edge of the fall stands a lone pillar of gray sandstone, on whose summit, undisturbed by the whiz of waters or the fate fast yawning on their eyrie, a pair of bald-headed eagles have built their nest, and are now rearing their young, secure in sight of the sublimity and solitude surrounding. The cataract's sound, but slightly heard above, is absolutely deafening as you reach the river's base, the roar of the falls confined as it is by the high walls of the canon, rushing down the chasm and increasing in volume as it rolls, so as to be heard fully thirty miles southwest. Close to the cataract is a square-shaped cave of fifteen feet each side and twenty feet high, whose walls are supported by basaltic columns, the regularity of whose formation is unsurpassed by anything in the Isle of Staffa, or the Giant's Causeway. Sliding out of this cave, and falling about eight feet on to a grassy slope that leads to the water's edge, within two hundred feet of the foot of the falls, you are right in the middle of the mist, and wet through in an instant. It is here that, by looking up, the enormous altitude of the fall can be realized, and the first feeling is one of self preservation, an involuntary drawing back, for the whole mass seems ready to drop and crush you where you stand. Never can the weird beauty of this scene be forgotten by beholders. Rainbows of a thousand hues seems to surround you, and their rises to arch you in the skies.

The white foaming waters form a brilliant back-ground to the magic prisms pictured by the spray. The dark, frowning rocks, relieved by the bright green junipers, make a fitting frame for this magnificent sight, second to none in point of volume, as it is second to none in savage grandeur. As measured by officers of the 1st Oregon Infantry, encamped adjoining, the main fall is 210 feet from the edge to level of the water below. The upper falls have not yet been measured, but the total fall of the river, on the three distinct tumbles it takes, cannot be less than 300 feet, while the river itself is over 400 feet at its narrowest width. The channel of the stream below the falls is a chasm 1500 feet in width and 100 in depth with perpendicular walls of rock inclosing it.

SAVING MANURES.—The editor of the Southern Homestead says:

"It should be the object of every tiller of the soil to leave his land in good condition after the removal of a crop, and, at the same time, obtain as remunerating returns as possible. This can be done only by husbanding all the sources of fertility upon the farm and adding thereto in every available manner. This is the Alpha and Omega of progressive agriculture. Never boast of 'a bank account' if it is obtained at the expense of your farm."

THE NEW ORLEANS
Christian Advocate
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY
At Three Dollars per annum, in advance.

OFFICE—112 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

This religious journal is specially devoted to the interests of the Methodist E. Church South, and is the official paper for the Mobile, Montgomery, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences. Some of the ablest writers in the Church are regular contributors to its columns.

Its weekly summary of news is carefully compiled, and contains all the current intelligence afloat at home as well as abroad.

Its "Commercial Column" will always be found reliable.

Hereafter, the "Corner for Children" will receive particular attention, as also that portion of the paper intended for selections of choice reading.

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has always been well known in this community as the very best advertising medium by which the business men of the city could bring their merchandise, trades, professions, and the like, before country readers in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and a large portion of Texas. This is easily understood when it is remembered that the four hundred preachers who are scattered throughout these States, in the Rio Grande, East Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montgomery and Mobile Methodist Conferences, are all, more or less, active agents for the paper; and when it is also remembered that our paper circulates among a large class of people who seldom see any other New Orleans paper.

The terms of advertising are as follows:

	1 Month.	6 Mos.	12 Mos.
One square....	$ 5 00	$20	$30 00
Two squares....	7 50	25	40 00
Three squares....	10 00	30	50 00
Four squares....	12 50	35	60 00

Larger advertisements in proportion.

TO OUR AGENTS AND SUBSCRIBERS

1. The price of the paper is THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM, IN ADVANCE: and it will be sent for 12 months only, unless the subscription price is renewed. We propose to keep no other books than the one containing the names of subscribers and their address. Due notice will be given in the paper a few weeks previous to the end of the subscription.

2. All travelling Preachers in the several patronizing Conferences throughout the Southwest are our Agents. They will receive a paper for five subscribers.

3. If money forwarded by mail is registered at the Postoffice when it is mailed, we will take the responsibility of its safety. But where it can be forwarded by private hands, the security is greater.

4. Be explicit in writing names and offices and routes—especially in directing to the "New Orleans CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," as the Church North has already issued a sheet in this city entitled the "New Orleans Advocate."

Address Rev. J. C. KEENER, D. D., or Rev. J. B. WALKER, D. D.

PREMIUM TO AGENTS.

We offer Agents of the New Orleans Christian Advocate a PHOTOGRAPHIC PICTURE OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE of the M. E. Church South, held in New Orleans, for every FIVE subscribers they may forward to us; and this in addition to the commission already offered.

We will forward them by express, or in such way as they may direct.

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY

Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,

Of the late Firm and Successors to G. W. COFFIN & CO.,

103 & 101 East Second street,

Cincinnati, Ohio,

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. je16

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 31.
WHOLE NUMBER 597.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, AUGUST 18, 1866.

$4.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE
OFFICE—113 CAMP STREET.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LAY REPRESENTATION—No. I.

MR. EDITOR: Lay Representation, as proposed by the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, (the church of my choice, almost my idol) is indeed a radical change in our economy; and may result in vast crippling consequences to our glorious, itinerant, missionary ministry. The subject surely received but little discussion before the General Conference; and it does seem to me that a measure of such magnitude should be better understood by both ministers and laymen, (for we have faith in the laity,) before it becomes the half of our entire economy.

We have been looking to you to enlighten us on this subject; but not a word. You have published two articles in favor of it. So far all right. But fearing that the measure might go through, and become a law, by default on the part of those who fear it, I will venture to "show mine opinion." But first please let me tell you a dream: for I have been much troubled on this subject, and "I had a dream which was not all a dream." In my dream, I wandered in the land of India. The Great Teacher had come. Judaism was local, stagnating, dying; but it was to be taught a new, a living faith. And how could it hear without teachers? Jesus was the great teacher, but one did not seem to be enough, and hence He chose the never-to-be-forgotten Twelve; and gave them their commission to the "Lost Sheep of the House of Israel." Not a word was said about Lay Representation, Lay Delegation, Lay Helpers or Lay Checks. I did not know the reason for this omission, nor did I ask, but I supposed that these apostles, missionaries, chosen, commissioned, sent, must needs be free to go, and do as they understood the Great Head of the church directed. I also noticed that as they went one of them was thought to be financier enough to carry the bag, and another was suffered to pay the taxes. And thus they went up and down, saying, "Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Now, in my dream, I saw that, "After these things, the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them, two and two, before His face, into every city and place whither He Himself would come." And here again there was nothing said about the Lay Element, till they were about starting, when some one, (I took him to be a Radical,) suggested to the Master, that He send along a Lay Delegation to help them, or to watch them—or—or. But, "No," said the Savior: "One shall chase a thousand, and two shall put ten thousand to flight." And they went as organized and ordered by the Redeemer, and even the devils were subject to them.

Finally, the Savior was dying; and He was tasting "death for every man." Glorious news for the gentile world! And he had arisen for their justification; and all the world must hear it, and then followed the Great Commission. Men must carry the Gospel to the ends of the earth. Peter must go. The Twelve, all but the traitor Judas, must go. The seventy must go. Saul must be converted; and Paul must go. And yet there stood my croaking, Radical friend; and he had the temerity to suggest, even to the risen Savior, a sprinkling of the Lay Element. But again said the Divine Redeemer, "No, no." And then turning to his Disciples, He addressed them in these kind words; "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

And they went. True, the churches in towns and countries had their Laymen, and offices filled by Laymen, but the ministry were trameled by none of these. They were to "feed the flock of God over whom the Holy Ghost had made them overseers." The lay element was not to oversee even the "flock," much less the "angels of the churches." The Savior was to "write" unto them; and hold these "stars in His right hand," as He "walked among the golden candlesticks." And so they went, under God, sending themselves and each other to every creature, till all men had heard the gospel, and in three hundred years from the time of their departure the world was conquered by the cross.

Then came the dark ages, and they were succeeded by the glorious reformation. But soon the reformation localised, and all of the Protestant churches lay delegated, and stagnated. And now what was to be done? Heaven knew what to do, and did it. God raised up John Wesley, and through him, an apostolic, primitive, missionary ministry. And, untrameled by the laity, they went—over England, Scotland and Ireland, scattering firebrands in the cornfields of their enemies, thus obtaining glorious victories. Then they crossed over to America, and traversed the dark forests and vast prairies of this great continent, and when a hundred years had passed, all men wondered at what God had wrought.

But, then, in my dream, I saw this vast army of conquering, missionary cavalry halt. Their work was not half done, and yet they halted. The far west was not yet explored. South America, Africa, China, nearly all Asia still sat in darkness, and yet they halted—and for what? Why, to ask for a lay-something, that they might be like their sister churches, like the infantry, like the artillery. The lay element was infused into the itinerant body, and when the great halt broke up, and dispersed, I saw this glorious double-file, two-by-two cavalry force retire, like their neighbors, to the forts, out-posts, and stations, and again all was stagnation and death. One like unto the Son of Man called unto them, saying, "Go work to-day in my vineyard;" and again, "be careful that no man take thy crown;" but they heeded it not; they were shorn of their strength, and had become as other men, and all again darkened over all lands.

And yet the great enemy of Protestantism, the Church of Rome, with her untrameled priesthood, with her wonderful want of lay representation, walked over the earth and "practised and prospered." And I "wondered after the Beast," and I wept, but I did not "worship."

But as I wondered and wept for the nations yet unconverted, "I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people." And a new army took the field, picked men, "kings and priests unto God," and they warred against Gog and Magog, and God fought for them, and with them, and the victory was complete. The nations were conquered, and my sorrow was assuaged; for although the first itinerant army had faltered, and the second to which I belonged had halted, yet the third, glory to God, had won. And I awoke from my dream, and lo, it was more reality than vision, more fact than fiction.

LOCAL ININERANT.

Louisiana, August 1st, 1866.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Methodism in Mt. Lebanon, La.

MR. EDITOR: This town was settled, I think, upwards of thirty years ago, by a colony of emigrant Baptists from South Carolina, who soon after their arrival erected a house of modest pretensions for the ark of God, which in process of time gave way to the one now in use by our Baptist brethren—a neatly furnished and commodious building.

In process of time they also began to lay the foundation for two colleges, male and female, both of which have since been erected, and though not very costly buildings, reflect great credit upon the denomination represented by them. The male institution is called Mt. Lebanon University, possibly a little too pretensious, but has nevertheless, with its able corps of professors, contributed much towards the great object of its erection, the advancement of literature and the doctrines of the Baptist Church. Here the Baptist minister of this region are educated free of charge; from this institution they go forth to permeate this entire country, preaching the doctrines of the gospel as believed by said Baptist Church.

This institution is now under the superintendency of Pres. A. S. Morrell, A. M., a Baptist minister of the most "straitest sect," Landmark, assisted by a competent corps of Professors.

The female college too has done a good work under the Presidency of Rev. J. Q. Prescott, and afterwards J. N. Shepherd, Esq., A. M., both of whom, however, have sought other fields of usefulness. The college is now, therefore, without a President: though the Trustees I learn are about negotiating for one.

About, or nearly, three years since, grown up persons of this place heard their first Methodist sermon, preached by your correspondent, since which time Methodism has been represented much more frequently.

Our Baptist brethren kindly tendered us the use of their Church part of the time, the Free Masons the use of their Hall, until they wished to resume their Masonic operations, after which the President of the Board of Trustees of the University gave us the privilege of using the chapel of their building, which we used up to the instalation of the present President who notified us that we could use it no longer for preaching purposes.

We then determined to build a house of our own, obtaining, in the meantime, the use of the Female College until our Church should be completed. So you see, Mr. Editor, that our expulsion from the University Chapel has doubtless contributed much towards our present comfort, a neat commodious house of our own.

Methodism is now one of the fixtures of Mt. Lebanon. Our house has been erected and was dedicated by brother N. A. Cravens, on the fourth Sabbath in June, whose sermon was a masterly effort of that great and good man, and was exactly suitable to the occasion.

We have also been visited by our beloved Bro., Bishop E. M. Marvin, who arrived on Saturday the 21st of July, and remained until Saturday the 28th, preaching not only satisfactorily, but to the edification of all that heard.

Our meeting was productive of much good, and will doubtless tell wonderfully upon the future life and destiny of scores of souls.

The Bishop also delivered two lectures on the subject of Baptism, in which he presented our views to an astonished multitude, most of whom had supposed that we did not pretend to have scriptural authority for our practice, but left the house, many of them, believing that pouring was the mode, and that infants were proper subjects.

No man, I suppose, has ever in so short a visit more fully endeared himself to an entire community, than has our beloved Bishop to the citizens of this town and vicinity.

The Bishop preached his last sermon here on the evening of the 27th, intending that night to ride out three miles in the country on his way to Minden; at the conclusion of which an opportunity was given to those who desired it to shake his hand, for probably the last time. Most of the large audience came forward, many of whom, with tearful eyes, asked him to pray for them and their families. We feel, Mr. Editor, that we have been greatly blessed during the past week.

I neglected to say that our church was somewhat in debt, as the Bishop will doubtless inform the readers of the Advocate, and we do trust that the friends of Methodism will give us a little help, so as our church will be entirely unembarrassed. Brethren do help us, each a little, the amount of one dollar, remembering that he who giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord.

THOS. J. UPTON.

August 1st, 1866.

At Jerusalem, six Jews have been baptized. They form one family. There is now in Jerusalem a Protestant congregation of three hundred souls, six Protestant schools, with two hundred and twenty children. Within the present century more than one hundred clergymen of Jewish origin have been ordained.

Letter from Zurich, Switzerland.

DEAR BROTHER: We were forty-three days on the ocean; sea sick a part of the time. The weather was generally tolerably calm. We had one gale, which lasted about forty-eight hours. We remained in Havre six days; it is a beautiful place; 75,000 inhabitants. I preached there on Sabbath evening in the American Chapel. We visited Paris and saw its sights, etc. France is a beautiful country, not grand or sublime, simply beautiful. We passed a night in Basle on the Rhine, thence to this place through the grandest scenery. Where I sit I see the Alps, covered with snow, whilst I enjoy all the delightful warmth of a Louisiana May day. We all have been blessed with good health, for which I pray to be grateful to "Our Father in Heaven." We are pleasantly boarding in a private family, all things furnished (except washing) for $2 25 per day, for all of us. We will remain here until October or November, possibly longer. I think of spending two or three months of this winter in Rome, Florence and Italy.

I can secure as many laborers as I want, by paying their way to the United States. I can get thousands on the following conditions: they will bind themselves to labour (and they work twice as hard as negroes generally) for you, for one or two years, for their passage across the ocean, board and clothing; and at the end of the time their expenses will be deducted from the gross receipts for the products of their labour, and the balance divided between them and the employer, they receiving one third, and employer two-thirds. To illustrate: it will cost $25 00 to take them to New Orleans, and say $150 00 to clothe and feed for one year; say he makes seven bales of cotton, and fifty barrels of corn, worth in all $800 00; take from the $800 00, $175 00 expense, leaving $625 00; now one third—$208 00, the share of the laborer,—and $417 00, the share of the employer. They will enter into written obligation before the U. S. Consul here, which he (the consul) assures me is binding, and will hold them in the U. S. I think it a good chance for our farmers; say commence with only ten hands, $250 00 or $300 00 will put them on the place, and th probable net proceeds will be $400 00; and with this, the second year you can enlarge to any extent almost desirable. If a failure, there but little is lost, probably nothing; expenses are first paid, then if anything left it is divided. Or they are willing after all expenses of feed for horses, plow sharpening, etc., are paid, to divide the net proceeds in half. The people seem nice, industrious and intelligent. Our kind regards to our friends. My address is Zurich, care of U. S. Consul.

B. F. WHITE.

July 19th, 1866.

How near the Last Cable Expedition came to being a Failure.

The following are extracts from the journal of the Great Eastern:

All went well until 12:20 on the 18th (Greenwich time), when the first real shock was given to the success that has hitherto attended us, and this time we had real cause to be alarmed. A foul flake took place in the after-tank. The engine was immediately turned astern, and the paying of the cable stopped. We were all soon on the decks, and learning that the running and paying out of the coil had caught three turns of the flake immediately under it, carried them into the eye of the coil, fouling the toy-out and hauling up one-half turn from the outside, and five turns of the eye of the under flakes. This was stopped, fortunately, before entering the paying-out machines; stoppers of hemp, with chains, were also put on near the wheel astern, and Mr. Canning gave orders to stand by to let go the buoy. This was not very cheering to hear; but, though the calm and collected man gave us confidence that his skill and experience would extricate the cable from the danger in which it was placed, no fishing line was ever entangled more than the rope when thrust up in apparently hopeless danger from the eye of the cable to the deck. There were at least 5000 feet of rope lying in this state, and in the midst of the rain and increasing wind, the cable crew set to work to disentangle it. The Dolphin was there too, patiently following the lights as they showed themselves, the crew now passing them forward and now aft, until at last the character of the tangle was seen, and soon it became apparent that ere long the cable would be saved and uninjured down to the tank. Capt. Anderson was at the taff-rail, anxiously watching the strain on the rope, (we could scarcely make it out, the night was so dark,) endeavoring to keep it up and down, going on raising with paddle and screw.

When one reflects for a moment upon the rise of the ship, and the enormous mass she presented to the wind, the difficulty of keeping her stern, under the circumstances, over the cable can be apprehended. The port paddle-wheel was disconnected, but afterward there was a shift of wind, and the vessel came to the wrong way. Welcome voices were now heard passing the word aft from the tank that the bights were cleared, and to pay out.

Then the lugo stoppers were quietly opened, and at 2:05 A. M., to the joy of all, we were once more discharging the cable. They veered it away in the tank to clear the screw, and the paddle engines were slowed so as to reduce the speed of the ship to four and a half knots. During all this critical time there was entire absence of noise and confusion.

Everything was silently done, and the cable men and crew worked with a hearty good will. Mr. Canning had experienced foul flakes before, and shows that he knew what to do in the emergency; but what of the electrical condition of the cable during this period? Simply that, through its entire length, it is perfect.

TESTING THE CABLE.

The London Times' correspondent, who accompanied the Atlantic Telegraph expedition, says that not a day passed since the fracture of last year's cable that its insulation has not been almost hourly tested at the Irish end. These tests show its condition up to the broken end, 1,260 miles from shore, to be absolutely perfect.—"There is always a certain amount of resistance to an electric current entering a cable, which is called retardation, and is measured by millions of units. A submarine wire of a certain length can, therefore, always be measured off, as it were, and its insulating and conductive powers ascertained to within a mile of a fault by the time the current takes in entering the wire. These tests, as we have said, have been carried on hourly with last year's cable, and the result as to millions of units has corresponded day by day in the most remarkable manner. Of course both its 'conductivity' and resistance have varied as earth currents arose or magnetic storms prevailed, but nine times out of ten the resistance test has been the same, even to a millionth unit, day after day, and these tests are identical with those which would be obtained from a perfect submarine rope, 1,260 miles long. The readings of the barometer at the station also afford the most curious data, which until now have been almost entirely overlooked in electrical science as connected with the submarine cables. It is found that exactly in proportion as the barometer rose the resistance of the current increased, and vice versa. In plain terms, a low barometer meant a good cable, and a high barometer a bad one. Another curious circumstance which has sometimes been noticed but never carefully recorded till now, is that between 12 and 2 in the day, and only at those hours, the cable is always at its worst."

"Leave off Trying."

During a season of religious interest, some two years since, a young man in my congregation was thoughtful and inquiring till its close. As one and another of his young friends rejoiced in hope, he was deeply moved. Whenever a special meeting was appointed he was present. But the interest subsided, and he was left thoughtful, but undecided. But as the tide of religious interest again set in on us a few weeks since, he was among the first to be moved by it. After some days of anxiety he found the peace of a justifying faith, and arose one night and expressed his hope of pardon. He was filled with joy—and with, what is better, an earnest Christian zeal.

It was but a few evenings afterward that he rose again in a full meeting, and said, "My young friends, many of you are trying to become Christians; leave off trying." It seemed a bold, rash counsel. But he added: "I have been trying two years to be a Christian. When my young friends were converted two years ago, I tried, and ever since I have been trying. But two weeks since I left off trying, and went to Jesus, and from that hour I have been happy."

Does the eye of some one who has been for months trying to be a Christian read these lines? My friend, heed the counsel and follow the example of this young man. Leave off trying, and go to Jesus. The sick man, growing worse every day, places himself in the hands of the physician. Christ is your physician, and the one thing pressing on you to do this very hour, is to place that diseased, aching soul of yours in his hands. Leave off trying and go to Jesus.—Christian Watchman and Reflector.

Beauties of the Bible.

A nation would, indeed, be truly blessed if it were governed by no other laws than those of this book; it is so complete a system that nothing can be added to it, or taken from it; it contains everything needful to be known or done; it affords a copy for a king, and a rule for a subject; it gives instruction and counsel to a senate; authority and direction for a magistrate; it cautions a witness; secures an impartial verdict of a jury and furnishes the judge with his sentence. It sets the husband over the house, and the wife as mitress of the table; tells him how to rule and her how to manage. It entitles honor to parents, and enjoins obedience to children. It prescribes and limits the sway of the suffering, the rule of the ruler, and the authority of the master, commands the subjects to honor, and the servants to obey, and promises the blessing and protection of the Almighty to all that walk by its rules. It gives directions for weddings and burials. It promises food and raiment, and limits the use of both. It points out a faithful and eternal guardian to the departing husband and father, tells him with whom to leave his fatherless children, and in whom his widow is to trust; and promises a father to the former, and a husband to the latter; it teaches a man how to make his will; it appoints a dowry for his wife, and entails the right of the first born, and shows how the younger branches shall be left. It defends the right of all, and reveals vengeance to every defaulter, overreacher and oppressor. It is the first book, the best book and the oldest book in the world. It contains the choicest matter, gives the best instruction, and affords the greatest pleasure and satisfaction that ever was enjoyed. It contains the best laws and the most profound mysteries that ever were penned; it brings the best of tidings, and affords the best of comfort to the inquiring and disconsolate; it exhibits life and immortality from everlasting, and shows the way to glory. It is a brief recital of all that is past, and a certain prediction of all that is to come. It settles all matters and debates in dispute, resolves all doubts, and eases the mind and conscience of all their scruples. It reveals the only living and true God, shows the way to Him, sets aside all other gods, and describes the vanity of them and all trust in such. In short it is a book of laws, to show right and wrong—a book of truth that shows wisdom, condemns all folly and makes the foolish wise, a book of truth, that detects all lies and confutes all error—and a book of life, that shows the way from everlasting death. It is the most compendious book in the world, the most authentic, and most entertaining history that ever was published. It contains the most ancient antiquities, strange events, wonderful occurrences, heroic deeds, unparalleled wars; it describes the celestial, terrestial and infernal worlds, and the origin of religion. It will instruct the accomplished mechanic, and the most profound artist. It teaches the best rhetorician, and exercises every power of the most skillful arithmetician, puzzles the wisest anatomist, exercises the nicest critic; it corrects the vain philosopher, and confutes the wise astronomer—it exposes the subtle sophist and makes divines mad. It is a complete code of laws, a perfect body of divinity, an unequalled narrative, a book of travels, and a book of voyages.—Hugh Finley.

Eight to Sixteen.

Lord Shaftsbury recently stated in a public meeting in London, that, from personal observation, he has ascertained that of adult male criminals of that city, nearly all had fallen in a course of crime between the ages of eight and sixteen years; and that if a young man lived an honest life up to twenty years of age, there were forty-nine chances in favor, and only one against him, as to an honorable life thereafter.

This is a fact of singular importance to fathers and mothers, and shows a fearful responsibility. Certainly a parent would secure and exercise absolute control over the child under sixteen. It can not be difficult matter to do this, except in very rare cases; and if that control is not very wisely and efficiently exercised, it must be the parent's fault; it is owing to the parental neglect or remissness. Hence the real source of ninety-eight per cent of the real crimes in a country such as England or the United States lies at the door of the parents. It is a fearful reflection. We throw it before the minds of fathers and mothers of our land, and there leave it to be thought of in wisdom, remarking only as to the early seeds of bodily disease sown between sundown and bedtime, in absence from the family circle; in the supply of spending money never earned by the spender, opening the doors of confectioners, and soda-fountains, of beer and tobacco and wine-shops, of the circus, the negro minstrel, the restaurant and dance; then follows the Sunday excursions, the Sunday drive, with the easy transition to the company of those whose ways lead to the gates of social, physical, and moral ruin. From eight to sixteen—in those years are the destinies of children fixed in forty-nine cases out of fifty—fixed by the parents!

A Husband the Bond of the House.

The English term "husband" is derived from the Anglo-Saxon words hus and band, which signify "the bond of the house," and it was anciently spelled house bond, and continued to be so spelled in some editions of the Bible after the introduction of the art of priating. A husband, then, is a house-bond—the bond of a house—that which engirdles a family into the union of strength and the oneness of love. Wife and children, "strangers within the gates," all their interests and all their happiness are encircled in the hause-bond's embrace, the objects of his protestion and of his special care. What a fine picture is this of a husband's duty and a family's privilege! And what a beautiful emblem is this of the guardianship and love, and uniting kindness exorcised toward believing souls, and inquiring sinners, and "the whole family in heaven and in earth," by Him who says, 'It shall be at that day that thou shalt call me Isha, (that is, my husband,) for I will betroth thee unto me forever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving-kindness, and in mercies; I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness!"

The Mormons.

The Mormon immigration this year is already beginning to assume formidable proportions. Within the past month, four vessels, with nineteen hundred and thirty-nine Mormon passengers, have arrived at this port, and five more ships are expected to arrive very soon. These vessels were all sent out by Brigham Young, Jr., who is at the head of the Mormon commission in Europe and who has obtained from the British authorities a license as a passage-broker, and opened offices in London and Liverpool.

We saw it stated, not long since, upon seemingly good authority, that the whole of Great Britain and a large part of Northern Europe, had been divided by the Mormons into dioceses, each having at its head a Bishop, assisted by a competent staff, so that the work of proselyting might be thoroughly systematized. And, as the business of forwarding the converts to the New Jerusalem at Salt Lake, appears to be also completely organized, we may look for a steady and increasing stream of Mormon immigration. The immigrants this year are chiefly English, with a few Scotch, more Welsh, and a sprinkling of Danes, Swedes, and Norwegians. They are all from the humbler classes of society, and seem to be an industrious, quiet, and orderly set. It is a notable fact that the Mormon recruits are drawn almost exclusively from the Protestant countries of Europe. In Ireland the Mormon missionaries are treated with great contempt by the people and in many parts of the country are not tolerated at all.

It is impossible to conjecture what will be the upshot of this Mormon business, but, in view of the importance the Mormon question is likely to assume, at no distant day, this constant, steady and ever-increasing influx of recruits for Brigham Young, is a fact worth noting. —New York News.

A dignitary of the Romish Church in Ireland, has lately issued a pastoral on Joseph-worship, in which occurs the following startling assertions:

"He is a father, a loving father to us all as well as to Jesus; and if we fly to him for succor, we shall soon experience the effects of his fatherly love. In all your trials and difficulties, go to Joseph. It is he who, after Mary, has the largest share in the distribution of the favors of heaven."

Humility is the lesson for the rich—contentment for the poor.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, - - AUGUST 18, 1866.

WANTED,

A FIRST-CLASS TEACHER OF MUSIC—one capable of taking charge of the Musical Department in a Female College. The best of reference will be required. For further information apply to me personally, or by writing, at this office, 112 Camp street; or to Rev R K Hargrove, Summerfield, Ala.

The Principalship of the Art Department of the Centenary Female College at same place is yet to be filled. Address same parties.

J. C. KEENER.

New Orleans, August 4th, 1866.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27.—REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS.—By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, J. B. WALKER, L. PARKER, } Executive Com. Joint Board of Publication.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.—Our news under this head we wish to make as full as possible. One of the great objects of a religious journal is to supply information relating to the condition and prospects of the church. Every Christian feels a deep interest in these things. With the state of Zion and the progress of religion spread out before us, we can pray more to purpose. If there is prosperity, it gladdens and encourages; if there is dearth and declension, it stimulates to greater activity and more persistent prayer. Will our ministerial brethren and others take pains to furnish us with this news? We want to know the state of the Church at every point. Furnish us with items and facts upon this subject.

HEALTH OF THE CITY.—For twenty-four hours to 6 A. M., of the 13th inst., there were 63 deaths, of which 31 were from cholera: for twenty-four hours ending at 6 A. M. of the 14th, there were 62 deaths, 28 of which were from cholera. For twenty four hours to 6 A. M., of Thursday the 16th inst., there were 68 interments, 44 of which were from cholera. It will be seen that the cholera has gradually increased since our last issue, but it is still confined to the crowded tenements, and to people exposed by their pursuits to the great heat which has prevailed. The deaths from cholera in Cincinatti are much greater, amounting to 86 in a day. The Board of Health announce one unmistakable case of yellow fever—a Frenchman recently from Paris, who died at the Hotel Dieu on the 7th inst. The disease could not be traced to any connection with goods or persons from infected parts. There is considerable fever of typhus and congestive character, but we have thus far been able to find no well authenticated cases of yellow fever in private practice. We have been two weeks without rain and the weather is oppressively hot.

☞ The letter from Bishop Marvin, in reference to the church at Mt. Lebanon, is unavoidably laid over till next issue.

METHODIST STEWARDS.

The first officers of the Church which sprang into existence under the preaching of John Wesley were the Stewards. A little money was an essentiality even in Mr. Wesley's day—a little for the preachers, a little for the poor. Small as the affair was, it had to be attended to, and somebody was set apart to do it. The organizattou for collecting money suggested the semi-pastoral office of Leader. The functions of Leader and Steward were discharged at the first by the same person; but by and by, when Methodism outgrew its first clothes, it afforded a distinct officer for the management of finance. He must needs be a man of "good natural and acquired abilities" in temporal affairs, and "of solid piety" withal, who both "knows and loves Methodist doctrine and discipline." A very straightforward, square, substantial sort of a man that; capable, too, of "giving advice," if asked, in planning the "circuit;" expected to keep an eye upon "disorderly persons," and "inform the preacher thereof;" and when occasion demands, which of course would be seldom, empowered to "tell the preachers what he thinks wrong in them." Here are several matters requiring delicacy of treatment, and calling for strength and finish of character, and much purity of motive. That our economy should have limited the number of Stewards to "five or seven," is no marvel, when their qualifications are considered, for but few societies can furnish any large number of men of the described pattern. And very important is the financial part of his duties, though it be only a part; he is to "walk about Zion and go round about her;" to notice her "towers," to "mark well her bulwarks," and "consider her palaces." To keep things up, in repair, fences, steeples, locks, the parsonage, the church, the records, the larder—everything—snug, and bright, and full. Some of which may seem to be the work of Trustees; but these meet but seldom, and to a great extent the whole of this sublime drudgery falls to the Steward. Poor man, no doubt he often exclaims: "Who is sufficient for these things?" And when we consider the people, that, financially speaking, they are hard as the nether mill-stone, and the preacher, who expects butter and honey out of the flinty rock, and the preacher's wife, who knows not the world, nor ever will,—and then reflect that between all these this meek man is expected to go, to encounter the narrowness of the many, to receive the offerings of a few, but to supply, by some means, the regular though moderate sums required to support the Gospel,—one must not be surprised to hear him exclaim with Moses: "Wherefore hast thou afflicted thy servant? and wherefore have I not found favor in thy sight, that thou layest the burden of all this people upon me?—Whence should I have flesh to give unto all this people?"

It is certain that this office is no sinecure. Industry, persistence, courage, address, the grace of patience, and a sincere love for the Church which Christ bought with his own blood, are the qualities which it calls into constant exercise. He that desireth it desires a good thing. But like all things truly good, its harvest lies mainly in the future. For the present it yields many rebuffs and complaints, much anxiety, and a constantly increasing burden. Only the noblest natures, and the most elastic spirit, and the faith which worketh by love, can sustain it faithfully for years together. We have known silver-haired men who found a crown of glory while walking in this way of righteousness. Men who were "called" to this work as manifestly as ever a man was to that of preaching the Word. And why not a special fitness and furnishing by the Holy Spirit for this great work of holding up the Church and the ministry? This is the true order and office of a DEACON. "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint on this business," * * * "whom they set before the Apostles; and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them." (Acts vi, 3.) A faithful Steward is a "pillar in the Temple of our God." The success and stability of the Church rests upon his zeal and fidelity. So important an instrument in the New Testament Church is therefore designated officially by the Scriptures, and was recognized by the apostolic benediction, and affirmed by the unction of the Spirit. It was originally not beneath the dignity and high employments of the Apostles themselves to attend to this needful part of preaching the Gospel; but when, by the increase of the Church, their duties must be shared, this part of their labor settled upon divinely furnished Stewards, or, as they were named, DEACONS.

As are the Stewards, so is the Church. This is the truth. Good Stewards will, in the main, have a good preacher, a good church, and a good parsonage. They are the back-bone of the whole system.—Weakness here is paralysis everywhere. They can stop every wheel. They are themselves the wheels which go with the cherubim; where they go these go, and when they stop these stop. Yes, the glory of God goes by these wheels. And as in the vision of the Prophet, the Spirit of the living One must be in these wheels. In vain is it if the Church have men called to the ministry, if it have not men called to the office of a Steward. Every department must languish, both at home and in the field of Missionary enterprize. The conversion of the world has long since been to our mind a question of Stewards rather than of Missionaries. Can churches be built, can men be supported—that is the question, and the only question.

The Methodist Church differs in an important respect from other forms of Protestant Christianity. It is constitutionally missionary. It professes to care for those without its pale full as much as for those within; for people who are too ignorant to know the value of the Gospel, or too wicked to desire it. It is organized in order to send to such people a pure ministry. This is effected by collecting a support for the preacher from one class of people, and sending him to another. So long as a body of hearers are solicited to pay for what they get, the business of a Steward is plain and easy enough; or, when called upon to pay for sittings in the Church; but when the house is free, and the Preacher spends three-fourths of his time traveling through the circuit, preaching to strangers and sinners, or is on a District so wide that he belongs specially to no congregation; when the Stewards call upon men to pay for the scattering of seed which will germinate and be harvested in distant places, then it requires grace to ask for money, full as much as it does to give it. Yet this is Methodism, and, we think, the peculiar glory of it. This precludes all bargaining as between the church and the preacher, for he is to preach to others than those who support him. Yet there is a tacit understanding worthy the days of Apostolic Christianity—

"Happy the souls that first believed,
To Jesus and each other cleaved."

The preacher, upon his part, is to go forth, never fearing, to give himself wholly to the ministry of the Word; while the church will, upon her part, stand by and support him—for is he not her angel? Whenever Methodism shall so change its character as to resolve into a matter of so much money for so much preaching—the preaching to be so often and of such a specified quality, and at such places, and the Steward shall give place to the mere collector of pew-rents, her distinctive glory will have departed.

It alarms us much more to hear the groanings of Stewards than the complaints of the Ministry. It seems more like giving out. So long as God continues to call men to this labor of love, we have nothing to fear. And we now watch, as a man on a tower overlooking a battle, this great reserve of God's army. The country in chaos; the people impoverished; churches burned; members wavering; even ministers turning aside; how is it with the Old Guard—does it stand firm? Thank God! then we are safe. Yes, we have great confidence in our old Stewards; they are made of the right stuff, for God has had a hand in making them. We have leaned on them for years, and have not been disappointed; and we expect to rejoice with them in the City of God, to see their shaft and capital, abiding in beauty and strength, and gleaming with the glory of God.

The Rev. W. A. Smith D. D., has resigned the Presidency of Randolph Macon College, Va. His resignation was followed by very complimentary resolutions by the Board of Trustees of the Institution, over which he has presided a score of years.

SECTARIANISM.

Nobody has such horror of Sectarianism as Methodists. There is nothing exclusive in our doctrines and government. Nearly every one who believes the gospel can believe what we do. There is no test in the mode and subjects of baptism, so as to exclude from Christian fellowship those who differ in these points. We do not claim to be the Church but only a Church. There is no Apostolical succession, and no stress is laid upon any of the mere forms and accidents of religion. No people are more free from bigotry than Methodists, because there is nothing in their doctrines, institutions and traditions to foster it.

This latitude and freedom from narrow and exclusive views, has led to carelessness and neglect in giving a Methodistic bent to our religious agencies. So fearful are many of our people of Sectarianism, that they carefully refrain from instilling any sentiments into the minds of their children that are peculiarly Methodistic. They wish to instruct them in the general truths of religion, and leave their church relationship to their free election, unbiased by early training.

This same course of reasoning, to be consistent, should lead parents to avoid all early religious influence over the minds of their children, so that they may freely choose in the matter of being religious at all. Besides they forget that in the baptism of their children they both choose and covenant for them, and define their relation to the church. These people are not fearful of forestalling the freedom of their children in other and secular interests. They choose for them in their education, the courses of study to be pursued, and the business or profession to be followed. It is only in religion that this tenderness is displayed.

We believe that upon the broadest grounds of Christian duty, children should be taught to love, reverence and prefer the church of their fathers; that they have been brought into the church by baptism, and that without very special reasons, there is a violation of the most serious obligations in departing from it. A cosmopolite in religion, is very much like a cosmopolite in society. Local attachments and an ardent patriotism is far better than the absence of all special ties. The man that has them will be a better citizen, and do more for his race, than the man who feels equally at home everywhere, and who is a stranger to the sweet influences of domestic affections, and the ties which early associations have formed. An attached and strong preference to a particular church is an element of safety. It is the link that holds to the universal Church, and religion in general. Without this the young drift away from all controlling religious impressions. They go out from the home and the Church with no fixed convictions, and before they have decided upon any religious course, they are too far out upon the sea of worldliness and sin to return.

The mind that has been well imbued with the creed and usages of a particular Church, bears with it everywhere a strong conservative power, that may lead it back, after years of wandering, to the haven of rest. The point is not merely whether your children shall belong to this Church or that, but whether they shall be Christians at all. By carefulness to avoid sectarianism in their religious education, and to instruct them in the general doctrines of religion only, you may be pursuing a course which shall end in their ruin. No child should ever go out from a Methodist family or Sunday-school without clear and decided views and convictions of the peculiar doctrines and usages of the Church. Our catechisms and our instructions ought to be framed to this end.

No other people are so much afraid of sectarianism, and no other church loses so large a proportion of its children. Other churches instruct their children in their peculiar tenets, and hold them to the duty of membership in the communion in which they are reared. This is much better than to teach them those general gospel truths about which all are agreed, and then turn them adrift, and tell them to choose a Church for themselves. The sectarian bias may be a little strong in them, but this, with piety, is far more desirable than to see them lost to the church, and without religion altogether. The most earnest and devoted Christians have some spice of sectarianism in them. Not of course in a bigoted or offensive sense, but there is apt to be a strong and absolute preference. We have more hope of a worldly man when we know that he has this denominational proclivity. There is something to draw him within the range of spiritual agencies, and one important point of practical duty is already settled.

The children of Methodists belong to the church. God will hold us responsible for their training, and it is our duty to make them Methodists so far as we can. This end should be present in the earlier associations of our children and in the schools to which they are sent. Those who deny our legitimacy as a church, whether they be Protestant or Catholic, are not fit to be entrusted with the education of Methodist children; and those who will take advantage of social intercourse to poison their minds with bigoted tenets, and to undermine their fidelity to the Church, are not fit associates for them. Treat the bigot who would proselyte your children, and debauch their faith, as you would a serpent. Self respect, if nothing else, should lead us to avoid all contact with him.

It is our serious conviction that the church needs to awake to this subject. We are not saving the children. They glide away from us, some to other denominations, and still more of them to the world. The fault may be here In its best sense we are not sectarian enough. We are too indifferent to the social and educational influences which are thrown around the young. They are not particularly expected to be Methodists, and they are not trained with this end in view. The distinctive features of our Church, what we reject, and what we peculiarly hold, and the reasons upon which our own preference is founded, are not made prominent in the instruction of our children.

With no narrowness towards other churches, and in Christian fellowship with them so far as they will permit, it behooves us to take care of our own. If we can hold the children to the church, if we can imbue their minds with the doctrines and genius of Methodism, we may hope in the end to save their souls. If we send them forth from our homes and sanctuaries with no fixed convictions or denominational bias, they are likely to be lost. The greatest responsibility in this matter rests with parents. If alive to their duty, they can generally determine the church relationship of their children. They ought to do it. It is their duty to choose for their children, and to train them for the church. Next to the responsibility of parents, is that of our Sunday-school instructors and the pastors of our churches. In the sphere of their duties much can be done by impressing upon the minds of the children what, as Methodists, is expected of them, and what is obligatory upon them as the baptized children of the church. *

MOTIVES.

These need education and development. There are right and wrong motives, there are high and low. Right actions may be performed from low and unworthy principles, and there is damage to the character and, in the long run, to the cause which is sought to be served. Care for the motives which govern our conduct is of first importance in our moral culture. In the general conduct and in particular enterprises, the most vital thing that concerns us is the reason that influences. To be governed by wrong motives is death to the soul. The character developed under them will be one of spiritual weakness. He that follows them is a suicide at last. There is danger of mixing low and selfish motives with those that are higher and better. The latter are likely to possess the ground in the end. The soul is morally stranded when this takes place, and becomes an open and visible wreck when these become inoperative.

The cultivation of right motives has a wide bearing. It lies at the foundation of religious stability and usefulness; and of all the undertakings of the Church. Parents, teachers, and ministers, have constantly to deal with them, and they are responsible, in a large measure, for their right development. Filial duty and obedience may be placed upon a false foundation by the inconsiderate parent, and the obligations and duties of religion may be made to rest upon inferior grounds. A wrong motive planted in the young conscience, in spite of authority and example, may give an unfortunate and baneful direction to all the after life.

Ministers are constantly appealing to men's motives, and, in so doing, shape the principles, to some extent, of the world, and, much more extensively, of the Church. In calling men to repentance, there are many considerations to be urged, such as an appeal to hope and fear, to present advantage and future blessedness, and to the broador and firmer principles of obligation and right. And these may be presented along with other persuasives, of a low, sensuous, and equivocal character. The congregation, under a given ministry, will be lastingly impressed, and perhaps take its character from the motives that are most prominently awakened and addressed. Individual religious characters will be formed according to the principles inculcated. Suppose that the lower reasons of religion have been most insisted upon, or that many of the Christian duties have been placed upon a wrong basis, an inferior and perverted religious life will be the result.

The character of a revival, as to the genuineness and permanency of its results, and of the convert as an effective and useful member of the Church, may depend considerably upon the motives that have been made prominent. There are many pious people whose conversion we have but little reason to doubt, who have a fair class-meeting experience, and who are sometimes religiously happy. And yet they are sadly wanting in some plain duties. They are doing nothing for God. They have abundance and give little or nothing for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom. They are converted, but activity in the gospel field, and generous giving does not follow. They need light, they need the development of right motives.

It is to this cause that we may trace the seeming anomaly and contradiction, of a large membership in the Church, an exuberance of wealth in the aggregate, encouraging revivals, large congregations under the influence of the gospel, and no proportionate zeal and liberality in religious enterprises. It will hardly do to say that there is no religion where this remissness exists. We have seen a good deal of religion, in close fellowship with apparent selfishness and stinginess. These neglected duties do not stand in the conscience upon the right motives. Thus religious education has been carried on under the power of wrong or low principles. The true and higher reasons of consecration have never found lodgment in the mind. To place any duty upon any but the true ground is a mortal stab at the vitals of a man's religion. It is ruinous every way. The piety of the Church has suffered from this cause, and her financial interests have been depressed.

People are solicited to build colleges and churches that the value of real estate may be enhanced. They are induced to head subscription lists as a favorable mode of advertising their business. They are seduced to give to the support of missions by an anecdote or a picture, or some other ad captandum appeal. If these inducements to duty and benevolence are at all admissable, they are equivocal at least. There is damage, moral damage done to the giver by the meanness of the motive: and the opportunity of impressing higher and better principles is worse than unimproved. This practice of addressing the lower motives in the furtherance of objects of religion and benevolence, lowers the moral tone of the unconverted, injures the piety of the Church, and in a great measure accounts for the partial manner in which the aggressive operations of the Church are supported. It is doubtful whether there is even temporary expediency in this practice.

But if something is lost at the time, it is more than compensated afterwards. A religious character built up upon the best principles, educated in the highest motives of Christian duty, will be permanent and fruitful. A child thus trained will almost certainly be true to the church of his fathers. The grace of giving, developed from this point, will not be a temporary spasm, but a systematic and progressive liberality. Those who have to do with the motives of the people, whether in the family, the Sunday-school or the congregation, have it in their power to effect a tremendous revolution for good. Let them remember that it is not enough to persuade and urge to virtue, piety and benevolence, but that these duties must be placed upon the right foundation. *

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

In addition to the gratifying intelligence of last week, we have received a letter from Rev. S. H. C[illegible] of Mobile Conference, which says "we have had very gracious and extensive revivals at Lexington, Ala., Enterprise, Meridian and Macon, Miss."

Through J. L. SEALES, Esq., of Mansfield, we have the very best news from the Parish of De Soto—that the religious condition of the church was never better, and that a protracted meeting on the De Soto circuit was fruitful in the conversion of mourners, and in confirming believers; that the Sabbath-schools are healthy and thriving.

Rev. W. W. DRAKE, of the Miss. Conference, writes of a protracted meeting, held in Isaquena circuit, Rev. J. W. Flowers preacher in charge:

"The Spirit of God seemed to be present, and influencing the congregation from the beginning of the meeting. On Sunday the congregation presented themselves for prayers, deeply moved. The meeting was continued throughout Monday when eleven more joined the church. The old members were greatly encouraged in this good cause. It was long to establish a prayer-meeting and class-meeting, and to build up a holy communion by all means in their power. Several of those who joined were middle-aged and old persons—some of them, persons of much influence. This meeting benefitted me a great deal. I feel encouraged and strengthened a good deal."

Rev. H. D. BERRY, of the Pearl River circuit, Miss. Conference, writes: "I have held church meetings at three of the churches in my work. These meetings are, I think, the very thing to stimulate the church, and bring it out of the wilderness, where it has been wandering for lo these many years. I have established class and prayer meetings at all of my appointments where they can be kept up."

We learn by the Troy (Ala.,) Advertizer that a "District Meeting" convened recently at that place. A large number of ministers were in attendance. Bishop McTyeire was present, preached with great acceptability, and ordained three persons to the office of Deacon and one to the office of an Elder in the Church of God.

Rev. J. A. ELLIS writes, "we have had a revival at Braudon, resulting in the conversion of eighteen persons, and an accession of twenty-four members to our church."

Rev. W. WADSWORTH writes Aug. 9th, from Fayette, Miss: "We commenced holding "Church Meetings" at different appointments, and find that we still have a church in which there is vital piety, and a faithful few still at their post. Our church register is nearly perfected, and the moral status of each member inquired into. We have two very interesting Sabbath schools, each blessed with efficient Superintendents. A few weeks ago at M. Carmel, we held a meeting which lasted five days, five joined the church, and the membership much refreshed. At New Friendship, a place where we had but little hope of much success, but at a two-days meeting the Lord was present in power, and eight were added to the church. We have just closed a meeting of nine days duration at Fayette; on the first Sabbath of the meeting, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was commemorated, and the number of communicants was larger than ever seen in this place. This was owing to the kindly and Christian feeling existing between the Presbyterians and Methodists here. Several conversions and six accessions to the church. Although not a Quarterly Meeting, yet Bro. Chandler (our Presiding Elder) was with us three days, and rendered efficient aid. The audience was enraptured with his sparkling, dazzling, flashing eloquence—stirring, exciting morning appeals. Thanks are due other visiting brethren, and also to resident pastor of the Presbyterian church. We are looking forward with prayerful solicitude for a glorious revival."

Professor Agassiz says that the strip of "highlands which divides the waters flowing into the St. Lawrence from those flowing into the Atlantic," is the oldest land in the world. It was once a lonely beach, washed by an universal ocean.

The Minority Report on the Assassination Plot.

The report of Hon. A. J. Rogers, member of Congress from New Jersey, from the Judiciary Committee, reveals the depths of Satan, to a profound beyond our previous conception. It exculpates Mr. Davis, and shows, in the language of Mr. Rogers, "the existence and fostering the luring and the paying of the most wicked combinations of perjurors the world has ever known." The record of this Radical Congress culminates in the doings of this judiciary committee: and the public needed this clue to thread the dark avenues of deliberations which recall the "Venetian council of Ten." "Secrecy has surrounded and shrouded, not to say protected, every step of these examinations, and even in the committee-room, I seemed to be acting with a sort of secret council of inquisition, itself directed by an absent vice inquisitor and grand inquisitor too." We cannot find space for the whole of this report; it is all of a piece, and astounds one at every paragraph, with its overflowing evidence that the "heart of man is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked."

The secret corruption and vindictive temper which have been charged against Congress, and the spirits who control its legislation, may have been suspected by many, or possibly known to a few; strange to say, it here stands disclosed. As if the door of its most secret chamber had been thrown open, in the confusion of the last hours of the session, and all were permitted to see for themselves the incontrovertible evidences of more wickedness than they ever supposed existed on this side of the Atlantic. We only give the concluding portion of the document:

With the testimony taken at the celebrated trial was forwarded from that strange receptacle of evidence, "the bureau of military justice," affidavits taken since.

Among these was the affidavit of one Campbell, acknowledged by him to be such, and to have been sworn to at the said bureau. Campbell was brought before us and asked if the contents of that affidavit were true. He said it was all false. He was then asked:

"Why did you make it?"

"I was informed by Mr. Conover that Judge Holt had offered a reward of $100,000 for the capture of Jefferson Davis; that he (Holt) had no authority really to do it; that Jefferson Davis was taken, they had not enough against him to justify them in what they had done; that Judge Holt wanted to get witnesses to prove that Davis was interested in the assassination of President Lincoln, so as to justify him in paying the $100,000.

"I never lived in New Orleans."

[In his affidavit he had sworn he did.]

"I never was in Richmond."

[He had sworn to residing there.]

"I do not know John Surratt, and never saw him."

[He had sworn to a conversation with him.]

"I never saw Jefferson Davis. The evidence was prepared by Conover. I saw him prepare a portion of it. I never was in the Confederate service. I never saw Benjamin. Conover said I should be well compensated for my evidence. My proper name is not Campbell, but Joseph Horne. My evidence was taken in Judge Holt's office.

Speaking of the other witnesses Campbell swore:

"Joseph Snevel is not his real name; his name is Roberts."

"Farnham B. Wright is not his real name; it is John Waters."

"Jno. H. Patton is not his real name; it is Smith."

"Sarah Douglass is not her real name. Her name was Dunham." [This is Conover's true name.]

"There was another woman sworn. She gave an assumed name."

One of these women was Conover's wife; the other his sister-in law.

"Conover told me that if I engaged in it, it was not going to hurt anybody; that Jefferson Davis would never be brought to trial; and that if this evidence got to him he would leave the country. Conover directed me to assume the name of Campbell. There was a person described by that name who was supposed to be implicated in that affair, and I was representing this party. I met Conover, in the first place, by the appointment of Snevel. Snevel said I could make money out of it. Money was my motive. I received $625. I received $100 from Conover and $500 from Judge Holt. I got $150 at Boston and $150 at St. Albans. I went to Canada to hunt up a witness to swear false, who was to represent Lamar. Snevel and Conover together arranged with me to go to Canada. Snevel saw the written evidence I was to swear to after Conover wrote it."

These hurried, yet correct extracts from the testimony of Campbell before the committee, many seem all sufficient to gauge the value of Conover's evidence, Snevel's and his own; but, lest they should seem to lack confirmation, I append extracts from that of Snevel, sworn May 24, 1866.

The deposition he made before Judge Holt was read to him.

He stated it was "false from beginning to end."

"Conover wrote out the evidence, and I learned it by heart. I made it to make money. I received $375 from Holt, and $100 from Conover. Farnam B. Wright's name is really John Waters. John McGill is an assumed name, not his."

[These witnesses of two names each were witnesses who had been procured by the bureau of military justice, and who had testified to corroborate the testimony of Conover and Merritt, as Campbell and Snevel did.]

Snevel further says: "I told Conover that I was coming here to testify to the truth; that I had not had any rest since I swore to what I did. He said I would be in a worse fix than I was now. This was on last Saturday. He said things would be settled and there would be no further trouble. When the false evidence I was to swear to was read over to me by Conover, Campbell and Conover's brother-in-law (Mr. Ansen) were present.—Conover told me he knew what Holt would ask me, and Conover asked me the same questions. I gave this false evidence before Holt. When I was wrong Conover would nod his head. Conover was present when I was sworn by Holt. When Conover would nod, I would then correct it as near as I could. Campbell and I rehearsed at the hotel in Washington."

Conover in his testimony said: "I was asked if such a sum would be satisfactory? I said it would. I can't tell how much I received. Conover was an agent of the government to hunt up evidence."

Having but little time to end this report, I will not swell it with any additional extracts from the confessions of these people.

Conover was present when Campbell and Snevel testified thus plainly to his villainy.

I must inform the House that Conover alias Watson, alias Dunham, etc., etc., was not ordered into arrest, that the committee, at his request, permitted him to go to New York to procure other testimony. One officer was sent with him, and Conover effected his escape of course; has not been heard of since, and has probably left the country. Whether any efforts have been made to catch him I know not; but as he was the teacher and guide of perjuries committed by the other witnesses procured through the bureau of military justice, it would seem the solemn duty of this government to apprehend, try and punish so foul a criminal, and in his trial ascertain what temptations and through whom they came, led him to the manufacturing of so awful a plot. Conover it was who found Montgomery. Conover it was who found Merritt, Campbell, Snevel and the rest; who rehearsed and taught them, and, as professor of perjury, watched his pupils in their delivery thereof at lesson time before Judge Holt.

Judge Holt himself was a witness before the committee. He of himself knew nothing, of course, but he swore to his own opinion, derived from the trustworthy testimony of the parties described, whose testimony they say the Judge himself paid them.

The testimony and revelations of Campbell and Snevel, the absconding of Conover, were not needed by me to aid in forming my opinion of the value of Montgomery's perjuries or those of Conover; still, when they testified so clearly, when the females of Conover's family were shown to have also been sacrificed by him to his demon of falsehood for lucre, the cool turpitude of the whole crew sickened me with shame, and made me sorrow over the fact that such people could claim the name of American, while I wondered who the hidden arch-conspirator behind Conover might be.

Who originated this plot, and placed the government in so embarrassing an attitude, I cannot ascertain. The jealous secrecy and care exercised by the gentleman from Massachusetts in keeping most of the documentary evidence from us for careful perusal, the secrecy attending every step of these proceedings, makes certainty on my part impossible as to the authorship of these ill-linked perjuries. Although I do not attribute the course of the committee towards me to any desire on their part to screen themselves, I am so deeply impressed that there must be guilt somewhere, that I earnestly urge upon the House an investigation of the origin of the plot concocted to alarm the nation, to murder and dishonor innocent men, and to place the Executive in the undignified position of making, under proclamation, charges which cannot, in face of the accused, or even in their absence, stand a preliminary examination before a justice of the peace.

It was not till noon Friday (yesterday,) the last day but one of the session, that the committee and the gentleman from Massachusetts allowed me to read the testimony, or parts thereof, that my memory alone should not be trusted to report. It was then within twenty-four hours of its adjournment that Congress, through this committee, allowed us to get ready to prepare this report, when the unfinished business of the session was crowding upon me, and no time was left me to pursue to the head the villainies I detected in the hand, or I might have been able plainly to tell Congress and the country that if, in this plot, we had a Titus Oates in Conover, so, also, we had a Shaftesbury somewhere. Had more than twenty-four hours been allowed me, or had those twenty four hours been less burthened with other duties requiring immediate discharge, I might have been able, in addition to exposing the perjury, to have told this House who concocted it; who screened it—I do not attack the committee—why it was concocted and screened; and, finally, why a committee of Congress acted towards one of its own members like a Venetian council of ten, whose legislation and inquiries were being kept secret for the benefit of some Foscari.

Need I add, in conclusion, that, neither in verbal or written testimony, is there any credible evidence whatever to criminate Mr. Davis as an accomplice before or after the fact in the murder of Mr. Lincoln? There is not any evidence worthy of the slightest credit that connects Mr. Cleary, Mr. Tompson, Tucker, Dr. Palm, Mr. Stuart, nor any others charged therewith, now at liberty, with that assassination, directly or indirectly.

Nor is there the slightest possible tinge of probability, according to results of investigation, that any plot or plans ever did exist among those charged therewith to poison or infest with fevers the good people of this nation.

I cannot agree with the statement made in the concluding paragraph of the majority report, that:

"It is the duty of the executive department of the government for a reasonable time, and by the proper means, to pursue an investigation for the purpose of ascertaining the truth."

The government, through the bureau of military justice, has pursued its investigations over one year with the rigor of military power, and the expenditure of vast amounts, and in Conover, Campbell, Snevel and company we have the results of their labors. How long is Mr. Davis to lie under these imputations without even a preliminary examination? This is worse than the quicker cruelties of an auto-da-fe. Disagreeing with the majority report on this point, as on most others, I believe it to be the duty of the authorities holding Davis, to give him a preliminary examination, as provided by the usages and practice of all civilized nations. If in that examination it be found there remain anything unsatisfied, it is the duty of the government to immediately hand him to the civil tribunals, that he and the others accused may have opportunity to show to the world the malice and falsehood of these wicked accusations.

The discovery of the doings of the bureau of military justice render it a duty that whatever be done in this matter hereafter, be done in a less suspicious locality, and freed from secrecy. Evil motives alone fear the light. The government of this country should have in this matter nothing to hide or fabricate in darkness.

As regards the charge of treason, that is already before the proper tribunal, and I have only to express surprise that the judicial branch of the government should so long have deferred trial, and that a prisoner could be ready for trial so long, ask for it so persistently, and yet in defiance of law and usage be so long denied it.

The question that legislation by Congress is needed ere the crime of treason can bring a man to trial is wholly unfounded, and sounds like a shrinking from the fulfillment of a most plain duty.

A. J. ROGERS.

July 28, 1866.

THE PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug 14.—Exactly at 12 o'clock, the bell sounded the first strain that announced the assembling of the Convention. A large attendance of delegates were present, comprising, among their number, the great and historical names of the country. The wigwam was virtually finished, and looked quite picturesque in its brilliant drapery and decorations. The delegations from Massachusetts and South Carolina entered arm-in-arm to the tunes of "Dixie" and "Star Spangled Banner." They were greeted with enthusiasm, every person on the floor standing up, and the large crowd in the galleries evincing the most intense approbation. Southern delegations proposed three cheers for the Union and for Andrew Johnson, which met with the heartiest response. The Radicals have not affected the harmony of the convention. The heterogeneous elements composing it have united with astonishing unanimity. The principal discussion of the week has been set at rest by the magnanimous withdrawal of Mr. Valladingham. This action was prompted by a resolution of the Ohio delegation, and reflects the highest credit on that distinguished gentleman. The anticipations of the enemies of the convention have been thoroughly disappointed, and the last stumbling block in the way of complete success has been removed by the noble course of the great Ohio Democrat. The following officers of the convention have been indicated by the Louisiana delegation, in pursuance of the request of the national executive committee: For president, Cuthbert Bullitt; for secretary, Alexander Walker; member of committee on credentials, Nicholas Coleman.

The following is the latest and only correct list of the Louisiana delegates that have arrived in town: J. Ad. Rozier, permanent chairman; T. P. May, secretary; Cuthbert Bullitt, W. H. C. King, Randell Hunt, A. P. Morse, Chas. Gayarre, Alexander Walker, A. M. Holbrook, Nicholas D. Coleman, Jacob C. Vanwinkle, Robt J. Kerr, Joshua Baker, Jno. Ray, Richard Taylor, Tobias Gibson, Alfred Hennen, Jr., Alfred Dupre, W. R. Mills, W. S. Parham, A. C. Graham.

The convention assembled in the wigwam at 12:30 P. M. Mr Randall opened the convention saying: "Gentlemen, I have to announce that the delegates from South Carolina and Massachusetts will now come arm in arm into this convention." This was greeted with great applause, the entire audience rising. At this moment Maj. Gen. Couch, of Massachusetts, and Gov. Orr, of South Carolina, at the head of their delegations, entered arm in arm amid banners flying and music playing. Shout after shout, spontaneous and general, rent the air. Tears filled the eyes of delegates and spectators.

General John A. Dix was nominated as temporary chairman. In accepting he said: "I consider this as a convention of no ordinary character, not only on account of the high social and political standing of the gentlemen who compose it, but because it is a convention of the people of all the States of this Union, (applause,) and because we cannot doubt that if the proceedings are conducted with harmony and good judgment it will lead to most important results. It is truly said that no body of men have met on this continent under circumstances so momentous and so important since the year 1787, (applause,) the year in which our ancestors assembled in this city to form a better government for the States that composed the old confederation—a government which has been confirmed and made more endearing, as we trust, by the fearful trials and perils which it has encountered and overcome. (Applause.) Ten States have yet no representation in the legislature of this country, and it is this wrong we have come here to protest against, and as much as is in our power to redress. When the President of the United States declared that war had ceased, all the States had the right of representation. The exacting of new conditions is subversive of our national liberty and dangerous to the public peace, and to the government our fathers fought to establish, and which we have fought to maintain." He trusted that in the deliberations of the convention the main idea would be to change the present complexion of Congress and purify the public, and bring it back to its original standard: "One country, one flag, one Union of equal States."

Senator Doolittle has been nominated by the committee on organization as permanent chairman.

PHILADELPHIA, August 15.—The Committee on Credentials reported in favor of the admission of Gen. Crosby's Maine delegation.

The letter of Vallandigham met with great applause. After stating that the Ohio delegation had passed resolutions indorsing him as a duly elected delegate, his patriotism and fitness to represent his constituents, and declaring their readiness to stand by him in the assertion of his rights as a delegate should he deem it proper to present himself to the Convention, he says: "Yielding my own deliberate conviction of duty and right to the almost unanimous opinion and desire of friends whose wisdom and soundness of judgment, and sincerity and purity of motives I may not question, to the end that there shall be no pretext even from any quarter for any controverted questions or disturbing element in the Convention to mar its harmony, or hinder in any way the results to the cause of the Constitution, the Union and public liberty which shall follow from its deliberations and its action, I hereby withdraw from the Ohio Democratic delegation and decline taking my seat in the Convention. I am profoundly conscious that the safety and magnitude of the interests involved in the present political canvass in the United States, are too immense not to demand a sacrifice of every personal consideration in a struggle upon the issues of which depend, as I solemnly believe, the present peace, and ultimately the existence of a free Republican Government on this continent."

In conclusion, he trusts the proceedings will be harmonious, the action wise, and that the results will be crowned with triumph.

The following dispatch was received from the President:

"WASHINGTON, August 14, 1866.

"Hon. O. H. Browning and Hon. A. W. Randall, Convention, Philadelphia:

"I thank you for your cheering and encouraging dispatch. The finger of Providence is unerring and will guide you safely through. The people must be trusted and the country will be restored. My faith is unshaken as to the ultimate success. ANDREW JOHNSON."

The Convention has adjourned until to-morrow at 10 o'clock, when the Committee on Resolutions will report. Senator Cowan is the Chairman.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

We have but little animation to notice (says the Price Current of Wednesday) in the general market, during the past three days. Sugar and Molasses have exhibited no change; Western Produce has been attended with about the usual movement, with the exception of decline in Corn and a slight advance in Flour; while operations in our leading staple have evinced increased weakness under the unfavorable influence of the dispatches received through the Cable.

Gold has improved under the favorable accounts from New York, opening on Saturday at 147 to 146¾, and after selling as low as 145, closing firm at 146; on Monday opening at 146 to 146½, and after the receipt of the noon dispatches, announcing an improvement in Wall street, advancing to 147, at which it closed with an upward tendency; yesterday opening nominally at 147 to 147¼, and closing firmer at about 147 to 147½.

The transactions in Silver were confined on Saturday and Monday to the sale of about $2000 in American coin at prices ranging from 135 to 137, also 1000 Mexican dollars at 148½, and 3000 at 149.

Uncurrent money has continued extremely dull. Some small lots of Louisiana State Bank notes sold at 98¾ to 99 per dollar, and some State Treasury notes at 14 to 15 per cent discount. Bank of Louisiana notes are quoted at 65 to 69 per dollar, and Louisiana State Bank notes at 95 to 99, while State Treasury notes rule at 10 to 15 per cent discount, the inside figures being the rates paid by dealers for the small sums offered at their counters. City Treasury notes rule at ⅝ to ¾ per cent discount, National currency being the standard.

COTTON.—After a very limited business on Friday, the market closed dull at 25 to 27c for Ordinary, 29 to 30 for Good Ordinary, 32 to 34c for Low Middling and 35 to 36 for Middling. Since which operations have shown further weakness. Yesterday the market opened dull and unsettled, with only a limited supply offering.

Desirable descriptions are exceedingly scarce in the market, and when offered they command generally full prices.

Low	— to —
Ordinary	naminal
Good Ordinary	28 to 29
Low Middling	32 to —

TOBACCO.—The stock on hand is held firmly, but the views of factors as to prices are mostly beyond the figures buyers are willing to pay.

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused	4 to—	— to 5c, Currency.
Good do	5½ to 6	6½ to 7
Common Leaf	7½ to 8	9 to 11
Fair	12 to 13	14 to 15
Good	15 to 16	16 to 17
Fine	17 to 18	18 to 19
Choice Selec's	20 to —	21 to 25

SUGAR.—The market is very dull, the demand being only in a small retail way. There is little or none of the production of Louisiana on hand. The stock of the foreign production is fair, though not large, and the imports are small. Cuba Sugar is retailing in boxes at 12½ to 13½c for Nos. 12 and 13, 14 to 14½c for Nos. 14 and 15, 15½ to 16½c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17½c for Nos. 19 and 20.

MOLASSES.—There is very little or no Louisiana on hand, and the supply of Cuba is small. The last cargo sale of Cabe Molasses was at 53c per gallon on time. A slow retail business is doing at 55 to 56c per gallon for Good Cuba.

FLOUR.—The supplies are small; the demand is only local, but a better feeling has prevailed and yesterday about 2500 barrels were sold, in small lots, at $8 75 to $9 00 for Superfine, $10 25 for single Extra, $11 50 to 12 50 for double Extra, and $13 to 13 25 per bbl for treble Extra.

BACON—Sugar-cured Hams are in good supply, but Sides, Shoulders and plain Hams are scarce. We quote plain Hams at 22c per lb. The principal sales comprised 10 casks Shoulders at 19c, 10 do Ribbed Sides at 22c, and 70 casks Sugar-cured Hams, in several lots, at 26½c per lb.

PORK.—The demand has been only in a jobbing way. We have heard of some sales, not reported, at $35 and $35 25 per bbl for Mess. Dealers have been supplying the retail demand at $36 per bbl.

LARD—Has been more in request, the market is firmer, and although very little was done, better prices were obtained. There were sales of 100 tierces Prime at 22½c, and 70 kegs at 24½c per lb.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—Butter is in fair supply and demand. Northern is selling at 40 to 45c while Western is selling at 25 to 35c per lb. Cheese is in good supply and request. It is selling at 17 to 18 for Western and Northern, and English Deiry at 25 to 26c per lb.

CORN—Is in good supply but less in demand. Prices for mixed have declined 2c per bushel and those for white 5 to 7½ per bushel. Yesterday 4000 sacks were sold, in lots, at 75c for Mixed, 77 to 80c for Yellow, and 92½ to 95c per bushel for White.

OATS—The market has continued dull and the sales on yesterday were at 50c per bushel for Prime, in warehouse, and 52c on the landing.

BRAN.—The demand has been very limited. Yesterday 400 sacks sold at $1 05 to $1 07½ per 100 lbs.

HAY.—The market is well supplied but continues very dull. Prime Ohio River is selling in jobbing way from warehouse at $25 per ton.

HOPS.—There are few Hops in the market, but there is little or no demand, and prices are nominal. Belgian are held at 80 to 83c, and American at 75c per lb.

INDIA BAGGING.—Is scarce and continues very much in request. Prices have still further advanced about 1½ to 2c per yard. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at the further advanced prices of 38c in rolls, and 40c in bales, and 41c for blanket.

BALE ROPE—The market is steady and firm. Dealers are obtaining 19c per lb. Iron Cotton Ties are selling briskly at 12c per lb.

COFFEE—There is very little in market and none in first hands. There have been resales since our last review of 200 or 300 sacks Fair to Good Fair Rio at 27 to 28c per lb, currency. Prime is very scarce and would command 26c per lb.

GUNNY BAGS—Have been in request and there were sales of 306 bales, of which 80 were at 26½c, 176 at 26¼c and 50 at 27c a piece.

STAR CANDLES.—Are in fair jobbing demand and there have been small sales at 20c per lb for 12 oz, 22½c for 14 oz, and 25c for full weight. A lot of 300 boxes 12 oz sold at 20 per lb.

SOAP.—Palm is jobbing at 8c per lb.

RICE.—There is no Carolina in market and no India in first hands. The latter is selling from second hands at 9 to 10c per lb. Louisiana commands 11 to 12c per lb.

WOOL.—Is in good supply but is very dull. There is a great deal of burry Wool on hand but no demand for that description. We quote washed at 23 to 25c per lb, and unwashed at 17c to 20c.

SALT.—Is in good supply and demand. Round lots of Liverpool Coarse and Fine are quoted at $1 70 to $1 80 per sack, while dealers are obtaining $1 90 to $2 per sack for Coarse in store and warehouse, and $2 to $2 05 for Fine.

NAVAL STORES.—Sales are making in a small way as follows: No. 3 $2 to $3, No. 2 Rosin at $4 to $5, No. 1 $5 to $6, No. 1 White $7, Pitch $6, Tar $2 50 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine commands 55 to 60c per gallon and at retail 65 to 70c per gallon.

HIDES—Country are in good demand, but there are but few on hand and only small sales are making in consequence at the advanced prices of 9½ to 10c for Green Hides, 10½ to 11c for Kip Skins, and 12 to 13c per lb for Dry Hides.

MALT.—There is very little or none in the city; it is held at $1 90 to $2 20 per bushel for Prime Canada and $1 60 for Western. Some 200 bags Western were sold, in lots, at 80c per bushel.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $2 50 to $3 00 per bbl. Onions at $4 00 to $4 25 per bbl. Apples at $5 to $6 per bbl. Cabbages 8 to 12c a piece.

POULTRY & EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $4 for the small and $11 per dozen for the large, Geese at $10 00 and Turkeys at $30 00 per dozen. Western eggs are selling at $7 to $10 per bbl.

BEANS.—Are dull at $5 to $7 per bbl.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY, }
Tuesday evening, August, 14, 1866 }

Western Beef, choice per lb net	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$12 to 20
Hogs per lb gross	12 to 13
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Choice Sheep, per head	$6 to $8
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $80
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12 to $25
Yearlings, per head	$ 7 to $12
Calves per head	$1 50 to $ 8

MONETARY.

Gold has improved under favorable advices from New York, after a firm market on Saturday, at 146 to 146½, opened on Monday at same rates, and after receipt of noon dispatches announcing improvement in Wall street, stiffened and went up to 147, at which it closed with upward tendency. On Tuesday the feeling was even better than on Monday, prices opening nominally at 146 to 147¼, and closing firm at 147¼.

On Wednesday the market opened with increased activity, at 147¼ to 148, but the early dispatches from New York announcing continued improvement in Wall street, caused prices to advance to 148½ to 149, at which figure the day's business closed firm.

Thursday market opened with closing figures of the day before, but with better demand.

Noon dispatches from New York gave opening figures 151¼, reporting advance to 151¾. The feeling here however gave way to some extent, but rallied somewhat later in the day, market closing steady 149 to 150.

Statement of New Orleans Gold Market week ending Friday Aug. 16th, 1866.

FRIDAY, AUG. 10TH, 1866,
Gold, 146; 146¼.
SATURDAY, AUG. 11TH.
Gold, 146; 146½.
MONDAY, AUG. 13TH.
Gold, 146; 146½; 147.
TUESDAY, AUG. 14TH:
Gold, 147; 147½.
WEDNESDAY, AUG. 15TH.
Gold, 148; 149.
THURSDAY, AUG. 16TH.
Gold, 149; 150.
Reported by
WM. S. MOUNT, Manager.
The City Bank of New Orleans,
15 Commercial Place, New Orleans.

NEW DISCIPLINES.

The Agent at the Depository has just received a large supply—enough to fill all orders.

PRICE: SIXTY CENTS.

Thirty per cent. off to wholesale dealers and to Preachers who buy to sell again.

Address—
REV. R. J. HARP, Agent,
No. 112 Camp street, Lock Box 814,
aug18tf New Orleans.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. GEO. F. THOMPSON, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Millsaps, Rev. George H. Clinton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.
Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.
The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Jan. 31, 1867.
For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. a18ft

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE
SUMMERFIELD, ALA.
The next scholastic year begins Monday, Oct. 1st, 1866. A quarter of a century in successful operation, with hundreds of cultivated daughters in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, and under the immediate care and patronage of the Mobile and Montgomery Conferences, this institution can afford and is determined to maintain a high standard of scholarship. Only experienced and skillful educators are employed by the Trustees. Among the recent additions to the Faculty are two gentlemen for a series of years Professors in the State University.
Those desiring really thorough culture for their daughters, will do well to investigate the claims of this institution.
For particulars or a circular apply to the President, Rev R. K. Hargrove. e18 1m A. H. MITCHELL, Pres. Board.

[Established in 1828.]
EVANS' FASHIONABLE RETAIL
Hat Emporium,
No 62 CAMP STREET,
Next door to the Picayune Office, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of the Latest Styles by every steamer, at Moderate Prices. e18 6m

THOS. H. ALLEN, Memphis, Tenn. JAMES M. ALLEN, PERRY NUGENT, } New Orleans
T. H. & J. M. ALLEN,
(Successors to ROBSON & ALLEN).
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
102 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 1y

J. H. CARTER,
Wholesale Grocer,
Nos. 8 and 10 Tchoupitoulas Street,
And 8 and 10 New Levee,
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

B. S. HARPER. N. J. THAXTON.
B. S. HARPER & CO.,
Cotton and Tobacco Factors,
AND GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 81 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

SAM'L. BARRETT. CHS. LE SASSIER.
BARRETT & LESASSIER,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
CORNER COMMON AND BARONNE STREETS,
Entrance, 43 Baronne street.
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

JOHN A. STEVENSON. A. H. MAY.
STEVENSON & MAY,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 40 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 6m

P. H. FOLEY,
Of the Firm of FOLEY, AVERY & Co.
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant
No. 32 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug 18 6m

HARLOW J. PHELPS, Of New Orleans. S. S. BUCKNER, Of Kentucky.
HARLOW J. PHELPS & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 142 Gravier Street, New Orleans.
aug18 6m

W. C. TOMPKINS. H. R. ALSOBROOK.
WM. C. TOMPKINS & CO.,
WHOLESALE DRY GOODS,
No. 2 Magazine st., corner Canal, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of goods constantly on hand for the country trade. a18 0m

A. HENDERSON PEALE & CO.,
Successors to Thos. Henderson & Peale,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
No. 130 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 6m

J. W. CARROLL. JOS. HOY. CHAS. HARDENBERGH
CARROLL, HOY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants.
No. 36 Perdido Street, New Orleans,
aug18 1y

C. L. WALMSLEY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 31 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

JOHN G. FARHAM, Of New Orleans. BEVERLY BLUNT, Of Illuds Co., Miss.
FARHAM & BLUNT,
COTTON FACTORS,
Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents,
No 26 Carondelet st. (First Floor), New Orleans
aug11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY & CO.,
General Commission Merchants and
COTTON FACTORS,
57 Poydras street.
Cotton Office—192 Common street—in charge of RICHARD J. NUGENT. aug4ft

S. K. WALKER. THOS. M'KNIGHT. J. F JOHNSON.
R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondolet street, New Orleans
jan 20-1y.

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondolet street, New Orleans.
W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

GEORGE L. HILL, ATTORNEY at Law, Marshall, Texas. Collections made in Eastern Texas and West Louisiana. mar27

WATTS, GIVEN & CO., Paducah, Ky. WATTS, CRANE & CO New York.
W. C. WATTS & CO., Liverpool, England.
GIVEN, WATTS & CO., COTTON Factors & General Commission Merchants, No. 103 Poydras street, New Orleans. Parties shipping their Cotton to us, can make their election, and have their choice of this, the New York or Liverpool markets. Advances made on consignments to our houses, Watts, Crane & Co New York, and W. C. Watts & Co. Liverpool.
feb3-1y

W. A. BELL. FRED N. OGDEN. H. E. WITHERSPOON
WM. A. BELL & CO.,
General Commission Merchants,
And dealers in Bagging, Rope, Iron Ties, Gunny Bags, Coffee and Western Produce,
41 NATCHEZ STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
Particular attention given to the filling of orders for Factors, for Country Merchants and for Planters. je30-1y

ROBERT L. WALKER,
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans. ap21-1y

CARY W. BUTT. WM. FLASH. THOS. T. A. LYON
BUTT, FLASH & LYON,
Cotton Factors, General Commission and Forwarding Merchants, corner Carondelet and Union streets, New Orleans.
Orders for all descriptions of merchandise will meet prompt attention.
Liberal advances made on consignments of Cotton and Produce to our care. ap14-6m

J. Q. ELLIS. W. C. CHAMBERLIN
ELLIS & CHAMBERLIN, COTTON Factors and Commission Merchants, 23 Carondelet street. jan 20-1y

R. M. DENMAN. R. M. HOLLINGSWORTH
R. MARSH DENMAN & CO.,
Carriage Repository, corner Carondelet and Gravier streets, New Orleans. f3 tf

J. P. HARRISON & SONS,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
51 UNION STREET,—UP STAIRS,
New Orleans.
J. P. Harrison, (formerly of Payne & Harrison)
Edward Harrison,
J. P. Harrison, jun.,
Sidney Harrison,
John N. Harrison. july7 1y

PAYNE, HUNTINGTON & CO.,
Cotton Factors,
No. 32 Union Street,
NEW ORLEANS.
J. U. PAYNE, G. W. HUNTINGTON, W. C. H. DAMERON, H. M. PAYNE
je23-1y

TOM HENDERSON, Late of Henderson, Terry & Co. SAM HENDERSON, Late of Violett, Black & Co.
TOM & SAM HENDERSON,
COTTON FACTORS
AND
General Commission Merchants,
100 COMMON STREET,
je9 1y New Orleans

J. C. M'ALLISTER, late of Memphis, formerly of Jackson, Miss.
E. M'NAIR, late of Arkansas, formerly of Miss.
H. GARDES, late of Washington, Arkansas.
M'ALLISTER, McNAIR & GARDES, Wholesale Grocers, 74 Common Street New Orleans, La. ap7

GEO. H. VINTEN,
PAPER WAREHOUSE,
No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St Charles streets, New Orleans.
Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.
Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams' Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons Type. ap7-1

INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANO.
A lady whose high attainments as a composer and as a performer on and successful teacher of the Piano, can be well attested, proposes to give lessons to a few pupils in the city, commencing in September or October.
Reference: Rev J O Keener, D D; Rev J B Walker, D D; Rev L. Parker.
For particulars address "Pianist," Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,
GREENSBORO, ALA.
The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught
TERMS:
Tuition fees per term, ... $40 00
Contingent fee, ... 5 00
Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month
aug4ft W M WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.
The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.
The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.
TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40.—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March.
Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.
Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.
Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.
As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.
W. H. N. MAGRUDER.
Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE
HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,
REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.
Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.
Next annual term opens first Monday in September.
For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.
Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE
FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A.M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.
The Fall Session of this institution will open on the 26th day of September next.
This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattrasses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and bear an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.
The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.
TERMS:
For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks,	$67 50
Regular Tuition,	25 00
Incidental Fee,	2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of instrument	37 50
French or Spanish,	15 00
Ornamental branches at usual prices.

☞ All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.
The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.
After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

STARS:

"Holes To Let The Glory Through."

A little girl looked to the sky,
So decked with stars, so arched and high;
And struggling in her infant mind
To know why there in beauty shined
Those gems, that glow in living light,
To deck the azure robe of night,
She turned to me, with sparkling eye,
And said: "My ma, what is the sky?
Is it not one vast curtain blue,
With holes to let the glory through?"

Sweet child! rich thought! So let it be,
That in the suns and stars we see
But faintest sparks of heavenly light;
Which, though they dazzle, blind the sight,
Are but some stray and wandering rays,
Come from the upper glory's blaze,
Reclimmed and softened to our eyes,
To hint us what beyond them lies.

The Chase and the Rescue.

What I am going to tell you is about a little bird. It happened many years ago, while I was a missionary among the Indians; but it made such an impression on my mind that I have never forgotten it. I had gone on horseback some three hundred miles to a missionary station among the Cherokees, where the missionaries had a printing press, to get a little book printed in the language of the tribe among whom I lived, and I was on my return home. On the fourth or fifth evening I reached a friend's house, who had been many years a missionary among the Osages, and spent the night with him and his very kind and Christian household.

The following was a beautiful morning in the month of October; and as I was riding alone the lonely trail over those boundless prairies of the far west, my eyes kept a look out for objects of interest in my solitary ride.

It was not long till I saw a flock of little birds undulating and sporting on the wing some distance ahead of me. Their motions, like the rising and falling waves of a lake under a gentle breeze, were very beautiful and graceful, and they were chattering in the highest kind of glee. What they were saying, I, of course, could not tell; but what they were doing, I think every child could guess. They were in their own way and according to the instincts of the nature He had given them, showing forth the praises of the great One who had created them, as well as you. Well, I watched them but a little while, till I saw a hawk away in the distance and high in the air, moving in the direction of these little birds. He was out, no doubt, on the hunt for his breakfast, and he sailed cautiously along, as the cat creeps noiselessly upon the unsuspected mouse. He got very near them before they were apprised of their danger, and in the twinkling of an eye they were all hid in the tall grass except one. He had singled out that one, and pitching downwards between it and the earth he forced it to fly upward. And now a most exciting chase took place. The little bird would dart high into the air, with its enemy, on rapid wing, close upon it. Then with a sudden turn it would pitch downward, to reach a hiding-place in the long grass, but its foe would still manage to get between it and the earth and force it upwards. At last, while I was watching it with intense interest, I saw it, from its airy flight, coming in the direction of where I was riding, with its foe my painfully close upon it. I stopped my horse, and in an instant it passed down close to my hand as I held up the rein of my bridle, and took refuge under my left foot or stirrup. The hawk came almost within reaching distance of my hand before he gave up the chase; and he then wheeled suddenly on his wing and flew away. Leaning over a little, I looked down on the little refugee, and there it stood panting like a hunted roe. "Poor little thing," said I, "you have made a narrow escape for your life, and I have rescued you from your pursuer. How glad I am! and how much you remind me of my own case! I was once, like you, pursued by a great and fearful foe, as determined on capture as yours. How alarmed I was, and full of fear lest I should become his prey! But I found a hiding-place; and my kind Rescuer stopped and drew me to his side, the moment I started in the right direction. If I, my little stranger, feel an unspeakable pleasure in being the instrument of your deliverance, what joy must my Redeemer feel in saving from a crueler foe the precious souls that flee to him for refuge?" This was a strange kind of talk to a little bird, but I spoke as I felt; and starting up my horse, it flew away to join its companions, and tell them, in its own way, the wonderful escape it had. How many of you, my little readers, will have to speak and sing of a much more wonderful deliverance?—Northwestern Pres.

A CHILD'S RELIGION.—The Gospel involves no condition that a child cannot fulfill; it imposes no requirements that a child cannot meet. A child may trust its promises, realize its blessings, and anticipate its rewards. The death of Jesus is the child's plea; the grace of Jesus is the child's strength; pleasing Jesus is the child's earliest rule of right; and going to be with Jesus is the child's best thought of heaven.

THE LARGEST GIRL IN THE WORLD.—She lives at Sweetwater, Tenn., weighs 125 lbs., is named Alice Leath. She is five years old, blue-eyed, dark haired, rosy-cheeked, quick spoken, and has a beautiful countenance."

(From the French of Napoleon Roussel.)

THE BOOK OF BOOKS.

It was a holiday in the month of May; the cheering and lovely hymns of the morning sun had awakened Nature, and in the exuberance of her joy, she sang forth her sweetest hymn of praise. On the village green were assembled a little party, to whom the day afforded relaxation from their ordinary pursuits—these were the schoolmaster, his assistant, and an old man. One seated on the trunk of a tree, another on a stone, and a third reclined on a bank. They had engaged in a social and pleasant conversation; when a Colporteur made his appearance.

"What are you selling there?" said the assistant.

"Some excellent books," replied the latter, laying down his pack. And here, a peasant, whose curiosity was much excited, would have opened it at once, had not the hawker prevented him by sitting down upon it.

"What sort of books do you wish for?" added he, addressing the company.

"For my part, I like histories," said a young man; "it is very amusing to read of kings and of battles—to hear the cannon roar: one can almost imagine oneself on the spot."

"Yes; very true," replied the Colporteur; "history is a most instructive science, and I have a right good book to offer you on the subject."

"But are you aware that every history, though printed, is not true? Look, for instance, at the history of France. In one, Napoleon is called a great man, and Charles the Tenth a weak king; whilst in another, Charles is the good king, and Napoleon a rascal."

"Quite right!" said many voices.

"Yes," continued the Colporteur; "but my history is true, even in its most minute details."

"Let us see it."

"Presently. And you, good dame, what book do you want?"

"Oh, I read no other than my 'Almanack,' and the story of 'The Limping Postman,' the most laughable thing you ever met with. It tells of wet weather and fair weather a year in advance; and then its predictions about war, sickness—about a great man who is to come upon .... Surely, a book which speaks of the future is most interesting and very useful, especially when these predictions concern ourselves."

"Well, I have one with such prophecies in it, both past and future ....But you must confess, that if a book which predicts truth is precious, one that predicts falsehood is very dangerous; and this is often the case with your almanack. Will you have a proof? See."

Here the Colporteur drew from the apron pocket of the good woman, which it but half concealed, the famous almanack, and opening it at the month of May, he approached her.

"What is the meaning of this arrow and cross?"

"It announces fine, calm weather."

"Well! let us see. It promised us fine weather last Sunday, and you know that, on the contrary, we had a frightful thunder-storm, which struck your church clock. But what does it say for this day? What do those two signs signify?"

"Rain and cold."

"For which reason it is a lovely day," added the schoolmaster, smiling.

"You see, then, my good woman, that you must depend very little on the prophecies of this book; but I assure you again, I have a book of true prophecies; and for proof of the accomplishment of those which are to come, I will show you the fulfilment of those that are past."

"Let us see, let us see."

"Wait a little. And you, sir," said the Colporteur to the man of letters; "what book would you wish for?"

"I want a sound moral book for my scholars, such as will teach them to reverence their parents, and obey their teachers."

"That, indeed, is most desirable; a moral book is a good book. But have you not remarked that very often these books, the intention of which is to lead men to do well, present no other motive than the advantages resulting from the practice of virtue in the world (so that we come back to the point whence we set out)?—'Be virtuous, that you may gain the esteem of those who know you; be sincere, that you may not have the character of a liar; be obedient, that your parents may recompense you.' And have you not observed that these motives are very weak? for, though they may influence the conduct of a man in public life, in private, in the bosom of his family, they are utterly ineffectual: and thus they only make him good in appearance. A good moral book, then, should present for a motive the approbation of God and our conscience, and not that of men. It should teach us to act in the dark as we would in the noonday. I have one of this description."

"Well, well, let us see them; show us your books."

"Pardon me for one moment longer.—And you, sir," said the Colporteur to the assistant: "may I ask what book would you wish?"

"None at all: I have read quite enough during my life."

"In that case, permit me to inquire what you think constitutes a good book?"

"Why, I think that must be the best which has had the greatest number of readers; for instance, a French work translated into English, German, Italian, and read in every country in Europe, would probably be a good book."

"Well, I have a book which has had as many readers as all other books put together: five hundred thousand copies are sold yearly: it is so approved of, that it has been translated not only into French, English, German, and Italian, but into one hundred and fifty other languages! It is read through the whole of Europe, as well as in America, Asia, and Africa, by the rich and poor, learned and the unlearned, the young and the old; it is understood by all, interests all, and obtains the love and admiration of all; those who do not read it respect it; and even those who hate it, are obliged to confess that there are good things in it."

"Your book, then, has enemies."

"Yes; but thanks be to God, its enemies are none but drunkards, idolaters, thieves, and robbers: so that this recommends it the more."

"I should like to know the book," said one.

"Very soon I shall let you see it. But tell me, what else distinguishes a good book?"

"Why, a book may have all the reputation that yours has, without being decidedly good, since it is fashion that determines everything; but if a book has been read not only at one period, but at all periods, if the present day as in the past, it may fairly be supposed that it possesses merit."

"The book that I offer you, then, has been read in all ages, for more than three thousand years!"

"Oh! that is indeed enough. Where is this book? I will buy it."

"Ah! I wish I could buy them all," said a young man, who up to that moment had been a silent spectator—"your work on history, on prophecy, on morality, and that which has been so universally read in all ages; but I have not enough money to buy them all."

"These books are comprised in one volume; it is a collection from thirty different authors of the most perfect agreement with each other. You will find in them, not only a striking variety, but a complete harmony; a difference of style, yet animated by the same spirit."

"Well, pray have the kindness to show us your book."

The Colporteur opened his pack, and took from it a handsome volume, well bound, saying, "Here it is: it is the Bible!"

At this word the extended hand of the assistant fell; the schoolmaster crossed his arms; the young man took it, ran through its pages with much curiosity, and the old man uttered a profound sigh, whilst he mournfully cast his eyes to the ground.

"It is the Bible?" said a child.

"Yes, my dear, it is the Word of God."

"The Word of God or of men?" said the assistant.

"What proofs do you desire, sir, of its being truly inspired by God?"

"For instance, its prophecies must be somewhat better accomplished than those of this good woman's almanack."

"You shall be satisfied," said the Colporteur, taking the book out of the young man's hand, and turning over some pages. "Listen to these passages, written three thousand years ago:—'Behold, the eyes of the Lord God are on the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith the Lord. For, behold, I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth.'"

"That certainly has happened," said the schoolmaster; "the kingdom of Judah has been effaced from off the earth, and now, in our days, the land of Judea belongs to the Turks; in short, the Jews have been driven among all nations. One meets them in every city: I have one in my school; and it is singular that you can recognize them at a glance."

"Yes," added the Colporteur, "and prophecy also says, 'that they shall be dispersed, and yet not one grain fall to the earth.' But listen to prediction relating to Egypt:—'I will make the rivers dry, and sell the land into the hand of the wicked, and there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt.'"

"I saw that myself," interrupted the old man. "I was one of Buonaparte's expedition into that country, and a captain of the 13th Foot told us, that in ancient times the land of Egypt was fertilized by waters of the Nile, conducted by canals. He observed that these existed no longer. That the Egyptians had been for some centuries under the yoke of foreign invaders—the French, the Turks, the Romans, the Greeks, and for a long time they had had no princes of their own."

"But to show you rapidly a great number of fulfilled prophecies, let me read a little book which I have here. Two thousand years ago, it was written in the Bible concerning Askelon: 'Askelon is cut off with the remnant of their valley.... Askelon shall be a desolation.... Askelon shall be no more inhabited.' The infidel, Volney, of our own day, the enemy of the Bible, writes thus: 'The desert ruins of Askelon,' ... and again, 'One meets with several ruins in succession. ... All the rest of the country is a complete waste.'

"Of Idumea, it was predicted, about the same time, 'None shall pass through it for ever;' to which Volney bore witness, thirty years since, saying, 'This land has not been visited by any traveler.' The Bible declares, 'that all these cities should be turned into perpetual desolations;' and Volney, in the course of three days' journey, met with more than thirty towns in ruins, and absolutely deserted. The Bible says: 'The remainder of the cedars of Lebanon shall be so few, that a child may number them.' And Volney observes, 'There are but four or five trees, which bear any resemblance to the cedars of Lebanon.' Furthermore, the prophet declares, 'The broad walls of Babylon shall be utterly broken:' and Volney exclaims—'Where are the walls of Babylon?' But would you wish to hear the prophecies that are accomplishing under our own eyes? Listen: Jesus Christ said, 'The gospel shall be preached in all the world. And they shall come from the east and from the west, from the north and from the south, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God.' Well, do you not find, in the present day, Christians in all parts of the habitable globe, in Europe, in America, in Asia, in Africa, north, south, east, and west? Again, Jesus Christ said, 'The heavens and the earth shall pass away, but my words shall never pass away. Somewhat more than eighteen hundred years ago, this was uttered by Jesus Christ; and, at this moment, the Bible, which contains his word, is in existence; it is in my pack, in your hand, in our churches, and in our houses. Thus, then, are the prophecies fulfilled before you. Say, what more proofs must you have, before you admit that the Bible is the word of God?"

A moment's pause ensued. However, the schoolmaster replied: "It seems to me that a book, divinely inspired, should speak quite differently to that of man; therefore, I should expect to find, between your Bible and other books, a difference, so striking and irresistible, as would oblige me to say, 'It is indeed the work of God!'"

"Well, sir, have you ever read the Bible?"

The schoolmaster was silent.

(To be concluded next week.)

Prevention and Cure of Cholera.

At a regular meeting of the New York Board of Health on the 6th, Dr. Crane read the following address to the public, with instructions to citizens. The document, which was approved by the Board, is as follows:

The Board of Health publish this simple statement, and beg the public to give to it their earnest attention.

Cholera is generally a preventable disease, and in its early stages can be arrested if the habits be good. Study, therefore, temperance in eating and drinking. Do not believe that alcoholic stimulants are useful in guarding you against an attack. Let the food be nutritious, and keep the digestive organs in a healthful condition. Use no stale or uncooked vegetables. Let your meat be fresh, and your vegetables be well cooked, and all fruits be fresh and ripe.

Cleanliness of the body is of the first consideration.

Keep the skin in a healthy state by bathing the whole body, with a free use of soap. Cold bathing is best used in the morning—never just before going to bed.

Cleanliness in your homes is of equal importance. Let your apartments be dry—never damp. Suffer no decayed vegetables or stagnant water to remain in your cellars or yards. Any disagreable smell from privies, cesspools or sinks, is a proof of their unhealthiness. Remove them by necessary repairs, lime, chloride of lime or whitewashing. Ventilate well your houses and apartments. Expose your bedding to the air and sun. Avoid excessive fatigue. Keep regular hours in eating and sleeping. Wear flannel near to the skin. A good plan is, if the bowels are at all disordered, to wear a broad band of flannel (a flannel belly band) around the body, reaching from the hips to the ribs. Maintain the natural temperature of the body by sufficient clothing, especially keep the feet warm. Never when heated sit on the grass, or stone seats, or sleep under an open window. If exposed to wet, change your boots and clothes as soon as possible.

Take no purgative medicines, except by direction of a physician.

Cholera is almost invariably preceded by a painless diarrhea, and this is in all cases to be promptly treated.

When diarrhea is present, go to bed and maintain a position on the back, use abundance of blankets, and send for a physician.

Stay in bed until you are well. Do not consider yourself well until you have had a natural movement from the bowels. Abstain from all drinks. Apply mustard plaster to the bowels.

In the absence of a physician an adult can take ten drops of laudanum and ten drops of spirits of camphor. A child of ten years may take five drops of laudanum and five of camphor. A child of five years may take three droops of laudanum and three of spirits of camphor; and these doses may be repeated every twenty minutes so long as diarrhea or pain or vomiting continues. This will save time, but in all cases send for a physician.

Never chill the surface of the body by getting out of bed.

Remove immediately all the evacuations from your rooms; scald all the utensils used, or disinfect them with chloride of lime: scald all your soiled clothing.

THE BUREAU COMMISSION.

Startling Report of Fraud and Corruption in Louisiana and elsewhere—General Bad Management in the South.—The Bureau an Injury to Whites and Blacks.

We copy the following from the Times of the 12th inst.

WASHINGTON, August 10.—Generals Steedman and Fullerton have made their final report of their investigations of the Freedmen's Bureau, covering the States of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, and of Louisiana the Commission say the Bureau operations have more need of retrenchment and reform than in any other State. The expenses of the last fiscal year were over three hundred thousand dollars, exceeding taxes and notes collected. Sixty thousand of this addition is for the transportation of rations, and quartermaster's supplies furnished by Government. They are unable to ascertain the disposition made of the vast property held by the Bureau. The lowest estimate of property seized as abandoned or confiscated amounts to $10,000,000. The rents returned less than one per cent of its value.

Conway is charged with squandering the school money. Pay rolls are shown to have been forged or altered. It appears that books and records have been destroyed. Captain Morse, Provost Marshal of the Bureau, is charged with making his office a slave-pen, with arresting freedmen, selling them to planters for five dollars a head, and sharing the proceeds with policemen who made arrests.

In their summary of general observations South, the Commissioners say the Bureau administration shows an entire absence of system or uniformity. In one State, officials exercise judicial powers. In an adjoining State, all cases are referred to the civil authorities. In a third, officers collect cases and turn them over to the military provost court. The contract system varies in each State. In Louisiana the schools are supported by the Government. In another State the schools are partially self-supporting; in Texas entirely so. In some localities officers interfere arbitrarily between planter and freedmen, and favor the latter. In others the Bureau is used to coerce freedmen and in favor of the planters. The expenditures vary in the same way. In one State over three hundred thousand dollars; in another State of equal population not over fifty thousand. Some States' expenses will be paid by taxes, levied and collected from the people. In other States the expense is wholly borne by the United States Treasury. The official report of Col. Reno, Provost Marshal General of the Bureau of Louisiana, shows a deficit of seven thousand dollars in accounts of officers engaged collecting taxes. In New Orleans, one of the defaulting officers, Lieut. Fosters, Col. Reno thinks, appropriated to his own use the largest amount. He carried off the cash box with him. This officer, on his own responsibility, levied an incidental tax, which, with the exception of two hundred dollars, went into his own pocket. The report continues a summary of general observations.

The Commission is of the opinion that at the close of the war, and some time after the cessation of hostilities, the Freedman's Bureau did good. The people of the South, having at first not much faith in the negroes working under the free labor system, were not desirous of getting them. During the summer of 1865 two judicious bureau military officers did much toward restoring order and harmony, inducing the people of the South to resume the cultivation of the plantations and employing freedmen. Before the close of 1865 an entire revolution in sentiment of the people regarding negro labor took place. A feeling of kindness sprang up toward the freedmen, resulting perhaps mainly from the conviction that their labor was desirable and profitable, and the only labor to be had. The necessity of the bureau then ceased, since then while it has been beneficial in some localities it had been productive in the aggregate of more harm than good. It occasioned and will perpetuate discord, as it exists, though administered by the purest and wisest men.

The freedmen regard its presence as evidence that they would be unsafe without it; while the people consider it an imputation upon their integrity as farmers, and as an espionage upon the special action of their courts and magistrates, as well as upon the private conduct of their citizens. Both races are thus made suspicious and bitter by an agency which, in the present disorganized condition of civil government and society in the Southern States, is powerless to advance the best protection of the freedmen. If they were left free to dispose of their labor to the highest bidder, unshackled by contracts made for him by Bureau officers, no apprehensions need be felt for their safety or success. If the freedmen could this moment demand the wages which the high prices of products in the South and West would justify, one dollar per day and board would be the ruling wages, instead of ten and twelve dollars per month, the prices now paid, but they can not take advantage of the demand for their labor, but are bound by contracts, or enslaved for twelve months, through the agency and influence of the Freedmen's Bureau. Hands on Mississippi river steamboats are not required to make contracts. They are getting forty dollars per month for work less exacting than the plantation negro. The freedmen on the Ogechee and Savannah rivers, are getting, on rice plantations, ten and fifteen dollars per month under contract for a year, while laborers employed on the Georgia Central Railroad, which runs between these streams, are getting one dollar and a half per day.

Some complaints are made of the planters on the Savannah river. Their laborers are discontented and do not work as required by their contracts. One of the planters, a practical liberal minded man, explained the cause of the discontent to be the low wages at which negroes were hired. He said "I can get hands enough, and good work done, too, by paying a dollar a day and rations, and I am paying that, and expect to pay even more. I can give three dollars a day and make money. The negro will make all he can out of his freedom, and has a right to do so." The enlightened policy advocated by this gentleman, a policy strongly in accordance with justice and sound political economy, is defeated by the contract system inaugurated and forced into practical operation by the officers of the freedmen's Bureau. We met instances of freedmen working for ten dollars a month and rations, under yearly contracts, sanctioned by the Bureau, while in the same field, doing the same work, other freedmen, not under contracts, are getting one dollar a day and rations.

In all the large towns in the Mississippi Valley, during the months of May and June, planters were offering a dollar a day and rations for freedmen, while under sanction of the Government, given by the officers and agents of the Bureau, thousands of freedmen were working under contracts for ten dollars per month. If freedmen were left free to contract, the demand for their labor and competition among employers will secure them good wages and kind treatment. They will not contract with men who treat them harshly, or do not pay them, as has been abundantly proved by the fact that many planters who treated their former slaves cruelly, now are unable to hire freedmen to work for them, and have been obliged to sell or lease their plantations.

The Commissioners conclude as follows: The system of contracts existing in the South and enforced by the bureau, is simply slavery in a new form. What is the difference to the negro whether he is sold for five dollars or five thousand dollars, for thirty years to thirty masters, or for thirty years to one master? It is involuntary servitude in either case, and a practical defeat and abrogation of the lamented Lincoln's proclamation. If a freedman leaves work to seek employment at better wages, he is arrested as a vagrant by order of the Freedmen's Bureau and put to labor on the roads with a ball and chain, as provided by an order recently issued by Gen. Scott, Assistant Commissioner of South Carolina.

If fatigued from overwork, and desires rest for a day; if he leaves the plantation to visit his relatives or friends, it is made a penal offence, and a fine of fifty dollars is imposed. If he refuses to contract at all, he is arrested by the Bureau Provost Marshal and sold for a few dollars to the nearest planter. The coercive policy adopted by the Bureau in this and other respects has been made a justification for discriminating legislation in some of the Southern States. The only remedy against a white man for a breach of contract is a suit for damages. We can see no reason why the same remedy should not be applied and conceded in the case of the black man. The freedman has nothing to sell but his labor, and we are strongly of the opinion that he ought to be permitted to obtain for it the highest price it will bring. If he is a freedman, it is neither just nor lawful for any person to assume control of him, and certainly not more just or lawful for an officer of the Freedmen's Bureau to do so, than for Southern planters.

Very respectfully, your obedient servants,

JOS. B. STEDMAN,
Major Gen. Volunteers.
J. S. FULLERTON,
Brig. Gen. Volunteers.

A gentleman, having led a company of children beyond their usual journey, they began to get weary and all cried to him to carry them on his back; but because of their multitude he could not do this. "But," says he, "I'll get horses for us all;" then cutting little wands out of the hedges for them, and a great stake as a charger for himself, this put mettle in their legs, and they rode cheerily home. So much for a bit of ingenious fun.

SOUTHERN SHOE MANUFACTORY.

DRAKE & MARKHAM,
Manufacturers of
Men's, Boys', Ladies', Misses' & Children's
BOOTS AND SHOES,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,
No. 56 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

We call the attention of the public to our extensive stock of fine, custom-made Creole Boots and Shoes, for Gents, Boys, Youths, Ladies, Misses and Children, made of the best imported stock, by skillful workmen.

We design furnishing goods that combine elegance with durability, at a less price than common goods are usually sold for in this city.

OUR LAST-FOR-EVER BOOTS!

Every man in this State should have a pair of our Last-for-ever Boots. They are warranted waterproof, and to last one year, or the money returned.

Our stock of Family and Plantation Shoes are the best that can be made.

One pair will outwear any three pairs bought at auction. Country Merchants will do well to make a note of this.

We have better goods and sell them lower than any house in Louisiana.

Orders filled at ten per cent. on the original cost of manufacture.

All goods warranted to satisfy, or they may be returned. Planters will instruct their Commission Merchants to buy their shoes of

DRAKE & MARKHAM, 56 CAMP-STREET.
aug18 1y

WALLACE & CO.,
Importers and Jobbers of
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, and
PLANTATION CLOTHING,
No. 74 Canal Street, and 91, 93 and 95 Common Street,
(Slocum's Building), New Orleans.

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,
Of the late Firm and Successors to G. W. COFFIN & CO.,
102 & 104 East Second street,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted in our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent upon application.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD.

Established, August, 1861.

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January,

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET,

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all persons desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURE to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES,
DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves to demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods than any, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited by Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

C. E. CATE & CO.,
feb17 18 Camp st., N. O.

J. H. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. W.

JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.
Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 32.
WHOLE NUMBER 508.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, AUGUST 25, 1866.

$3 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE
OFFICE—112 CAMP STREET.

OUR GERMAN CORRESPONDENCE.

HANOVER, July 28th, 1866.

EDITOR ADVOCATE: The manufacturers of geographical maps have now a fair chance to do a good business. The familiar lines of demarcation on the old map of Germany will all have to be changed.

Great changes has the late campaign produced. And, strange to say, the war resulted, if not contrary to their wishes, contrary to the expectations of most people. So much had been written about the formidableness of the Austrian army, so much had been said about the superior skill of Field Marshal Benedek, so loudly the Austrian officials boasted of their superior artillery and cavalry, so defiantly Francis Joseph spoke in his proclamations, such extraordinary patriotism was manifested by his conglomerate subjects before the commencement of hostilities, that but few outside the Prussian Cabinet could foresee the present result. It now appears that for many years Austria has been but the shadow of what it was in the days of Tilly and Wallenstein, and that it has supplied its lack of internal strength with vaunting words. Well, thanks to Prussia! for poor fatherland will now no longer be divided against itself, a state of things designedly encouraged for the purpose of maintaining the numerous abominable petty potentates of Germany. With Austria's expulsion from Germany, Germany will become united and strong with one main and respectable government.

The armistice of five days, agreed upon by the belligerents on the 22nd inst., is generally considered the initiative of peace, inasmuch as it was agreed to on the part of Prussia, upon the special condition that Austria first accede to all of its demands. The Prussian demands are these: Austria is to forego all its antiquated rights and privileges in Germany, and is to cede Venetia directly to Victor Emmanuel. To this Francis Joseph has acquiesced, and I do therefore not see any cause for a continuation of hostilities. King William desires nothing more than a political reorganization of Germany under his sway, and to accomplish this there is now no further obstacle.

Strangely fortunate has Italy been in the present war. Whipped on land, and whipped on sea, beaten at Custozza and Lisa, it nevertheless secures all it ever desired. With this quadrilateral in its possession, it has now a fair chance, with prudent management, to become a first-rate power among the nations of the world. To be overbearing it will never have cause, in view of the fact that it was Prussian victories which secured Venetia for it.

The only fear is that in the present war of the pen Germany will not yet become what Italy now is—fully united and consolidated. It is so much to the interest of its neighbors to keep Germany disunited, and it has been so long successfully accomplished, that as yet it is difficult to realize the thought that Germany will at last become a country. However, although Prussia be not sincere in its present and late professions of its German national motives in undertaking the war against Austria, it will find, notwithstanding its probable recreancy towards fatherland, that it has aroused a ghost over whom it has no longer any command. Near twenty years the Italian struggles for independency have lasted, and I fully believe that, like their neighbors, the Germans will not rest until they, too, will know themselves a nation among the tribes of the earth. They are entitled to that privilege.

The Germans are proverbially an "subjective" men, and are slow, as a general thing, little concerned about politics, as the living present; generally, living in and to themselves, not at all noticing the momentous natural affairs that surround them. Though they are aspired of their political thraldom, though they know what is required for the good of their country, it is wasteful to them to forsake their habits and old customs, and to will and to do for their rights. But at present the cannon's roar appears to have set them right. Even the Professors, who hitherto deemed it the business of mean men and minds to be concerned in politics, are now altogether absorbed by the same. Of course, the other classes, too, are wide awake, and I am led to hope the best for Germany.

It is really a great pity that slavery has been abolished in America. As slavery was never profit hitherto, it would certainly become so now, in view of the fact that same very cheap overseers, from the ranks of the numerous superfluous and dethroned German monarchs, might be secured. Should there yet be any want of such men, your correspondent will, upon notice, supply your readers.

Perhaps no other army is supplied with a better and more efficient medical corps than that of Prussia. It is surprising to see how quickly and well the wounded are relieved, and what a comparative large number are restored to health. Alas! how many poor American soldiers died in the late war from the mere want of attendance!—Chaplains are strangely not numerous; the entire army is said to have not more than fifteen.

The Missionary Conference of the M. E. Church, North, under the efficient management of L. S. Jacobs, D. D., is doing in Germany a very good work. It now numbers twenty-three preachers, scattered throughout the land. The result of the war will also benefit them; for there were hitherto several little abominable governments whose dominion missionaries were not allowed to enter. Prussia, however, received them, and as now that government will absorb all the others, the preachers will not meet with any more obstacles in this way. Cannot the M. E. Church, South, do something for pantheistic and nationalistic Germany?

Affectionately,

J. B. A. AHRENS.

AUGUST.

I.

The sun beats down in fierce and burning rays
On shaven fields, and fruits, and golden sheaves;
The southern breeze scarce moves the pendent leaves,
And languid quiet marks these summer days.

II.

Knee-deep in pools the drowsy cattle stand;
No trout dare venture from his cool retreat;
And from the groves, once filled with voices sweet,
No note is heard from all the feathered band.

III.

Adown the meadow and along the plain,
Where heated labor courts the sheltering shade,
The strong-armed mower with his flashing blade
Still cuts the waving grass and bending grain.

IV.

How calm and solemn seem these August days!
This mid-life of the growing, changing year;
How full of promise for the autumn near,
When field and garden yield their annual praise.

—American Farmer.

Church of England vs. English Wesleyanism.

The Church Review, which ought to be good authority, has made this statement: that "the Church of England has grown more in numbers, church buildings, schools and voluntary offerings of all sorts, for all purposes, ecclesiastical and benevolent, foreign and domestic, she has grown incomparably more, we say, in twenty-five years than in the three hundred years previous."

On the other hand, the recently-published district returns of Wesleyan Methodism for the current conference year "exhibit the startling fact that several of the oldest districts where Wesleyan Methodism has in former times had almost unbounded success, report a decline." Ten districts named "show a decrease of over two thousand members."

The cause of the recent wonderful growth of the Church of England is thus stated in the same article of the Review:

"One great leading feature of the movement in England—one chief element of its powers and of its success—has been its deadly hostility to the pew system, and the remorseless and unflinching war which it has waged with pews and pew sales and pew rents in every varied form of the abomination. The measure of popular growth among the masses has been in direct proportion with the successes gained in this war against the heartless exclusiveness of pews."

May not the cause of the startling decline of Wesleyan Methodism be found, in good part at least, in the fact that this "exclusiveness of pews" has been transferred to the Wesleyan? It is stated that, in the very districts where the greatest decline has occurred there has been "an improvement in church architecture," and in the "amount of money contributions." It is also alleged that an "affectation of gentility" prevails. "Snobbishness," one writer says, has been "introduced into the worship of our congregations." May it not be inferred from these statements that the pew system obtains there? that respectability and exclusiveness "have supplanted those characteristics which belong to the earlier period, when "Methodism" was "the great phenomenon" of the age, "sweeping onward with a breadth and force truly astonishing?"

If in these remarkable cases of "growth" and "decline" the cause has been correctly traced and truly stated, have not the facts a suggestiveness to us in this Centenary of American Methodism?

The paragraphs in the Advocate recently, recording the abandonment of the "pew system by the Hanson Place Church, of Brooklyn, and the Bedford-street Church, of New York, furnished occasion, doubtless, for sincere and hearty expressions of joy and of gratitude to God on the part of many a reader; but notwithstanding occasional occurrences of this character, is not the proportions of pewed churches steadily increasing among us? If so, should it not occasion anxiety? And can anything be done to arrest the tide!—N. Y. Advocate.

The Lord's Prayer.

An act of prayer is of itself a searching test of one's thoughts and feelings, especially so when the very language of the petition, as suggested by the Divine Spirit, holds up the miror to the heart. The following story well illustrates some of the difficulties experienced by an intentional sinner in repeating the Lord's prayer.

In the middle ages, when the great lords and knights were always at war with each other, one of them resolved to avenge himself upon a neighbor who had offended him. It chanced that on the very evening when he made this resolution, he heard that his enemy was to pass near his castle with only a few men with him. It was a good opportunity to take his revenge, and he determined not to let it pass. He spoke of his plan in the presence of his chaplain, who tried in vain to persuade him to give it up. The good man said a great deal to the duke about the sin of what he was going to do, but in vain. At length, seeing that all his words had no effect, he said; "My lord, since I cannot persuade you to give up this plan of yours, will you at least consent to come with me to the chapel that we may pray together before you go?" The duke consented, and the chaplain and he knelt together in prayer. Then the mercy-loving Christian said to the revengeful warrior:

"Will you repeat after me, sentence, by sentence the prayer which our Lord Jesus Christ taught to his disciples?"

"I will do it," replied the duke.

He did it accordingly. The chaplain said a sentence, and the duke repeated it, till he came to the petition, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them that trespass against us." There the duke was silent.

"My lord duke, you are silent," said the chaplain. "Will you be so good as to continue to repeat the words after me, if you dare say so? 'forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us.'"

"I cannot," replied the duke.

"Well, God cannot forgive you, for he has said so. He himself has given this prayer. Therefore, you must either give up your revenge, or give up saying this prayer; for, to ask God to pardon others, is to ask him to take vengeance on you for all your sins. Do, now, my lord, and meet your victim. God will meet you at the great day of judgment."

The iron will of the duke was broken.

"No," said he, "I will finish my prayer. My God, my Father, pardon me. Forgive me, as I desire to forgive him who has offended me. Lead me not into temptation, but deliver me from evil!"

"Amen!" said the chaplain.

"Amen!" repeated the duke, who now understood the Lord's prayer better than he had ever done before, since he had learned to apply it to himself.—Biblical Treasury.

HONORARY CHURCH MEMBERS—"Two-thirds of the members of my church," says a pastor, "are honorary members. They don't come to prayer-meetings, they don't attend Sabbath school, they don't add to the life of the church; they are passengers on the gospel-ship; they bear no burdens, and no strength; their names are on our books, they are honorary members."

Another Victim of Radicalism.—Murder of a Methodist Minister.

[From the St. Louis Republican, Aug. 2.]

The friends of the Rev. Samuel B. Headlee, an estimable gentleman, a minister of the Methodist Church, South, and Presiding Elder of the Springfield District, were shocked, on yesterday, to learn that he had been cruelly and atrociously murdered, in Webster county, Mo., on the 22d July. Mr. Headlee was widely known throughout the State, and more than respected for his learning, piety and devotion to the ministry of his church. To those who knew him, without reflecting upon the lawlessness and murder that stalks abroad at noonday, in this State, the announcement of his assassination, was enough to alarm the bravest and cause the blood to chill in the veins.—To what are we coming in Missouri?—How many victims and what sacrifices, does the bloody Molock of Radicalism demand? Is it not enough that dastardly and infamous laws have been enacted to deprive citizens of their just liberties, and for the incarceration of the ministers of religion in the dungeons of felons? Must the murder of whole families of peaceful citizens and of such men as Rev. Mr. Headlee be added to these exactions? Surely, all this is beyond the bounds of endurance. Something must be done to restore us to our former condition of peace and order, or the State will have to be given up to maranders and murderers.

Who will take the initiative in this reform so absolutely needed, we cannot venture to predict. Those in authority seem to have no disposition to do.—They are busied in scheming to retain the ill-gotten power, which they hold against the will of our people, and attained by unjustifiable means. Instead of endeavoring to quiet the popular mind and bring harmony among our people, they harangue the multitude of their ignorant and brutal followers with vindictive and denunciatory speeches, which naturally enough lead them to actual outbreaks and murder. The fruits of this are seen on every hand, in the assaults made upon our public speakers, in the breaking up of a religious meeting in De Kalb county, followed by the killing of two of the rioters, and now in the murder of one of the most amiable and humble of his profession, in the person of Rev. Samuel B. Headlee. We warn our rulers and the leaders of party in power, that they must see to it that these bloody-minded men are punished. The laws must be enforced against all its violators and not against those of one party. If it is not, the people will themselves rise up and vindicate the majesty of the law, and upon the heads of those who can, and will not, preserve the peace in our midst will rest the responsibility of the consequences which may follow.

The following extract of a letter which we have been permitted to copy furnishes all the details of the murder of Mr. Headlee which have come to our knowledge:

WEBSTER COUNTY, July 30.

Another has fallen a martyr to intolerance. Rev. Samuel B. Headlee, of the St. Louis Conference, is no more. He was killed day before yesterday by a mob for preaching the Gospel. The circumstances are about these: He had an appointment to preach and to organize a church at Pleasant View, a meeting-house in this county belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the 28th and 29th inst. Threats had been made that if he preached there, he would never again.

The day came (the 28th), and there was a number of men, women and children present at the place to hear the preaching. They thought the threats had been made only to terrify the minister. There were also some twenty or more armed men present, headed by a member of the Northern Methodist Church. Before the minister came, the leader of the band and his men seemed to be mad. They said he should not preach, and threatened to use violence in case he attempted it. They also threatened others who were present.

The preacher came, and went to these armed men, and tried in a very mild manner to persuade them to calm down and be reasonable. He told them that if he had violated the law by preaching they could enforce the law against him, for he was willing to abide the consequences. The leader said he (himself) cared nothing for the law. "There is my law" (pointing to his armed men).—The preacher then asked him if he would let him preach if "we (himself and friends) will leave this place and go on my own land." (He had land not far off). They said they would not molest him.—The preacher and those that went to hear him then started off. When they had gone about a half a mile, some of the armed men came galloping up. One of them drew a revolver and shot the preacher three times. Two of the balls entered his body, the other his arm. He lived until 10 o'clock that night. Then, after giving his wife and friends his dying counsel, and, like Stephen, praying for his murderers, he calmly fell asleep.

Congregationalism in the South.

A correspondent of the Congregationalist gives rather a gloomy picture of the obstacles to the establishment of Congregationalism in the South. He says:

"There are various reasons why it is not easy to carry our polity South. One is that Southern Christians are suspicious of it, looking upon it as the Pandora's box, out of which all their afflictions and sorrows have sprung. A case will best illustrate the point. When Gen. Butler ordered me to take care of Dr. Armstrong's pulpit in Norfolk, before I entered the church I called the elders together to talk over matters, and see if we could not treat each other as Christian brethren. I fancied I was making a good impression, and about gaining my end, when one of them brought me up with a short turn, by asking:

'What is your denomination?'

I replied, 'I am a Congregationalist.'

'And was not Theodore Parker a Congregationalist?' he rejoined.

"He put the laboring oar fairly in my hands, and I never worked harder than I did to convince him that Parker no more belonged to us than he did to them. I am sure I did not satisfy him in regard to the denomination, though I think in the end he looked upon me as orthodox. Nothing good can come out of New England, especially out of New England churches, which are only a little removed from infidelity, as they think. Sectarian lines are much more sharply drawn South than they are North, and the people of the South not nearly as likely to be drawn into any new system of faith as the people of the North. A polity like ours, therefore, unknown to the denominations of the South suspected of infidelity, and of the direst evils which have afflicted the land, need expect to go Southward only by the hardest.

"But a still greater difficulty is found in Northern men themselves. In our simplicity we presumed that every son and daughter of New England would forget denominational preferences, and be only too glad to band together to form a Congregational church. The practical fact, however, is to large extent and was during the war, that Northern Episcopalians, Baptists, and Methodists would attend secesh churches, and hear secesh ministers of their own name, before they would listen to loyal Congregational preachers. This statement has but few exceptions, and therefore, in carrying our polity South, we can only count on those who belong to our churches.

"Nor even on these can we fully rely; for the members of our churches and congregations who go South, do not go with any design of carrying the church and the institutions of their fathers. They have gone South for any other reason than a religious one. They have gone to make money, not to bear the burdens incident to the establishment of a new church."

Bathing—Utility and Caution.

There is much more in a bath than water, and its effects are by no means limited to its cleansing action upon the skin. The chemical character of the matters it holds in solution are by no means to be disregarded, but the most important element in its influence upon the human system is its temperature. Recent experiments have shown that a man may live continually in a tub of water for a third of a year in almost the same condition as in atmospheric air, provided a certain temperature be maintained; while a plunge into the chilled waters of the ocean produces effects which are immediately felt, and which are almost wholly dependent upon the cold it contains. First comes the sudden shock and gasp, the skin becomes pale and assumes the spasmodic state of "goose flesh," the external parts shrink, the blood recoils and is driven in upon the central organs and the respiration is hurried and impeded. After the bath follows the reaction. The lungs and heart seem to act as if a load had been lifted from them, the blood is forced back through its natural channel, with increased vigor, the skin glows, excretion is promoted, and a feeling of ease and elasticity pervades the whole body, which terminates in a delightful languor if rest is immediately taken. This is the natural sequence of phenomena if the bather is healthy and does not remain in the water too long. But some of the internal organs may be weak, and unable to accommodate themselves to the large amount of blood forced in upon them by the peripheral chill, and, to free themselves when the bath is ended. In such cases headache, lassitude, and disordered secretions may follow, or even more dangerous results. There are persons who appear to have so little vitality that even a momentary immersion produces a chilliness which lasts a long time, and whom blue skins and chattering teeth indicate to be wholly unfitted for the cold bath.

There are, indeed, many precautions to be observed, to render sea-bathing perfectly harmless, and among the thousands who daily resort to these establishments there must be many upon whom it may produce injurious effects. The children, particularly, who frequent them remain far too long in the water and bathe too frequently, and some means should be devised by which this evil can be prevented.

A Score of Impolite Things.

1. Loud and boisterous laughter.
2. Reading when others are talking.
3. Reading aloud in company without being asked.
4. Talking when others are reading.
5. Spitting about the house, smoking or chewing.
6. Cutting finger nails in company.
7. Leaving a Church before Public Worship is closed.
8. Whispering or laughing in the House of God.
9. Gazing rudely at strangers.
10. Leaving a stranger without a seat.
11. A want of respect and reverence for seniors.
12. Correcting older persons than yourself, especially parents.
13. Receiving a present without an expression of gratitude.
14. Making yourself the hero of your own story.
15. Laughing at the mistakes of others.
16. Joking of others in company.
17. Commencing talking before others have finished speaking.
18. Answering questions that have been put to others.
19. Commencing to eat as soon as you get to the table; and—
20. In not listening to what one is saying in company—unless you desire to show open contempt for the speaker. A well-bred persons will not make an observation whilst another of the company is addressing himself to it.

Card Playing.

I have all my days had a card-playing community open to my observation, and I am yet to be made to believe that a game which is the universal resort of the starved in soul and intellect, which has never in any way linked with itself tender, elevating, or beautiful associations, the tendency of which is unduly to absorb the attention from more weighty matters, can recommend itself to the favor of Christ's disciples. The use of culture and genius may embellish, but can never dignify it. I have at this moment ringing in my ears the dying injunction of my father's friend: "Keep your sons from cards; over them I've murdered time and lost heaven."

BETTER THAN GAS.—"It is now ascertained," says a scientific journal, "that the ocean contains one hundred and sixty thousand cubic miles of magnesium—a quantity which would cover the entire surface of the globe, both sea and land, to a thickness of eight feet. Three years ago all the chemists who had obtained magnesium had probably not obtained an ounce among them. One year ago its price was more than five hundred dollars a pound. Now, owing to improvements recently introduced, magnesium wire is sold at six cents a foot." If these statements be accurate—and they are made on apparently satisfactory data—there is reason to believe that in another year or two the cost of the light produced from magnesium will be far below that of gas. As to the superiority of the light itself, there can be no question. It is purer and more intense than that of the flame of any artificial light that has yet been discovered, does not alter the natural color of things, and can be regulated with the utmost ease. By the adaptation of proper mechanical contrivances, some progress toward which has already been made, it can be rendered available for domestic purposes without any risk of its affecting the sight. Its adaptability for street illumination has been equally demonstrated. Once, therefore, the economical question is solved to the satisfaction of capitalists, we may look for some reduction in the rates of illuminating.

The fretful Christian wrongs his Master sadly, for he seems to tell everybody (what he knows is not true) that Christ's yoke is hard and his burden heavy.

PIETY NOT ENTAILED.—Quaint old Thos. Fuller found a text for a short "sermon of references" in the genealogy of Christ, which he sees to be checkered with four remarkable changes in four immediate generations: 1. Roboam begat Abia; that is, a bad father begat a bad son. 2. Abia begat Asa; that is, a bad father begat a good son. 3. Asa begat Josaphat; that is, a good father begat a bad son. 4. Josaphat begat Joram; that is, a good father a bad son. "I see, Lord, from hence," he says, "that my father's piety cannot be entailed; this is bad news for me. But I see also that actual impiety is not always hereditary; that is good news for my son."

THE FAMILY.—The family circle is God's blessed ordinance, and is the sweetest, the happiest, and the most hallowed spot on earth. It is the nursery of affection, of friendship, and of virtue; the place where those ties of mutual dependence and help are first formed, which, in their expanded state, unite human society; and according to the manner in which the rights of the family circle are enjoyed, its duties discharged, and its true benefits realized, are the moral character, the stability, and the grandeur of the country.

PREACHING WITHOUT NOTES.—The Hon. Isaac Davis, of Mass., who has run on the democratic ticket for Governer, has given to the Newton Theological Seminary one thousand dollars, the interest of which is to be given to some student preparing for the ministry in that institution. One of the conditions on which the student can receive the stipend is, that he shall, as a general rule, preach without notes.

THE TONGUE.—A white fur on the tongue attends simple fever and inflammation. Yellowness of the tongue attends a derangement of the liver, and is common to billious and typhus fevers. A tongue vividly red on the tip or edge, or down the centre, or over the whole surface, attends inflammation of the mucous membrane of the stomach or bowels. A white velvet tongue attends mental disease. A tongue red at the tip, becoming dry, brown and glazed, attends a typhus state.

A novel application of electro-magnotism, as a motive power for clockwork, has just been perfected by a working jeweller at Leamington, England; which promises to introduce a new era in the science of clockmaking, and to bring modern timepieces to a state of absolute perfection. By the new arrangement the pendulum, the bob or ball of which consists of an electro-magnetic coil, is made to oscillate by means of a feeble current of electricity, this beating true seconds, with a train of three wheels only. One of the advantages of this system is that a number of clocks, in different parts, or even in different houses, can be connected together by a single wire, and the whole number will indicate the same time to a second. The clocks are of the simplest construction, and never need winding up. No acid battery is used. The clocks are spoken of as being superior to the present clock in use.

Professor Carlevaris, of Genoa, has invented a new light, called the Carlovaris light, and the experiments made at the close of last month in the theatre of the Technical Institution, were attended with great success and loudly applauded. This light is an oxy-hydro-magnesian flame, and is obtained by placing in the flame of a mixture of hydrogen, or coal gas, with air or oxygen, spongy magnesia, a substance of very small cost. The flame is white, rich in antinic force, fixed, and developing less that than other lights. The expense is very trifling, a light equal to four wax candles only costing two-tenths of a penny per hour. A new trial also took place in the lantern of the Genoa Lighthouse. It proved that this light was superior to that of the oil lamps, representing an illuminating power of twenty-three Garcel lamps, and yet the cost was only 8 d. per hour—Builder.

PURE WATER.—What killed Mr. Hodgkin? Impure water. We wonder that travelers do not carry with them a little bottle of permanganate of potash—a few drops of which will speedily purify any water. A friend of ours who has returned from India, tells us that he has derived the greatest benefit from its employment. In cases where the water was turbid, and tasting and smelling of decaying organic matter, the addition of a few drops of the solution of permanganate made it in a few minutes as clear and as sweet as spring water.—Medical Times and Gazette.

WHAT MUST I DO TO BE SAVED?—Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shepard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Liaus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, - - AUGUST 25, 1866.

WANTED,

A FIRST-CLASS TEACHER OF MUSIC—one capable of taking charge of the Musical Department in a Female College. The best of reference will be required. For further information apply to me personally, or by writing, at this office, 112 Camp street; or to Rev R K Hargrove, Summerfield, Ala.

The Principalship of the Art Department of the Centenary Female College at same place is yet to be filled. Address same parties.

J. C. KEENER.

New Orleans, August 4th, 1866.

Fourth Round Quarterly Meetings.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT, LA. CONFERENCE—1866.

Sept 1 and 2,—Natchitoches S. at Natchitoches.
Sept 8 and 9,—Many Circuit, at Bayou Negrele.
Sept 15 and 16,—Pleasant Hill, at Beulah—Camp Meeting.
Sept 22 and 23,—Red River at Conchatta Aca.
Sept 29 and 30,—Bayou La Chute.
Oct 6 and 7,—Mansfield Circuit, at Mansfield.
Oct 20 and 21,—North Rossier, at Collinsburg
Oct 27 and 28,—Shreveport.
Nov 3 and 4,—Greenwood and Caddo, at Greenwood.

The Preachers in charge of Circuits and Stations will please be prepared to furnish all the statistics usually required at the Annual Conferences.

B. F. ALEXANDER, P. E.

Fourth Round Quarterly Meetings.

YAZOO DISTRICT MISS. CONFERENCE—1866.

Sept 1,—Lexington, at Union Grove.
Sept 8,—Carrollton, at Carrollton.
Sept 15,—Holmes, at Wesley's Chapel
Sept 22,—Black Hawk, at Black Hawk
Sept 29,—Richland, at Richland,
Oct 13,—Green woodand Sidon, at McNutt
Oct 20,—Yazoo, at New Hope
Oct 27,—Mount Olivet, at Mount Olivet
Nov 17,—Yazoo city

Bishop Paine is expected at Wesley Chapel, Sept 15th.

J. M. PUGH, P. E.

MARRIED,

At the residence of Col. John F. Mills, in Memphis, Tenn., at half past eight o'clock P. M., of 24th ult., by Rev. Guilford Jones, Col. JOHN B. SALE to Miss ANNA E., second daughter of the late Wm. Cornelius, Esq., of New Orleans.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27. —REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS. —By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription-list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, } Executive Com.
J. B. WALKER, } Joint Board of
L. PARKER, } Publication.

THE FRENCH CONFERENCE. — The French Conference of the Wesleyan Methodist Church met at Auduze, a small town, some forty miles north of Nismes. The session began June 22d, and lasted to June 30th. The Conference consisted of eighteen ordained ministers. The following are the statistics: Chapels and preaching-places, 184; ministers 28; colporteurs and school teachers, 16; local preachers, 91; Church members, 1,799; members on probation, 159; day schools, 7; day scholars, 261; Sunday schools, 41; teachers, 222; Sunday-school scholars, 1,951; average of hearers, 9,385—an increase of two local preachers, forty-one members, one day school, four Sunday schools, and ninety-two scholars.

BRITISH CONFERENCE.—Rev. Wm. Arthur was chosen President of this body, which commenced its session at Leeds on the 26th ult., and Rev. John Farrar, Secretary.

METHODIST DISCIPLINE.

In a speech at Leeds a few years before his death, the venerable Doctor Bunting recounted his christian experience, that when a child, he always accompanied his mother to the Quarterly Lovefeast. But when he was twelve years old the door keeper refused him admittance any longer without a ticket, because he was not a member; and he was left outside the Chapel, while his mother went in. After the meeting was over, she said to him, "my son, I know not what you think of it, but to me it is a very solemn thing that my son should by his own act separate himself from me, in my journey to Heaven." "These words," said the Dr., "fastened in my heart, and I did not rest until I found peace: so that I am indebted for all that I am, not only to the Doctrine but to the Discipline of the Methodist Church."

The prompt discipline of Wesley in the societies of his people, was as new and striking as the doctrine of the new birth which he so clearly and strongly enforced; the order of Lay-Preachers, which he almost created; the constitution of Conferences composed exclusively of ministers, to arrange and order their own work; or the system of Itinerancy for securing to the people a fresh, varied, and vital ministration of the gospel. In all these respects Wesleyan Methodism was the latest improvement—and still is. We know of nothing newer. Those who deprecate traveling in "ruts"—"old ruts"—should have a care lest in getting out of the present forms of Methodism, they get into the very ruts which Mr. Wesley left—the government and discipline of the half extinct English Establishment. The great innovations of Wesley are but fairly at work, and are doing good work. If there be any thing new and good, any half-inspiration in the shape of an appendix to Methodism, carrying out a greater movement in the same line upon which Mr. Wesley moved so grandly, let us have it: but we may not accept some old exploded thing for a new and improved locomotive power. This by the way.

Well, among Mr. Wesley's new things, the Discipline he inaugurated and established, startled surrounding christendom from its Charles-Second lethargy. When the Kings and Queens of England assumed the oversight of the church, as a matter of course courtiers became saints, and discipline went by the board. If a man could not take the sacrament he could not qualify for a crown-office. This alone was enough to debauch the church: and from this the Government Establishment, as it is appropriately termed, never recovered. A church which can hold all the politicians of the country, would admit Satan himself into full fellowship. When the difference between the world and the church was so slight, when there was no barrier to keep out, or to shut in, there was in effect no church.

Mr. Wesley went upon the truth, no fence, no field—no discipline, no church. That the line of separation must be broad, clear and sharp-edged, which defines a living church. That there must be an authority in the Kingdom of Christ, or it cannot continue a kingdom—power to open, power to shut the doors of the Church. Some one has "the keys," must have them, or there is no door: if no door, no church; only one indistinguishable, "mixed multitude." This authority he believed to be lodged where our recent General Conference recognized it to be, in the minister—the Pastor of the flock.

Another principal of his improved ecclesiastical system, was that a church should only consist of those who had spiritual life, or who desired to have it—where either of these conditions were wanting, or having existed had ceased to exist, there could be no connection with the church. As he took no pains to graft in a dead branch, he, on the other hand, did not hesitate to lop off any which might have withered and died. Vitality and fruit were his only ideal of a vine.

To maintain this life by Discipline, he fully accepted the scriptural doctrine that the church and the world are antagonisms not to be appeased; incompatible, constitutionally and eternally inimical the one to the other. "Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God." This is a distinctive feature of Methodist discipline; it constantly affirms this war; that the principles of the Cross are fatal to those of the World, and vice versa.

A member of the Catholic church can swear, attend theatres, gamble, be drunken, frequent the race course, violate the sanctity of the Sabbath at will, mix with masqueraders, and dance to the vergo of hell, and yet be a good Catholic; if per contra, he will recount his prayers, observe lent, attend high mass, and comply with sundry financial prescriptions of his ghostly preceptor. The one set of actions are a sufficient offset to the other.

Number 85 of "Tracts for the Times" is a compound of infidelity and popery, was delivered in St. Mary's Church, Oxford, by a prominent divine of the Church of England and no disciplinary notice was taken of it. The Bishop of Natal is an unbeliever in the divinity of Christ, if not infidel outright, but he still holds a diocese. Such churches, remind one of VANITY FAIR. It will be remembered that the garments of the Pilgrims were so different from the raiment of the men in the fair; also their language being that of Canaan, was so unknown; and that which did not a little amuse the merchandizers, was that these Pilgrims set very light by all their wares: they cared not so much as to look upon them. "So some one said they were fools; some they were bedlams; and some they were outlandish men. So there was a great hubbub about them, and they were taken and confined in the Cage and made a spectacle, and afterwards were beaten as being the author of the disturbance." However, these were the days of Bunyan. Since then things have changed mightily. There are now in this "lusty fair" exceeding reputable houses in the "British," "French," "Italian," and "German rows." Copartnerships mutually advantageous have been formed between well known influential modern churchmen and those ancient proprietors, so that much valuable and pleasant commerce is now carried on by Pilgrims who pass through that way, and there is not the least danger of martyrdom.

Whenever Methodism shall so conform to the world that her voice dies away amid the sounds of the viol, and she moves to the time and tramp of earth, the mission of Wesley will have ceased. Or in the language of Doctor Clark, "when the world gets into the church, the church becomes a painted sepulchre: its spiritual vitality being extinct."

When we reflect that this frivolous, dark, politic, pleasure-seeking world crucified Christ, we can well afford to part with it at the Cross: we should be ready to share the spirit as well as the reproach of Christ, and say "thou hast nothing in me." The world pities, despises, abhors and draws away from the follower of Christ. His mere profession darkens the countenance, and in the eye of the World, throws a shadow upon all the future of life. Its hate fastens on his cravat, on his tones, on his words; and O, if there should be inconsistency in his life, how salient are these points in the tirade of its hate! Weak attempts to appear easy in its throngs, to sip of its pleasures—the christian in a ball room, or at a theatre—how it gloats upon, how it sneers at, and resents such too-great freedom! "What business has a Psalm-singer at the Opera?" His "fire and brimstone" and his "Satan," what indignation, yea what mirth do they occasion!

The world is determined to nail every man to his Saviour's cross, who professes Christ. This double death Paul accepts gladly. "The world crucified unto me, and I unto the world"—it crucified Christ let it crucify me. Let me separate myself from it as far as it separates itself from me. This is the cost of my spirituality. Let me thank God that the world helps me by its hate to do that which I am trying to do of myself—to die to it? "Come out from among them and be ye separate," etc., in spirit, and in the simplicity of a godly life. The Discipline urges. Heed not the pleadings of the flesh, nor the demands of lukewarm souls, nor yet the murmurs of weak parents that their children might at least be allowed to sip a little honey; heed not these things, O thou minister of God, as you value the final approbation of the Judge.

"These things saith he which hath the sharp sword with two edges  thou holdest fast my name and hast not denied my faith  but I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam who taught Balack to cast a stumbling block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols, and to commit fornication. The Head of the Church watches its discipline—he that holds the stars holds them to account; let the weak be strengthened, but let not the worldly and the wicked escape. All the churches shall know that I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts; and I will give unto every one of you according to your works.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

We are indebted to the influence and personal labors of two of our best friends for a number of new advertisements which appear in the last and in this week's issue.

These advertisements are from first class houses, many of them long known to us. We can commend them to our patrons.

The Advocate offers the best medium for reaching the country that the South-west affords. It goes not only where other city papers go, but to many places where they do not go. The circuits of the Mobile, Montgomery, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, dot every county, and every town, and every cross-roads in this extensive sweep of territory; and to each of the circuits our paper goes. The people in different parts of these states take the country or town paper nearest, but also the religious paper which may be the organ of the church to which they belong. So that a great many of our subscribers see no other New Orleans paper besides the Christian Advocate.

On the other hand our readers, doubtless, find a good deal of additional interest in the paper, in its increasing list of advertisements. Wishing to order goods, or to visit the city in the coming fall and purchase them in person, it facilitates greatly, and economizes money and time to know where to go, and on whom to rely.

Whenever the number of these advertisements may warrant it, we shall issue a "business sheet."—The war has effected a change from planting to farming. These farms, multiplying all over the country, will afford a fine patronage to a religious newspaper; for when a man takes but one paper he will take one like ours, which, at the low price of THREE DOLLARS per annum, furnishes him news from the churches, the current political and literary items, the corrected Price Current, telegrams "by the cable," and the Advertisements of all reputable houses in different branches of business.

If the preachers of the patronizing Conferences will promptly communicate with us, giving revival intelligence or notice of the agricultural condition of fields and farms coming daily under observation, or any other items which may seem to them of general interest, it will add greatly to the attractiveness and value of this paper. We do not ask for elaborate statements, but the matter of a page of letter-sheet; something that will weary neither writer nor reader. Our Itinerants have too much to do this year to afford the time necessary to write abstract treatises on any subject. We expect nothing of the kind; but daily matter-of-fact items, of moment and interest to Methodist men living in the South.

BISHOP SOULE.

The editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate says: On Wednesday, August 1, the Rev. R. Abbey and the Editor made a visit to the venerable Bishop Soule, at his residence seven miles east of Nashville. The old gentleman received us with his accustomed courtesy and cordiality—seeming to be much pleased that we had remembered his birth day. He is very feeble. The keepers of the house tremble; the strong men bow themselves; the grinders cease because they are few; those that look out of the windows are darkened; and the almond tree flourisheth—truly so, in his case, for his hoary head is, indeed, a crown of glory. But he is not "afraid of that which is nigh"—or any thing else, for the matter of that: there never were any "fears in his way;" nor is he "a burden," to himself or to any one else. He is cheerful, and kind, and communicative—a fine specimen of "narrative old age," without the boring garrulity which so frequently characterizes second childhood. His memory of things long since passed is surprisingly accurate. In the course of our conversation, he quoted, ad punctum long passages from Addison's Cato and Pope's Homer—ever a great favorite with him. He called up many reminiscences of his early ministry, and spoke of his old contemporaries, who had all passed off the stage of action, leaving him, as it were, alone—the oldest Methodist minister in the world.

LETTER FROM BISHOP MARVIN.

MR. EDITOR: Mt. Lebanon is a very pretty town in the woods, in Bienville Parish. Its chief importance is derived from its literary institutions. There is a male and female college; and in connection with the former there is provision made for the education of young preachers. These institutions belong to the Baptist Church. The "Louisiana Baptist," is published here, also. That church has consequently a greater concentration of talents and learning here than at any other point in the state of Louisiana. This has given it the ascendancy in the community. In fact, until recently, there was no other church here. And they have done a good work for education and religion. They have a flourishing church and an intelligent, excellent membership.

Less than three years ago brother Upton gathered up a forlorn handful of Methodists, and organized a little church in the town. Since its organization the church has grown gradually and steadily until it numbers at this time some thirty or forty white communicants, and about fifty colored. This growth, though rather slow, has been healthy, and considering the preoccupation of the public mind by an exclusive creed, it is all that could have been expected.

Until within the past few weeks this little flock has been indebted to the hospitality of our Baptist brethren for a house to worship in. But Upton, the indefatigable, set his hand upon building a Methodist church, even in Mt. Lebanon. Only think of it. With a small membership, and they poor; the war just over and the country ruined; and every man suspecting that he will never see any more money, this man undertakes to build a church! And, see, the thing has been done!

At first the brethren were very moderate in their views, intending to provide such shelter as they could for the Ark. But money came more freely than they expected, and they determined to build a neat, commodious house, that should be sufficient to meet the demand of the future for some years. It is now finished, except painting and fencing, and that will be done right away. It is also provided with a bell, neat petroleum lamps for the pulpit and two beautiful chandeliers. The architectural plan is without fault, and the execution more than merely creditable. It is really a delightful house.

But ——— ah! that intrusion, sinister word, but. I wonder if Congress can't amend the constitution of human nature and human language so as to dispense with it. Until then, however, we must manage the obstinate, officious disjunction the very best we can. In the case of the Mt. Lebanon church five hundred dollars will completely head it off. But how to get the $500? That's the question. The brethren here have been fully depleted, and the most destructive hailstorm I ever heard of has completely ruined the growing crops of those who might have been relied upon to pay the debt. Can they get help from abroad? They need it and deserve it.

Upton says that if every subscriber to the Advocate will send him a dollar through mail it will pay the debt. True. But will they do it? If so I shall be happily disappointed for once. Address Rev. Thos. J. Upton, Mt. Lebanon, Louisiana. Send the raindrops along, brethren, until they make a river large enough to float off this debt. Don't wait until to-morrow—do it to-day. If you put it off, I fear you will forget it. Just lay the paper down and go now and do the good deed. If those who are able will send more than one dollar, it will be quite acceptable.

E. M. MARVIN.

Mt. Lebanon, July 27th, 1866.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

CHURCH SEATS.

The proper seating of a church is very important to its thorough completion. In a house of worship there should be nothing to invite to repose. The numbness of our spiritual sensibilities, together, sometimes, with the dullness of the sermon, furnish influence sufficiently strong in this direction. Yet personal comfort is very important to the preservation of that state of mind and spirit, in which we can most earnestly and profitably join in the holy services of God's sanctuary. To this end let us have good seats. I do not mean finely cushioned seats, but seats of such form that we can sit on them without effort, not that we should occupy them through the service. No. Let there be sufficient comfort of person to keep up the best degree of attention and life, as well as for decency and expression of reverence. Therefore we should go along with the usages of the congregation in its usual forms: in Methodist churches, standing to sing and kneeling to pray.

But I will delay you no longer, and furnish for all wishing to make church seats the following form:

Front edge of seat from floor 18 inches. Back edge, 16½ inches. This allows back edge to fall 1½ inches below front. Width of seat 15 inches. Back of seat 16½ inches high. Top of the back reclines from perpendicular with bottom 4 inches. No facing for front of seat. It is as easy to make them right as wrong.

C.

BISHOP WIGHTMAN.

MR. EDITOR: Bishop Wightman is at present on a visit to Mobile District, where by his ministry and counsel he is serving the church in his Episcopal office. He preached on the Eastern shore, Mobile bay, Sabbath 29th of July, and Tuesday 31st, and Thursday 2nd Aug. He was present at the Quarterly Meeting at Franklin street, and preached twice, Sabbath 5th. He was also present at the Quarterly Conference of this station, helping us with his sympathy and counsel. He reached the neighborhood of the Quarterly meeting of the Pascagoula Circuit, Tuesday, 14th Aug., and remained until the next Tuesday; preached Saturday, Sabbath, Monday and Tuesday, and administrated the sacrament of the Supper on Sabbath, and of Baptism on Monday and Tuesday. The meeting was interesting, the church was strengthened by the addition of five members, and we hope that the good seed sown will ripen into the fruits of holy living here and eternal life in the world to come. He attended the Quarterly Conference of this Circuit in his affectionate interest for the Church.

Tuesday afternoon he went down coast, where he had an appointment Upon getting to the church, with a few others, we found the church had not been opened or lighted. A neighbor however soon opened the door, and gave us a lamp, when the Bishop improved the occasion to the comfort of God's people by preaching an excellent sermon. Next day moved on to Ocean Springs, where the Quarterly Meeting for this Circuit was to be held the next Saturday and Sabbath. We had no preaching Saturday, in consequence of the rain. Sabbath morning the Bishop preached.

He is to attend the Quarterly Conference for the St. Stephens Circuit, and Washington Mission, at State-Line on next Sabbath and Saturday, 25th and 26th inst.

We are glad to be able to report him in excellent health and preaching in the earnest spirit of a true minister of Christ. J. L. COTTEN.

Ocean Springs, Aug. 20th, 1866.

N. B. The third Quarterly Meeting for Bladon Springs Circuit, on the first and second of Sept.

For Clark's Circuit, on the 8th and and 9th Sept. Appointment at Liberty Aug. 31st, and at Enon Sept. 7th.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

YAZOO DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR: I closed my third series of Quarterly Meetings on the 22nd July. Since my last communication, we have had some excellent meetings and refreshing seasons of divine grace on Yazoo District. I am pleased to report one hundred and thirty-five conversions. The most of our Quarterly meetings were protracted. At Benton's, (H. Williamson, Pastor,) there were nineteen conversions, with the prospect of many more, could the meeting have been continued longer. At Greenwood, (Benjamin Holt, Pastor,) thirty-five conversions. This was a meeting of great power. Bro. Ercanbrack came to the aid of Bro. Parish, after other duties called me away. At Jordan Chapel, (J. D. Newsom, Pastor,) there were twenty-six conversions. The meeting continued nine days, with but little help. Bro. A. J. Smith reports six conversions, on his work, at other points. Bro. Newsom assisted by Bros. Byrd, Johnson and Jordan, held a meeting at Enon, at which there were thirty-five conversions. There have been conversions doubtless at other places of which I have not heard. The people generally appear anxious to hear the gospel. It is always encouraging to the preachers, and the church at large, to hear of gracious revivals of religion, and for this reason the preachers ought to feel themselves under obligation to give the revival news to the church, through our religious press. Some may shrink from it, because they suppose it looks too much like sounding their own praise, to tell what the Lord has accomplished through them. But this need not be the case; and to record with grateful hearts, the work of grace in the church, and the progress of gospel truth in the world, has a tendency to encourage the hearts of fellow-laborers and incite them to zealous activity, and to a pious emulation in the best of causes. I should be glad to hear from my brethren, as to how the cause of Christ is prospering in their midst. Write for our paper, brethren: the Editors, no doubt, would be glad to hear from you.

Mr. Editor, I propose the name of your Advocate be changed, that it may not be mistaken for the one published by the Northern Church.

Yours, fraternally.

J. M. PUGH.

Yazoo District, Miss. Conference Aug. 14th, 1866.

The Lutherans in North Carolina are not so favorable to a reunion of the Southern and Northern churches as the German Reformed Church of that State. The subject was warmly discussed at the recent meeting of the North Carolina Synod, when the friends of reunion were found to be a minority. The General Synod has appointed a committee to open a correspondence with the Southern Synods.

THE CHOLERA.

The mortality in this city from cholera has been less the past week than the preceding one. The number of deaths from cholera for the 24 hours ending Thursday evening was 27, which is the average per day for the last week.

From other cities we have the following by telegraph:

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21.—There is no report from the Board of Health, but the police report, which is necessarily incomplete, shows 121 cases and 89 deaths from cholera during the last twenty-four hours.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The Bavarian has just arrived from Southampton. Five deaths from cholera occured on the passage. She is detained at quarantine, four cases on board.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 20.—The Board of Health reports fifteen cases of cholera; including five at Taylor Barracks.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 21.—There were sixty-one deaths from cholera yesterday.

The President officially announces to Gov. Hamilton that he is relieved of his position as Provisional Governor of Texas, the affairs of that State having been remitted to the constitutional authorities chosen by the people thereof.

The soldier's convention, at Chicago, will be exclusively composed of Union soldiers, who indorse the President. It is proposed, however, at a later date to have a convention composed of Northern and Southern soldiers.

The Mexican legation has advices that the French evacuated Monterey and Saltillo, which are in possession of the Liberals. Escobedo, with one thousand Mexicans, expects to be before San Louis Potosi within two months.

PRAGUE, Aug. 18.—The peace congress is in session and the negotiations are making favorable progress. The ratifications of a treaty of peace will, it is expected, be exchanged in a few days.

It is rumored that the Italian government will soon treat directly with the Pope for the cession of his temporal domain, and the establishment of Rome as the capital of Italy.

It is stated the Government of the United States has preferred claims against certain persons in France who have disposed of public property belonging to the southern confederation.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. J. J. CLARK writes from the Gulf Coast, Aug. 13th: "We had quite an interesting protracted meeting at Biloxi, five joined the church. The congregation and membership, after being without pastoral care for so long, have now again "come up to the help of the Lord," are now serious and attentive. The brethren from your city have taken an active part even to the general repair of the church. They have been well taught, as their "alms and as well as prayers" do them honor. Our meeting at Handsboro for ten days seemed lacking in interest, but our trust being in God, and our faith well founded, we will try again. "Come over and help us," gladden our hearts—we will bid you welcome. Perhaps more has not been done within the Conference this year, than at Handsboro, for the comfort and maintenance of the pastor's family. Pray for us.

The late Irish Conference appointed the Rev. Robinson Scott, D. D., Rev. R. Wallace and W. M'Arthur, Esq., of London, to be a deputation to the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, and to the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada, on the occasion of the celebration of the Centenary of Methodism in America.

THE PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION.

PHILADELPHIA, August 16, 1866.—The sun shone brilliantly on this the last day of the National Union convention.

The proceedings were opened by the reading of a dispatch announcing a conservative victory in Colorado.

Several important resolutions, embracing propositions for the appointment of a national union committee, for the appointment of a delegation to wait on the President with a copy of the proceedings, etc., were all unanimously passed.

After the resolutions reported by the committee had been read and adopted amid continual cheering, Senator Cowan introduced the Hon. H. J. Raymond, as the author of the address to the people of the United States, which he would read to the convention. Mr. Raymond then read the address, in a loud and distinct tone of voice. He was frequently interrupted by tremendous applause.

The clause asserting that the Southern States would be but unworthy of people invested with the privileges and dignities of self-government if they had not resisted the efforts of the radicals to deprive them of their inherent rights elicited so much approval that it was read a second time, on motion of Reverdy Johnson. The paragraph treating of the right of every State to vote on the adoption of the constitutional amendment, was also greeted with shouts of assent.

At the conclusion of the reading of the address three cheers were given for Senators Cowan and H. J. Raymond. Many persons think that the course of the latter gentleman has enabled him to exercise an control over the Republican party of New York that will redound to the benefit of the good cause.

After the appointments necessary to complete the permanent organization of the National Union party had been made by President Doolittle, John Hagan, of Missouri, moved an adjournment sine die.

The convention then adjourned amid the most intense enthusiasm, giving three times three cheers for the Union and Andrew Johnson.

The utmost harmony prevailed throughout the deliberations, and the most confident anticipations of the success of the efforts of the convention are generally entertained.

THE VISIT TO THE PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—There was a great crowd to-day to hear the President. In response to Reverdy Johnson, who presented the official proceedings of the Convention, he said in reference, with feeling, to the scene of the representatives of South Carolina and Massachusetts entering the Convention together, that he was overcome, and could not but conclude that no overruling Providence was dictating us aright. He said: "Our brave men have performed their duties in the field, and have won laurels imperishable." Turning to Geo. Grant, he continued: But there are greater and more important duties to perform; and while we have seen their co-operation in the field, we now need their efforts to perpetuate peace (applause.) The Executive Department had aimed to pour oil on the wounds, to restore the Union, but it had not entirely succeeded. We have seen, he said, in one department of the Government every effort to prevent the restoration of peace and harmony in the Union. We have seen hanging on the verge of Government, as it were, a body called, or which assumed to be, the Congress of the United States, while in fact it is a Congress of only a part of the States. We have seen this Congress assume and pretend to be for the Union, when its every step and act tend to perpetuate disunion, and make a disruption of the States inevitable, instead of promoting reconciliation and harmony. Its legislation has partaken of the character of penalties relative to revenge. This has been the course and the policy of one portion of your Government. The humble individual who is now addressing you stands as the representative of another department of the Government. The manner in which he was called to occupy that position I shall not allude to on this occasion. Sufficient to say that he is here under the Constitution of the country, and being here by virtue of its provisions, he takes his stand upon that charter of our liberties as the great rampart of civil and religious liberty. [Prolonged cheers.] Having been taught in my early life to hold it sacred, and having practised upon it during my whole public career, I shall ever continue to adhere to the Constitution of my fathers, and make it my guide.

The President proceeded, and denied that he had ever been tyrannical or a despot; but said such charges were simply intended to deceive and delude the public mind into the belief that there is some one in power who is usurping and trampling upon the rights of the Constitution. This is done by those who would make such charges for the purpose of covering their own acts. [That's so, and applause.] I have felt it my duty, in vindication of the principles and Constitution of my country, to call the attention of my countrymen to these proceedings: Having placed myself upon that broad platform, I have not been awed, or dismayed, or intimidated by either threats or encroachments, but have stood there, in conjunction with patriotic statesmen, sounding the tocsin of alarm when I deemed the citadel in danger. [Great applause.] I said, and repeat it now, that all that was necessary in this great struggle against tyranny and despotism was that the struggle should be sufficiently audible for the American people to hear and perfectly understand. They did hear, and looking on, see who the contestants were and what the struggle was about, determined that they should settle this on the side of the Constitution and of principle. I proclaim here to-day, as I have on previous occasions, that my faith is in the great mass of the people. In the darkest hour of this struggle, when the cloud seemed to be most lowering, my faith, instead of giving way, loomed up through the cloud, beyond which I saw that all would be well in the end; that tyranny and despotism, in the language of Thomas Jefferson, "can be exercised and executed more effectually by the many than the one." We have seen a Congress gradually encroach step by step, and violate day after day, and month, the Constitution and the fundamental principles of government. We have seen a Congress that seemed to forget that there was a limit to the sphere and scope of legislation. We have seen a Congress in a minority assume and exercise power which, if allowed to be carried out, would result in despotism or anarchy itself. This is the truth, and because others as well as myself have seen proper to appeal to the patriotic and republican feelings of the country, we have been denounced in the severest terms; slander upon slander, vituperation upon vituperation, of the most villainous character, has made its way through the press. What, gentlemen, has been the cause of their being offended? I will tell you. Daring to stand by the Constitution of our fathers. I consider the proceedings of this Convention more important than those of any Convention ever assembled in the United States. [Great applause.] When I look with my mind upon that collection of citizens, coming together voluntarily, and sitting in council, with ideas, with principles and views, to communicate with all the States and the whole people, and with the collection of persons who are trying to destroy the country, I regard it as more important than any Convention that has sat at least since 1787 [Renewed applause.] I think I may also say that the declarations that were there made are equal to the Declaration of Independence. [Cries of "Glorious!" and a most enthusiastic and prolonged applause.] Your address and declarations are nothing more or less than a reformation of the Constitution of the United States. Yes, I will go farther, and say that the declarations you have made, that the principles you have announced in your address are a second proclamation of emancipation to the people of the United States. [Renewed applause.] For in proclaiming the great truths, you have laid down a constitutional platform upon which all can make common cause and stand united together for the restoration of the States and preservation of the Government, without reference to party. The only question is the salvation of the country, for our country rises above all party consideration or influence. How many are there in the United States that now require to be free. They have the shackles upon their limbs bound as rigidly as though they were in slavery. I repeat, then, that your declaration is the second proclamation of emancipation to the people of the United States, and offers a common ground upon which all parties can stand. [Applause.] Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, let me, in this connection, ask what have I to gain more than the advancement of the public welfare. I am much opposed to the indulgence of egotism; but here in a conversational manner, while formally receiving the proceedings of this Convention, I may be permitted to ask, what I have to gain by consulting human ambition more than I have gained, except in one thing. My race is nearly run, I have been placed in the high office which I occupy under the Constitution of the country, and may say I have held from the lowest to the highest almost every position to which a man may attain in our government; and surely, gentlemen, this should be enough to gratify a reasonable ambition. If I wished to perpetuate my own power, how easy it would have been to hold and wield that which was placed in my hands by the measure called the Freedmen's Bureau bill. [Laughter and applause.] With an army which it placed at my discretion, I could have remained at the capital of the nation, and, with fifty or sixty millions of appropriations at my disposal, with the machinery to be worked by my satraps and dependents in every town and village, and then with the Civil rights bill following as an auxiliary, [laughter] in connection with all other appliances of the Government, I could have proclaimed myself dictator; but, gentlemen, my pride and my ambition have been to occupy that position which retains all the power in the hands of the people. It is upon that I have always relied. It is upon that I rely now; and I repeat, that neither the taunts nor jeers of Congress, nor of a subsidized calumniating press can drive me from my purpose. [Great applause.] I acknowledge no superior, except my God, the author of my existence, and the people of the United States. [Prolonged and enthusiastic cheering.] For the one, I try to obey all his commands to poor humanity. For the other, in a political and representative sense, the high behests of the people have always been respected and obeyed by me (applause.) Mr. Chairman, I have said more than I had intended to say. For the kind allusion to myself contained in your address, and in the resolutions adopted by the Convention, let me remark that in this crisis and in the present period of my public career I hold above price, and shall ever recur with feelings of profound gratification, to the last resolution containing the endorsement of the Convention emanating spontaneously from the great mass of the people. I trust and hope that my future action may be such that you and the Convention you represent may not regret the assurance of confidence you have expressed. Before separating, my friends, one and all, please accept my sincere thanks for the kind manifestation of regard and respect you have exhibited on this occasion. I repeat that I shall always continue to be guided by a conscientious conviction of duty, and that always gives one courage, under the Constitution which I have made my guide.

At the conclusion of the President's remarks, three enthusiastic cheers were given for Andrew Johnson, and three more for General Grant. The President then took a position near the door of the hall with Gen. Grant by his side, where, as the gentlemen of the committee and members of the Convention passed, he grasped each by the hand, and had a smile and a cheering word for all. After which they passed on to take Gen. Grant by the hand.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The session of Parliament has closed. The Queen's speech on the occasion of the dissolution returns thanks to the Government of the United States for the action taken by it in the matter of the late Fenian raid into Canada. The speech expresses the Queen's gratification at the success of the Atlantic cable. The remainder of the address from the throne relates to home questions.

LONDON, Aug. 11—Napoleon demands from Prussia the ratification of the French frontier by its extension to the Rhine, as it was marked prior to its disturbance in 1814. The military and naval preparations which are being carried on in France have induced the belief that the Emperor will make war if his demand is not complied with. The demand has caused great excitement in Berlin.

A semi-official journal in Berlin recommends Prussia to reconstruct Germany as far as possible on the basis of the vital and constitutional rights of the States which are to be annexed to her.

Turkey has refused her army of observation on the Danube and it is thought the Sultan approves the rules of Prince Charles, of Hohenzollern, as Hospodar in Romania. The United States squadron had a grand imperial and popular reception in Russia. The Czar hoisted the sels at Cronstadt and took the chief officers to dinner with him. After dinner the Emperor toasted the prosperity of the United States and uninterrupted friendship.

The future frontier line of Prussia will be such as to constitute a guarantee of her security as well as insure her position as a great power, and also as she a great power should conclude under the glorious sceptre of her Royal House, Prussia will advance to the fulfillment of her mission.

Prince Gezzenberg has gone on an extraordinary mission from Berlin to the Queen of Hanover. The object of Prince Gezenberg's mission is to inform the Queen of Hanover not to expect success in her efforts for the independence of Hanover.

The Empress of Mexico is in Paris, seeking aid for Mexico.

BERLIN, Aug. 13.—A treaty of alliance between Prussia and the German Governments with which she is on terms of friendship, has been signed by several and will be by others in a few days.

PARIS, August 13.—The Constitutional says, while France has the right to compensation from Prussia, her true interest is not in insignificant territorial aggrandizement, but to aid to the reorganization of Germany for the interests of Germany and Europe.

LONDON, Aug. 14—Advices have been received from the Continent indicating the probable renewal of war between the Prussians and Bavarians, upon the territory of the latter power, and great fears are entertained of such an event.

The Prussian government has informed the Emperor Napoleon that his demand for the extension of his empire to the Rhine cannot be complied with; that the Prussian territory there situated will never be ceded to France.

PARIS, August 15.—It is reported today on good authority that the French Government has abandoned the idea of extending the frontier of France by the annexation of certain German provinces on the Rhine.

BERLIN, August 15.—A council o state is holding sittings in this capital, and is engaged in the consideration of the question of the reunestration of the States of Southern Germany to the Germanic Confederation.

PARIS, Aug. 16—Noon.—It is officially stated to day that the French government has receded from its demand made upon Prussia for the extension of its frontier to the Rhine. France does this in the interest of peace, which she desires more than territorial aggrandizement. The hope is also expressed by the official journal, the Moniteur, that Prussia will not extend her project of annexation to the German States south of the Maine.

LONDON, August 23—Noon.—Peace between Austria and Prussia was to be signed yesterday by the Plenipotentiaries, and ratified within eight days. Peace has been concluded between Prussia and Bavaria. One of the conditions of pence between Austria and Prussia is that the latter shall evacuate Bohemia within a fortnight.

Telegrams from Athens, Greece, report that fighting had occurred in the Island of Candia, the Christians having revolted against the Turks. The United States Consulate was damaged.

BERLIN, Aug. 22—The City of Frankfort, the Duchy of Nassau, the Electorate of Hesse and the Kingdom of Hanover are to be immediately annexed to Prussia. The ex King of Hanover is in Vienna, willing to abdicate if the act is accepted in favor of his son by Prussia. Prussia will give no assurance to that effect.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 23.—There were two hundred and sixty cholera interments on Monday and Tuesday in the city cemeteries.

ST. LOUIS, August 23.—Eight cemeteries report 119 deaths from cholera for the twenty-four hours ending at 10 o'clock last night.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 23.—The cholera is abating. There were only thirty-three deaths on Tuesday.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

We have but little animation to notice (says the Price Current of Wednesday) in the general market, during the past three days. Sugar and Molasses have been attended with no variation; Western Produce has exhibited about the usual movement, with the exception of Flour and Pork, the former of which has been in improved demand, and is quite scarce on the market, while the latter has advanced 50c per barrel. Operations in our leading staple have, in consequence of inclement weather, been on restricted scale, and though the demand has been limited, prices have continued firm.

COTTON.—On Monday there was a general movement, but, owing to the limited and poorly assorted supply offering, as well as to the stiffened pretensions of factors, the sales were confined to 750 bales, within the range of our quotations. Yesterday the market opened dull and exhibited but little animation at any time of the day.

With the remark that the higher grades are in fair demand, and very scarce in the market, and that the lower quantities are still attended with extreme irregularity, we now quote as follows:

Low	— to —
Ordinary	24 to 26
Good Ordinary	29 to 31
Low Middling	32 to 34
Middling	35 to 36

TOBACCO.—The stock on hand is held firmly, however, and a renewed demand on foreign account is expected by the next two or three weeks. Those who were most inclined to realize have mostly disposed of their stocks and we continue to quote:

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused	4 to —	— to 5c, Currency.
Good do	5½ to 6	6½ to 7
Common Leaf	7½ to 8	9 to 11
Fair	12 to 13	14 to 15
Good	15 to 16	16 to 17
Fine	17 to 18	18 to 19
Choice Selec's	20 to —	21 to 25

SUGAR.—The market continues very dull, the demand being only in a small retail way. There is very little or none of the production of Louisiana on hand, and none is expect until the coming in of the new crop. The stock of the foreign production is fair, though not large, and the imports are small. Yellow Clarified Cuba, in hhds, is retailing at 16½ to 16¾c per lb. Cuba Sugar is retailing in boxes at 12½ to 13½c for Nos. 12 and 13, 14 to 14½c for Nos. 14 and 15, 15½ to 16¾c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17½c for Nos. 19 and 20.

MOLASSES.—The demand has been limited, being only local and confined to a few dealers and distillers, who have purchased but little at a time. A fair retail business has been doing at 55 per gallon for Good Cuba.

FLOUR.—Continues in good local demand. Besides, the Government was in the market and took 4,500 barrels Extra, in four lots, at $11 50 per bbl. The stock on hand is light, the receipts are small and prices have again ruled more in favor of sellers. Yesterday the sales embraced 1200 bbl, in lots, at $9 25 for Superfine, $11 for single Extra, and $12 50 for double Extra, $12 75 for triple Extra and $14 per barrel for Family Extra.

BACON.—Sugar-cured Hams are in good supply, but Sides, Shoulders and plain Hams are scarce. A good retail demand prevails and Shoulders are selling at 19c, Ribbed Sides at 22c, Clear Sides 23½c and Sugar-cured Hams, at 26½c per lb. Fancy brands command 27c per lb. We quote plain Hams at 22c per lb.

PORK.—The market has been quiet but firm, with a fair demand, and prices have ruled more in favor of holders. Yesterday, however, good heavy Mess was offered in round lots at $35 75 per bbl, without selling, and there were retail sales at $36 per bbl.

LARD.—The supply is fair but not large. Kegs are quoted at 24 to 24½ per lb and tierces 22 per lb.

CORN.—Is in good supply but very little in demand, and prices have declined 2½ to 5c per bushel. Yesterday there was a better demand but at lower prices, and 8,000 sacks were sold, at 76 to 77c for Mixed, 80c for Prime Yellow, 85 to 87½ for White and White Mixed. A few lots of Prime White commanding 90c per bushel.

OATS.—Are in good supply but little in demand and previous prices have declined at least 2c per bushel. Yesterday 1500 sacks were sold at 48 to 50c per bushel, the inside figures ruling mostly.

BRAN.—There is not much demand, but the supplies are small. Yesterday 1200 sacks sold at $1 07½ to $1 10 per 100 lbs, the market closing at the inside figures.

HAY.—The market is well supplied but continues very dull. There have not been any sales worthy of note. Prime Ohio River is selling in a jobbing way from warehouse at $25 per ton.

INDIA BAGGING.—Is scarce and continues in request at previous prices. A lot of 21 bales sold on Monday at 40c per yard. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 39c in rolls, 41c in bales, and 42c for blanket.

BALE ROPE.—The market is steady and firm. There were sales yesterday of 200 and 500 coils at 18½c per lb. Dealers are obtaining 19c per lb. Iron Cotton Ties are selling briskly at 12c per lb.

GUNNY BAGS.—Have been in active demand. There were sales on Monday of 200 bales, to arrive and 300 on the spot at 30c a piece.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—Choice Northern Butter is scarce and in demand while Western is plenty and dull. Northern is selling at 46 to 47c and Western at 25 to 35c per lb. The inside figures for both are the rates for larger lots. Cheese is in good supply and is selling at 17 to 18c for Western and Northern, and English Dairy at 25 to 26c per lb.

HOPS.—There is only a small stock with a slack demand. Belgian are held at 80 to 82c, and American at 75c per lb.

COFFEE.—The supply is ample for the demand which is moderate. Fair to Good Fair Rio commands 27 to 28½c per lb, currency. Prime is very scarce and would command 29c per lb. We quote Good Fair to Prime at 19 to 19½c per lb, good duty paid.

STAR CANDLES.—Are in good supply with a fair jobbing demand and there have been small sales at 20c per lb for 12 oz, 24c for 14 oz, and 25 to 26c for full weight. 12 oz are in demand for the country trade.

SOAP.—Palm is jobbing at 8c per lb.

RICE.—Owing to high rates and small supply, there is very little doing. There is no Carolina in market, none expected, and no India in first hands. The latter is selling at 12c per lb. Louisiana commands 12c per lb. There were sales yesterday of 200 sacks Louisiana and India in several lots at those prices.

WOOL.—The market is dull and there is very little doing. We quote washed at 23 to 27c per lb, burry at 12 to 16c, native to ¾ merino 16 to 18c, and ¾ to full do. 18 to 22c.

HIDES.—Country are in good demand, and prices are ruling firmly at 9½ to 10c for Green Hides, 10½ to 11c for Kip Skins, and 12 to 13c per lb for Dry Hides. Mexican Dry Hides command 18 to 21c per lb. Owing to the restrictions of the Board of Health the receipts continue very light.

MALT.—There is a good stock of Western in the city, while Canada is scarce. It is held at $2 10 per bushel for Prime Canada and —— to $1 50 for Western.

NAVAL STORES.—Are in request, but the market is nearly bare. Sales are making in a small way as follows: No. 3 $2 to $2, No. 2 Rosin at $4 to $5, No. 1 $5 to $6 50, No. 1 White $7, Pitch $6, Tar $2 50 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine commands 55 to 60c per gallon and at retail 65 to 70c per gallon.

SALT.—Is in good supply and demand. prices have further advanced at least 10c per sack all around. Liverpool Coarse and Fine is selling in small lots at $1 90 to $2 00 per sack, and Fine at $2, while dealers are obtaining $2 to $2 15 per sack for Coarse in store and warehouse, and $2 05 to $2 20 for Fine.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are dull, they are selling at $2 00 to $2 75 per bbl. for St. Louis $2 75 to $3 00 for Louisville, Onions at $4 25 to $4 50 per bbl. Apples at $1 50 to $6 per bbl. Cabbages 8 to 12c a piece.

POULTRY & EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $12 to $13 per dozen. Geese at $8 to $10 00 and Turkeys at $28 to $32 per dozen. Western eggs are selling at $20 to $24 per bbl.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY,
Tuesday evening, August, 21, 1866

Western Beef, choice per lb net	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 25
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$12 to 20
Hogs per lb gross	12 to 13
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Choice Sheep, per head	$6 to $8
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $80
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12 to $25
Yearlings, per head	$ 7 to $12
Calves per head	$4 50 to $ 8

WOODVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE SECOND SESSION
Will begin October 3rd 1866, and close July 10th, 1867. The system of instruction aims at the truest mental, moral, and social culture. The discipline seeks to embrace whatever is helpful to this end, and to exclude what is hurtful to it. Obedience to rightful authority, is a necessary to membership in the school.

TERMS PER SESSION.

Board, with fuel, lights and washing,	$300 00
Tuition in Preparatory course,	60 00
" Academic "	80 00
" Collegiate "	100 00
Music,	80 00

Other ornamentals as low as can be afforded.

The Collegiate course embraces Latin and French without any extra charge. These charges are made from the beginning of the half month in which the pupil is entered, to the end of the session, and must be paid, one half in advance, and the other on the 1st of March, nor will assignment of a pupil to room, seat or class, be made until this demand is met. A sum sufficient to get books, music, and medicines, for slight sickness, must be deposited with the Principal. Each boarding pupil must be provided with a supply of plain, neat clothing suitable to the season, and also with towels, table nap-kins—all marked in the owner's name. When a pupil, not residing in the Seminary, or one not remaining in it during her illness, is sick more than twenty consecutive days, a deduction of one half the charges for the time will be made.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Principal.
Woodville, Miss., Aug. 8th 1866. aug25 3m.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,
GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught.

TERMS:
Tuition fees per term $10 00
Contingent fee 5 00
Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month
aug25 W M WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

W. H. HENNING & CO.,
Grocers and Commission Merchants,
95 and 97, CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Offers to Families, Planters and Traders a full stock of Fancy and Staple Goods, consisting in part of

CHAMPAGNE,
BRANDIES,
WHISKIES,
CLARET,
CORDIALS, &c.

Also, a large lot of Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Pork, Beef, Bacon, Salt, suitable for Plantation supplies,—all of which will be offered at the Most reasonable Rates.

☞ Country orders will receive the most careful and prompt attention.

W H HENNING & CO,
n25 6m 95 & 97 Camp street, New Orleans

CHAS. H. CHURCHILL. PETER G. TAYLOR.
HARDWARE AND GUNS.
TAYLOR & CHURCHILL,
41 MAGAZINE STREET, and 20 BANS PLACE, (Opposite St. James Hotel,) NEW ORLEANS, LA.
DIRECT IMPORTERS.

We have in stock, and are constantly receiving some choice patterns of English and American Table and Pocket Cutlery, to which we invite the attention particularly of country merchants. Also, a large stock of Trace, Ox and Log Chains, English and American Planters' Hoes, Anvils, Vices and Bellows; Scales, manufactured by the Novelty Iron Works; Files, English and American.

COTTON AND WOOL CARDS, NOVA SCOTIA GRIND STONES, PUMPS.
Hall & Speer's Peacock Plows, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; Hall & Speer's Cast Valley Plows, Nos. 1 & 2; King Cary (wood mould board) Plows.
GUNS, NAILS, HOLLOW WARE, SAWS, TIN WARE, AXES.
Of all patterns and brands. All the above is offered for sale at the lowest market quotations.
Orders from the country are respectfully solicited by TAYLOR & CHURCHILL, 41 Magazine street, and 20 Bank Place, opposite St James Hotel. Established in New Orleans without intermission, by the present senior member of the firm, in 1832. aug25 1y

NORTH, BRUSH & MASON,
Wholesale Dealers in
Fancy Goods,
STATIONERY, PERFUMERY, CUTLERY,
HOSIERY,
Furnishing Goods, etc.,
35 MAGAZINE STREET,
Opposite the St. James Hotel, New Orleans, La
aug25 1y

A. H. GRISWOLD. W. M. GOODRICH
A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,
Corner of Canal and Royal streets,
[Late HYDE & GOODRICH],
Established in New Orleans Fifty Years!
MANUFACTURERS OF JEWELRY & SILVER WARE,
Importers of Watches, Diamonds, Clocks, Bronzes, Porcelain, Plated Ware, Cutlery, Fancy Goods, Guns and Pistols.
The largest assortment in the South always on hand. aug25 6m

JAMES SYME,
Wholesale Druggist,
139 CANAL STREET, (Touro Buildings,)
NEW ORLEANS.
Importer and Dealer in Fine
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS,
DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES,
Fancy Goods and Perfumery.
Surgical Instruments,
French, English, and American, of every variety.
Also—
Medicine Chests and Medical Saddle-bags.
aug25 1y

H M WRIGHT C W ALLEN J RIDDLESTON
WRIGHT, ALLEN & CO.,
(1st August, 1866)
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
169 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug25 1y

A. D. GRIEFF,
Wholesale Grocer,
COMMISSION MERCHANT, AND DEALER IN SOUTHERN AND WESTERN PRODUCE,
48, 50 and 52 Old Levee st., corner Bienville st.,
aug25 6m NEW ORLEANS.

Gen. James Longstreet. W M Owen. E Owen
LONGSTREET, OWEN & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
37 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug25 6m

F F FOLGER, L FOLGER, W H THOMAS
FOLGER & CO.,
Dealers in
Hardware, Iron, & Ship Chandlery,
37 & 39 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
(Opposite the Steamers Hotel)

Nails and Castings; Hoop, Sheet and Bar Iron, Shovels and Spades; Sheet Copper and Zinc; Plows, Axes and Hoes; Lead Pipe and Sheet Lead; India Rubber Belting, Hose and Packing; Circular, Mulay and Cross Cut Saws. aug25 1y

PEET, SIMMS, & CO.,
Importers and Wholesale Dealers in
DRY GOODS,
NOS. 23 & 25 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS
E PEET—S WILLIAMSON
P SIMMS—J BOWLING aug25 1y

SPEED, SUMMERS & CO.,
46 Carondelet street, New Orleans,
COTTON AND TOBACCO FACTORS,
General Commission Merchants.
And COMMERCIAL AGENTS. aug25 1y

THE WESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Who are at head? Its Depository and Bible House are at its own building, No. 163 Camp street, New Orleans.
Where was it established? 1850.
Who is its General Agent to whom correspondence on its business should be addressed? Rev. James Beattie.
Where is the Society's field of labor? All of Louisiana, and all of Mississippi, south of the 32d parallel of North latitude.
What is the object of the Society? To explore and supply (gratuitously where needed) the destitution of the Holy Scriptures.
What are the resources and whence the income of the Society? From the annual contributions of its members. Collections of Churches within its field, collections at public meetings and anniversaries. Appropriations of the surplus funds of its auxiliaries, the donations of generous individuals, testamentary bequests, and the annual donation in Books of the American Bible Society.
What is the Society's method of work? By cultivating its own local work in the city and district of New Orleans: then through Auxiliary Societies established or to be established in every Parish and County in the field, and the employment by them of such means as will accomplish the object of the Society.
What are the terms of membership?
The payment of $30 at one time constitutes a life member.
The payment of $150 at one time, constitutes a life Director.
The payment of $1000 at one time, constitutes a life Patron.
The payment of $3 annually, constitutes a member.
The taking up of a collection by a church constitutes the Pastor an honorary member.
Having thus briefly stated the main features of the Society's work, income and expenditure, the Board of Directors for the current year confidently ask the aid of all lovers of the Bible, whether professors of religion or not: to Strengthen the hands of the S. W. B. S: by founding or reviving Auxiliaries, by donating and urging donations, by exploring and reporting the destitution of the Scriptures, by commencing or renewing memberships of all grades and by establishing connections with the Society as the Lord has prospered them according to that Scripture which says "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal," but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal. To the ministers and professing Christians of every Orthodox Protestant Church, the Board of Directors, representing in its body, all such within our bounds, appeals with confidence to aid them by judicious effort, a prompt performance of duty and a prayerful commendation of the Society to the blessing of Almighty God, for except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it, except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain.
Our last thought is the heart-cry of the Great Reformation. No tortbbling of the Word: no tampering with the text: no man's note or comment: God's Word: Christ's Word: Holy Spirit's Word: Free: Free: Free. a25 1y.

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,
For the Autumn of 1866, and
FLORAL GUIDE,
Is now Published. It contains Descriptions of the Best Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lillies, etc., With full descriptions, and plain and full directions for Planting, Culture, Prices, etc. Illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the Single and Double Tulip and Scilla. My importation from the best Bulb Growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country. This Catalogue and Guide is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost. Postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my Catalogue. Address
aug. 25. JAMES VICK Rochester, N. Y.

WALLACE & CO.,
Importers and Jobbers of
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, and
PLANTATION CLOTHING,
No. 74 CANAL STREET, AND 91, 93 AND 95 COMMON STREET,
(SLOCUMB BUILDING), NEW ORLEANS.
☞ Sales guaranted at New York prices. a18 1y

NEW DISCIPLINES.
The Agent at the Depository has just received a large supply—enough to fill all orders.
PRICE: SIXTY CENTS.
Thirty per cent. off to wholesale dealers and to Preachers who buy to sell again.
Address—
REV. R. J. HARP, Agent,
No. 112 Camp street, Lock Box 814,
aug18tf New Orleans.

INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANO.
A lady whose high attainments as a composer and as a performer on and successful teacher of the Piano, can be well attested, proposes to give lessons to a few pupils in the city, commencing in September or October.
Reference: Rev J C Keener, D D; Rev J B Walker, D D; Rev L Parker.
For particulars address: "Pianist," Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c.
Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.
Shipping Furs and Wool bought. ian20–1y

THOS. H. ALLEN, Memphis, Tenn. JAMES M. ALLEN } New PERRY NUGENT, } Orleans
T. H. & J. M. ALLEN,
(Successors to ROBSON & ALLEN),
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
102 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 1y

J. H. CARTER,
Wholesale Grocer,
Nos. 8 and 10 Tchonpitoulas Street,
And 8 and 10 New Levee,
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

B. S. HARPER. N. J. THAXTON.
B. S. HARPER & CO.,
Cotton and Tobacco Factors,
AND GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 81 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

[Established in 1828.]
EVANS' FASHIONABLE RETAIL
Hat Emporium,
No 62 CAMP STREET,
Next door to the Picayune Office, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of the Latest Styles by every steamer, at Moderate Prices. a18 6m

SAM'L. BARRETT. CHS. LESASSIER.
BARRETT & LESASSIER,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
CORNER COMMON AND BARONNE STREET,
Entrance, 43 Baronne street.
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

JOHN A. STEVENSON. A. H. MAY
STEVENSON & MAY,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 40 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 6m

P. H. FOLEY,
Of the Firm of FOLEY, AVERY & Co.
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant
No. 32 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug 18 6m

HARLOW J. PHELPS, Of New Orleans. S. S. BUCKNER, Of Kentucky.
HARLOW J. PHELPS & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 142 Gravier Street, New Orleans.
aug18 6m

W. C. TOMPKINS. H. R. ALSOBROOK.
WM. C. TOMPKINS & CO.,
WHOLESALE DRY GOODS,
No. 2 Magazine st., corner Canal, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of goods constantly on hand for the country trade. a18 6m

A. HENDERSON PEALE, & CO.,
Successors to Thos. Henderson & Peale,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
No. 190 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 0m

J. W. CARROLL. JOS. HOY. CHAS. HARDENBERGH
CARROLL, HOY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No. 36 Perdido Street, New Orleans,
aug18 1y

C. L. WALMSLEY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 31 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

JOHN G. PARHAM, Of New Orleans. BEVERLY BLUNT, Of Hinds Co., Miss.
PARHAM & BLUNT,
COTTON FACTORS,
Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents,
No 26 Carondelet st. (First Floor), New Orleans
aug11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY & CO.,
General Commission Merchants and
COTTON FACTORS,
57 Poydras street.
Cotton Office—192 Common street—in charge of RICHARD J. NUGENT. ang4ft

R. K. WALKER. THOS. M'ENIGHT. J. F JOHNSON.
R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondelet street, New Orleans
jan 20-1y.

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

GEORGE L. HILL, ATTORNEY at Law, Marshall, Texas. Collections made in Eastern Texas and West Louisiana. mh27

WATTS, GIVEN & CO., Paducah, Ky. WATTS, CRANE & CO. New York.
W. C. WATTS & CO., Liverpool, England.
GIVEN, WATTS & CO., COTTON Factors & General Commission Merchants, No. 103 Poydras street, New Orleans. Parties shipping their Cotton to us, can make their election, and have their choice of this, the New York or Liverpool markets. Advances made on consignments to our houses, Watts, Crane & Co. New York, and W. C. Watts & Co. Liverpool.
feb3-1y

W. A. BELL, FRED N. OGDEN, H. H. WITHERSPOON
WM. A. BELL & CO.,
General Commission Merchants,
And dealers in Bagging, Rope, Iron Ties, Gunny Bags, Coffee and Western Produce,
41 NATCHEZ STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
Particular attention given to the filling of orders for Factors, for Country Merchants and for Planters. je30-1y

ROBERT L. WALKER,
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans. ap21-1y

CARY W. BUTT. WM. FLASH. THOS. T. A. LYON
BUTT, FLASH & LYON,
Cotton Factors, General Commission and Forwarding Merchants, corner Carondelet and Union streets, New Orleans.
Orders for all descriptions of merchandise will meet prompt attention.
Liberal advances made on consignments of Cotton and Produce to our care. ap14-6m

J. G. ELLIS. W. O. CHAMBERLIN
ELLIS & CHAMBERLIN, COTTON Factors and Commission Merchants, 23 Carondelet street. jan 20–1y

R. M. DENMAN. D. M. HOLLINGSWORTH
R. MARSH DENMAN & CO.,
Carriage Repository, corner Carondelet and

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

The Imperfect Copy.

"Always busy at your drawing, Edwin?" said his elder brother Henry, as he entered the school-room one morning.

Edwin looked up for a moment with a smile, and then went on tracing with evident pleasure the outline of a face. His brother came behind him, and looked over his shoulder. Edwin listened for his remarks, though without ceasing to draw.

"You are taking pains, I see," said Henry at last, in a kindly tone; "but I am afraid that you will have to use your India-rubber here, and here; these lines, you may perceive, are not in good drawing."

"I dont see much wrong in them," replied Edwin, suspending his pencil with something of vexation in his tone, for he had expected nothing but praise.

"If you compare them with your study, you will perceive that all this outline is incorrect."

"Where is the study?" asked Henry, looking in vain for it on the table.

"Oh it is somewhere up stairs," said Edwin. "I remember very well what it is like, and can go on without looking at it every minute."

"Would you oblige me by bringing it?" said his brother, who perceived that as long as Edwin merely drew from memory he would not see the faults in his sketch.

Edwin went up stairs, rather unwillingly, and soon brought down a beautiful study; a face most perfect in form and expression.

Henry silently put the two pictures together. Edwin gazed with bitter disappointment on his own copy, which but a few minutes before he had thought so good. Not a feature was really alike; the whole looked crooked and cramped; even his partial eye could not but see a thousand faults in his sketch.

"I shall never get it right!" Edwin exclaimed, in a burst of vexation; and, snatching up the unfortunate drawing, he would have torn it asunder, had he not been prevented by his brother.

"My dear Edwin, you have doubly erred; first, in being too easily satisfied, and then in being too easily discouraged."

"I shall never make it like that beautiful face!" cried the disheartened boy.

"You need patience, you need help, you need, above all, often to look at your copy. A perfect resemblance you may never have, but you may succeed in getting one which will do credit both to you and your master."

Edwin took up the pencil which he had flung down, and carefully and attentively studied the picture. He found very much in his copy to alter, very much to rub out; but at last he completed a very fair sketch, which he presented, with a little hesitation, to his brother.

"I shall have this framed, and hung up in my room," said Henry.

"Oh, it is not worth that!" exclaimed Edwin, coloring with pleasure and surprise.

"Not in itself, perhaps," replied Henry; "but it will serve often to remind us both of an important truth, which was suggested to me when I saw you laboring at your copy."

Edwin looked in surprise at his brother, who thus proceeded to explain his words:

"We, dear, Edwin, as Christians, have all one work set before us: to copy into our lives the example set us by a heavenly Master. It is in the Bible that we behold the features of a character perfect and pure. But how many of us choose rather to imagine for ourselves what a Christian should be like! We aim low; we are content with little progress; we perhaps please ourselves with the thought of our own wisdom and goodness, while every one but ourselves can see that our copy is wretched and worthless."

"What are we to do?" asked Edwin.

"We must closely examine the study set us in the Bible; we must compare our lives with God's law; and we shall then soon find enough of weakness and sin to make us humble ourselves before God. When we read of the meekness and gentleness of Christ, we shall be ashamed of our own passion and pride; when we find how holy was our great Example, we shall be grieved to think how unlike Him we are."

"We can never make a good copy," sighed Edwin; "we may just give up the attempt at once."

"You judge as you did when you wished to tear up your picture in despair, as soon as you saw how imperfect it was. No, no, my dear boy, I say to you now, as I said to you then, you need patience, you need help, help from the good Spirit of God; and, above all, you need to look often at your study, to keep the character and work of your Lord ever before your eyes."

"But if I do my best, I shall still fall so short!"

"I know it," said Henry, gravely, "but this feeling should not prevent your aiming at perfection. God will complete his work in the hearts of his servants, not on earth, but in heaven. There the copy feebly commenced below, shall be made a likeness indeed! For what says the Word of God? We know that when He shall appear we shall be like Him, for we shall see him as he is."

"To see the Lord, and to be made like Him; it seems too much to hope for!" cried Edwin.

"It is not more than God has promised," replied Henry, "to those who come to the Savior by faith. Worthless as our copy is in itself, it will be glorified, made beautiful, made perfect, and will be raised to a place of honor in the mansions of our heavenly Father."—Christian Treasury.

(From the French of Napoleon Roussel.)

THE BOOK OF BOOKS.

(Concluded from last week.)

"I ask you," continued the Colporteur, "to put your hand on your heart, and tell me whether you have read the Bible? Yes, or no?"

"Why, I have sometimes heard it read in my childhood. Since that period, I have run through some portions of it in my mass-book; and in short, I have heard it much spoken of."

"You will agree with me, that, to judge rightly of a book, it is not sufficient to have heard others speak of it, or even to have perused some fragments of it. But, as this is the case, allow me to show you, by a few quotations, that this book is unlike all human compositions What idea does this book give of God? 'I am the Lord, the mighty God, the sovereign Creator of the heavens and the earth? I am the first and last: there is none other God but me. I am he which was, and which is to come! Do not I fill heaven and earth?' The angels that stand around his throne cry night and day, 'Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts.' 'Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne.' God is a Spirit, and he is truth. He tries the hearts and the reins: he said, 'Let there be light, and there was light.' 'God is love.' He is 'merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and abundant in goodness.' 'The sacrifices well pleasing to God are a broken heart, and a contrite spirit.'"

"But there is nothing new in all that," interrupted the schoolmaster. "I know this: my catechism tells it me."

"Ah! but who told it to your catechism? It was the Bible. Now, everything seems plain, and easily discovered, because others have first discovered it for you. But to come to a right conclusion, we must compare the teaching of the Bible with the teaching of those men who know nothing of it. Thus this spiritual God of the Bible was with the ancients the sun or the moon, a block of carved stone, or, at the most, a living creature of some shape. This holy God was their Jupiter, defiled with impurity and adultery. This God of truth was a god of lies, who deceived men to gratify his passions. This one God was one multiplied into a thousand divinities, each of which took a vice under his protection. But without going back to antiquity, you will find in your own time those who worship, instead of God, a piece of wood, others a Lama, and many the devil; and these, to please their gods, down their children, kill their fathers, burn their wives. Such is the god that men have conceived to themselves! Do you think that these men could ever have formed an idea of that God who is spiritual, unchangeable, eternal, holy, almighty, and loving? And the precepts of this Bible?——

"Oh! as to that," said the schoolmaster, "all precepts are good, because they all echo the same thing—'Live virtuously,' and that's all."

"Well, you are very much mistaken, then. All precepts are not the same. There are some immoral, as I will show you. If you imagine to the contrary, it is, that here again you compare the different moral precepts taken from the Bible, or inspired by it, with each other, and supposing them to flow from various sources, you exclaim 'All these different precepts are good.' But, contrast with the Bible, those which have not been written under its heavenly influence, and the comparison will quickly convince you of the Divine authority of this book. The Grecian and Roman philosophers considered revenge a virtue; whilst Jesus says, 'Forgive men their trespasses; love your enemies; bless them that curse you.' Compare the precept of the Stoics, who, pretending to elevate man, did but develop his pride, with that laid down by the Saviour—'Be clothed with humility; God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble. Be not wise in your own conceits.' And now look at Mahomet, who, to reward his followers, promises them carnal and unholy pleasures in heaven; thus authorizing upon earth all the corrupt passions of our hearts. What is the command of Jesus on this subject? 'But fornication, and all uncleanness, let it not be once named among you.' And again, compare the precepts of the present day, whose principles amount to this: 'Charity begins at home,' to that enjoined in the gospel, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.' Follow after charity: charity suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things!' Tell me, now, whether all the precepts are good? And, if you admit they are not, to which do you give the preference? Which would you wish to be taught to your children, your neighbours, your enemies, yourself? Tell me, finally, if, when I see in all ages, precepts of revenge, pride, lewdness, self-love, proceeding from the world, I am not authorized to believe that precepts of forgiveness, of humility, of holiness, of love, have come from heaven, and that the book which teaches them, is the book of God?"

"Ah!" said the assistant, "there are so many religions in the world! If the religion of your Bible was the only good one, would not God have propagated it through the whole world? Would he have allowed fifty lying religions to stand by the side of the true one?"

Every eye was now turned on the Colporteur, to see what impression these words would make on him.

"I might answer, that the same God, who withholds health, fortune, and intellectual gifts from some men, may just as well withhold from them the knowledge of true religion. I might say, besides, that God has caused his gospel to be preached in all the earth, therefore, it is not his fault if men reject it. But suffer me to reply to your objection more directly. It runs thus: 'If the religion of the Bible were the only true one, it would be more diffused, more general; in short, it would be the one religion.' Very well, and so it is. The religion of the Bible is general; it is the one only religion of the universe; and I can prove it. First, you will readily grant that Catholicism, Protestantism, the Greek Church, and all other denominations that claim the name of Christian, have one common foundation, which is the Bible."

"Yes, yes; but what do you do with the Jews, the Mahometans, the——?"

"As to the Jews, observe, that they possess the Bible, at least the Old Testament; and thus their religion is derived from the same source as ours. With regard to the Mahometan, they consider the books of our Bible as Divine. Their Koran comprehends a portion of the Old Testament writings. Moreover, it speaks of the New Testament as a good book, and of Jesus Christ as being a messenger from God: so that Mahomet endeavours to make the Bible a prop for his faith. He says so himself. Now, so far, you will agree that Christians, Jews, Mahometans, have all drawn from the same spring—the Bible?"

"I will yield you that point. But the Pagans of antiquity, the barbarous tribes in our days, why have they not also founded their faith on the Bible?"

"There you need to be enlightened. I will show you that the fundamental truths of the Bible, and many of its narratives, were more or less known among all heathen nations, ancient or modern; a convincing proof that they formed their systems of religion from that revealed by God, in the first place, to Adam, and afterwards preserved in the Bible, by the providence of the same Divine Being."

"What! You would trace all religions up to the Bible—the Chinese, for example!"

"Yes; the Chinese, with the Bible, declare that man was made of the dust of the earth."

"And the Indians, too?"

"Not a doubt of it. The Indians agree with the Bible in saying that the first man, whom they call Adam, was placed with his wife in an earthly paradise."

"And what of the Persians?"

"The Persians say, that the woman ought to have lived happily; but the serpent tempted them, and brought them fruits of which they ate."

"And what of the Iroquois?" said the assistant, who hoped, from the singularity of the name, to puzzle the Colporteur.

"The Iroquois like the Bible, tell us of the woman who suffered herself to be tempted at the foot of a tree,—of the anger of God, driving her and her children out,—and of their quarrel, which terminated in the death of one of them."

"But let us go a little further back," said the schoolmaster; "I have read in Rollin's History, that the Chaldeans were one of the most ancient nations."

"The Chaldeans tell us like the Bible, that God announced to mankind that he would destroy them by a deluge; that he commanded a man to build a ship, and to take his children into it with him."

"And the Egyptians, who, Voltaire says, are older than the world, which reckons but six thousand years?"

"The Egyptians speak, as the Bible does, of a Saviour of the world."

The schoolmaster thought for this once he should be right: "And what do you say of the Americans, who, before their continent was discovered by Christopher Columbus, knew nothing of Christianity or Christians? They doubtless were Bible people, too?"

"The Americans, before they were discovered by Columbus, believed some of the facts related in the Bible, since they spoke to that celebrated man of a universal deluge."

"So, according to you," said the schoolmaster, evidently much embarrassed, and anxious to turn the conversation into a jest, "according to your statement, the Chinese and the Iroquois, the Chaldeans and the Egyptians, why, even the savages of the New World, are to be considered as so many good Christians?"

"Not at all; my argument is this I since we find among all nations a belief of certain facts, not so obscured but that we can recognize in them the wreck, as it may be called, of Scripture narratives and doctrines, we may justly conclude, nay, we are authorized to believe, that the religion of the Bible is the source whence all others have sprung; that is to say, it is the One Religion, and consequently Divine. Now, you will no longer object, that whilst there are so many religions in the world, there ought to be but one. God would have had it thus: man would not. Whose fault is it, then?"

"Oh, this is all very fine and good!" said the schoolmaster; "but I will never believe that a religion which invests the priest with an authority belonging to God alone; or, in other words, which makes him God, giving him power to confess, to pardon, to absolve, and save,—a religion which accepts of fasts, penances, and money, instead of a holy life,—I never will believe that such a religion could come from God!"

"Stay, stay, my dear sir; you are speaking of the Romish religion, and not that contained in the Bible. It is not surprising, then, that we should have misunderstood each other," said the Colporteur. "Yes, I agree with you that men have changed the nature of the religion of Jesus Christ. But why lay the blame on the religion? Why not rather make a simple distinction between men and things, Catholicism and Christianity Jesus Christ and the Pope? Though the Pope does pretend to infallibility, the Church is covered with a heap of superstitious vain ceremonies, and the priests make dupes of the credulous people. Does this prove that the facts and doctrines of the Bible are false? Does it prove that Jesus Christ is not the Son of God? Does not the gospel, on the contrary, condemn, in the strongest terms, the earthly power and authority of the clergy? saying: 'My kingdom is not of this world;' and again, does it not condemn the multitude of ceremonies which encumber it, in these words? 'God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him, must worship Him in spirit and in truth.' And the service of the heart, is it not more acceptable to Him than all outward works? 'God is love;' 'Love God with all thine heart, and thy neighbour as thyself; this is the Law and the Prophets.' Where are the processions, the fasts, the relics, the images, the infallible popes, the father confessors,—where are all these in the Bible? Nowhere! Shake off, then, my friends, the authority of men, and submit yourselves to God's only. Submit to the Bible, which the priests, while they hide it are constrained to call the Word of God. Suppose your father had addressed you a letter, and that the person who went to claim it at the Post-office kept it to himself, whilst he gave you, to whom the letter belonged, mere explanation of it; what would you think of such a person? Well, this is just the way you are treated. God, your heavenly Father, has written you a letter—this Bible in my hands. He sends it to you by His apostles, but the priests seize it on the way, give you a false explanation, keep back your title-deeds, under pretence of your not being able to read them. Believe them not: demand, demand your letter: be persuaded, that when a father writes to his son, he knows well how to make him understand. Think of this; the salvation of your soul depends upon it."

"What stuff!" said the assistant, "Our soul! who told you that we had a soul? Have you seen a soul?"

"No."

"Have you touched one?"

"No."

"Have you heard one?"

"No."

"Have you tasted one?"

"No."

"Have you smelt one?"

"No; but I have felt it in me," said the Colporteur.

"Well," replied the assistant, "you have neither seen, heard, touched, tasted, or smelt one; so there are five proofs against you."

"Very well," said the Colporteur; "now permit me, in my turn, to question you. Have you ever seen a sorrow?"

"No."

"Have you touched one?"

"No"

"Have you heard one?"

"No."

"Have you tasted one?"

"No."

"Have you smelt one?"

"No; but I have felt within me."

"Oh! but there are five proofs to one, my friend, that sorrows do not exist."

"What is that you say?" interrupted the old man sighing deeply as he spoke, "that sorrow exists not? Alas! my life is an evident proof to the contrary; this deeply-wrinkled brow, these trembling hands, this heart, broken by the bright hopes which have faded,—all proclaim the reality of this world's sorrow!"

"You have not, then, found happiness?" said the Colporteur, much interested.

"Happiness! eighty years have I sought it, but in vain. When I was at the age of this child, I fondly dreamed that it would be mine as soon as I became a man. Oh! how I wished for that period! But the years passed, and left me still in the pursuit of happiness. In my youth I ran after the world, after pleasure; after balls, and a few years left me disgusted and weary. Cities, oceans, countries, were always the same; friends deceived me, pleasures ruined my health, without satisfying the longings of my heart.... My wife was left.... she was kind and good, but death deprived me of her when she was still young. My children.... the eldest has proved ungrateful; the next is in a continual state of suffering; and the third, sweet and gentle as his dear mother, is also dead. Here am I to-day, an old man, childless, abandoned by men who no longer require my services, deceived by the bright visions of my youth, before I have really tasted life, about to descend into the tomb! And yet I confess to you, young man, that though I have discovered happiness to be but a phantom, I still wish to possess it; after experiencing the vanity of life, I would gladly spend it over again. Life and Happiness! there is the hunger and thirst of my soul! This, this it is that preys upon my vitals! and yet I must die! Die! oh, how dreadful! how it chills the heart, that word!... To die, to see no more, to feel no more.... A grave, a few shovelsful of each and then to be reduced to nothing! Frightful idea! Nothing!" The old man stopped: a tremor ran through every limb, and communicated itself, like an electric spark, to the whole assembly.

"But suppose one could give you back that life," said the Colporteur, "and give you that happiness which to this moment eludes your grasp, and place you beside that beloved wife, and that dear child, for ever, ever, ever?"

"Ah! yes, one may go very far with suppositions," said the old man.

"No, dear friend, no: it is not a supposition, it is a truth, a solemn truth; Christ has placed before us life and immortality: it is to convince you of this I bring the Bible. This life, which vanishes while you wish for it, this happiness, which flies from you as you pursue it—is not all this a proof that you were created to enjoy them. Would your Creator, do you think, have put a desire after those blessings in your heart, merely to deceive and torment you? Believe, rather, that these longings of your soul are produced by realities which, if not found here below, are to be found in heaven."

"In heaven!" uttered the old man, in a tone of bitterness, "in heaven!.... But I do not deserve this heaven, even if it exists; I feel it, when I review my long life, loaded with sin and crime; if there were an hell, it is that rather which would be due to me. I confess it, I have not thought of God, I have not done his will; doubtless, I am not worse than many others—only I deceive myself less, and I know that I have done evil, oh! much evil."

"Well, take comfort; there is a remedy for your disease; listen to the words of Jesus:—'I am come to seek and to save that which was lost.' 'My blood is shed for the remission of sins.' 'God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have eternal life.'

"Yes, my friend, God pardons him who deeply feels his iniquity; he gives heaven as a free gift to him who confesses himself unworthy of it. Take this Bible, and it will tell you all better than I can. In order to understand it, pray to God; then read it with the simplicity of a little child, and he who gave his Holy Spirit to the apostles to write it, will give the same to you to understand it. Read! read! the time is short! Read the Bible while you are in this world, lest you should hear it condemn you in the other."

The old man held out his hand, took the Bible, and the Colporteur departed.

OBITUARIES.

The Methodist Church in this city has been called, within a few months past, to sustain an unusually heavy loss in the death of valuable and cherished members. First Col. Baker, then sister McBride, then Dr. Goodman, and now lately, Dr. W. H. George; and finally Bro. JOHN BURDEN, have all been removed from us. It seems as though the Lord has a controversy with this people.

Dr. Burden died suddenly, of heart disease, Aug. 5th, 1866. He was born in the Parish of Bubwith, East Riding of Yorkshire, England, June 7th, 1807. He came to New York in early life, when he was married to Miss Sarah Nelson, in 1831, and soon after came to this city, where he resided to the time of death. One deceased brother united with the Wesleyan Methodists, when fourteen years of age; his religious character received that strong, deep impression, which Wesleyanism was wont to give its converts in earlier times, and that impress is retained to the last. It was an impress that carried with it the idea of duty and responsibility. He felt that Church membership and the Christian profession had meaning. This feeling made him attentive to prayer-meetings, active in the Sabbath School, and willing to bear his share of the burdens of the Church—if there is anything about Christian duty that may be so styled.—When calculating prudence sometimes suggested to him, that he was expected to give too liberally, his reply was, "the Church must be sustained."

In business matters he was active, shrewd, and successful.—To his servants he was a most kind and considerate master.

But in his family, the kindness and tenderness of his nature most fully appeared; as a husband and father he was kind, indulgent and affectionate. The welfare and salvation of his children lay very near his heart, and called forth the deepest solicitude. And if they are not saved, it will not be because they have not been made the subjects of frequent and earnest prayer, and of tender godly counsels. May they remember these prayers and counsels now that their father sleeps in the dust.

Bro. Burden suffered greatly for several months. Being advised by his physician of the character, and of the certainty of fatal termination of his disease, his mind adjusted itself to the great event, and became familiarized with death. He talked of it calmly and frequently. Feeling that his end was near, and being desirous to see all his children once more—one of them living at Pascagoula, and another in New Orleans, he paid them a visit; but feeling himself getting worse, he hastened his return, lest he should not die in the bosom of his family. He reached home Saturday morning, the fourth, and on Sabbath morning, the fifth, his spirit was dismissed.

J. HAMILTON.

Mobile, Ala.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.

The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.

TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40.—Payable $200 in advance: balance on the 1st of March.

Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.

Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.

Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.

As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.

W. H. N. MAGRUDER.

Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE

HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,

REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.

Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.

Next annual term opens first Monday in September.

For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.

Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A.M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Miss Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.

The Fall Session of this institution will open on the 26th day of September next.

This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattrasses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have no immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.

The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:

For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks,	$67 50
Regular Tuition,	25 00
Incidental Fee,	2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of instrument,	37 50
French or Spanish,	15 00

Ornamental branches at usual prices.

All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.

The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.

After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.

For other information address

CHARLES B. STUART, President,

jy28 Mansfield, La.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. Geo. F. Thompson, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Millsaps, Rev. George H. Clinton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.

Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.

The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Aug. 31, 1867.

For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. a18 1t

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M., President,	Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs. A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Marie S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bed clothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September.

Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT.

D. G. HEMPHREYS, Pres. Board of Trustees.

jy14 6m

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE

SUMMERFIELD, ALA.

The next scholastic year begins Monday, Oct. 1st, 1866. A quarter of a century in successful operation, with hundreds of cultivated daughters in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, and under the immediate care and patronage of the Mobile and Montgomery Conferences: this institution can afford and is determined to maintain a high standard of scholarship. Only experienced and skillful educators are employed by the Trustees. Among the recent additions to the Faculty are two gentlemen for a series of years Professors in the State University.

Those desiring really thorough culture for their daughters, will do well to investigate the claims of this institution.

For particulars or a circular apply to the President, Rev R. K. Hargrove.

a18 1m A. H. MITCHELL, Pres. Board.

SOUTHERN SHOE MANUFACTORY.

DRAKE & MARKHAM,

Manufacturers of

Men's, Boys', Ladies', Misses' & Children's

BOOTS AND SHOES,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

No. 56 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

We call the attention of the public to our extensive stock of fine custom-made Creole Boots and Shoes, for Gents, Boys, Youths, Ladies, Misses and Children, made of the best imported stock, by skillful workmen.

We design furnishing goods that combine elegance with durability, at a less price than common goods are usually sold for in this city.

OUR LAST-FOR-EVER BOOTS!

Every man in this State should have a pair of our Last-for-ever Boots. They are warranted waterproof, and to last one year, or the money returned.

Our stock of Family and Plantation Shoes are the best that can be made.

One pair will outwear any three pairs bought at auction. Country Merchants will do well to make a note of this.

We have better goods and sell them lower than any house in Louisiana.

Orders filled at ten per cent. on the original cost of manufacture.

All goods warranted to satisfy, or they may be returned. Planters will instruct their Commission Merchants to buy their shoes of

DRAKE & MARKHAM, 56 CAMP-STREET.

aug11

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY

Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,

Of the late Firm and Successors to G. W. COFFIN & CO.,

102 & 104 East Second street,

Cincinnati, Ohio,

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. je15

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address

13-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles st., corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered in 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no copying from books.

Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law; English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages; Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics and Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.

For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address

13 1y GEO. SOULE, N. E.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND, STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD

Established, August, 1861.

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January, 1866.

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET, 18

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURE to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

C. E. CATE & CO.

feb17 18 Camp st., N. O.

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St. Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 41, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons Type. ap14-1

J. B. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.

JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.

Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans. ap14-1y

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 31. WHOLE NUMBER 599.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1866.

$3 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE OFFICE—118 CAMP STREET.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LAY REPRESENTATION—No. II.

Mr. Editor: What are the reasons for this sudden and great change in our church economy, that shall constitute the one half of the General Conference of Laymen? Little was said about it at the General Conference, and but little in the papers, and we want light before we vote on so important a subject; and in the absence of the reasons for this step we are left to conjecture.

Was it a fear that the laity have not enough power?

Now, it seems to us that the laity have full half the power already, and they have many powers not conferred on laymen by other churches.

First, they nominate all of the clergy. No man can get into the ministry unless sent by them. Thus they have made or called all of this great Itinerant Host; and we give them credit for having selected, under God, the best body of missionary heralds that this world has seen since the days of the Apostles. And is this no privilege? No power? And do other churches grant so much to their laymen?

And then the laymen determine the salaries of all their ministers, and no minister is permitted to bargain or stipulate concerning his support. Is this no power? Are the ministers of other churches forbidden to fix the price of their own labor? And then although a Methodist minister may have been but half supported during the year, and though he may have had to go in debt in order to live, yet he is forbidden to ask or demand any thing more after the appointed conference year closes. Are the rights of the preachers of other churches thus cut off in a day? But notice; we do not blame the lay brethren for this; the General Conference did it. Nor do we say it is wrong. We only adduce the fact to show that the laymen in our church have that thing which croakers call "power," the power of the purse. And yet in this respect too, they have done nobly. They have fed and clothed an army that has done more marching, and more conquering, than any military army under the sun.

Again, our laymen own and control all of our churches, parsonages, lecture rooms, Sabbath-school libraries, etc., and they can pull down, enlarge or sell them at their own pleasure, as the poor preacher has not a dollar in one of them. Here, again, our laymen have all of the power of the purse. And so with our colleges and our schools. And here again our laymen have all praise for they have scattered these churches and schools like hoar frost over all of the land; and they have built lodges for these wayfaring itinerants in every place whither these wandering prophets are likely to pass.

And then the laity may pray, sing, lead classes, create Sabbath-schools, superintend them, teach in them, and govern them. They may exhort, preach, marry, baptize and administer the Lord's Supper, etc., for we have a glorious army of local or lay preachers. Is here no power? Are here no privileges? They control their local affairs, as they are local, but as they will not so sacrifice themselves as to become itinerants, they do not ask to control itinerants. And in all these things the laymen have wrought wonders. They have all been at it, and always at it, and God has blessed their labors until we are indeed spread out into bands. Dr. Stevens, in his article in favor of the laity, says, in truth: "the ministry supervised and propelled everything, and we could have been no church without it."

To the one-half of the church-power which the laity now have, add the one half of the power of the General Conference, and then the laity have three-fourths of the entire control of the ministry and laity of the whole church. Now, if the Holy Ghost has made the ministers "overseers" of the flock of God, can they innocently, and with impunity, thus throw off the responsibility? We all have a great faith in the worthy laymen of our church, but then, as ministers, we must finally give an account of our own stewardship; and, as our lay brethren do not wish to take our crown, do not let us force it upon them.

Or did the anxiety for this change originate in a desire to be like our sister churches? The Israelites once had such a desire concerning the nations around them, and God gave them a king in his "anger and took him away in his wrath." Our sister churches have their work to do and their way to do it in. All this may be right. Variety is God's economy in most other things; it may be so in church economy. Let us then be content to do our own work in our own way; and when others succeed better with Saul's armor on, than we do with our sling and stone, then it will be time enough for this change.

Or is the desire for this great change an anxiety to conform our church polity to the governments around us, on this continent? We have no intimation from the Great Head of the church that this is our duty, nor that it would be safe. The United States have tried it only ninety years, and now, even now, Anarchy is like to strand us on the unyielding rocks of despotism. South America lacks prosperity; and then Mexico! poor Mexico! No, no, false lights must not mislead us, if we can prevent it

In the theory of our Western continent, on the subject of government, a colony or a people are supposed to exist first, then they are expected to rear the structure of their own government over their own heads; but it must be otherwise with a missionary church, and in all of her aggressive history it has been otherwise. God's minister has gone to his new field among the heathen or elsewhere, and there was no pious colony there, no people that was God's people; but the preacher must preach, discipline, administer the sacraments, and then "feed the flock of God, over whom the Holy Ghost has made" him "the overseer." And then, when the epistle comes from the Apostle to this church, to these christians, it comes in these words; "Remember them that have the rule over you, who have spoken to you the word of God."

The preacher is the spiritual father of the converts, of the church members, and he loves them as no one else can. Have we considered the full import of those passages in which the Apostles call the members of the church, "children, sons," etc? Look at the yearning of the apostle Paul, when he says, "yet have ye not many fathers, for in Christ Jesus I have begotten you." God has called the ministry to this paternity, and hence to this love, and this "care" for the churches. The minister then is the spiritual father of his little flock. He knows its spiritual wants better than others, and hence he is its best representative, at Conference, or anywhere else. Is not this a truth; that he that loves a people most, all other things being equal, is their best representative or their best ruler? Love, as in God the Father, makes Him infinitely our best ruler. Love in our Redeemer constitutes him our best representative in Heaven. Love in the minister, paternal love, thus begotten in the heart by the Holy Ghost, and this paternity constitute him the best overseer of his flock. And what may be said of the minister, may be said of the ministry; and we venture the assertion, that no other body of men love the church of God as ministers do; and this, we suppose, one of the reasons for constituting them—its "overseers." Look at their self-denials, their privations, and their toil, and then tell us, where will be found an exhibition of such love, only as it is seen on Calvary. In this we say nothing against laymen They doubtless do, and feel, and love, all that God requires of them; but God calls the ministry especially to this paternal love and these sacrifices.

No, the governments of this world are not our models. Let us not trail the church in the dust after any of them.

Or is the change contemplated because the laity ask it? Surely not, for no considerable portion of the laymen of our church ever asked any such thing. So obvious is this fact, that the Episcopal Methodist urges the laity of our church to "prepare memories," and not fail "to canvass this matter in due time." And why do they not ask for this representation? We take it for granted that they do not want it; that they prefer the good old Wesleyan mode, as it works so wonderfully well; and they are disposed to "let well enough alone." Are they afraid to ask it? No sir, not at all. So far as we can learn, most of them do not want it. We may urge them up to it. We may force the measure upon them, and in their love for the church, and in their love of peace, they will submit. They want some power in the ministry. They want it like an army, like the navy, some head, some back-bone, some glorious energy. And so we say; let us have one Protestant Church on earth, differing from others in this respect, and let that church still be ours.

Or was this great change proposed in order to go towards the "Protestant Methodists," that they might come towards us? Was it to be a bargain of bishops from us, for lay representation from them? We infer as much (humiliating as it is) from their reply to Bishop McTyeire. How was that? In substance as follows: We cannot go to you now. We will wait four years, and in that time we shall know what you do on the subject of lay representation. And who are these whom we are after? A good people who went out from us because they wanted lay representation and did not want bishops, and who have, in our bounds, some half a dozen church buildings, a few laymen and a few ministers. We have nothing to say against them, but, somehow, we do not wish to go over to them. We prefer staying at home; and if they do not like bishops well enough to take them without a bonus, we do not wish them to come to us. But we wish them God-speed in their own good way, and hope to meet them in heaven.

Local Itinerant.

Louisiana, August 14th, 1866.

Mr. William Morgan has published in the Watchman some carefully prepared tables showing the increase and decrease of the Connexion for ten years to 1855, and then for a second series of ten years ending with 1865. As the table is very instructive we give it entire:

RETURNS TEN YEARS ENDING 1855.

Years.	Number.	Increase.	Decrease
1846	341,468	630	—
1847	339,379	—	2,089
1848	338,861	—	518
1849	348,274	9,413	—
1850	358,277	10,003	—
1851	302,206	—	56, 58
1852	281,263	—	20,946
1853	270,965	—	10,298
1854	264,168	—	6,797
1855	260,858	—	3,310
Total,		20,106	100,026

RETURNS TEN YEARS ENDING 1865.

Years.	Number.	Increase.	Decrease.
1856	263,835	2,977	—
1857	270,095	6,260	—
1858	277,091	6,996	—
1859	292,795	15,604	—
1860	310,311	17,516	—
1861	319,782	9,471	—
1862	325,256	5,476	—
1863	329,704	4,448	—
1864	329,668	—	36
1865	330,827	1,159	—
Total,		70,007	36

Thus it will appear that from 1845 to 1865 the Wesleyans lost nearly one hundred thousand members. This decrease, we need not say, followed upon the expulsion of Messrs. Dunn and Griffith and the consequent secession of very many members of the societies. In 1865 the number of members was still twenty-eight thousand below the number reported in 1850.

Merle D'Aubigne.—The great Historian of the Reformation—at Geneva, is described by a late correspondent as "now over seventy years of age, with long white locks upon his shoulders, but hale and robust, and an uncommonly fluent and animated speaker. It has been remarked that in face no less than in person he bears a strong resemblance to the late Daniel Webster—his eyes not quite so cavernous and piercing and his features not so regularly cut, but with the same portly frame, the same big head, the same expresive and eloquent lips.

A peculiar religious movement is on foot in Maine. A large colony is said to be forming to emigrate to a new home in Jerusalem.

SALT MINES—AVERY'S ISLAND.

This island is called "Salt Island," "Avery's Island," "Petite Anse Island," according to the caprice of the speaker or writer. It contains about 2200 arpents of upland and 1200 arpents of timber,—cypress, gum, magnolia, oak, &c. It is about two miles in diameter, nearly round, and is made of hills, hillsides, valleys, ravines, ponds, woodlands, open fields and pastures, the whole surrounded on all sides by sea marsh, which has the appearance of dry, level prairie. At various localities all over the Island fine thrifty forest trees may be seen which add much to the beauty of the scenery. The island, viewed from its highest pinnacle, is picturesque and beautiful beyond anything we have ever before seen in the State. Its gentle undulations, its peaks, hills, valleys, ponds, its towering magnolias and noble oaks, its ash and cypress, its field of blooming cotton and waving cane, all inspire the most pleasant emotions in the breast of any beholder who loves to look on nature when she puts on her finest robes and appears in her most bewitching mood.

From our elevated view, 165 feet above the level of the Gulf, we could see in the distance at the west, the Vermillion woods, nearly to Vermillionville, Miller's Island and a broad sheet of prairie, with dwelling houses, fields and islands of timber in a sea of grass; on the north the bayon Teche woods down as far as Jeanerett's and the Au Large prairies; on the east the Cypremort woods, and the Gulf of Mexico to the south, a circumference of more than a hundred miles. With a good glass sweeping the entire circle we were enabled to obtain an excellent view of the vast and beautiful surface of land and water that surrounds the island. In a very clear day from our stand point which we occupied, the light-house can be seen, thirty miles distant.

At an elevated point on the island we were, shown what appears to have been the cratur of a volcano. It is about three hundred yards in diameter, and forms at the present time a dense swamp, with a heavy growth of ash, magnolia, and other forest trees, around which is a circular rim of earth a hundred feet above the level of the Gulf. Stones are found beneath the surface of the island which have evidently been subjected to the action of volcanic fires. This huge island at some remote period was doubtless thrown up from the bosom of the Gulf by some volcanic force, and the old crater and volcanic stones remain as a page of unwritten history of the past.

THE SALT MINE.

Col. Greenleaf has lately been prospecting with reference to the extent of the salt mine of the island. By boring, they have proved that the bed is half a mile square, and it may extend a mile or more. They have gone thirty-eight feet into the solid salt, and find no signs of the bottom of the strata. It doubtless extends down hundreds of feet below the surface of the Gulf. The surface of the salt is about on a level with tide water, and forms a level plain, with a few slight inequalities, on the surface. The earth covers the salt from eleven to twenty-five or thirty feet; and if the mine extends under the hills they may find it covered in places a hundred feet or more in depth.

On the surface of the salt they find a soil like that of the surrounding marshes, and above this, sedge grass or marsh grass, in a good state of preservation. Above this the soil appears to be the washings of the hill side above, covering the mine to the depth of from eleven to twenty-five or thirty feet.

THE SALT COMPANY AND THEIR PLANS.

We are credibly informed that the Company who have a contract with Judge Avery in relation to working the salt mine, intend to form a joint stock company with a capital of two and a half millions of dollars, and to run a railroad to New Iberia. They intend to employ a large number of hands, and send the salt to St. Louis. There is an incomplete arrangement for the purchase of the mine of Judge Avery by the company. The sale has not yet been passed, and still rests upon contingencies. But the mine will doubtless be worked by the present company or some other before the expiration of the coming year, on a large scale. If they can make fortunes in New York by pumping salt water from the earth into vats with sliding roofs over them, converting it into salt by solar evaporation, they certainly can make larger fortunes by taking the purest salt on earth from the mine on Avery's or Petite Anse Island. The salt mines of Poland are more than three hundred feet below the surface of the earth, and the salt looks about the color of shoe-maker's wax; while that of this island is but a short distance beneath the surface, and when pulverized, is as white as snow: and by the last chemical analysis by Prof. Jackson, of Boston, it is pronounced by that eminent geologist to be perfectly pure salt.

THE PIT.

We went down into the pit which the miners have been working lately. They have penetrated the salt but ten or twelve feet, and the diameter of the pit is not more than 15 or 20 feet. In one of the old pits they worked into the salt thirty eight feet. The salt walls all around look like walls of glass, and we stood upon a foundation of the same solid material. It is not improbable that this ledge of salt extends a mile or more in depth, and long distances on all sides.

It looks as solid as though it had all been moulded to order by a perfect workman.

In working the mine they drill holes with churn drills as in granite, and blow out masses of salt and fragments with powder, the same as in blowing quarries of rocks. They expect from one perpendicular shaft or pit, to run horizontal shafts like rays in all directions from the centre into the mine, bringing the salt to the surface through the common centre. By this means they could, after working a few months around the centre shaft, have room for the employment of thousands of laborers in the mine.

SALT MINE THEORIES.

Prof. Owen has a late article in Silliman's Journal in which he contends that the salt mine of Petite Anse Island was formed by a lake and solar evaporation. Had he seen the formation of the island and the location of the mine he would have found this to be impossible. The mine extends under a hill. How could a lake have extended under a hill, not formed of stone or some solid substance? And how could the water, even salt water, of a deep lake like this, have evaporated to any considerable extent, when periodical rains falling into it and running down from the sides of the hills, would more than replace all of the evaporated fresh water.

From the facts connected with the salt mine, we are much inclined to the belief that, like the salt mine in Poza, in Europe, it was moulded in the crater of a volcano. Our reasons are these. The surface of the salt formation is on a dead level with the surface of the Gulf water. It is not at all improbable that about the time that the fires of the ancient volcano that burnt out the bowels of this island were nearly exhausted, a breach next to the waters of the Gulf was made, and a flood of salt water entered the burning chasm and extinguished the fires at the same time that the heat evaporated the fresh water and left a deposite of salt. As the earth was heated for long distances below and around, it could not suddenly cool, but would continue for days, and perhaps weeks and months to impart its heat to the mass of solid salt and the water above it. As the fresh water evaporated, salt water would flow in and take its place, and from these new supplies deposites of salt would continue to be made till the surface of the solid mass was on a level with the Gulf. There the work would stop. The baked sides of a cratur would make a good pit for the manufacture of salt. The washings of the tides would then make a muddy deposite on the surface of the mine, and in this mud, marsh grass would grow. This mud and grass they now find on the first formation above the salt. Then the rough and loose earth thrown up, forming a hill on the north side of the salt mine, would begin to wash down by succeeding rains. That is exactly what it has been doing till the marsh grass and mud are now covered with a deposite of mud from eleven to thirty feet in depth. Such are our facts and theories. Each can place his own value on them.

THE OLD SALT PITS.

Most of the old salt pits made in Confederate times still remain, and are full of water. The surface water is fresh, and the lower water is very salt. In our hottest days in August some gentlemen resorted to one of these pits for a bath, and to their astonishment found that when their feet entered the salt water almost five feet below, the surface it was so hot as to nearly scald their feet. These facts are established beyond a doubt, and can doubtless be philosophically explained. The salt water, though hot, was more dense than the cooler fresh water above and could not rise; and one particle of heated water cannot impart its heat to another particle. The rays of the sun impart more heat to salt water than fresh, under the same circumstances. So the same rays heat the salt water more than the fresh.

BONES, BASKET, &c.

Near the surface of the salt, or not many feet above it, the miners have found the bones of mastodons, and Indian baskets, made of wild cane like those of the present day. The shape of the baskets was that of bags, and nearly the size of a corn sack. They were in as perfect a state of preservation as though they were made yesterday. These baskets and bones have been laying side by side, beyond a doubt, more than five hundred years, perhaps they are as old as the mummies of Egypt. Part of a mortar was found near the baskets, and pottery also. An old Indian kiln was found not far off, with some whole pots in it. Numerous flint arrow heads are found in different parts of the island.

AN OLD RESIDENT.

We visited Mr. John Hays while on this island. He has lived where he now lives for seventy five years. He is now ninety years of age. He was born in Pennsylvania, and has lived on the island since he was fifteen years of age. He is healthy, hearty, and active, and a very clever old man. He says the island was a dense forest when he first came there in the year 1790. There were no Indians on the island then, and no signs that they had been there for ages. He never could get an Indian to go on the island. He wished them to go there to kill bears, panthers, and wild cats, but they said that a great calamity once happened to the Indians there, and they had never dared visit it since.—Planter's Banner.

The Rothschilds.

HOME OF BARON JAS. DE ROTHSCHILDS, AT FERRIERES, FRANCE.

The Paris correspondence of the London Star gives the following condensed description of the home of the money king:

You enter by a flight of marble steps a vestibule, which opens on one of the most spacious halls in Europe, furnished, however, as a reception room, and lighted from the roof, which is of muffled glass, from behind. At night a system of gas illuminates the vast space somewhat as has been so successfully carried out at the Chatelet. A gallery runs round the upper part of the hall on which suits of party rooms open, while on the ground floor the reception and family apartments open on the hall. Purple velvet portierer have an admirable effect at each end of this splendid salle, which has been constructed on the most perfect accoustic principles, the result of which is that the effect of music executed here is marvelous.

Ordinary paper hangings are banished, and each room is hung with tapestry, velvet or silk.

Every single visitor finds at his disposal a suite consisting of a splendid drawing-room, boudoir, bed-room and dressing-room. On every dressing-room table are the ordinary contents of a gorgeous dressing case. Ivory brushes surmounted by the baron's coronet; silver boxes containing every species of cosmetique, poudre de riz, etc.; exquisite hand mirrors, mounted sculptured ivory, sandal-wood, or silver. Curiosity tempts even old bachelors. A scent-bottle of rare workmanship attracted my attention. As the spring flew back, lo! a jeweled watch by Brequet, was revealed, encased in the top—so, while a fair lady inhales the perfumed contents, she is informed of the time of day. To mention that hot and cold water pipes are laid on so as to supply each dressing-room is superfluous, and a mere "detail" in an above where the most thoughtful care has presided over the minutest arrangement.

To describe the thrones taken from the summer palace at Pekin, the jeweled cups from Cellini's chisel, the ceramic from Feenzia or Lucca, the crystal beakers from Venice, the hangings of broidered satin—green, by-the-by, in the baron's own bed-room—is verily beyond my intellect, and I hesitate not to assert that Menemosque herself would be puzzled to tell half of all the treasures of art congregated in each single room.

It is a positive relief to go out in the grounds, where one's power of attention has fewer calls on it. These said grounds are reached through a series of conservatories and hot houses, tapisses with the loveliest moss, and filled by Flora's choicest gifts, as well as by the rarest specimens of the sculptor's art, and enlivened by the bright-winged birds of the tropics.

These conservatories may, indeed, be said to rival in beauty, if not in extent, those of the far famed Chatsworth. The grounds are diversified by sheets of water, on which ferry boats continually ply, and are rendered interesting by the number of yokes, gazelles, antelopes, glands, and foreign animals of all harmless species, which roam, at their own sweet will, evidently enjoying this eden as thoroughly as their own native places.

In the absence of himself and family, the baron's guests are entertained by a repast that would have done honor to Vatel himself. The baron's cellar contributes the finest Maderia in Europe to the enjoyment of his friends, and that with a truly princely magnificence.

Bad Habits and Something Else.

A friend writes, "I wish that you had spoken in your recent letter on 'long things' about the bad practice of making funeral services and discourses tedious. Last week I attended one in this city which occupied three hours, to the great annoyance of the mourning family, and certainly not to the profit of the attending friends. What possesses ministers to think that it does any good to harrow up the feelings of sensitive and afflicted people by recounting all the circumstances that go to make up their sad loss! Words are poor comforters, unless they are words of Him who said, 'Come unto me all ye who labor and are heavy laden,' and I believe there are very few persons in sorrow who do not desire to be as little as possible exposed to the view of the world, even if that is largely made up of their sympathizing friends. It is, therefore, very desirable that funeral sermons should not be so protracted as to become painful to the mourning family, nor tedious to those who come to pay their tribute of respect to the memory of the dead."

Tribulation.—We all know in a general way that this word means affliction, sorrow, anguish; but it is worth our while to know how it means this. It is derived from the Latin "tribulum," which was the threshing instrument or roller whereby the Roman husbandman separated the corn from the husks; and tribulation, in its primary significance, was the act of this separation. But some Latin writer of the Christian Church appropriated the word and image for the setting forth of a higher truth; and sorrow, distress, and adversity being the appointed means for separation in men of their chaff from their wheat, of whatever in them was light, and trivial, and poor, from the solid and the true; therefore he called their sorrows and their griefs tribulation—threshings—that is, of the inner, spiritual man, without which there could be no fitting him for the heavenly garner.—Trench.

Cable Coincidences.—The first news dispatches over both of the cables which have worked—that of 1858 and that of 1866—announced peace, the former in China and the latter in Germany; the work of laying the cable was begun and ended on Friday, and ought, of course, to have failed; and the submarine wire connects the only two countries in both hemispheres which are clear of reptiles—Ireland and Newfoundland. It is believed that Cyrus W. Field has at last succeeded to his heart's content.

Silent Influences.—The Rev. Albert Barnes says: It is the bubbling stream which flows gently, the little rivulet which runs along, day and night by the farm house, that is useful, rather than the swollen flood or warring cataract. Niagara excites our wonder, and we stand amazed at the power and greatness of God there as he "pours in from the hollow of his hand." But one Niagara is enough for the continent or the world, while the same world requires thousands and tens of thousands of silver fountains and gently flowing rivulets that water every farm, and meadow, and every garden, and that shall flow on every day and night with their gentle, quiet beauty. So with the acts of our lives. It is not by great deeds, like those of the martyrs, that good is to be done, but by the daily and quiet virtues of life, the Christian temper, the good qualities of relatives and friends.

Infidelity in Sweden, Belgium and Germany.—In Sweden, infidelity is active: Tom Paine's "Age of Reason" has been pressed again into foreign service, and its recent translation is but one indication of the kind of opposition with which the spiritual life of the country has to contend. In Belgium the Protestant National Church is divided on the same theological questions as those agitating the Church of England. One member of the synod, while retaining his position renounces "orthodox Protestantism," publicly disclaiming his belief in the Trinity, in the fall, in the Divine inspiration of Scripture, in redemption through the blood of Christ ("who died on the cross, because men tied him to it,") in other articles of faith, and in all miracles and mysteries. In Germany, also, the same controversies are rife, and charges of heresy have been preferred to the Minister of Worship against two professors of the University of Halle, and a third professor of the University of Griswald.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. H. B. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1866.

WANTED,

A FIRST-CLASS TEACHER OF MUSIC—one capable of taking charge of the Musical Department in a Female College. The best of reference will be required. For further information apply to the personally, or by writing, at this office, 112 Camp street; or to Rev R K Hargrove, Summerfield, Ala.

The Principalship of the Art Department of the Centenary Female College at same place is yet to be filled. Address same parties.

J. C. KEENER.

New Orleans, August 4th, 1866.

Fourth Round Quarterly Meetings.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT, LA. CONFERENCE—1866.

Sept 1 and 2,—Natchitoches S. at Natchitoches.
Sept 8 and 9,—Many Circuit, at Bayou Negrote.
Sept 15 and 16,—Pleasant Hill, at Beulah—Camp Meeting.
Sept 22 and 23,—Red River at Coushatta Aca.
Sept 29 and 30,—Bayou La Chute.
Oct 6 and 7,—Mansfield Circuit, at Mansfield.
Oct 20 and 21,—North Bossier, at Collinsburg.
Oct 27 and 28,—Shreveport.
Nov 3 and 4,—Greenwood and Caddo, at Greenwood.

The Preachers in charge of Circuits and Stations will please be prepared to furnish all the statistics usually required at the Annual Conferences.

B. F. ALEXANDER, P. E.

Fourth Round Quarterly Meetings.

YAZOO DISTRICT MISS. CONFERENCE—1866.

Sept 1,—Lexington, at Union Grove.
Sept 8,—Carrollton, at Carrollton.
Sept 15,—Holmes, at Wesley's Chapel
Sept 22,—Black Hawk, at Black Hawk
Sept 29,—Richland, at Richland,
Oct 13,—Green woodland Sidon, at McNutt
Oct 20,—Yazoo, at New Hope
Oct 27,—Mount Olivet, at Mount Olivet
Nov 17,—Yazoo city

Bishop Paine is expected at Wesley Chapel, Sept 15th.

J. M. PUGH, P. E.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27. —REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS.—By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, } Executive Com.
J. B. WALKER, } Joint Board of
L. PARKER, } Publication.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, By some error we have been the last to receive this new number of the Family of Advocates. It is a worthy rehabilitation of the former Texas Advocate, and is in evidence of that indomitable vim which belongs to the Texian. The type, presswork, and tout ensemble of the paper are excellent. We most heartily welcome it, and shall often avail ourselves of its columns. An "Advocate" is a luxury in some parts of Methodism, but in Texas it is a necessity. The people of that boundless flourishing commonwealth have their own method of cropping, trading, riding, giving, talking, preaching, and getting to heaven—in fact their own civilization. They must have their own Advocate. And here it is, capable of doing good work in God's field; and no doubt will. We suppose that the four Texas Conferences will rally to it strongly to its support. The condition of the mail service will be its greatest obstacle to immediate prosperity. But that will be removed speedily.

TERMS $4 IN SPECIE, cheap enough. Published at Galveston by Rev. J. G. Johns.

PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION.

So much of a politician is on the surface, that he fails to obtain due credit for the sincerest acts of his life. In times of deep distress and confusion, the people therefore naturally turn away from this class of men, and their proffered services. Yet the world seems by a sort of fatal necessity to go upon them. When South Carolina and Massachusetts lock arms, one wonders what sort of influence has allayed these antagonisms, and what voice it is that cries louder than the blood spilt at Sumpter. Has the spirit of the gospel subdued the fiery passions of the southron or mitigated the cold malice of the north-man? Would that it were so; but it is not. We are to look rather to an earthly source for the cause of this strange embrace. Sheer exhaustion and defeat of one party, pain and weariness of the other, unite in the cry for peace. The country needs rest, must have it; rest in her councils, in her fields, in her homes. The combattants cease in the presence of a greater foe—as lions and tigers are quiet while a man is in the cage. Politicians only express the common mind when they walk arm in arm to the Temple of Concord. For once there is depth in them, because there is depth in the purpose of the people. Strong as the feeling of hate may yet burn in the bosoms of men whose contentions have been "like the bars of a castle," this wrath finds its master in stern necessity. The country is not able to stand another civil war, nor will be for years to come; this is our strong hope of peace. The first note of war, and bankruptcy universal, utter, would instantly ensue; a pall darker than that which mantles Mexico, would forever cover the republic of North America. Military chieftains would marshall all that could bear arms, and by turns devour the land, until war and anarchy ended in iron-handed despotism. It is a stern and dreaded fate that quells South and North into mutual forbearance, and hand-cuffs them together.

This rage of war runs its course like an epidemic. It arises like other evils of a diseased and sinful nature with or without assignable cause. It is deep seated in human lust—a desire to have that which is another man's. It varies in intensity, but rises by the mere lapse of time. Whenever men forget its evils and its scars are dim, they are ready for it again. As if personal enmities and common wrath did not afford room enough to satisfy this Spirit of Evil, men unite to secure a greater area and a grander scale for its display and satisfaction. It is a great mistake to charge kings and politicians with being the authors of war. When they are ready for it, the people are: they only express the voice, rage, and mania of the multitude.

Doubtless some nations are more capable of this continued rage than others. The thirty years war was to be found only in that sullen nature of the Teutonic Tribes. The Anglo-American is not capable of so much wrath nor of enduring so much punishment. We have hope in this lack of war quality of our stock.

That miserable bone of contention, the colored race, is pretty well cracked and gnawed, if not actually disposed of. Different social conditions and habits constantly breed prejudice, divisions and at last conflict. Countries so wide apart in their moral situation could not legislate to mutual advantage; that which benefitted the one damaged the other. War has produced a disastrous uniformity, a violent conformity of interest—until, like the burnt and blackened ruins of a city, there is nothing to admire, nothing to court. That aristocratic condition of the South which gave northern minds so much offense, remains only in memory of the past, as solitary columns stand amid the ruins of Greece. In so far the occasion of hatred has passed.

It will therefore be difficult for the fiercest spirit of Radicalism to overcome these conditions which are unfavorable to more war. They conspire to aid the President and the Philadelphia Convention. The disposition to hold office to tyranize, to plunder, is doubtless unrelentory on the one hand; but on the other the absolute necessities of its condition will force the country to maintain the peace. It will be interesting and satisfactory to see the defeat of those ministers of hate who are now lecturing in Cooper's Institute and elsewhere—with a collection; to listen and hear their prolonged howlings wasting on the desert air. Amid fear and hopes for the result and success of the Philadelphia Convention, we recount these grounds of hope, and meanwhile look to a higher source for the defeat of evil minded men and for the full restoration of the Constitution of the country and the rights of the States.

LARGER CHURCH PAPERS.

We copy entire the following sensible remarks from the St. Louis Christian Advocate. We could add a little in the same line of thought. When friends are crying for larger papers at cheaper rates, it would be well for them to consider what they are doing to sustain these Advocates. We know a paper where the editing and clerking are done for nothing—only "for love's sake." How many preachers are contributing, or even getting subscribers for love's sake? How many church members are willing to subscribe for one additional copy to send to some brother who has "fallen into decay," or to some widow who can ill afford the luxury of a weekly paper? The quickest way to enlarge an Advocate is to enlarge yourselves. O, ye complainers, "ye are not straitened in us, but ye are straitened in your own bowels:"

"By painstaking and judicious condensing, we contrived to put into the paper as much of the latter as is contained in many other papers that have no advertisements; nevertheless, we were advised that our patronage would be much circumscribed if we did not furnish more reading matter to our subscribers. Upon mature consideration we have resolved on adding two pages to the Advocate; and for the convenience of all concerned, as the postage will not be increased thereby, we shall send forth the additional half-sheet, as the Secular Department of the Christian Advocate."

The foregoing was copied from a late issue of the Nashville Christian Advocate. Unless the judgment of the present subscriber be greatly at fault, it will be found that the plan proposed will work badly. The fault is not in the paper, nor in the course heretofore pursued by the agent; it is in the people. They are not considerate, nor are they consistent in the matter. They do not remember, or make due allowance for the deranged state of affairs generally, and of the postal affairs particularly, nor for the impoverished condition of the country. Nor yet are they consistent. They do not murmur to pay an equal, or greater, sum for a secular paper that does not contain one-half, perhaps not one-third, the amount of reading matter. The Nashville Advocate might occupy two full pages with paying advertisements, and then in the course of a year furnish a greater amount of instructive and useful reading matter than can be had in the shape of books for twice the amount the paper costs. The difficulty is, there are too many people willing and anxious for anybody and everybody to labor and sacrifice for the good of the Church except themselves. They beg to be excused. It would be much better if they were as anxious to know what they could do for the Church, as they are to know what the Church can, or will do for them.

Then again, there is a class of people who take church papers as if to see what fault they can find. Year after year they will pay for and read secular papers, and make little or no complaint. These secular papers being individual enterprises, and belonging to individuals, they do not feel at liberty to find fault with, or if they do, they know they can easily have the paper stopped, and there's an end of the matter. But a church paper they seem to think belongs to everybody, and everybody should have something to do, or to say, in conducting it. Hence, it is often conned over as much for the purpose of finding fault as of finding merit.

The agent at Nashville had as well, perhaps better, go on as he has commenced; sustain the paper by the best means, and in the best way he can, and let the grumbletonian family "waste their sweetness on a desert air."

THE JACKSON METHODIST, published at Jackson, Miss., edited by Rev. Wm. Price, has issued its first number. It is a very creditable sheet, no doubt in the face of many difficulties. But the energetic Editor is in good spirits, and says that his prospects for an increased circulation are good. One preacher writes us that he has obtained for it eighteen or twenty subscribers; with many such friends it must succeed. It will be in the defense and wholly in the interest of Methodism, and as such we cannot but wish it an abundant success.

CHOLERA.—The mortality returns for the past week show a steady decline of cholera in this city. Number of deaths yesterday, 14.

FOURTH ROUND.

The Presiding Elders of this and some other Conferences are now entering upon the last quarter of the year's work. The Fourth Quarterly Conference is of great importance. Generally the renewing and granting of licenses to preach, and the passage of the character of Local Elders and Deacons is attended to at this time. Recommendations to the Annual Conference for ordination and for admission into the traveling connection are made at this Quarterly Conference. The election of Stewards does not necessarily take place at this time, nor at any other, except to fill vacancies, as they now hold office indefinitely at the pleasure of the Conference.

The trustees of church property are required to make their annual report to the last Quarterly Conference. This is the time, therefore, to examine into the subject of titles, to fill up vacancies in the boards, and to see that the property of the Church is legally and firmly secured. It is an interest of the highest moment, and often neglected. In every circuit and station this matter should be thoroughly sifted annually, and the discipline has provided accordingly. There are more reasons than ever before why this should now be looked after, and everything made safe.

At the Fourth Quarterly Conference it is made the duty of the Presiding Elder to procure full statistics from every charge to be reported to the Annual Conference, in case the preacher in charge shall fail to make his report. Just now this subject of statistics is of more than usual importance It has never been fully attended to, and now we cannot fall back upon the reports of previous years. There should be a thorough canvassing of every work, and new and reliable statistics brought up, indicating the present state of the Church. The preachers will find under Questions 16, 17, 18, 20 and 21 of the business of the Annual Conference what items they are required to furnish. That under Question 17 is new—not heretofore included in our statistical reports under any regular question. Both the Presiding Elder and the Preacher in Charge are required to supply these statistics, that there may be no failure.

There are two collections, which, if not taken before, require the attention of the last Quarterly Meeting. The usual Conference collection for the superannuated preachers, and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers; and the Bishops' fund, are generally left till the end of the year. In the Louisiana Conference the preachers pay a certain per cent of their own receipts for the former purpose. The amount for this year is five per cent. This they are at liberty to raise by public collections, but failing to make the collection, it must be paid by themselves. The amounts needed for both objects can be easily raised, if the people are asked. The church will certainly take care of the worn out preachers, and the widows and orphans of those who have died in her service. We suppose the old disciplinary allowance goes by the board, in respect to them, as well as the effective ministry. Henceforth, we should give them an adequate support. It can be done if the preachers will present the subject to the people. Neither will the church fail on meeting the claims of the Bishops' Fund. Especially if the Bishops, by their presence and labors, put themselves in communion and sympathy with the churches, will their support be readily met, and regarded more in the light of a privilege than a burden.

The Fourth Round is the harvest time of the year. The Missionary interests are to be looked after, the circulation of periodicals and books inquired into. The old crop is to be taken off, and the ground left clear for the tillage of the coming year. As to discipline, and finance there should be a clear docket. Nothing that can be done now should be left over. Leave the work in a condition for a fair start to those that may come after.

And we knew of no better time than the Fourth Round to present the special interests of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Louisiana alone ought to take three times as many copies as are issued altogether. It is our aim to make the paper a religious power in the church, at once conservative of piety, and aggressive in helping on the extension of truth and righteousness. The reduced price brings it within the reach of all. Its weekly appearance in a family will be at least equal to a pastoral visit, and will supplement and aid the labors of the pulpit. The young converts, and those but recently brought into our communion should have the paper by all means. Will our brethren remember this interest at their Quarterly Meetings, and signalize the Fourth Round by a numerous and round addition to our subscription list?

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. J. J. Grace of the Alabama Conference, writes an interesting letter from the "Eastern shore"—the shore opposite Mobile, in the neighborhood of Point Clear. Bro. Grace was in the Confederate service from the beginning, was severely wounded at Franklin, in November, 1864, and was a prisoner from that time until June, 1865. At the close of the war, he "grounded the weapons of rebellion" and took charge of the church at Meridian, Miss. At the last Alabama Conference he was appointed to the Eastern shore and Fish River Mission. When that prince of Methodist stewards R. J. Baker died, the main stay of the preacher and the mission seemed to have given way. But hear the sequel, for this is but one case in hundreds; one friend came forward and said that as to the support of the preacher there need be no fear for he himself would take the responsibility. "The friends outside of the church" came forward; several proposed to board the preacher, and some to pay money; houses were thrown open and "we were invited to come in." One friend gave the preacher a suit of winter clothing, another, a fine suit for summer wear: board paid up to date, and one hundred and seventy-five dollars quarterage safe in hand, and he adds, "we have the prospect of a good deal more money: our poor are well cared for, and the Sabbath school is doing well." No doubt the memory of Bro. Baker has in great degree wrought this good work. But hear further: "We have made some repairs about our church, and purchased a fine organ." This is good news, it refreshes one like snow-water in midsummer. We do hope that a thousand itinerants may each find a well in Baca. It is a revival, and we don't wonder that the last part of the brother's letter is devoted to the praises of Point Clear; he thinks it an excellent watering place—for one's health.

Rev. Thos. W. Flowers, Ocean Springs Circuit, Ala. Conference, writes: "The Lord has graciously revived his work on this circuit during a three days meeting at Cloverhill church beginning the 28th July; the Lord saw fit to send his Spirit, and in a congregation of some sixty persons, there were nineteen added to the church. Eight adults and five children were baptized. Rev. W. W. Drake greatly aided with his labors."

Rev. H. P. Lewis of Mississippi Conference, says in a letter dated 14th inst: "We closed an interesting meeting at Mount Zion, Covington Co., on the 5th inst., which had been in progress ten days. Quite a number were added to the church, several happily converted, and many of the old members strengthened in the Lord. Our congregations were large throughout the meeting; at times the Lord was with us in great power. Bros. Whittington and J. English did effective service, in many able discourses

The few towns in England where the Methodists are numerous and strong enough to show hospitality for two or three weeks to the seven hundred or more ministers who attend the yearly meetings of the conference, are called "conference towns;" and a sort of rivalry is felt among them as to the arrangements they make for the comfort of their reverend fathers and brethren. The Leeds Methodists have won the palm this year for their provision as to the daily lunch, concerning the embellishment of which they seem to have taken pattern after the famous Sunday school of Mr. Beecher's church in Brooklyn. The London Methodist Record says:

"The lunch is not a scramble for a crust. A score of ladies delight to play the 'neat-handed Phyllis' for the occasion, and in the midst of the school room some marvelous architect, in conspiracy with an equally marvelous plumber, has erected a fountain on no small scale, whose water, constantly thrown up in spray, is scarcely less refreshing than the less ethereal comestibles which are placed on the tables."

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

FROM EAST ALABAMA.

MR. EDITOR: A severe attack of billious fever from which I am just recovering, causing a loss of two Quarterly Meeting appointments, enables me to fully appreciate the blessing of health. To reach, at last, the land where there is no sickness! Out of death, to rise into eternal life! To be prepared to meet the hour which forever absolves us from pain and sickness, and sorrow and death! Oh! how Heaven persuades us! And this is only the negative side. Those positive blessings, some of which we realise even here,—the prospect of them—suffices to make these momentary afflictions light. One blessing accrues to us from our afflictions; exhauses the pleasure we feel in relieving others; besides springing a fountain of affectionate gratitude in our hearts towards those who relieve us. And the luxury of gratitude and that of doing good; these are the chief of life. It is only as we live like Christ that we live at all—but of the terrible conditions and occasions of a life of love on earth, to rise into the life of unmingled blessedness! it really seems a boon too great for mortals. Home! Rest! Life! Love! The glory that shall be revealed! Faithful over the few things entrusted to us here, we shall have, ultimately and forever—"henceforth"—the privileges of a city whose beauty and grandeur are but faintly typed by the most delicate and the most gorgeous objects of the visible universe. A service then we will render in which there are no rivalries and no jealousies. But the theme is exhaustless.

The District Meeting for Orion Dist. was held two weeks ago, at Troy, Pike co. All the pastors in the District were present with two exceptions, and a layman from each work. About fifty delegates in all. Bishop McTyeire was with us, and presided with the dignity and ease characteristic of him everywhere. The various interests of the church were revived—reports made, verbally, of the state of the work throughout the District—the question of teaching the Freedmen discussed and decided in harmony with the action of the General Conference—and religious services, filled up three days of unusual profit and pleasure. The citizens of Troy entertained the Conference with abundant and cordial hospitality; and after the close of the Conference, the pastor of the church, Rev. A. Dowling, continued to preach, aided by local brethren, during the following week. Over thirty additions to the church, among the whites, and about the same number of colored, is the result. Among the former are some of the first citizens of the place—including whole households. Several very marked conversions among the adult citizens. Thus has God owned and blessed the effort made in His name. Since the District Conference, Bro. Shores has held an interesting and profitable meeting at Pine Level, resulting in many additions to the church. He had held a meeting a week before the District Conference, at Magnolia, six miles from Union Springs, which revived very greatly the church, and resulted in the conversion of several souls, and a number of additions to the church. I find that the action of the General Conference, effecting changes in our polity, meets with general, if not universal favor. Heartily do the members respond to calls made upon them; and incidental to the more efficient method of church communion and counsel as inaugurated by the monthly meetings, we have evidences of a growth—a development much more satisfactory than those successive layers or deposits which have formerly occurred through the instrumentality of the sensational system. There is promise of a more thorough and satisfactory plan of collected money for the support of the ministers. In many churches the assessment plan is being tried; and whenever stewards, for the love of God and His cause, will persist in pressing it, it is obliged to succeed. Another edition of Post Oak Circuit would be in place about now. The substantial good its circulation accomplished when it first appeared can hardly be estimated.

J. B. COTTRELL.

Orion, Aug. 16th, 1866.

Rev. R. A. Young, writing to the Memphis Christian Advocate under date of July 26, speaks of Bishop Soule, as follows:

Last Saturday morning, in company with the Rev. F. E. Pitts, I visited Bishop Soule. We found him very comfortable—seated in the midst of his books and newspapers. His hair was short, and his face well shaven. He wore blue slippers, white socks, black pantaloons, a light sack-coat, polished linen, with a deep, old-fashioned collar. Being in a cheerful and talkative mood, we asked him several questions, and obtained the following information:

"'They say I was born in the State of Maine; but I was a presiding elder before Maine was erected into a State. I was born in the State of Massachusetts—province or district of Maine—and am the only Methodist preacher alive who entered the ministry when I did.

"'On the 5th day of January, 1799, I left my father's house, to travel the Portland Circuit. In a few years I was made a presiding elder, and my first district embraced the whole of the territory included in the State of Maine was in the New England Conference.

"'In the year 1816, I went to Book Concern, then situated in Crosby street in New York. In 1820, I was elected to the Episcopal office; but not only declined ordination, I even resigned my station. The General Conference altered some measures that were wrong. They took the appointment of presiding elders out of the hands of the bishops, and ordered them to be made by the Conferences. So I resigned my election, sir!

"'My good friend, Bishop Waugh, now in heaven, as I believe, was warmly in favor of the measure, but he told me afterward, that my refusal of the Episcopal office caused the General Conference of 1820 to repeal it. At that Conference I was re-elected and received my ordination. John Summerfield was there. He was a devoted man of God; but not a member of the General Conference.

"'I have been a working man all my life; but the hardest work I have ever done, sir, is to sit still and do nothing.'"

The Bishop told us of the raid through which he passed during the two or three years of the war—the Federal soldiers plundered every thing on his premise, outside his house—how he stood guard with his gun to protect his daughters and grand daughters, when the ruffians were about to open the door of his house—ing, however, very little of the short commons to which he and family were frequently reduced during those terrible times. With characteristic candor, he spoke of several Federal officers who treated him with courtesy and kindness. One of them expressed great regret at the treatment he had experienced, and offered to indemnify him for property taken by the soldiers, but this he declined, as it was taken without his consent, and would not seem to sanction what he considered an unlawful proceeding. The Bishop, looking steadily beyond the grave, and beyond it, emphasized his expression of belief in the resurrection of the body, and the life of the world to come—two articles of the Creed which are especially dear to aged Christians. He joined with great fervor in the devotions with which, at his request, we closed our delightful and memorable interview.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—Several brethren in this city, in response to the proposition of Bishop Marvin in last week's issue, for each subscriber to the Advocate to contribute One Dollar to pay the debt on the Lebanon Church, in Claiborne Parish, La., under the pastoral charge of Rev. T. J. Upton, have handed in one dollar each. Will not others follow their example?

REV. PETER CARTWRIGHT, D. D., in a letter to the Central Christian Advocate, says: "I have spent about two years as a regular itinerant preacher, and have never lost a few months of that time by sickness, and have never received the annual sum or salary allowed but for a few years out of that sixty-two years. When I entered the traveling ranks in 1804 there were but seven annual conferences, now there are eighty-six.

The beautiful island of Barbadoes is about fourteen miles long by twelve wide, and contains one hundred thousand acres of land. It has 150,000 inhabitants, mostly whites, and is as thickly settled as China. Every acre of ground is cultivated; Mr. Trollope says there is not a vacant space for a pig. The land is monopolized by the whites and the negro is obliged to work—otherwise he is compelled by the municipal authorities to drag a ball and chain.

Rev. Jeremiah Day, D. D., President of Yale College, is 82 years of age. He has attended seventy Yale Commencements.

Report on Public Schools.

The very excellent report of the Committee on Teachers of the Public School Board in this city, we publish in order to bring before our readers the principles which are so ably announced in it. It has a permanent value. What constitutes a good teacher? This important question is here answered by those who have successfully devoted many years to the difficult and noble profession of Teacher.

BOARD OF SCHOOL DIRECTORS.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of School Directors was held last evening, Mr. Mount, the president of the board, in the chair.

Mr. Parham, from the committee on teachers, made an interesting report, which is subjoined;

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15, 1866.

Board of Directors Public Schools:

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Teachers beg leave to report they have had under serious consideration the duties specially assigned to them, viz: The matters relating to the corps of teachers. A great many applications for teachers' positions have been received, and many more will be sent in. The teacher's position is unquestionably the most important in our municipal government, and should be given to that individual only who possesses, in the highest degree, the qualifications necessary. The teacher's is a high and holy calling, and it behoves us, the guardians to whom has been intrusted the sacred charge of directing public education in this city, to exercise the greatest care in selecting teachers. Now, what are the qualifications of a good teacher?

First — Unblemished moral character. No one should fill the office of teacher against whom there is the slightest shade of suspicion that all is not right in this respect.

Second—The necessary literary qualifications; that is a thorough acquaintance with those branches, at least which he may be called on to teach. This is to be ascertained by examination, or in any other way that may be satisfactory. The teacher must be patient, forbearing, kind, gentle in manner, but firm. He must dispense equal justice to all; possess discrimination to note the varied dispositions and shades of character of his pupils. He must encourage the timid, restrain the bold and forward, and strive to acquire the love and esteem of all. He must have tact to govern and capacity to impart what he undertakes to teach. He must be impartial in the administrations of discipline. The teacher of girls, especially, must be refined in manner and womanly in deportment. We want no masculine women to teach our girls—no advocate of "woman's rights." We wish our daughters taught to be gentle, delicate and refined—not bold, forward, masculine. All these qualifications, all these elements, your committee believe, are to be found in a preeminent degree in our own beloved loud, and among those who have been raised and educated among us, whose interests are identified with ours. No matter of what religious creed, no matter of what nationality, no matter from what clime hailing. The late unhappy struggle in which our country was engaged produced the almost entire destruction of the noble public school system existing in our city. The very dregs of society floated to the surface, and recommended more for violent partisanship than for merit or zeal in the cause of education, obtained the direction of our schools.

Under such management during the war, the schools became worthless; people withdrew their children. It becomes us to exert ourselves to bring back our schools to the high position they occupied before the war desolated our land. Let us place in all vacancies those only who possess the qualifications previously enumerated, adding, of course, to these, that of unswerving loyalty to the United States government as administered by our noble chief magistrate, Andrew Johnson.

Your committee have not examined any applicants for situations, and respectfully ask further time. There are already, on a list kept by the superintendent, a large number of ladies and gentlemen who hold certificates of qualification. There are, in addition, many applicants who have acceptably filled positions formerly, and also many graduates of our high schools. These latter your committee beg leave specially to recommend as suitable to be placed in vacancies that may occur. Your committee would further suggest that in their opinion, elderly ladies, or at any rate, mothers are much better adapted to teaching and governing little children in the primary department, than young girls are, and recommend that in all cases of equal qualification in other respects, the preference be given to such.

Your committee do not know how many vacancies there will be, nor whether all the present incumbents desire to be continued. They therefore suggest the propriety of notifying all the present teachers to signify their wishes on this point by written application within the present month.

Your committee would also respectfully suggest the propriety of postponing for a while the reopening of the schools, in consideration of the prevailing sickness.

That the members of the board may be fully posted in regard to the present teachers, the superintendent, at the request of your committee, has caused to be printed and sent to each member a full list of the teachers at this time.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN G. PARHAM, Chairman.
THEO. F. THIENEMAN.
E. C. KELLY.
PAUL W. COLLINS, for GEO. CRONAN.

The State Elections.

Elections for Representatives in the next Congress, commencing in December, 1866, will take place in the following States, in the order named:

Sept.	4	Vermont	3	Nov.	6 Michigan 6
	10	Maine	5		Illinois 11
Oct.	8	Pennsylvania	24		Wisconsin 4
		Ohio	19		Minnesota 3
		Indiana	11		Missouri 7
		Iowa	6		Kansas 3
	25	W. Virginia	3		Nevada 1
Nov.	6	New York	31		Delaware 1
		Massachusetts	10		Maryland 5
		New Jersey	5
		Total			150

The full number of a House, with thirty-six States represented, is 243, of which about two thirds will be chosen within the next seventy days.

The same elections will decide the political complexion of Senators to be chosen by the new State Legislatures. The vacancies to be filled will be two in Vermont, caused by the death of Senators Collamer and Foot, whose places are now filled by Executive appointees; one in Pennsylvania to succeed Mr. Cowan; one in Indiana to succeed Mr. H. S. Lane; one in New York to succeed Mr. Harris; one in New Jersey to fill the vacancy by the un-eating of Mr. Stockton; one in Illinois in place of Mr. Trumbull; one in Wisconsin in place of Mr. Howe; one in Missouri in the place of Mr. Brown; two in Kansas in place of Jas. H. Lane, dead, and Pomeroy, whose time expires; one in Nevada to succeed Mr. Nye, and one in Maryland to succeed Mr. Cresswell. Of these fourteen Senators only Mr. Stockton is a Conservative or Democrat. All the others are of the Radical stripe, so that any change is likely to be an improvement.

These fall elections will decide substantially the political complexion of the next Congress; hence the great importance attached to them, and the extreme anxiety manifested that all the elements of support to the President's policy should be combined in an effort to effect a change in Congress. The Southern elections are not taken into the computation, because it is taken to be certain that no Southern representative will be wanting, when they are needed, to sustain the President, and have the opportunity afforded them. Indeed, the one great issue of the current elections is whether the congressional policy of keeping the Southern States without representation shall be indorsed at the polls, and continued; or whether, on the other hand, the Congress of the United States shall be composed of a constitutional representation of all the States, before providing finally to adjust the basis of the Government under which all are to live.

THE PRESIDENT'S TOUR.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—In reponse to the Mayor's address yesterday, the President, in a voice evidently affected by emotion, made remarks as follows:

To make a reply to what you have just given utterance to, under the circumstances, would be more than I could undertake. I am overwhelmed at the reception you have accorded to me. [Applause.] Language is inadequate to give expression to my feelings. I accepted your invitation, and now beg you will, in return, accept my most sincere and heartfelt thanks. Such an invitation from this great metropolis ought to encourage, and it does encourage me in the discharge of my duty. [Cheers.] It is peculiarly acceptable at this time, fresh as we are from the battle field, but there is still a greater battle before us. [Cheers.] In reference to what I have done it is before you, and it is for you to determine what my conduct has been. [Applause.] In conclusion, let silence speak for me what I ought to say, and what I intend to do. [Cheers.] In accepting these resolutions, accompanied by sentiments so gracefully uttered, I again return you my sincere thanks."

At the conclusion of the President's remarks, he was greeted with three times three cheers.

Loud calls were then made for Secretary Seward, who said: "I feel that I am at home; I thank you for the welcome you have extended to me. [Applause.] I feel more than that, for I have brought with me, to yours and my home, the President of the United States. [Cheers.] United by the arms of our heroes, by the virtue of our citizens and by the wisdom of our Chief Magistrate, if anything is wanting it is the certificate which we look for at the coming polls to bear us in our opinions that the United States should consist of thirty-five instead of twenty-five States. (Great applause.) In the city and State of New York the people should be faithfull first to their wives, then to their children, then to the city and State, and then to the country, to the duty I adhere, and if persons were to interfere with me in faithfully carrying out this principle, I could overbalance them and still be faithfull to the country." (Great cheering.)

The President, Secretary Seward, Admiral Farragut, and Secretary Wells, were quartered at Delmonico's while the remainder of the party were provided at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The banquet to the President last night was a splendid affair. Among those present were Gen. Grant, Admiral Farragut, and Secretary Seward and Wells, General Russean, the Mexican and Brazilian ministers, A. T. Stewart, J. J. Astor, and upwards of two hundred citizens.

The President spoke at great length, and said in the course of his remarks that the government went to war for the express purpose of preserving the union of these States, and that the government had established the great fact that the States have not the power or the right either by forcible or peaceful means, to separate from each other; but that Congress has practically assumed, and up to the present time carried out, the doctrine that the government has dissolved and these States were out of the Union.

We denied their right to secede even peaceably, and now we find when these States seek again to renew their practical relations with the Union by seeding representatives to Congress, there are men in that body who, in violation of our great charter of liberty, refuse to admit them. The question is, "Will we submit, will the American people submit to, this practical assertion of the doctrine they repudiated and overthrew by the war?" The issue is before you. If we submit to this we give the lie direct to every position taken by us since the war commenced. He asked in the spirit of Christian and sound philosophy, if we are prepared again to see one portion of the country arrayed against the other in deadly conflict, or shall we make every effort to unite the whole country in harmony and brotherly affection? Referring to the Philadelphia convention, he said the best evidence that can be shown of loyalty are the loyal professions and loyal actions, and when these gentlemen met in convention, from the North and South, they came forward and professed devotion to the Union and Constitution, and when the actions and professions correspond, who shall dare to doubt them?

Have we reached that point where all confidence is lost in men? If ye have, I tell you that your government is not as strong as a rope of sand. It has no weight, and will crumble to pieces. The adhesive power of this government is in the confidence which the people put in each other. He said the South had accepted the arbitrament of the sword and lost, and wanted to return again to the Union. He did not want to see them come back degraded and debased, but wanted them to come with all their manhood. They had again taken up the Constitution, and ask that its laws shall be enforced. What, then, was the cause of distrust or lack of confidence in them? There is no cause.

He also said Gen. Grant and himself had fought for the Union at one end of the line, and now they were fighting for it at the other, and though Gen. Grant was not in the field, he was doing equally good service. (Laughter and applause.) He said our three thousand million of debt would be paid only by the consolidation of our nationality and the popularity of the Union of the States. In conclusion he said the demonstration in New York confirmed him in his opinion that the people will take care of the government, and those who would attempt to check their purpose had better stand out of the way. For himself he had reached the summit of his ambition with one exception. He said there is but one thing wanting. Would you hear it? (Cries of "Yes!") At this particular crisis and period of our history, when the States are in peril, if I can be the instrument in the hands of the people of restoring this Union and making it complete, causing the government to recommence its glorious and mighty career of prosperity and greatness, I will be willing to exclaim as Simon did of old when he saw the babe born in the manger, "I have seen the glory of thy salvation, let thy servant depart in peace." (Enthusiastic applause.)

That being done, my ambition is completed. I ask nothing more, I would rather live in history, and live in the hearts and affections of my countrymen as having consummated this great end, than be President of the United States forever. Here the audience broke into an irrepressible burst of applause, and, on the call of Gen. Sanford, gave three cheers for Andrew Johnson, the restorer of the Union.

After a drive through Central Park, the President and Gen. Grant took a boat at Manhattanville for Albany.

FOREIGN.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Wednesday, Aug. 29.—Affairs in Turkey: The revolt in Candia is progressing. The Christian inhabitants have asserted their independence of the Turkish empire. Consequently it is announced in a state of siege.

Moscow, Wednesday, Aug. 29.—United States embassy has received complimentary addresses and invitations by telegraph from a large number of the principal cities and towns in the interior of Russia.

PARIS, Thursday evening, August 30.—The belief grows here that Maximilian will abdicate the crown of Mexico.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

We take the following report from the Picayune of Thursday:

COTTON.—In consequence of unfavorable accounts received by the cable, reporting a decline at Liverpool, the market was nearly at a stand-still to-day, the transactions having been restricted to 250 bales three brokers participating in the business. Factors were generally anxious to sell, but their demands were far above the limits of buyers, and consequently many of the latter withdrew, awaiting further developments. Prices exhibited no change, being, on the whole, within the range of our quotations.

With the remark that desirable lists are scarce on the market, we repeat as follows:

Low	— to —
Ordinary	25 to 27
Good Ordinary	29 to 31
Low Middling	33 to 34
Middling	35 to 36

SUGAR AND MOLASSES.—There have not been any receipts since yesterday. The market is dull, and unchanged. The principal sale to-day was a lot of 60 hhds. good fair Cuba on private terms—good fair is quoted at 12¼c. per lb. A small retail business is doing at 16½ to 17c. per lb for yellow clarified sugar 17½ to 17½c. for white do., 16 to 17½c. for refined Cuba, 14½c. for prime Porto Rico, 12½ to 13½c. for Nos. 14 and 15, 13½ to 16½c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17½c for Nos. 19 and 20. Cuba Molasses sold at retail at 55 per gallon, wholesale 52 to 53 per gallon.

TOBACCO.—There was quite a brisk inquiry to-day, resulting in sales of 322 hhds., of which a round lot of 50 hhds. Clarksville taken for Bremen. 200 hhds. low lugs, 22 hhds low leaf and 40 hhds. leaf taken for France. We hear that some poor lugs have sold at figures below our quotations, but the market remains steady and firm, and we continue to quote 4 to 5c. for low refuse, light and heavy, 5½ to 7c. for good do., 7 to 11c for common leaf, 12 to 15c. for fair do, 15 to 17c. for good do., 17 to 19c. for fine do, and 20 to 25c. for choice and selections.

FLOUR—Continues in good request. The stock on hand is small and the receipts continue light. There were sales to-day of 800 bbls., of which 100 superfine, at $9 50; 100 do., at $9 37½; 100 do., at $10; 50 single extra at $11 50; double extra at $12 50; 100 treble extra at $12 75; 100 do. at $13 25; and 135 at 13 37½ per bbl.

BACON—Sugar-cured Hams are in good supply. The principal sales to-day comprised 9 casks Shoulders at 13¾c. 10 do. at 19c., 7 casks clear Sides 23c., 12 tierces sugar-cured Hams, at 27c., 20 do. in lots at 27½c., and some not reported at 25c. per lb. Sugar-cured Hams are in good supply, but Shoulders, Sides and plain Hams are scarce. Shoulders are retailing at 19c., ribbed Sides 22c., clear do. 23½c., and sugar-cured Hams 26½ to 27c. per lb.

LARD—The market is very dull and sales are making only in a jobbing way at 22½c per lb for prime in tierces, and 24 to 24½c. in kegs.

PORK—The market appears to be some what unsettled. We have heard of a sale yesterday of 300 bbls mess at or about $35 to 35 12½ per bbl., while to-day 50 bbls. mess sold at $35 per bbl, It is retailing at $36 to 36 25 per bbl.

CORN—The market is dull and depressed, and prices are drooping. About 6000 sacks were sold to-day, of which 1095 White on private terms, 400 Yellow at 80c., and 100 White at 84c., 800 and 1350 do. at 85c. per bushel.

BRAN.—The market is quiet and steady with a good supply and fair demand. There were sales to-day at 400 and 500 sacks in lots at $1 10 per 100 lbs.

OATS—The market is irregular and unsettled. The reported sales comprise 1200 sacks prime, of which 260, 300 and 500 at 45c per bushel. We hear of considerable sales of inferior at 40 to 42c per bushel.

HAY.—A lot of 250 bales Prime Ohio River sold at $26 per ton. It has been selling in small or retail lots from store at $27 50 to $28 per ton. To-day $30 was asked.

INDIA BAGGING.—A lot of 75 bales sold to-day at 40c per yard. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 39c per yard in rolls, 41c in bales, and 42c for blanket.

GUNNY BAGS — There were no transactions to-day, but they have been selling readily at 30c a piece.

SALT—Is selling from store at $2 to $2 15 per sack for Coarse, and $2 05 to $2 20 for Fine.

BALE ROPE—Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 19c per lb.

COFFEE—There is a fair demand for the country, which dealers are supplying at 27 to 28½c per lb currency for fair to good fair Rio.

WOOL—Is selling at 30 to 35c per lb for washed, 12 to 15c, for burry 18 to 25c for native, to merino, and 25 to 27c. for ¾ to full merino.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $2 00 to $2 50 per bbl. Onions at $4 00 to $5 00. Apples, $5 to $6, and Eggs $34 to $36 per hhn. Cabbages 30c. Chickens, $12 per dozen. Geese, $8 to $10. Turkeys $30.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—Choice Butter is scant and in demand. Western is plenty and dull. Northern Butter is selling at 45 to 46c., Western 25 to 35c. Cheese is in good supply and is selling at 17 to 18c per lb for Western and Northern.

HOPS.—The stock on hand is light, but there is very little demand. Belgian Hops are held at 80 to 83c. per lb, American 75c per lb.

HIDES—There are not many in the market; the demand is good; prices are still looking up, and Green Hides are selling at 9½ to 10c., Kip Skins, 10c. and Dry Hides 12 to 13c. per lb.

LARD OIL—We have heard of large sales at $75 to $1 80 per gallon. It is retailing at $1 85 to $1 90 per gallon.

LEATHER—Texas rough is in good demand, and sells at 18 to 23c. per lb. There is very little in the market.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY,
Wednesday evening, August, 29, 1866.

Western Beef, choice per lb net	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$10 to 15
Hogs per lb gross	12 to 14
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $1 25
Choice Sheep, per head	$6 to $8
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $80
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12 to $25
Yearlings, per head	$7 to $12
Calves per head	$4 50 to $8

MONETARY.

Statement of New Orleans Gold Market week ending Friday Aug. 31st, 1866.

FRIDAY, AUG: 24TH, 1866,
Gold, 145; 146.

SATURDAY, AUG. 25TH.
Gold, 144; 145.

MONDAY, AUG. 27TH.
Gold, 144; 145.

TUESDAY, AUG. 28TH:
Gold, 145; 146.

WEDNESDAY, AUG: 29TH.
Gold, 145; 146.

THURSDAY, AUG. 30TH.
Gold, 145; 146.

Reported by
WM. S. MOUNT, Manager.

The City Bank of New Orleans,
15 Commercial Place, New Orleans.

OBITUARIES.

GONE TO REST.

Another good man: well beloved, a man of real worth, has fallen from the ranks of the godly useful laymen of our beloved Zion. JAMES BROWN, Esq., of Madison Co., Miss., is with us no more. His departure took us by surprise. It did not, thanks to Eternal Love, take him unawares. He had been many years living with a view to the precious rest of the people of God. A man of strong mind; clear understanding; great practicalness in the management of his affairs; he carried all his good qualities into the cares and duties imposed by virtue of his christian obligations, to the church, along the walks of the man of prayer and faith. He had accumulated treasures on earth; but he did not allow them to eclipse the light from above; or, divert him from the delightful contemplation of the invisible things of Christ, laid up for all who are kept by faith, unto eternal life. He was fixed and uniform. Never given to seasons of passionate piety; and then to prolonged seasons of spiritual chills. Principle—religious principle, governed him. God's people were his people. He loved those who loved His worship—walked in fellowship, and made friendship with the persons he deemed the friends of Christ and the church.

There was a broad catholicity about his heart, which made him the good citizen, the generous neighbour, the trusty patriot; the reliable man, the genial and hospitable gentleman; emphatically so.

To have seen him at his own table and fireside; to have seen him the loved and honored husband, and father, in the sanctuary of the affections, was to have been blest. Therein were beautiful expositions of the character of the man. No one can love the unlovely. They may pity, sympathize, endure, forbear; but the man, the father, the husband wanting in amiability, gentleness, and a loving heart: such an one soon becomes odious, repulsive, and cover it as we may for sake of the public eye—hated, at heart. The home tells.

The trials and cares of a growing family, a large ministerial interest to annoy; the common ills that flesh is heir to—these disclose the inner, and illustrate the real man. Tried by any and all these tests, our esteemed friend grew more noble, and was more and more honored, esteemed—loved. In his family he has left the grateful fragrance of a lofty, living, beneficent, faithful husband and father, friend.

His health failed gradually. It had been bad for months. He went to Virginia for restoration. But he was too feeble to proceed beyond Christiansburg.

There he rapidly failed and finally took leave of his faithful friend and devoted wife—of the church—of all the earthly things and cheerfully resigned himself to death.

This sad event occurred on the 3rd day of July. One near him, who daily ministered to his suffering frame as no other one could, says of those last hours: "He spoke often of his coming departure; even when his symptoms seemed anything but alarming. He was perfectly resigned to the will of God. He conversed calmly and resignedly of his death every day, and he was happy and peaceful in his expiring moments."

"There is a world above,
Where parting is unknown;
A long eternity of love,
Form'd for the good above:
And faith beholds the dying here,
Translated to that glorious sphere."

May his dear family realize an unbroken reunion with him in that world above. I expect to meet him there. CYPRESS.

Vicksburg, August, 1866.

BOOKS! BOOKS!

The Agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, at 112 Camp street, New Orleans, has just received from the steamships George Cromwell and Merrimac, and by the steamboats Mepham and Olive Branch, ample supplies of Sunday School requisites: Catechisms, Spellers, Questions, Dictionaries, Primers, Reward Tickets, etc., etc. Also, Clarke's and Benson's Commentaries, and Hymn Books in sheep and roan.

Address: R. J. HARP, Agent,
sep1ft 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

S. ANDERSON, PHOTOGRAPHER
And PHOTOGRAPHIC STOCK-DEALER,
61 Camp street, New Orleans.

Cartes de Visite,
Hallotypes, Ambrotypes,
Pictures on Porcelain,
And every description of Pictures known to the Art.

All kinds of Photographic Materials at the lowest price for cash. sep1 1y

H. P. ETHELL, NAT. H. THOMAS,
New Orleans. Late of Alabama.
E. THELL & THOMAS,
FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
For sale of Bagging, Rope and Twine, Pork, Lard, Beef, Flour, Bran, Hay and Western Produce generally.
Sole Agents for the celebrated brand, "Grey Jacket" Flour.
No. 105 Poydras street, New Orleans.
Will give personal attention to the purchase of Merchandize and Groceries for the country. Cash orders solicited. Instructions strictly obeyed. sep1 6m

J. W. BURRIDGE, THOS. H. MILLER
J. W. BURRIDGE & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants,
No. 190 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep1 6m

STONEWALL INSTITUTE.

The President of this Institution is gratified to announce to friends and patrons that the regular scholastic year will open on the
FIRST MONDAY OF OCTOBER NEXT,
under the following Corps of Teachers:
D. C. H. CONNERLY, M. A., PRINCIPAL AND TEACHER OF ANCIENT LANGUAGES.
G. M. CALLEN, M. A., TEACHER OF MATHEMATICS.
R. V. WEISSINGER, M. A., ASSISTANT IN ANCIENT LANGUAGES AND FRENCH LITERATURE.
JNO. D. LALAND, M. A., ASSISTANT IN MATHEMATICS AND MODERN LANGUAGES.

This school for boys and young men is located in the high and healthy hills of Perry County, Ala., thirteen miles North of Selma, and five miles North of Summerfield; and can be reached in a three hours' drive from Selma. Its locality is healthy almost beyond comparison. It is the property of no sect or set of men, and is not controlled by Trustees. It is the property solely of the Principal, who alone is responsible to the patrons of the Institute, for its management and discipline.

The Principal has engaged these three gentlemen of energy to join him in giving to the rising generation rare opportunities for acquiring an education. With the experience of fifteen years in controlling boys, and with the devotion and energy which will be given to the interest of our pupils, we think it proper to say that every right-minded man, who sends us a good boy, shall be satisfied with the results.

We do not intend to exhort men to send to us: but we do intend to make it the true interest of our friends to commit their sons to our charge.

Our experience during the past year enables us to say that here we have power to control, and subject to study, our pupils, far greater than we ever had in any village.

From October to July, we shall carefully superintend the morals, manners, and intellectual training of our students.

No boy will be received whose moral character is not satisfactory; nor do we purpose going beyond eighteen pupils to the teacher, thus giving great advantages to our classes. For Board, including washing, and tuition by night and by day, from October to July, no matter what the age of the boy is, and no matter what he studies, our charge is Three Hundred and Sixty Dollars; one hundred and eighty paid on entering and the remainder Feb. 15th, 1867.

Each student must furnish two blankets, two sheets, two pillow cases, and his own towel and lights.

Besides, every one must bring money, from ten to twenty dollars to pay for his books and stationery. These terms must be literally complied with.

If a student is dismissed for any cause, or if he has to retire, and does so with our approval, his money will be refunded, but if he leaves without this approval, or runs away, his money will not be refunded; nor will any deduction be made for absence unless occasioned by a protracted sickness of one month's duration.

The patrons of this school embrace many of the most distinguished men of Central Alabama. Their sons can furnish the best evidence and strongest assurances that all our plans and management look to the progress of the pupil; and that around the entire establishment we constantly throw an air of home and contentment.

Parties wishing to commit their sons and wards to a school all of whose movements are systematically controlled to advance the real mental training of inmates, and whose daily and weekly schedule, even on Saturdays and Sundays, is moved by the clock, are cordially invited to address the undersigned by letter.

D. C. H. CONNERLY,
Stonewall Institute, near Sommerfield, Ala.

A GOOD COOKING STOVE

is one of the most necessary and desirable articles of household economy, and if properly managed, will promote the health, comfort, and happiness of every member of the family.

Time, money, and extreme vexation, by delays of your daily meals, may be saved by using the

CHARTER OAK COOKING STOVE.

Over 10,000 of these celebrated cooking stoves are in daily use throughout the city of New Orleans. Every one of them has been sold under a full guarantee, and we offer them as a reference wherever found.

The Improved Charter Oak Stove with Extension Top

has but one damper, and is so simple in its construction that a child can manage it. The ovens are larger, bake more uniform, and the stove heavier than any cooking stove of corresponding size ever made.

The Hot Water Reservoir Boiler furnishes a constant supply of hot water at all hours of the day, and for hours after the fire has been extinguished, without additional cost for fuel, a practical illustration of the economy in using the Charter Oak.

The Reflector Gridiron, original with the Charter Oak, and used on no other stove—the most perfect manner to broil meats and poultry, whereby the offensive odors arising from meats during the process of broiling are carried up the pipe, and juices of the meats preserved.

The Hot Closet, in which meats and pastry are kept warm for hours when there has been a delay at meals, besides enabling the cook to furnish the greatest variety of dishes and desserts, and place them hot upon the table.

The Charter Oak Stove will do one-third more baking in a given time, and use 25 per cent less wood than any other stove now made.

Importers and Dealers in Hardware, Nails, Castings, Guns, Carpenters and Coopers' Edge Tools, etc.

RICE BROS. & CO., Sole Agents,
93 and 95 Camp street, near Poydras, and 565 Magazine street, near Magazine Market
sep1 1y

E. GIQUEL,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in
FOREIGN, FANCY AND STAPLE
DRY GOODS.
Also, a large and varied supply of
HOUSEKEEPING and
PLANTATION GOODS,
Constantly on hand, at
120 Canal Street,
sep1 1y NEW ORLEANS.

D. H. HOLMES,
Direct Importation of
FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,
AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
No. 155 Canal Street,
sep1 6m NEW ORLEANS.

LOEB, SIMON & CO.,
Importers and Jobbers of
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,
85 Canal Street,
sep1 3m NEW ORLEANS.

STEWART, GALBREATH & FIZER
Commission Merchants & Cotton Factors,
46 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
Andrew Stewart, New Orleans.
Wm. R. Galbreath, } Memphis.
Wm. Stewart, }
John C. Fizer, }
sep1 3m

SPEED, SUMMERS & CO.,
46 Carondelet street, New Orleans,
COTTON AND TOBACCO FACTORS,
General Commission Merchants,
And COMMERCIAL AGENTS. aug25 1y

J. H. CARTER,
Wholesale Grocer,
Nos. 8 and 10 Tchoupitoulas Street,
And 8 and 10 New Levee,
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

NEW DISCIPLINES.

The Agent at the Depository has just received a large supply—enough to fill all orders.

PRICE: SIXTY CENTS.

Thirty per cent. off to wholesale dealers and to Preachers who buy to sell again.

Address
REV. R. J. HARP, Agent,
No. 112 Camp street, Lock Box 814,
aug18tf New Orleans.

INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANO.

A lady whose high attainments as a composer and as a performer on and successful teacher of the Piano, can be well attested, proposes to give lessons to a few pupils in the city, commencing in September or October.

References: Rev J C Keener, D D; Rev J B Walker, D D; Rev L Parker.

For particulars address: "Pianist," Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

SOUTH-WESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Where is it located? Its Depository and Bible-House is at its own building, No. 163 Camp street, New Orleans.

When was it established? 1850.

Who is its General Agent to whom correspondence on its business should be addressed? Rev. James Beattie.

Where is the Society's field of labor? All of Louisiana, and all of Mississippi, south of the 33rd parallel of North latitude.

What is the object of the Society? To explore and supply (gratuitously where needed) the destitution of the Holy Scriptures.

What are the resources and whence the income of the Society? From the annual contributions of its members. Collections of Churches within its field, collections at public meetings and anniversaries. Appropriations of the surplus funds of its auxiliaries, the donations of generous individuals, testamentary bequests, and the annual donation in Books of the American Bible Society.

What is the Society's method of work? By cultivating its own local work in the city and district of New Orleans: then through Auxiliary Societies established or to be established in every Parish and County in the field, and the employment by them of such means as will accomplish the object of the Society.

What are the terms of membership?

The payment of $30 at one time constitutes a life member.

The payment of $150 at once time, constitutes a life Director.

The payment of $1000 at one time, constitutes a life Patron.

The payment of $3 annually, constitutes a member.

The taking up of a collection by a church constitutes the Pastor an honorary member.

Having thus briefly stated the main features of the Society's work, income and expenditure, the Board of Directors for the current year confidently ask the aid of all lovers of the Bible, whether professors of religion or not: to strengthen the hands of the S. W. B. S: by founding or reviving Auxiliaries, by donating and urging donations, by exploring and reporting the destitution of the Scriptures, by commencing or renewing memberships of all grades and by establishing connections with the Society as the Lord has prospered them: according to that Scripture which says "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal," but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal. To the ministers and professing Christians of every Orthodox Protestant Church, the Board of Directors, representing in its body all such within our bounds, appeals with confidence to aid them by judicious effort, a prompt performance of duty and a prayerful communion of the Society to the blessing of Almighty God, for except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it, except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain.

Our last thought is the heart-cry of the Great Reformation. "No tarbuilding of the Word: no tampering with the text: no man's note or comment: God's Word: Christ's Word: Holy Spirit's Word: Free: Free: Free! a25 1y

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,
GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught

TERMS:
Tuition fees per term, ... $40 00
Contingent fee, ... 5 00
Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month
aug4ft W M WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,
For the Autumn of 1866, and
FLORAL GUIDE,
Is now Published. It contains Descriptions of the Best Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lillies, etc., With full descriptions, and plain and full directions for Planting, Culture, Prices, etc. Illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the Single and Double Tulip and Soleil. My importation from the best Bulb Growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country. This Catalogue and Guide is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost. Postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my Catalogue. Address
aug. 25. JAMES VICK Rochester, N. Y.

H M WRIGHT O W ALLEN J HINDLESTON
(1st August, 1866)
WRIGHT, ALLEN & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
169 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug25 1y

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c.
Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.
Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

THOS. H. ALLEN, JAMES M. ALLEN } New
Memphis, Tenn. PERRY NUGENT, } Orleans
T. H. & J. M. ALLEN,
(Successors to ROBSON & ALLEN),
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
102 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 1y

B. S. HARPER. N. J. THAXTON.
B. S. HARPER & CO.,
Cotton and Tobacco Factors,
AND GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 81 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

Gen. James Longstreet. W M Owen. E Owen
LONGSTREET, OWEN & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
37 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug28 3m

PEET, SIMMS, & CO.,
Importers and Wholesale Dealers in
DRY GOODS,
Nos. 23 & 25 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS
H. PEET—A. WILLIAMSON
P. SIMMS—J. BOWLES } aug25 1y

F P FOLGER, L FOLGER, W H THOMAS
FOLGER & CO.,
Dealers in
Hardware, Iron, & Ship Chandlery,
37 & 39 MAGAZINE STREET NEW ORLEANS.
(Opposite the St James Hotel)
Nails and Castings; Hoop, Sheet and Bar Iron, Shovels an Spades; Sheet Copper and Zinc; Plows, Axes and Hoes; Lead Pipe and Sheet Lead; India Rubber Belting, Hose and Packing; Circular, Mulay Cross Cut Saws, aug18 1y

[Established in 1828.]
EVANS' FASHIONABLE RETAIL
Hat Emporium,
No 62 CAMP STREET,
Next door to the Picayune Office, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of the Latest Styles by every steamer, at Moderate Prices. a18 6m

SAM'L. BARRETT. CHS. LE SASSIER.
BARRETT & LESASSIER,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
CORNER COMMON AND BARONNE STREETS,
Entrance, 43 Baronne street.
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

JOHN A. STEVENSON. A. H. MAY
STEVENSON & MAY,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 40 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 6m

P. H. FOLEY,
Of the Firm of FOLEY, AVERY & Co.
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant
No. 32 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug 18 6m

HARLOW J. PHELPS, S. E. BUCKNER,
Of New Orleans. Of Kentucky.
HARLOW J. PHELPS & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 142 Gravier Street, New Orleans.
aug18 6m

W. C. TOMPKINS. R. R. ALSBROOK.
WM. C. TOMPKINS & CO.,
WHOLESALE DRY GOODS,
No. 2 Magazine st., corner Canal, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of goods constantly on hand for the country trade. a18 6m

A. HENDERSON PEALE & CO.,
Successors to Thos. Henderson & Peale,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
No. 190 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 6m

J. W. CARROLL. JOS. HOY. CHAS. HARDENBERGH
CARROLL, HOY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No. 36 Perdido Street, New Orleans,
aug18 1y

C. L. WALMSLEY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 31 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

JOHN G. PARHAM, BEVERLY BLUNT,
Of New Orleans. Of Hinds Co., Miss.
PARHAM & BLUNT,
COTTON FACTORS,
Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents,
No 26 Carondelet at (First Floor), New Orleans
aug11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY & CO.,
General Commission Merchants and
COTTON F

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

"I Cannot, Sir."

A young man—we will call him Honest Frank—who loved truth, was a clerk in the office of some rich merchants. One day a letter came recalling an order for goods which had been received the day before.—One of the morchants handed it to Honest Frank, and, with a perauasive smile, said,—"Frank, reply to this note. Say, 'The goods were shipped before the receipt of the letter countermanding the order.'"

Frank looked into his employer's face with a sad bnt firm glance, and replied, "I cannot, sir."

"Why not, sir?" asked the merchant, angrily.

"Because the goods are now in the yard, and it wonld be a lie, sir."

"I hope yon will always be so particular," replied the merchant, turning npon his heel, and going away.

Honest Frank did a bold as well as right thing. What do yon suppose happened to him? Lost his place? No: qnite different. The merchant was too shrewd to turn away one who wonldn't write a lying letter. He knew the valne of such a yonthl and instead of turning him away, made him his confidential clerk.—S. S. Advocate.

Little Long-Tongue.

Little Long-tongne is a great story-teller. We do not mean to say that he writes stories for the newspapers, bnt that he tells stories. To be plain, little Long-tongue is in the habit of telling lies!

The other day, he broke a glass tnmbler. He put the pieces together again, and set it where it had been. Afterward, when his mother wished to nse it, it fell apart in her hands. She asked him who broke it, and he said he did not know.

Just think of that? But that is not all. One day he and his little sister were playing in the garden. He got angry at her, and strnck her, so that she went into the house crying. His mother asked him what had taken place, and he said he thought a bee had stung her.

He knew very well that it was not so; bnt he thonght his mother might pnnish him, and so he told a lie to hide what he had done.—Thns he committed a second sin to cover the first.

In this way, little Long-tongne tells lies every day. Just think of it!

I wonder whether he knows that Ananias and Sapphira were snddenly struck dead for telling lies?

Little Long-tongne ongbt to read what God says abont liars: "All liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone."

We hope he will qnit this ugly and sinful habit, and learn always to speak the truth.

Beware of the Fowler.

"Whither so fast?" said a dove to a bird flying swiftly onward. "Turn, I pray yon, and rest on this bough; yonr eyes are dnll, your plumage is rnffled, and yonr wings, I see, are weary."

"I dare not!" answered the flnttering bird; "I go to my mate and my young ones, to my friends and my neighbors, to warn them and save them from what I have escaped."

"What will you warn them against? What have yon escaped?" asked the dove.

"I will warn them from the net of the fowler; for that have I bnt now escaped," said the trembling bird.

"Oh, terrible! And what was it like?" asked the dove.

"It was spread among flowers, and fair grain lay on it; and I thonght it was a place, and that I might revel in abnndance; and I flew toward it, and should have entered, had not a kite hovering above alarmed me. I was angry with the kite, and bitterly I reproached him in my heart; bnt before I had tnrned my wing, I saw the net drawn np and all within it made captive."

"Bnt now yon are safe, the danger is far away; why not rest by my side?"

"I am safe, bnt my mate and my yonng ones, my friends and my neighbors, they must be warned; I hasten to tell them."

"I see not why so mnch speed is needful. I see not why yon shonld tremble now that the danger is past; why yonr heart shonld still beat fast, and yonr foot can not rest until yon have told yonr story."

"Ah, poor dove!" cried the bird; "it is plain yon have never felt what I feel.—You may indeed have been near the net; bnt you did not know it, nor fear it. Remember me, and beware!"

"Oh! I am not going near danger, believe me," said the dove innocently.

"Alas! we know not when that is near, nor where the net is not spread. The toils are so artful, the meshes so hidden, you wonld never suspect your danger. Keep, I pray yon, to the dovecote and the food there provided, and let not your eye rove after strange food, even if it is good, and lies among flowers!"

The dove looked after the bird as he hastened away; and thonght he had heard his words, and seen his earnestness, he wondered at his determined flight. But the bird, as he sped onward, had the terrible net in his eye and on his heart, and rested not until he had gained his home, and charged his mate and his young ones, his friends and his neighbors, to beware of the fowler.

National Union Convention.

ITS ORIGIN AND HISTORY BRIEFLY REVIEWED.

We make the following extracts from a highly interesting limning of the general spirit which pervaded the Philadelphia Convention, and brief review of history as published in a Philadelphia letter to the New York Times:

THE ORIGIN OF THE CONVENTION

the nation owes primarily to Mr. Thaddens Stevens and his colaborers in their attempts to destroy the Republican party. Before Congress met, in December last, it had become apparent tnat the immense majority of the party in both Houses had fallen under the control of the malignants, and as the session passed on, these malignants led the Honses so madly on the road to ruin, that not only the existence of the party, but the safety of the nation became involved. A few gentlemen—Doolittle, Cowan, and Norton in the Senate, Raymond, with occasional help from Delano and others, in the House, attempted, bnt in vain, to stop the mad career. The President stood firmly by the prinoiples on whioh he was elected, and with him, as a rallying point, the Spartan band determined to appeal from Congress to the people. Outside of Congress resident in Washiugton, were a few able zealons Republicans, chief among whom was Gov. Randall, now Postmaster General, who shared the conviotions of these true meu in the Houses, and they, as a preliminary step, early in the sessiou, formed an organization known as the National Union Club. Later, and when the foundations of the stncture had been laid broader and deeper, another organization in Washington, whose members were of Democratio antecedents and tendenoies, was merged into the former. From the National Union Clnb came the first call for the Conveution, and from the nnited organizations came the snpplemental call signed by Randall, Blair and Campbell.

Thns the Convention originated within the Republican party, but with a purpose to serve national not partisan ends. Seeing this, the partriotic men of the Democratic party came promptly to the support of the movement, both sides for the time laying aside party nomenclatnre and party machinery to join in the great work of restoration. It was a doubtfnl experiment, however, to attempt to bring together, in harmouious action, elements so different, and the deep anxiety experienced by those embarked in the movement during the interval between the publication of the call and the meeting of the Convention, oan only be fully told by themselves. At first the respouse from the Southern Press was not auspioions, and as this danger faded away a new and more formidable one appeared in the North in the attempt of the Copperhead malignants to turn the movement to their advantage, and this clond rested npon the Convention nutil the hour of assembling. The dawn of day, however, was appareut from the moment the Southern delegates began to arrive. With these behind them the Vallandighams conld work evil, and it conld be seen from the start that the South had come to co-operate with men in the North, whether Democrats or Republicans, whose fealty to the Federal Government was without blemish, When Orr, and Perry, and Yerger and Flournoy, and Graham had been three bonrs in Philadelphia the nigbt was gone, and we were in the full day-break of political regeneration.

There were, however, other than Southern influences that aided to this auspicious resnlt that deserve credit, and chiefly Mr. Fernando Wood. That gentleman, with the political acumen whioh is his distingnishiug trait, took in the whole sitnation at a glance, and on Monday withdrew, leaving nothing for Vallandingham to do but to follow his example. How Wood subsequently labored with that Jeremy Diddler of American politics, yon have been fully informed, as well as how ruefully the Ohio demagogue at last accepted the situation.

Not by adroit management so much as by a settled determination for harmony npon the part of the vast body of the delegates, by the time the Convention met on Thursday morning all was plain sailing before it. It was apparent that there would be entire unanimity, and that the South was an element of surpassing strength rather than of weakness. The spirit that animated the delegates was throughout most admirable, but it was in the deliberations upon the resolutions that it can be best seen. Bear in miud the central fact that the committee was formed of two members of every State and Territory of the United States, and group around it the other fact that these men are of every shade of political views, that among them were men who had crossed swords in civil war, and others who had stood high during the contest in the legislative councils of the ligitimate and the rebel Governments, and it would appear that agreement was impossible. But they did agree, and you have already had the glorions resnlt. The session of the committee was protracted only for the reason that the address was longthy and was duly and deliboratoly considered.

The addressed, which, as well as the resolntions, was written by Mr. Raymond, met in the Coumittee the same hearty reception it encountered in the Convention. Some few verbal changes were suggested and made with a view of rasping one or two rough edges, but, as a whole, it came into the Convention in its original state. Here and there was a phraso not necessary to the general tone of the papor that grated somewhat, and these were expnnged; but tbeso were all the changes the address, ringing as it does throughout with the unquestioned patriotism and nationality of its anthor, met at once the hearty assent of the Southern members. Can I state any fact more conclusive than this? Decidedly not, but there is cumulative evidence.

Late last night the nature of the resolntions was well known to the insiders, and big, good-natured, energetic Browning, of Illinois, meeting Parsons, of Alabama, in the corridor, patted him affectionately on the back, and said, "We must have a unanimous vote off hand for them to morrow." "Why, certainly," answered Parsons, "there is nothiug in them anybody can object to."

Gov. Perry, of South Carolina, moved the adoption of the address.

Gov. Orr, from the same regenerated and disenthralled State, signified his hearty acquiesceuce in both resolution and address.

Alexander H. Stephens, of Georgia, lying sick upon his bed, when informed of the purport of both, expressed his great satisfaction.

Other representative men, such as Randell Hunt of Louisiana, Flournoy, of Virginia, Yerger of Mississippi, and others, apart from the formal and solemu indorsement by the vote in the Conveution, manifested an acquiescence that was the reverse of sullen or enforced. Curious "rebels."

Prisoners of War North and South.

A few days before the adjournment of Congress, the House of Representatives passed a resolution calling upon the Secretary of War to furnisb au official statement of the number of prisoners held on either side duriug the late war, together with the number of those who died in prison. The object of the House in this call, undoubtedly, was to obtain additional cause to clamor about the "barbarity" and "inhuman brutality" of the Southern people and their officials during the days of the Confederacy—never doubting tbat tbe figures would turn ont entirely to their satisfaction. The changes had been rung so persistently upon this point in their newspapers, by their stump, speakers, and by hundreds of books, filled with disgusting pictures, that the whole North believed the infamous slanders, and there were not a few in the South who had been led to suspect that some of the officers who bad charge of Federal prisoners, were guilty of criminal negligence in attending to thrir comfort and health. The response of the Secretary of War establishes the malicious meudacity of these charges.

In his reply he states the number of Union prisoners held in the Southb during the war at 269,940. The number of deaths occurring amoug these was 22,578. The number of "Rebel prisoners" held at the North is stated at 200,000, of whom 26,436 died iu prison.

This is the official statement of Secretary Stanton, a man filled with venom against the South, and if there is any reason to suspect falsebood in his figures, it would naturally lean in favor of the North.

This ought to put an end to the outrageous slanders of the Northern press and politicians, and make them blush for shame at the "brutality" of their own prison mangers. With all of their unbounded appliances to secure the health and comfort of their prisoners, with all of their boasted humanity and Christian civilization, two "Rebel prisoners" out of every fifteen died in their "pens," while of Northern prisoners in "Southern pens," only two died in every twenty-four.

Had the South been possessed of the same means to preserve the health of their prisoners, the difference between these figures would have been still greater and more startling.

The day will come, and that speedily, when the North will be ashamed to think of the hired perjury which hunted poor Wirz to death, and of the vigorous efforts made by Congressional Committees to secure the same to convict Jefferson Davis of complicity in the assassination of Lincoln, in order that he, too, might be sacrificed to the grim Molock of sectional hatred.

The Northern Radical papers studiously avoid the publication of these figures, but they will be seen of all the world sooner or later.—Houston Telegraph.

The Bishop of London lately consecrated the Church of St. Michael, Shoreditch, when the clergy attended in stoles of various colors, and the Bishop directed them to "remove those ribands."

The Crab Family.

As a general thing, we expect members of the same family to be very kind and obliging toward each other, and this is true of the lower orders of animals also. Even fierce wolves and tigers seldom eat up their own kindred, and nearly all animals make war on those of another name besides their own.

The crab family, however, are very quarrelsome among themselves. If they get provoked at some little thing, may be nothing more than who shall have a new nest of fish eggs, or a nice fat sea-worm, then such behavior as you will see among them. They give a warning click of their nippers, and then the biggest one seizes a claw or leg of a smaller one, and gives it such a pinch. Presently the claw cracks off like a bit of china-ware, the sufferer scrambles off as best he can, and the other retires from the field to eat up his choice morsel at his leisure. Now, the poor little crawfish who has lost his claw retires to some secluded cleft in the rocks, or hides, under the edge of some friendly stone, and waits till his fortunes mend. In a few days a little lump begins to grow where the lost member was, and by degrees it takes shape, and turns out a clever little claw, as ready to serve its owner as ever the old one was. It only requires three weeks for this marvellous work to be wrought. It is hardly ever quite as large as the other, which may account for crab and lobster claws being often unequal in size. Such contests are quite every day affairs among them.

A great many curious things go on down deep in the dark sea caverns, which we never think of as we watch its rolling waves. Yet not the smallest insect, or the tiniest shell, but our kind Father watches over it and provides for its wants. —Presbyterian.

How to Lend to the Lord.

A poor man lived near Deacon Murray and occasionally called at his house for a supply of milk. One morniug he came when the family were at breakfast. Mrs Murray rose to wait upon him; but the deacon said to her, "Wait till after breakfast. She did so, and meantime the deacon made some inquiries of the man about his family and circumstances. After family worship, the deacon invited him to go out to the barn with him. When they got into the yard, the deacon, pointing to one of the cows, exclaimed, "There, take that cow and drive her home!"

The man thanked him heartily for the cow, and started for home; but the deacon was observed to stand in the attitude of deep thought, until the man had gone some rods. He then looked up and called out, "Hoy! bring that cow back!" The man looked around, and the deacon added, "Let that cow come back, and you come back too." He did so, and when he came back into the yard again the deacon said, "There, now, take your pick out of the cows; I ain't agoing to lend to the Lord the poorest cow I've got!"

A Hint to Touchy People.

"I learned a good lessou when I was a little girl," says a lady. "One frosty morning I was looking out of the window into my father's farm-yard, where stood many cows, oxen, and horses, waiting to drink. The cattle all stood very still and meek, till one of the cows, in attempting to turn round, happened to hit her next door neighbor, whereupon the neighbor kicked and hit another. In five minutes the whole herd were kicking each other with great fury. My mother laughed, and said:

"See what comes of kicking when you are hit."

"Just so, I have seen one cross word set a whole family by the ears, on a frosty morning. Afterwards, if my brothers or myself were a little irritable, she would say:

"Take care, my children; remember how the figbt in the farm-yard began.—Never return a kick for a hit, and you will save yourselves a great deal of tronble."

A POUND CAKE PLAIN.—Beat a pound of butter in an earthen pan, till it is like a fine thick cream, then beat in nine whole eggs till quite light. Put in a glass of brandy, a little lemon-peel shred fine; then work in a pound and a quarter of flour. Put it into your hoop or pan, and bake it for one hour. A pound plum-cake is made the same way, with putting one pound and a half of clean washed currants, and half a pound of candied lemon or orange-peel.

The people of Canada East are boasting of the great liberality of Montreal which, if the statements published are correct, subscribed in one day $50,000 in gold for the Portland sufferers by the terrible conflagration at that place.

There are in France 24,000 evening, schools, attended by 600,000 pupils, mostly adults; 30,000 teachers are employed, and the establishments are nearly all supported by voluntary contribution.

The Pacific slope is beginning to yield a large surplus of grain. It is not improbable that this year California will have 7,000,000 bushels of wheat to spare for exportation.

Justice weighs atoms in the same scale that it weighs world!

WOODVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE SECOND SESSION

Will begin October 3d, 1866, and close July 10th, 1867. The system of instruction aims at the truest, mental, moral, and social culture. The discipline seeks to embrace whatever is helpful to this end, and to exclude what is hurtful to it. Obedience to rightful authority, is a necessary to membership in the school.

TERMS PER SESSION.

Board, with fuel, lights and washing,	$300 00
Tuition in Preparatory course,	60 00
" Academic "	80 00
" Collegiate "	100 00
Music,	80 00

Other ornamentals as low as can be afforded.

The Collegiate course embraces Latin and French without any extra charge. These charges are made from the beginning of the half month in which the pupil is entered, to the end of the session, and must be paid, one half in advance, and the other on the 1st of March, nor will assignment of a pupil to room, seat or class, be made until this demand be met. A sum sufficient to get books, music, and medicines for slight sickness, must be deposited with the Principal. Each boarding pupil must be provided with a supply of plain, neat clothing suitable to the season, and also with towels, table nap-kins—all marked in the owner's name. When a pupil, not residing in the Seminary, or one not remaining in it during her illness, is sick more than twenty consecutive days, a deduction of one half the charges for the time will be made.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Principal.

Woodville, Miss., Aug. 8th, 1866. aug25 3m.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.

The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.

TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40.—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March.

Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.

Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.

Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.

As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.

W. H. N. MAGRUDER.

Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE

HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,

REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.

Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.

Next annual term opens first Monday in September.

For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.

Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A. M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Semmia Constantine.

The Full Session of this institution will open on the 26th day of September next.

This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattrasses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.

The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:

For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks,	$67 50
Regular Tuition,	25 00
Incidental Fee,	2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of Instrument	37 50
French or Spanish,	15 00

Ornamental branches at usual prices.

All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.

The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.

After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.

For other information address

CHARLES B. STUART, President,

aug4ft Mansfield, La.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. Geo. F. Thompson, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Millsaps, Rev. George H. Clifton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.

Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.

The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Jan. 31, 1867.

For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. a18ft

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M.,	Priealdent, Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal,
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Mario S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bedclothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September.

Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT.

D. G. HUMPHREYS, Pres. Board of Trustees.

jy14 6m

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE

SUMMERFIELD, ALA.

The next scholastic year begins Monday, Oct. 1st, 1866. A quarter of a century in successful operation, with hundreds of cultivated daughters in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, and under the immediate care and patronage of the Mobile and Montgomery Conferences, this institution can afford and is determined to maintain a high standard of scholarship. Only experienced and skillful educators are employed by the Trustees. Among the recent additions to the Faculty are two gentlemen for a series of years Professors in the State University.

Those desiring really thorough culture for their daughters, will do well to investigate the claims of this institution.

For particulars or a circular apply to the President, Rev R. K. Hargrove.

als 1m A. H. MITCHELL, Pres. Board.

NORTH, BRUSH & MASON,

Wholesale Dealers in

Fancy Goods,

STATIONERY, PERFUMERY, CUTLERY,

HOSIERY,

Furnishing Goods, etc.,

35 MAGAZINE STREET,

Opposite the St. James Hotel, New Orleans, La

aug25 1y

CHAS. H. CHURCHILL. PETER G. TAYLOR.

HARDWARE AND GUNS.

TAYLOR & CHURCHILL,

DIRECT IMPORTERS,

41 MAGAZINE STREET, and 20 BANK PLACE, (Opposite St. James Hotel,) NEW ORLEANS, LA.

We have in stock, and are constantly receiving some choice patterns of English and American Table and Pocket Cutlery, to which we invite the attention particularly of country merchants. Also, a large stock of Trace, Ox and Log Chains, English and American Planters' Hoes, Anvils, Vices and Bellows; Scales, manufactured by the Novelty Iron Works; Files, English and American.

COTTON AND WOOL CARDS, NOVA SCOTIA GRIND STONES, PLOWS.

Hall & Spear's Peacock Plows, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; Hall & Spear's Cast Valley Plows, Nos. 1 & 2; King Cary (wood mould board) Plows.

GUNS, NAILS, HOLLOW WARE, SAWS, TIN WARE, AXES.

Of all patterns and brands. All the above is offered for sale at the lowest market quotations. Orders from the country are respectfully solicited by TAYLOR & CHURCHILL, 41 Magazine street, and 20 Bank Place, opposite St. James Hotel. Established in New Orleans without intermission, by the present senior member of the firm, in 1832. aug25 1y

W. H. HENNING & CO.,

Grocers and Commission Merchants,

95 and 97, CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Offers to Families, Planters and Traders a full stock of Fancy and Staple Goods, consisting in part of

CHAMPAGNE,

BRANDIES,

WHISKIES,

CLARET,

CORDIALS, Etc.

Also, a large lot of Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Pork, Beef, Bacon, Salt, suitable for Plantation supplies,—all of which will be offered at the Most reasonable Rates.

Country orders will receive the most careful and prompt attention.

W. H. HENNING & CO,

a25 6m 95 & 97 Camp street, New Orleans

WALLACE & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, and

PLANTATION CLOTHING,

No. 74 CANAL STREET, AND 91, 93 AND 95 COMMON STREET, (SLOCUMB BUILDING), NEW ORLEANS

Sales guaranted at New York prices. a18 1y

A. B. GRISWOLD. W. M. GOODRICH

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,

Corner of Canal and Royal streets,

[Late HYDE & GOODRICH],

Established in New Orleans Fifty Years!

MANUFACTURERS OF JEWELRY & SILVER WARE,

Importers of Watches, Diamonds, Clocks, Bronzes, Porcelain, Plated Ware, Cutlery, Fancy Goods, Guns and Pistols.

The largest assortment in the South always on hand. aug25 6m

JAMES SYME,

Wholesale Druggist.

139 CANAL STREET, (Touro Building,) NEW ORLEANS.

Importer and Dealer in Fine DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS, DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES, Fancy Goods and Perfumery.

Surgical Instruments, French, English, and American, of every variety

Ale— Medicine Chests and Medical Saddle-bags. aug25 1y

A. D. GRIEFF,

Wholesale Grocer,

COMMISSION MERCHANT, AND DEALER IN SOUTHERN AND WESTERN PRODUCE,

48, 50 and 52 Old Levee st., corner Bienville st., aug25 6m NEW ORLEANS,

SOUTHERN SHOE MANUFACTORY,

DRAKE & MARKHAM,

Manufacturers of

Men's, Boys', Ladies', Misses' & Children's

BOOTS AND SHOES,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

No. 56 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

We call the attention of the public to our extensive stock of fine custom-made Creole Boots and Shoes, for Gents, Boys, Youths, Ladies, Misses and Children, made of the best imported stock, by skillful workmen.

We design furnishing goods that combine elegance with durability, at a less price than common goods are usually sold for in this city.

OUR LAST-FOR-EVER BOOTS!

Every man in this State should have a pair of our Last-for-ever Boots. They are warranted waterproof, and to last one year, or the money returned.

Our stock of Family and Plantation Shoes are the best that can be made.

One pair will outwear any three pairs bought at auction. Country Merchants will do well to make a note of this.

We have better goods and sell them lower than any house in Louisiana.

Orders filled at ten per cent. on the original cost of manufacture.

All goods warranted to satisfy, or they may be returned. Planters will instruct their Commission Merchants to buy their shoes of

DRAKE & MARKHAM, 56 CAMP STREET.

aug18 1y

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY

Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,

Of the late Firm and Successors to G. I. COFFIN & CO.,

102 & 104 East Second street,

Cincinnati, Ohio.

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. jy1a

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This institution is mainly designed to qualifying young men as Clerks or Bookkeepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can have speedily perfected themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address

13-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles, corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no coming from books.

Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law, English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages, Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics, Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.

For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address

f3 1y GEO. SOULE, A.M.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD.

Established, August, 1861.

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January, 1864.

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET,

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all persons desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURE to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves that we demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

feb17 C. E. CATE & CO. 18 Camp st., N.O.

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams' Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons' Type. sp1-1

J. B. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.

JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.

Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans, sp14-1y

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 31. WHOLE NUMBER 600.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1866.

$3 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE OFFICE—112 CAMP STREET.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate:

LAY REPRESENTATION—No. III.

MR. EDITOR: Our position, on this subject, is simply this: God has called the ministry, not only to preach, but to oversee, or govern. If the laymen are so called, let it be shown.

We infer the above from the Scriptures. First, the apostles were bishops or overseers; at least Judas was such. See Acts 1st, 20th: "His bishopric let another take." And we think we may safely infer that Peter and James and John, and the rest of the apostles were not inferior in office or order to Judas; and hence, they too were bishops; and, so far as we can learn from the scriptures, no lay delegation attached itself to this college of apostles.

In the next place, the seventy were sent, "two and two," see Luke 10th, 1v. and there is no mention of an accompanying or stationary lay representation or lay delegation; and if no such appendage was mentioned, we infer that there was none.

Then, the words addressed to Peter, Math. 16th, 19th v., "Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven," mean something. They were surely not then addressed to the laity. Do not be afraid of high church pretension. We do not claim that the words mean that; but they mean something, for they were spoken by our Divine Master; and He uttered them again, in Math. 18th, 18th, where He was addressing His disciples especially on this subject, that is, the subject of Church Discipline or Church Government. No, while we would not have our Church go up, if we may so speak, to the high church claim, we would not see it degenerate into an imbecile and contemptible Democracy; and we fear that this latter is our tendency.

Again, Paul, in Acts 20th, 28th, addressing the Elders of Ephesus, says: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers." Now, if Christ, when on earth, constituted his disciples bishops or overseers, and then at another time gave them power to bind and loose; and if then, when He was gone, the Holy Ghost made the elders of the church which they were to feed, its overseers, who shall gainsay this appointment, thus made by the second and by the third Persons of this Trinity? or who should say, transfer this power to the laity; or who can show any such commission to the laity? The teaching, to us, seems plain, direct, explicit, and our opinion is, that any church that disregards this teaching is shorn of its strength; and we have formed this opinion from the history of the churches, and from what we suppose must be the result of disobedience to any of the plain teachings of the word of God. We do not object to our stewards, nor to their work, nor should we object, if they that are to serve tables, were ordained deacons, and called deacons. This might be more scriptural. We approve of all that is said of stewards in that excellent editorial, in your issue of the 18th inst; but this may all be, and yet the laity not control all the lower assemblies of the church, as Quarterly Conferences, Monthly Meetings, etc., and then have half of the control of the highest or legislative body, the General Conference.

But this is not all. The Apostle Paul not only teaches the ministry their duty on this subject, but he teaches the laity the same doctrine, namely, that the preachers are to "rule." That word "rule" may seem a hard word, in those times of reform and improvement on the word of God, but we cannot help it. It is scriptural, and our better way is, rather to obey the word of God than to try to modify or to alter it. See Romans 13th, 7th: "Remember them that have the rule over you." But who were those that had this rule over the Roman church or churches? Paul does not leave them in the dark on this subject, but continues: "those who have spoken unto you the word of God." Could anything be more explicit? Can we misunderstand the Apostle? Will we obey?

These and other scriptures induce us to believe that Christ, the Head of the Church, calls the ministry, not only to preach, to discipline, but also to oversee, to bind, to loose, to rule; for all these are scripture terms of plain import, and have reference to precisely the work of our General Conference. Then, finding these duties devolved on the ministry, and finding no command or permit to transfer them to the laity, we conclude, that to do so, is to betray our trust, and shift a responsibility imposed on us as pastors, by Christ and the Holy Ghost.

The body of the ministry in our church, seem about to cede all the power left them to others; and yet this body of ministers has been the great instrument, in the hand of God, of our prosperity. The last General Conference made this effort, first, to give more power to the Bishops, as in the veto case, which we see still stands in the new discipline. Then it turned and tried to give the half of the little left to the laity, as in this giving laymen equal numbers in its own body, and that too when what power is left the preachers pertains mostly to their own arrangements, order and evolutions as itinerants.

Concessions and compromises at times are well enough, but they must be mutual. Indeed the ecclesiastical polity of our church admits of compromises between the ministry and laity, and in these already existing, we believe much of our great success lies. These compromises originated with the clergy and have been cheerfully acceded to by the laymen, as from time to time, they have become members of the church. For instance, the minister foregoes the privilege of selecting any particular congregation; and the laymen forego the privilege of choosing any particular preacher; all this for the good of the whole. Here is one thing offset against another for the good of the whole, mutual sacrifice. But there are many things already in which the preachers have made concessions where there is no concession on the other side; for instance the ministry let the laymen fix their salaries, that is the employers fix the salary of the employed; see new discipline. Who ever heard of such a thing anywhere else? And what do the laymen offset against that? And then, when the salary is fixed, the laymen may pay it or not, just as they please. There is no penalty if they do not pay at all; but if the preacher does not serve the flock, he may forfeit his position as an itinerant minister. This may be all right. We only mention these things to show that the ministry have already made concessions of power to the laity of our church, that are not made by the ministry of other denominations, nor by the employed anywhere on earth, save in cases of abject slavery; and for which we see no offset on the part of the laity. And now it is asked that the laymen may have, in addition to all that they now have, equal control of the General Conference with the ministry. At this rate, soon, what will be left for the ministry? Or is it proposed that the laity make some concession? If so, what is it? It is asked, for instance, that the laymen may come into the General Conference and determine how long a minister may stay in one place, or how long he may not; that is, when he must move; but can the ministry determine how often the laymen must move? Certainly not. Who does not see the manifest injustice in this? Or it is asked, that the laymen may come into the General Conference and determine the boundaries of the minister's annual conference. Now, will the laymen let the minister determine the limits of the territory in which he may live and labor, and that too with the penalty that he shall forfeit his profession if he labor elsewhere? With this plan laymen may come into the next General Conference and deprive you of your citizenship in Louisiana, and send you to take a certain oath, and get citizenship, if you can, in Missouri or Tennessee, and edit a paper there; but can you send the laymen? No. But you must go, or leave the church, or locate, or suffer such penalty as the church authorities may see fit to inflict. What part then should laymen have in the General Conference, where the ministry almost only may be afflicted, and the laymen can hardly be touched at all; and we think it will be a difficult thing for a modest layman to "vote" where he cannot be "voted." There is no justice in it, and all men can see it.

Concessions should be mutual; and our fear is that our ministry will give up their rights or powers given them by God, and thus injure the church of God in their liberality and self-sacrificing abasement; and if they do not give up their ordination, that, as in this effort, they will make unordained men equal to themselves in all that pertains to the government of the church of God, and thus ignore the teachings of Christ, and the Apostles and the Holy Ghost on this vastly important subject.

LOCAL ITINERANT.

Louisiana, August 30th, 1866.

Errata.—In my article No. 1, the word India should have been Judea.

Dr. Duff on the Himalayas.

In the lowest flats of Bengal and elsewhere the soil is often below the level of the sea, which is kept out by embankments, as in Holland; and in striking contrast with these are (says Dr. Duff) the Himalayas* —the most stupendous protuberances on the surface of our globe, —extending in length for two thousand miles, and shooting up their lofty summits into the sky, half as high again as the Andes, or nearly twice the height of Mount Blanc. The appearance of these will vary indefinitely, according to the position or distance of the spectator, the season of the year, or the state of the atmosphere. As the writer of these lines cannot enter into minute or varied details, he can only try, however inadequately, to portray them as they once presented themselves to his own view. Viewing them from a part of the great Gangetic plain beneath, they were seen rising in successive and clearly-defined ranges, one above the other. Looking at the lowest range first, it somewhat resembled the Welsh, or Cumberland, or Grampian mountains, seen from the distance of a dozen or twenty miles. Behind that another range ascended abruptly and boldly, some seven or eight thousand feet high. Beyond the second a third was seen towering aloft amidst everlasting snows, peering into the clouds, or rather above the clouds. Gazing at this magnificent scene when the sun was setting, we saw, on the first range being darkened with the shadows of night, the second still illumined with the fiery blaze of the sun; when it, in its turn became darkened, there was still the third, with its dazzling masses of pure white snow. When the sun had fairly approached their horizon, they appeared to contract a slight tinge of purple, which gradually deepened into scarlet or crimson. And when the king of day had manifestly disappeared from these unscalable heights the rosiate blush suddenly vanished, and was instantly succeeded by greenish pale, like the ghastliness of a countenance in the grasp of death, forcibly yet sadly reminding us of one blooming like the bright rose of summer, and the next moment a stricken corpse.

Having ascended the second range, and taken our station there before the dawn of day, what an indescribable spectacle presented itself to our astonished view! Ere the sun became visible his first rays were seen in one direction, striking on those cold, icy, sharp, needle-like points, which seemed to sparkle like glittering diamonds of stars in the dark blue azure above; and, as the sun mounted upwards, the brilliancy descended, like varied streams of liquid fire pouring down, till all became one gorgeous and enchanting scene. Then, in another direction, it seemed to the eye of sense as if there was not a vision of the fancy only, but something like a real celestial city or fortress, with gigantic walls, battlements, and towers, with domes and pillars, pinnacles and spires,—as if they were the landmarks of infinity, the muniments of the Unchangeable, the very palace and city of the great King.

Standing and gazing at this amazing scene, on the one hand, and thinking, on the other hand, of the multitudes, the millions, the scores of millions of blind idolators in the plains beneath, what were the feelings that soon came to gain a rightful ascendancy in the Christian mind? We knew—and it may be told those who know not—that these everlasting snow-clad summits are believed to be the abodes of the principal Hindoo gods, the veritable Olympuses of Hindostan. And the multitudes in the plains beneath look up to these hills as to the hills whence their help is to come! And when we thought of the myriads who were then looking up for help to these abodes and thrones of deity, how could we help feeling that—unless they were rescued by British sympathy and British benevolence from the grasp of spiritual death—on that day when the last trumpet sounds, these myriads, instead of looking up to those peerless eminences for aid, will be found calling on those very rocks and mountains to fall upon them, and to hide them from the face of the Lamb? Surely it was an awakening view of the case—a solemnizing impression—to realize in mental vision the condition of the vast multitudes, which, instead of admiring in these everlasting hills the workmanship of the great Jehovah, find in them the originating and perpetuating sources of idolatry, superstition, and eternal ruin. Are we not warranted, then, in appealing to all who bear the name of Christ in these highly-favored lands to come to the help of the Lord—the help of the Lord against the mighty in those far-distant heathen realms—that numbers, rescued and saved, instead of calling on the rocks and mountains to cover them, may be privileged to look up with triumphant joy to the Son of God, revealed from heaven, on the great white throne, and hail his coming, not as a judge to terrify and condemn, but as the Saviour of the world to pronounce a sentence of final acquittal.—Sunday at home.

* The word Himalaya is singularly expressive, being a descriptive photograph of the reality. The term "Hâu" is the strongest one for cold, implying frost and snow; "alaya" is abode or residence. So that Himalaya may be rendered "the perpetual residence of frost and snow."

Revelations of an Old Monastery.

Until the summer of last year, one of the chief objects to visitors at Funchal, Madeira, was a grand old monastery belonging to the order of St. Francis. In June, 1864, however, an order was received to have it pulled down, that a court of justice might be erected on its site. The workmen had been toiling for some hours, during which the crowd around the Gothic arch had greatly augmented, when a cry was heard within the building such as escapes strong men when their feelings are suddenly and violently aroused. Instantly there was an answering voice from the crowd, who, breaking through the slender barrier presented by a wooden bolt lying across the entrance, rushed frantically through dim corridors and terror-haunted chambers, awakening as they went multitudinous echoes with their wild and impatient calls and shouts. Guided by the rapid and reverberant strokes of the workmen's tools, the crowd quickly reached a room at the extremity of a long slimy hall, and situated between it and the chapel, from whence there was another entrance. It was a lofty room, but of small dimensions, having an iron door at the end. High up in the southern side-wall there was a grated window, and at the opposite wall the men who had uttered that cry of fearful import were working with furious energy, while face to with them stood the rigid body of a woman, whose glassy eyes death had failed to close, and whose fair, soft flesh decay had spared during the long period of three hundred years. She stood in a deep recess in the thick wall beside a small fire-place, which had been surmounted by a beautiful mantle-piece of pure white navein-ed marble. In removing this costly slab, a portion of the wall had suddenly fallen, betraying to the masons the appalling secret of a living tomb in the vestry of the church of St. Francis. With the presence of the crowd the horror-stricken workmen regained their failing courage, and redoubled their powerful efforts to widen the breach; while each well-aimed blow of their crowbars increased the general excitement, as more and more of the ghastly form stood revealed. It was richly attired in lilac silk, still retaining in its ample folds the freshness of its original tint. One small spray of brilliants gleamed in the abundant black hair, which still hung in heavy braids down the shoulders, though it had lost its softness and its shadowy gloss. Such a grave-dress was horribly suggestive of a dread burial. The faces of the crowd darkened, their voices deepened into a pent-up roar, when suddenly the remainder of the wall came tumbling down, exposing to the eyes of the dismayed throng the fleshless skeleton of a man lying at the woman's left hand, in a piled yet irregular heap, as if it had slid down, bone after bone, when the sinews and muscles which had given beauty and strength to manhood had loosened their hold before crumbling into dust.

British Wesleyan Conference.

THE INAUGURATION OF THE PRESIDENT.

The ex-president, addressing the newly-elected president, said: "I congratulate you on your honorable elevation to the presidency by so large a number of votes. It shows that you have the entire confidence of the conference. Many years ago, when in Graham's Town, South Africa, I received a communication stating a young missionary whose health had failed in the East Indies was coming to South Africa. It was William Arthur. You, sir, did not come to that colony, but were permitted to return to your own country, and there to serve the missionary cause, and the Church of Christ, in various ways. The only reason why I was elected to that chair was the respect entertained for me as one of your missionary agents; that is not the only reason of your election; you possess many other qualifications which make you eminently fitted to occupy the chair. I congratulate you as my successor in it. You are the first minister elected to this honor who has been a student at one of our theological institutions. I resign the presidency into your hands in a season of perfect peace and unanimity. I hope that you will not sympathize with those who think very absurdly that the connection is in a state of decadence. I have good means for knowing that the work of God is proceeding among us, and that signs of prosperity were never more plentiful. We do want a larger influence from on high, and I trust that, under the guidance of a president who has written so ably on the "Tongue of Fire," we shall have a most gratifying and encouraging revival throughout the whole body." He then handed over the insignia of office, consisting of a document signed by Wesley and many of his preachers, Wesley's pocket Bible, and the seal of the conference.

Before taking the chair, the president knelt for a few minutes in silent prayer, and then requested the conference to join with him in singing a verse of a hymn. He then proceeded to express his sense of the solemn responsibilities devolving upon him as president. He wished especially to have the prayers of the conference. He did not wish for any elaborate references to himself in public prayer, and much less any complimentary references to himself in them; it was hard to believe that prayers so spoken in compliment of a man could reach the throne of grace; but he desired to be remembered in their private devotions. The time was not his, nor theirs, but that of Christ's Church; so he would not occupy their time with a speech. He hoped they would have a short, sensible, and useful conference. He would suggest, as mottoes for its guidance, that in all matters of routine business there should be dispatch; in all discussions, courtesy, brevity, and readiness to yield; in our disciplinary action, purity; in all devotion, fervor; and in all intercourse with the families entertaining ministers, a continual acting on the injunction, "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

Votes of thanks to the retiring president and to the secretary were unanimously carried, and the conference prayer-meeting commenced immediately afterward.

On Thursday evening an open meeting was held for the purpose of giving audience to the delegates from the branch conferences of the Wesleyan body.

PREACHERS RECEIVED ON TRIAL.

All candidates for the Wesleyan ministry are on probation for at least four years, and before being received on such trial are subjected to several examinations—theological and medical. They are in the first instance lay preachers, and in order to exercise that office must be examined as to their theological belief and general fitness for the work. If, after some time spent in this work, they offer themselves for the work of the ministry, they are then brought before the "quarterly meeting" of the circuit in which they have preached, a meeting composed of laymen representing the different societies composing the circuit: if these approve, they are then examined by the annual district meeting, which is composed of ministers; if their mode of preaching, their theological belief, and their piety are such as commend them to the approval of this assembly, they are next examined by a committee appointed by the conference, and which meets in London in the July of each year. There were one hundred and eighteen candidates this year. Of these, four were proposed for future consideration; four were accepted for the foreign mission work, but to have preliminary training in the Theological Institution; three for immediate employment as missionaries; twenty-six were accepted for immediate employment in the work at home; fifty-eight for employment at home after having the advantages of the Theological Institution; four were placed upon the mission list of reserve; eighteen were declined; and one was withdrawn.

BABY ON THE PORCH.

BY EMILY HUNTINGTON MILLER.

Out on the porch, by the open door,
Sweet with roses, and cool with shade,
Baby is creeping over the floor—
Dear little winsome blue-eyed maid!

All about her the shadows dance,
All above her the roses swing;
Sunbeams in the lattice glance,
Robins up in the branches sing.

Up at the blossoms her fingers reach,
Lisping her pleading in broken words;
Cooing away in her tender speech,
Songs like the twitter of nestling birds.

Creeping, creeping over the floor,
Soon my birdie will find her wings;
Fluttering out of the open door,
Into the wonderful world of things—

Bloom of roses and balm of dew,
Brooks that bubble, and winds that call,
All things lovely, and glad, and new;
And the Father watching us over it all.

—Little Corporal.

Stolen Southern Jewelry — Where to Look for it.

The following is an extract from a letter from New York, published in the Baltimore Episcopal Methodist of the 4th inst.:

A Southern lady, on a visit to this city, went to worship in one of the up-town churches. Soon after an elegantly attired New York lady, of high social standing, entered the same pew and remained during the service; after which the Southern lady called her aside in the vestry room, and, in the presence of the rector, with whom she was well acquainted, thus addressed her: "Madam, I do not wish to offend you, but that shawl you are wearing belongs to me." (The shawl was a superb one.) The New Yorker protested, and declared that there must be some mistake. "If," says the Southern lady, "you will examine a certain corner, you will see my initials." The Southern lady then remarked, "that ring you have upon your finger is also mine, and if you will take the trouble to examine the interior you will see the same initials engraved in the ring." Similar movements as above described took place, and with similar results.

Turning to her again, the Southern lady said: "Madam, that bracelet you have on is mine also, and by pressing a spring on the inside it will unclasp and show you my portrait." The New York lady did as requested, and there was the lady's portrait. She promptly returned the ring and bracelet, as she was convinced beyond the power to controvert it, that they were the property of this Southern lady, and remarked as she did, "they are yours, and you are welcome to them, but as I wore the shawl to church I must beg the privilege of wearing it home again." The Southern lady acceded, of course, and they exchanged cards. The shawl came back in due time, but the New York lady had probably obtained the articles in such a manner as to render it too unpleasant to divulge. No more was said about it. Moral: If Southern ladies want to know where their articles of missing jewelry and wardrobe furniture are, let them attend some fashionable "up town" New York church, and if the men want to know what has become of all their fine horses, shipped North by army officers and "bummers," let them spend an evening in Central Park.

STATISTICS OF THE NEW SCHOOL.—The minutes of the General Assembly are just published, and show a gratifying advance of the Church during the past year. Dr. Hatfield sends to the Evangelist the following comparisons:

	1865	1866.
Presbyteries	108	109
Ministers	1,694	1,739
Licentiates	122	110
Candidates	187	215
Churches	1,479	1,538
Add. on Examination	6,685	10,289
" Certificate	5,325	6,949
Communicants	143,645	150,401
Sabbath School	112,781	143,639
Assembly Fund	7,059	8,396
Home Missions	112,296	112,322
Education	36,952	29,106
Publication	*46,305	19,794
Ministerial Relief	4,256	6,194
Congregational	1,264,667	1,788,466
Miscellaneous	501,141	420,706

* This included contributions to the permanent fund.

SUPPRESSION OF CONVENTS IN ITALY.—Though the people of Italy were on the brink of war, so confident have the Chamber of Deputies felt of the approval of their constituents, that on June 9th they almost unanimously passed a bill for the suppression of all the religious bodies throughout Italy, not as it was distinctly declared, for a financial, but moral object.

Religion in Business.

The North British Review says: "The pressing need of our faith is not simply faithful evangelists to proclaim its doctrines, but legions of men consecrating their worldly vocations, witnessing to that truth on which much skepticism prevails, that Christianity, so received as to become an integral part of a man, is omnipotent to keep him from the evil, not by taking him out of the world, but by making him victorious over it. He is a most worthy disciple of Christ who, like Palissy, or Buxton, or Budgett, or Perthes, exhibits religion as 'the right use of a man's whole self'—as the one thing which gives dignity and nobility to what is in itself sordid and earthly—as the mainspring of earnest and successful strivings after loftier ends and a purer life—as the power outside of and within man, which, lifting up conduct in the individual, raises the community—and not as a state of mind mystical, and inactive life unattainable, high up among things intangible, separated from contact with work-a-day life, appropriate to Sabbath days and special hours, to leisure, old age and deathbeds. Every man who is 'diligent in business, serving the Lord,' is a sermon brimful of the energies of life and truth, a witness to the comprehensiveness and adaptability of Christ's religion, a preacher of righteousness in scenes where none can preach so effectively or so well."

Tomb of Charlemagne.

Charlemagne's tomb, which has for centuries been a mystery, has at last been discovered in the Cathedral at Aix-la-Chapelle. Search has repeatedly been made for it under the auspices of the Court of Berlin, but has hitherto been unsuccessful. The discovery was finally made by accident, as is often the case. Operations had been going on in the Cathedral for some weeks, and traces of old edifices had been found. Outside the Carolingian octagon the tomb was found, an inscription on a stone in the shape of a keystone of an arch proving its identity with the resting place of the great Emperor. The inscription is as follows: "In hoc sepulchro sunt tumulata ossa Caroli Magni Deo in acterno—Graw. S. T." The edifice in which the remains were entombed is not as splendid a one as had been supposed.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE OF MAXIMILIAN.—A correspondent, writing from the City of Mexico, says:

The emperor, a man thirty-seven years old, is one of the largest men in the city, tall, straight and well proportioned; an expert in all manly exercises, especially as a horseman and swordsman, and possessed of immense physical strength, which when he chooses to exercise it, has excited the admiration of his staff and the French Zouave officers, nearly all of whom have been raised from the ranks for signal acts of daring, in which bravery and personal endurance were required.

His face is broad, refined in its expression, and beaming with good humor; and, above all, there is a look of genuine benevolence and kindness which seldom fails to win those with whom he comes in contact. The large blue eyes are full of intelligence, while the high, expansive forehead indicates great brain and correct judgment. He is seldom mistaken in his estimates of men, whose character he generally penetrates at the first interview. While governor of Lombardy, several years ago, much as the Italians detest the Austrian rule, their public disturbances could always be quelled by the presence of Maximilian, who was looked upon as an exception to the House of Hapsburg.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.—At the New York Sabbath School Convention the following figures were presented by Rev. Dr. Wise: Ten years ago, out of 604,118 scholars there were 17,775 conversions, or about two and six tenths per cent. Last year our of 914,587 scholars there were 25,122 conversions, or about two and seven tenths per cent—showing scarcely any increase in ratio in ten years. The number of conversions during the decade was 184,420. The average of Sunday-school life of the scholars is from five to fifteen years of age, or ten years. During the last decade we have lost 775,457 scholars, who have gone out of our school. Have they gone into our Church? No! The net increase in Church membership in the last ten years is 133,828; deaths, 130,100; so that to supply the increase in membership and vacancies by death required only 263,928. Now, allowing (which is too liberal) that all this number came from the Sabbath School, we have yet 511,629 scholars or 66 per cent., still unaccounted for. The Dr. thought the reason of this loss was that teachers fail to press small children into the kingdom of heaven.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Theo. W. Derman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery.
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1866.

WANTED,

A FIRST-CLASS TEACHER OF MUSIC—one capable of taking charge of the Musical Department in a Female College. The best of reference will be required. For further information apply to me personally, or by writing, at this office, 112 Camp street; or to Rev R K Hargrove, Summerfield, Ala.

The Principalship of the Art Department of the Centenary Female College at same place is yet to be filled. Address same parties.

J. C. KEENER.

New Orleans, August 4th, 1866.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27.—REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS.—By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, } Executive Com.
J. B. WALKER, } Joint Board of
L. PARKER, } Publication.

STONEWALL INSTITUTE.—This school for boys is situated in Dallas Co., Alabama, within five miles of Summerfield. Its session begins the first Monday in October, and closes the last Friday in June. For the terms, etc., we refer to the advertisement. The Principal, the Rev. D. C. B. Cennerly, has been known to us many years, and we can heartily commend his school to our people. We hail every notice of every school in the South with pleasure—every Protestant school where the Bible is placed in the hands of the student and the evidences of the authencity and genuineness of the Scriptures taught. The Stonewall Institute limits its number to sixty-six pupils.

PROF. MAGRUDER'S SCHOOL OF BATON ROUGE.—For the particular items of information in regard to this long and widely known institution, we refer the reader to the advertisement in another part of this paper. This is the best high-school that we know of. It is the very place for youths who wish to prepare for college; as Professor M. is a finished scholar, a highly accomplished and a capital disciplinarian. Having had opportunity to know, we speak from personal and frequent observation; and if more were necessary, we could say more in favor of this excellent school.

LIBERALITY OF BRITISH CHRISTIANS.—The incomes of 34 of the prominent benevolent societies in England, including the Bible-Society, six Foreign and three Home-Missions, two Jewish Societies, nine Educational, and twelve other Societies, for the past year was $941,356, or $4,706,780 in gold. The income of the Bible Society was $856,875; of the Church Missionary Society, $833,104; of the Wesleyan, $729,425; of the London Missionary Society, $415,803; of the Religious Tract Society, $536,275. The income of twelve American Benevolent Societies for the past year was $2,467,990.

☞ The obituary notice of the late Brother Reeves, of La., and a communication from Rev. Wm. B. Hines, are laid over till next issue.

"OUR BLAZING CHURCHES."

A man's political fortune—which in these days leads to something pecuniary—is made in this country if he can prove himself to be a persecuted man. Persecution is one of the Scriptural marks of righteousness—if it be "for righteousness' sake." It was to be expected that this characteristic of genuine worth would be simulated by wicked and designing men. As an expedient it is one of the very oldest of political tricks, as well as one of the most successful. As far back as 560 years before the christian era, Peisistratus accomplished his design of usurping the government of Attica by its use. He appeared one day in the Agora of Athens in his chariot with a pair of mules: he had intentionally wounded both his person and the mules, and in this condition he threw himself upon the compassion and defence of the people, pretending that his political enemies had violently attacked him. He implored the people to grant him a guard, and at the moment when their sympathies were freshly aroused both in his favor and against his supposed assassins, it was proposed that fifty club-men should be assigned as a permanent body-guard for the defence of Peisistratus. Solon opposed a strenuous resistance, but found himself overborne and even treated as if he had lost his senses. The fatal vote was past. The number of the body-guard was not long confined to fifty, and probably their clubs were soon exchanged for sharper weapons.

The Radicals, both in the churches and out of the churches, have been trying of late to convict every body with having treated them badly. Having had the world in a swing for the past four years, having invaded the rights of individuals and communities which are accorded as well by the laws of war among civilized nations, as well as by those of peace; having seized houses, lodges, altars, churches, vestments, libraries and finger-rings with little compunction as they would sieze public property, they now present themselves in the sublime attitude of one having suffered persecution—for loyalty sake. This would seem to be a difficult undertaking, but is not an impossible thing to men who can command the valuable services of Judge Holt and MR. CONOVER. The riot at Memphis, and the riot at New Orleans, are both cited in evidence of what these tried supporters of humanity, virtue, and the constitution, have to suffer. The New York Christian Advocate and Journal says in an editorial on the "Riot in New Orleans:"

> This outbreak seems to be only one case of a class now becoming most painfully frequent throughout the South. The spirit of lawlessness which brought on the rebellion, though crushed in its open operations, is still alive and active, and now it exercises itself in the details of shooting helpless negroes and murdering Union men. Assured of the sympathy of the Executive at Washington, it is steadily increasing in boldness and in the atrocity of its manifestations. What the end may be it is difficult to say, though there is cause for the most gloomy forebodings.
> * * * * * *
> At the South, the few outspoken Union white men, and the whole body of the freedmen, have a very dark prospect before them. Of the final issue of the conflict we have but little doubt, but an untold amount of suffering may yet remain to be endured before the nation shall have quiet. O Lord, undertake for thy people!

The New York Methodist, in an article on the same theme, indulges in the following strain:

> The fact can not be concealed that rebels all over the South are availing themselves of the support of President Johnson to oppress and murder Union men. The lives of loyal citizens are no longer safe in the Southern States. We publish in this week's Methodist an account of the mobbing of one of our ministers in Kentucky. A peaceable Methodist preacher, who attends a convention to report its proceedings is murdered. Throughout the South the spirit of violence is breaking out, and the men who are the victims of it are men who have prayed, and suffered, and fought for the Union.

This New Orleans "outbreak" was concocted by "Union men" in Washington, and worked out by "Union men" in New Orleans. It was a party of twenty-six "Union men" attempting to overthrow a State Constitution, which had been framed by a "Union" Convention two years before. The convention was composed of picked "Union men," selected by General Banks himself, the embodiement of the "Union."

These innocent gentlemen, who now in holy horror accuse the President of an attempt to "murder" them, because they are for the Union, prepared the minds of a large body of colored "Union men" for violence and blood, two nights before the proposed "re-convention." That gathering was the initial act of "the riot." The negroes were fired up by Dr. Dostie and the other speakers for their Monday work. They were directed to go straight forward as men having rights to maintain and enemies to encounter. On that night the Rev. W. Norton, who afterwards opened the Revolutionary Convention on Monday, addressed the mass of negroes from the steps of the Mechanics Institute. He appeared with a fan in his hand; and began with the remark that it was a Mutual Life Insurance fan; but that he should not avail himself of the favorable terms upon which the company proposed to insure his life: that all the military of the government was upon the side of the convention and there was no danger to be feared by any of its friends. Until the colored men had been enlisted, and came into the field, only disaster had attended the federal arms; but that by the colored troops the war had been brought to a successful issue. That they were equal to any white man, and should allow no man to deprive them of their just rights. —This is a moderate statement of this violent and seditious harangue.

When the day arrived the negroes came as the "club-men" of the Revolutionists, armed with pistols and clubs, and demeaned themselves with the spirit indicated in the Friday-night speeches. The Rev. Mr. Norton came to a sudden and horrible end: not because he was a minister of the gospel, but because he was in company with violent and bloodthirsty men, who invoked revolution and riot believing that they had the promise of military support and could do it with impunity. Unfortunately for them, their "Union" military-man failed them in their hour of need, from indecision or miscalculation, or a confused conflict between inclination and the unexpected orders which arrived from the War Department, or because he thought, the police having been held back by his threat to arrest all who attempted to arrest the Conventionists, the negroes would be a full match for any straggling opposition.

The Greek politician no doubt had himself and his mules severely wounded, but was not more thorough in the self-inflictive treatment than this Radical "Union" Party has been. He had his mules wounded, but they have succeeded in offering up at Memphis and New Orleans several white men, one hundred negroes, a few churches, and some thousands of dollars worth of public and private property. In each case they brought on the riot with systematic purpose, and then showed their wounds. The country cries, "shame!"; the religious journals and Advocates solemnly lift up their hands, implering vengeance: and another timely display is made of what the Radical Union Party suffers, in its righteous maintenance of Liberty, Humanity and Law! The Northern Methodist paper in this city lifts its voice at this juncture:

> "Each speech of our apostate President makes rebels exult and loyal men hang their heads.—The evil is becoming insupportable. Five millions of Union people in the South protest against continuing a policy under which they have experienced increasing insecurity of property and life, and under which rebellion is rapidly repairing its strength. Our blazing churches, scattered schools, dispersed congregations, murdered ministers, and slaughtered citizens cry out against such mistaken clemency. Never before was it known that after a great war the victors were placed at the mercy of the vanquished and made to bear their maddened spite. Never before was the engine of government so disastrously reversed. Never before was an illustrious nation so quickly placed on the downward grade to ruin. It is time to put down the brakes. We stand absolutely alone in the history of the world in our fearful experiment of clemency. Our policy must be changed or our country will be imperilled."

Nor is the country yet done with these spectacles of self-immolation; nor ever will be until the Radicals have gathered sympathy and power enough to immolate somebody else. Since the riot in this city the citizens are as far from interfering with the negro as they were before; he worships, day and night, under his own vine and fig tree. He is not disturbed either on week-day or Sabbath. He is free to make an ample support with half work, or to enjoy the uninterrupted filth and leisure which enter into the colored man's earthly paradise. When lo, all at once, "our blazing churches" are seen illuminating the sky! For several years the Northern Methodists in this city have been sustained by the government in seizing and holding churches which are not their own; and they have worshipped in them undisturbed—and are still sustained. Latterly they have built two shells of churches, about 30 by 40 feet each, one in Jefferson, and one in Carrollton. These houses were well located—being out of the way of the white population. They were a timely relief to other churches, and to the citizens, and their burning is a misfortune to all parties. Since "the riot" negroes have been neither insulted nor disturbed, but rather pitied as the tools of designing men. Now we ask who burnt these churches? What was to be gained by it, or what revenge so small as to demand it? We confess ourself at a loss to imagine. This matter of the church-burning has heretofore made but little impression on the Northern mind; for more than a thousand churches were burned in the South by the torch of war. But now, we venture that these two colored churches will astound and arouse every pious Radical "Union" mind in New England. In that elevated region it will prove an important event, and in its political aspects a most opportune and horrible thing. The Editor of the New York Advocate is not surprised at it, after reading the "inflammatory appeals of the N. O. Christian Advocate." But who did it? It will doubtless come up, in due course, before another committee of Congress which can command the services of Judge Holt and the agents of his agent, MR. CONOVER. Then we shall know who did it. Who wounded Peisistratus and his mules?

DANCING.

We hear that considerable interest in this choric movement has developed itself in some of our churches. We are at a loss to imagine what the new charm is that now specially attracts to the music, the atmosphere and the circle of the dance. We can hardly suppose that in the general improvement of the times, the votaries of the world have set up any new claim to purity or piety in this expressive region of fashionable life. After the discourses of the Rev. Dr. Bullock of New York, vindicating the moral, religious, and wholesome influences of the theatre, we have awaited expectantly the announcement that some Divine (probably of New York) had in "an able discourse" demonstrated that there existed an ethical, natural and highly innocent connection between revivals of religion and the rythmical, fascinating amusement of dancing. How delightfully popular would such a discourse be! The young people who are in the church whose minds have turned that way, and parents it may be who, though religious themselves, have kindly afforded their children the superior advantages of a dancing master, could doubtless enjoy a calm statement of the whole subject, in which the pros and the cons should be fairly set down, and all ancient prejudice and mere "puritanical" righteousness dismissed.

We cannot hope to rise to the height of this great argument in the estimate of these would-be dancing members of the church: to state all the innocence that is supposed by them to be in the mere "physical exercise" of home and parlor-waltzing; the importance of developing the limbs of the small children of religious parents, by this "beautiful exercise:" the absolute necessity there is that youthful exuberance of spirit should be permitted to escape in some safe channel, lest unreasonable restraint should work evil, and, too long pent up, in the end break over all boundaries, both moral and ecclesiastical. The "flesh" pleads pitifully for its own: but the Scriptures give it no quarter—"make no provision for the flesh to fulfil the lusts thereof."

Mr. Wesley paid no respect to the physiological argument and aspects of this courtly vice. It flourished in his day, for he lived in a period that gave birth to Chesterfield, Beau Brummel and George the Fourth, "first gentleman in Europe." But it is very certain that if any Wesleyan man danced in his day, he danced himself straight out of "the society." The corrupt tone of fashionable life in that day, and its evil effects upon society at large, excited the liveliest fears for the fate of the nation, in the minds not only of the religious but of all patriotic citizens of Great Britain. It was this condition of the morals of England that moved the young Wesleys and Whitfield, in the cloisters of Oxford, to seek a revival of religion. Methodism was born an antagonist to the spirit and fashion of the world.

To reduce dancing to a mere physical exercise, an innocent hilarity of action, is to misconceive its true character. It is to be looked at not in its physical aspects merely, but as emotional action, the expression of emotions by rythmic, choric movement. It is employed also to give vigor to emotions and to swell their excitement. This may be remarked of the Greek dance, the battle dance of the ancient Germanic people, the Indian war-dance, as well as of the amatory dances of the Bechuana tribes, or the licentious fandango of the Mexicans. In all these, whether at the festival of Hyakinthia, to the singing of the solemn peau in honor of Apollo, when the king himself was under the orders of the chorus-master, and the old, middle-aged and youth, the matrons and the virgins, distributed in companies, danced as a part of the solemnities; or whether at the Bacchic festival, when a vigorous round choric dance and song—the spontaneous effusion of drunken men in the hour of revelry—"with the thunder of wine full upon the mind," gave fuel to the passions of the hour: in both, the dance served to express and intensify the emotions. —The turbulent, vehement "break down," and every other variety of rythmical, accentuated, conspiring movements, or postures of the body, from the slowest to the quickest, of modern times, however decorous and expressive, are not a question of muscle but of emotional influence. If the dance was once an important part of divine service throughout Greece, it has been fully transfused throughout christendom to the manifestation and cultivation of an opposite class of sentiments. Here it still raises strong emotion in soft and amatory subjects, not now the fierce passions of the warrior. It has long since been abandoned to the world of gallantry and fashion. It is regarded by the world as its own promenade and realm. This it watches as against the intrusion of all mere religionists or professors of piety. What ever religious people may think of themselves in a ball room, the world regards them as intruders. It despises such barefaced folly. How can a man "whose conversation is in heaven" feel himself in place amid the turn, the return, and the rest of the dancers. What does he find here to please? Does he find stimulus for the holy passions of a spiritual and renewed nature? Will he "cast a stumbling block before the children of Israel" with the hardihood of Balaam? It is this view which the world generally takes of members of the church who frequent the ball room that decides its character. Irreligious people know the pleasures, the emotions, and the excitements of the dance, and they put no confidence in the religion of the person who is captivated by the involution, the music, the passions and the performance of a scene which is regarded as the very highest expression of the world's worldliness.

It is here that many a fair maiden and noble youth have betrayed the Saviour, and for one sip of sensual pleasure have sold a birthright. The church is bound to throw the protection of her Discipline around the young, the weak-minded, and the faltering; to stand as an angel with a drawn sword and warn them away from the carnal aptitudes and the deadly atmosphere of the modern dance.

EQUAL CONSECRATION.

It is a mistake to suppose that one class of men is called to greater devotion to God than another. The consecration demanded of all Christian men is entire. Paul is talking to the whole church when he says, "For none of us liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself." "And ye are not your own." —"For ye are bought with a price, therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." A uniform and equal separation to God and his service is demanded alike of all. Whether he be minister or layman, the measure of devotion is the same, because entire. One is to recognize Christ's proprietorship in him, as fully as the other. The claims of redemption are as exhaustive in the one case as in the other. The grounds and reasons apply equally.

The only distinction is in the direction which this consecration takes, and the specific line of duty to which it is applied. With some, the office and work of the ministry are indicated, with others the sphere of activity as laymen in the church. The former are ordained and set apart for their proper work by imposition of hands, and by vows publicly assumed. The latter by their profession of faith, and by the vows assumed in their admission into the church, are solemnly set apart for their peculiar work in the Gospel field. In the solemnity, point and comprehensiveness of the consecration there is no difference.

Laymen and ministers are alike called of God to their respective places in the economy of Gospel labor. The devotedness required in these different duties is certainly the same. No man liveth unto himself, neither is any man his own. All is to be done unto the glory of God. We have a ministry separated to the single service of God in the church. These men feel that they are called to give their time exclusively to this work. We have a ministry partly secular of men who believe themselves called in part to preach, and in part to pursue the ordinary avocations of life. We have also the laymen of the church who regard themselves as called alone to secular pursuits.

There is no conflict here as long as we keep the doctrine of equal consecration in view. It is entire and absolute in every case, applying as fully to the secular as to the spiritual; and each class is necessary to the completeness and effective working of the gospel machinery. The local ministry is not necessarily less devoted to God than the traveling ministry. Every one, in his particular sphere of duty, is supposed to be wholly set apart to the service of his Lord. We must have done with all contrasts and distinctions amongst Christians in respect to the application of this principle. What is wanted is a church separated to God, a church that, in all its membership, recognizes the duty of uniform and equal devotion to Christ. The secular believer is not the less holy because he is secular, and he who gives himself entirely to spiritual employment is not more holy on that account.

Each in his appointed place exhibits the same measure of love, the same deadness to the world, and the same absorbing interest in the salvation of the world. This would not be so if we supposed the lay christian to live at all to himself; if we supposed him to avoid ministerial separation from any other than the religious conviction that he is not called thereto, nor if we supposed him to seek merely worldly ends in his business affairs. Has one class of christians any more right to work for themselves than another? to plant, or build, or buy or sell for purely worldly and selfish ends? All of these things may be done for God; money made, estates accumulated, business pushed forward with tact and industry, for the purpose of extending Christ's Kingdom and maintaining the institutions of religion: but self, avarice, ambition, and social position are just as much out of place in the layman as in the minister.

Equal consecration would perhaps require something like an equal distribution of the sacrifices which the work of Christ demands of the church. That one class should bear the most of these is unjust and unnecessary. Would the ministry be always stationed, if others felt the duty of sharing in the burden? Suppose a larger amount of secular time and money were sacrificed to promote the comfort of a preacher's family or to build up and beautify our places of worship; or suppose that our people were somewhat to stint themselves in the wardrobe and the larder, for the purpose of swelling the missionary collections, would not these trifling acts of self-denial divide the burden and promote the interests of religion?

A great deal of effective ministerial talent is shut up in colleges, or chained down to editorial desks, or employed in other positions where educated laymen would do as well, if not better. But laymen of the requisite qualifications are seldom willing to work for the wages which these situations offer. Is there but one class of men in the church who are called to labor for a bare support, and to trust God for their earthly future? Perhaps no class is called to this; but we do not see why one redeemed christian man should not be as willing to make the sacrifice as another. It is doubtless the duty of the christian minister to present in his own life the highest type of consecration, and to meet cheerfully the sacrifices which it involves, but it is our duty also to insist upon its equal and binding obligation upon all christian men.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. J. J. Grace, under date of Aug. 29, writes from Eastern Shore, Ala.: Please say to the friends of Zion that God is reviving his work in our midst. Several persons have been added to the church on the Eastern Shore, and much interest is manifested in regard to religion. A Baptist church was turned over to me some two months ago, and I organized a Sabbath-school. We number about thirty-five in the school. I have just closed an old fashioned Methodist meeting at the church, where many persons were converted, and the church greatly revived. It was the first revival for years. The pastor said to me, I want you to hold a meeting, for I have tried for years and can do nothing. He was present but did no preaching. God was with us in great power. When I went to close, I called for all to give me their hand, who felt that they had been profited by the meeting, when there was a general rush through the congregation, and the whole congregation came forward, and we had a glorious time. I never witnessed a more gracious time. To God is good to us—to him be the praise.

From Crystal Springs, Miss., a friend sends us the following good tidings:

A protracted meeting commenced at this place on the 24th ult., under the auspices of Rev. Jared W. McNeil, the pastor, and Rev. Benj. Jones, presiding elder. Messrs. Walker and Chamberlain, brethren from New Orleans, were also present, assisting, for three or four days. At first the attendance was small, and the prospect of much good being done was quite meager. But soon a spark of heavenly fire graciously descended upon our altar, and now the whole community is in a blaze of religious fervor. The church has been crowded twice each day with eager listeners to the blessed truths of the Gospel. The altar is constantly surrounded with penitents of all ages; many conversions have taken place, several of which have already joined the Church, and still the good work goes on. The pastor is indefatigable in his labors; he seems never to be weary. On Saturday evening, 1st inst., Rev. Warren C. Black, a truly pious and zealous young preacher from the Georgetown circuit, preached an earnest, heart-stirring sermon to a large congregation. At the conclusion sinners were invited to the altar to be prayed with and for; and in a moment a crowd of mourners knelt at the foot of the Cross. The scene was one that angels and God's people rejoiced over: some were praying aloud, some shouting, and many weeping bitterly. A good number found peace in believing, and have joyfully entered the service of Jesus, the great Captain of Salvation. The meeting still continues, and promises a rich harvest to the Church.

Bishop Paine is expected in a few days, and no doubt his heart will be rejoiced at the Holy Spirit's outpouring upon the Church here.

A short time ago a few of the ladies raised a sum sufficient to purchase a bell for the church; and as a matter of course the order for same was sent to that firm which advertises in the ADVOCATE—Messrs. Vanduzen & Tift, of Cincinnati.

The Sunday School at this place is improving greatly of late. It is doing a good work.

Rev. N. A. Gravens, Homer, La., Aug. 27th, writes: We held a meeting of nine days continuance at Harmony Chapel, on the Claiborne circuit, embracing the last Sabbath in July, and first in Aug. Brethren J. Williams, Akins, Clements, and Dr. Gaskill rendered efficient service during the meeting. Thirty-two white members were received into the church, nine of whom then and there were baptized, also fourteen colored members applied for membership. Some thirty persons professed the pardon of sins through faith in Christ. The members of the church were greatly strengthened.

Rev. S. J. Hawkins, of Greenwood, Caddo, La., writes that within the last few weeks thirty-one conversions have taken place in the Greenwood and Caddo circuits. By the same communication we regret to learn that the wife of Bro. R. Parvin, of Caddo circuit, is dead. The death of this estimable christian lady is a great loss not to her husband alone but to the church.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

TOUR OF PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

The President is thundering along the line of his progress to Chicago, to the discomfiture of the radicals, and in the truest support of the Constitution. Secretary Welles, Secretary Seward, Gen. Grant, Postmaster General Randall and Admiral Farragut accompany him. He has been met by the officials of Maryland at Annapolis Junction, at Baltimore, and a grand reception was accorded him at Philadelphia. He addressed the immense audience at the Continental hotel:

"In visiting Philadelphia it was not his purpose to make a speech, as he was merely on his way to a great city of the West to witness the laying of the corner stone of the monument in memory of the great statesman Douglas, and thanking the citizens for the demonstration, he trusted the day was far distant when brothers should lift their hands against brothers. He trusted the day was far distant when the land we love shall be again drenched with blood. (Cries of good.) The baleful planet of fire and blood has disappeared and the benignant star of peace has taken its place, and, under its influence, he trusted that the country would return to affection, peace and harmony; that reconciliation would be brought about, and all should stand together as one people in one Union. (Great applause.)

"He did not intend to make a political speech. His public acts and messages were before the country and by them he could be judged. He believed his policy was calculated to promote the interests of the country, and he would stand by it until the Union was restored. (Immense applause.) Let us stand together and forget there have been parties. Let us preserve the interests of the people and save our country. Party sinks into insignificance before such tremendous issues, but if party must be maintained it should be based on the great principles of the Constitution. Yes! The Constitution of our country is the strongest league which can be formed." (Renewed applause.)

"Let us rally around this common altar of our country and swear that all shall perish, fall in dust, rather than the Union of these States shall not be maintained. (Applause.) He had always relied on the intelligence, patriotism and integrity of the people, and so stood to-day. The Constitution was in their hands, and he felt confident that at the proper time and at the ballot-box they would give an expression that would maintain it; so that the country might be redeemed and rejuvenated. (Applause.) The people, the laboring men, who welcomed him here to-day, and in whom he had confidence, could soon bring to terms that class of men called politicians, without much of an effort.

"Much had been said about emancipation, but he felt quite sure that a large portion of Pennsylvanians are now having a tyrant's rod held over them. Who is it holding that rod? There was much clamor about putting men out of office, and the reason was that those persons desired to perpetuate their own power, and now they say to many of you who fought through battles while they remained safe at home, that they must not be turned out, and that nobody else be appointed to office. (Applause.) Is that the good old doctrine of rotation in office? Are none others than these now in office to participate in the conduct of the government? and are they to have the power, and to attempt to exercise it unrestrainedly as tyrants themselves? He said, Therefore come up to the work and the tyrants' rod can be bent and broken." He repeated, the government was in their hands, and he was willing, as he always had been, to trust them, knowing it would be safe."

There is no mistaking the spirit and purpose of such utterances. They will command the support of the people. The battle is at the very gates of the republic. If the Conservative Union party, with the President in front, battle-axe in hand, cannot beat back the assailants, Constitutional liberty, as understood by the men of '76, will be subverted, with widespread disaster to the people. The position which he holds in resisting Congress has been admired by the radicals themselves.

The New York Evening Post, a Radical journal of great influence, in a leader on the subject of the Philadelphia address, takes occasion to refer to President Johnson in the following terms:

While the whole country knows that Mr. Johnson is not perfect, that he is obstinate, resentful, often ill-tempered, and that his passions sometimes master his judgment in matters of detail, and even in important affairs—the steady resistance he has offered to the centralizing policy of Congress has shown him to be a true friend of liberty. For he could not help but see from the beginning that the favorite policy of Messrs. Stevens and Sumner and of the Tribune would in a few months have centered in his grasp supreme and dictatorial power over every city, town, village and plantation in eleven great States, would have made him irresponsible master, tyrant, over eight millions of people, with a patronage so enormous that it might have gratified the ambition even of a Napoleon.

It is to the lasting honor of President Johnson that he has, from first to last, resisted the enormous temptation thus held out to him by the folly of Congress; that he has constantly striven to rid himself of the extra constitutional powers which Congress has constantly striven to invest him with; and that from the day when he vetoed the first Freedmen's Bureau bill to the present time he has, often with anger, refused what many a man less patriotic might have accepted, to the ruin of the State.

Those who are judges of the political situation are very hopeful of the result of the present campaign.

A correspondent of the Lancaster, writing from Baltimore, says:

In the outset, then, permit me to assert that the Conservative Union party, supporting the policy of Andrew Johnson, will sweep every thing before it this fall. Of this fact, there need not be the slightest doubt. I predicate my assertions upon close observation and circumstances which admit of no equivocation. No Democratic ticket will be placed in the field. The contest is solely and entirely between the Conservatives and the Radicals, each claiming to be loyal. Three-fourths, at least, of the old democracy, who are now content to sink the name and their former party organization—all of whom are being registered and becoming legal voters—will support the conservative cause and the Johnson policy of reconstruction. You can rest fully assured of this. One half, too, of the original Union men will do the same thing.

Another writer in the same paper states that in the Philadelphia Convention "forty-five Major Generals of the Northern Army sat side by side with twenty-eight Generals and officers of the late Southern Army: and in that Convention the voice of the Southern people was for the first time, since the war, authoritatively uttered by their chosen representatives." He then expresses the opinion that in the coming elections, at least one-third of those who have hitherto acted with the Republican party will array themselves on the side of those who support the President's policy of restoration. There will be no new party formed. The candidates for Congress will be the Democratic and the Republican candidates; and all the signs of the times indicate that at least sixty new Democratic members of Congress will be elected in place of sixty Radicals now holding in the House.

It is impossible to overrate the importance of sustaining these efforts of the President and the Conservative Union Party in behalf of the Constitution.

THE DOUGLAS MONUMENT.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—The corner stone of the Douglas monument was laid to-day. Tens of thousands of persons were present. Gen. Dix's address is said to be a masterpiece of eloquence. The President was called for. He appeared in front of the platform and delivered the following address:

Fellow citizens—I have traveled over a thousand miles after having been invited to attend the laying of the corner stone of the monument to be erected. I will say to my friends, personally, and politically, that in accepting the invitation to be present on this occasion, it was for the purpose of bearing testimony of my high respect for a man who perished in the public service, and whom I respected and loved. (Cheers.) I have no eulogy to pronounce that has not been done better than I could do it, and it will be handed down and placed in the possession of all who take an interest in the history and character of the distinguished individual who is now no more. Some men may wear the wreath which the nation wreathes for those who serve their country in lofty positions, or they may be graced with laurels prepared for those who defend her in the hour of peril, and their names may be engraved on the unperishable record of national glory—this column is reared in memory of the working legislator and the representative man, and his reward will be the inscription of his name high on the cenotaph erected by a grateful nation to commemorate the services of those who lived and toiled for the people and the Union of the States (immense applause.) Fellow-citizens—I believe in my heart, that if we could communicate with the dead, and cause them to know what was transpiring on earth—were it possible for Stephen A. Douglas to be disturbed from his slumber, he would rise from his grave, shake off the habiliments of the tomb, and proclaim "the Constitution and the Union—they must be preserved." He was applauded on retiring.

The other distinguished excursionists were introduced and applauded.

The party will leave to-morrow morning for Springfield, Ill., thence on Saturday for St. Louis, remaining there over Sunday and according to the present programme will reach Indianapolis Monday and stay there Tuesday. Thence to Cincinnati direct, leaving for Columbus, Ohio, on Wednesday, thence to Pittsburg and Harrisburg.

THE "LOYAL" PHILADELPHIA CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, September 4—Ex-Attorney General James Speed was nominated Chairman of the Convention. The announcement was received with applause.

The Committee on Credentials reported the number of delegates as present from the South as follows:

Texas, 15; Louisiana, 18; West Virginia, 51; Virginia, 61; Alabama, 4; Kentucky, 13; Mississippi, 3; Missouri, 30; Arkansas, 2; North Carolina, 7; Maryland, 60; Delaware, 6; Florida, 7; District of Columbia, 27. Total, 332.

Philadelphia, Sept. 4.—A resolution was introduced in the Convention to-day that there can be no permanent peace or security for the loyal men of the South without negro suffrage, which was referred, after an angry discussion.

A Maryland member said they would no such firebrands introduced in the Convention.

Philadelphia, September 5.—The Conventionists have been wrangling over the negro suffrage question, and adjourned until to-morrow, without the presentation of resolutions or of an address. The minority report favors negro suffrage. A resolution was offered by Mess. of Virginia, to instruct Congress to provide for the enfranchisement of the blacks, which led to much confusion and great excitement during the debate. It was finally referred.

Fred Douglass' is a delegate in the Northern Convention, and made a speech which was greatly applauded.

The speakers generally have been violent against the President.

FOREIGN.

Berlin, Sept. 4.—Count Bismarck refused to receive a deputation from North Schleswig, who desired to present a petition for the restoration of their Government to Denmark.

The armistice between Saxony and Prussia has expired by limitation. Peace is yet unsettled between the two countries, and hostilities, it is thought, may possibly occur.

The Prussian Chamber of Deputies have passed the government indemnity bill by a large majority.

Paris, Sept. 4.—The Austrian army is being placed on a peace footing.

The Circassians are again fighting the Russians.

Marquis de Moustier, and not Moathon, is the new Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The Debats, to-day in its editorial, alludes to the honors paid to the American embassy in Russia, and, after making the significant inquiry, "what is the value of these demonstrations between the United States and Russia," says that France has done little to revive the old friendship between herself and the United States.

Buenos Ayres.—Advices from Buenos Ayres and the seat of war in Paraguay are to the 14th of July. The situation is one of masterly inactivity. The allies are still encamped in a deep morass in convenient reach of the Paraguayans' guns, which play on them at pleasure. The camp cannot be moved until more horses are obtained, and an order has been issued to seize 7000 among those owned by the citizens. The Paraguayans, in the meantime, had placed eight more guns in position to play upon the allied camp. The differences between Chile and Uraguay in regard to the judgement of Spanish prizes in Uraguayan ports has been reconciled.

Fortress Monroe, Sept. 4.—Major Gen. Miles has been relieved from the command of the district of Fortress Monroe, and the custodian of Jefferson Davis. Gen. H. S. Bunton, of the 5th artillery, succeeds Miles.

Letter From Judge Abell to Major Gen. Sheridan.

New Orleans, Aug. 29, 1866.

Gen. P. H. Sheridan:

Sir—Not having had my official or other intercourse with you, and never having seen you to my knowledge, I was surprised to find the following words contained in a telegram from you to the President of the United States:

"Judge Abell, whose course I have closely watched for nearly a year, I now consider one of the most dangerous men that we have to the peace and quiet of the city."

Not having seen you in the court over which I have the honor of presiding, or elsewhere, I am not prepared to believe that you were incog. watching my footsteps and habits; for if you had been, you could not have made such an assertion. In my habits I am temperate and regular; in my words, kind. In my judicial station I know naught but fidelity to the State and humanity to the unfortunate, of whatever age or color, brought before me.

I am, therefore, General, forced to the conclusion, that if you have watched me at all, it is through the record, in my decisions and charges to the Grand Jury, all of which has been correctly published in the journals of the country. I am of the mind that you will find few people of the State who agree with you in the estimation of my character. You must allow that, if dangerous, I am a most unsuccessful agitator, for until the assembling of the would-be Convention on the 30th of last month, the Civil Courts of the State have faithfully administered the law, and as effectually preserved the peace, as in any city in the Union—the disbanding of two powerful armies and a vast influx of negroes, notwithstanding. It needs no argument to prove the efficiency of the civil government of Louisiana. I used every effort that argument, persuasion, and direct charges to the Grand Jury could accomplish, to prevent that fatal meeting.

I was a member of the Convention of '61, and knew well that after the adoption of the Constitution by the people, the Convention became functus officio, and so charged the Grand Jury, on two occasions, previous to meeting. It is impossible, General, that you can pretend that I had any complicity in the assembling of the "would-be Convention," and of course no peace-breaker in that respect. It appears to me, that in common justice you should have stated the facts upon which you based your assertion—an assertion which appears to astonish everybody.

Gen. Sheridan's plainness of speech invites plainness. I fully agree with you in your statement to the President that "The immediate cause of this terrible affair was the assembling of the convention." And I am clearly of opinion that it never would have assembled without some assurance of military guardianship. The members asserted at almost every corner of the streets, up to the very day of assembling, that they had such assurance. Gen. Baird said he would arrest the Sheriff of the parish of Orleans if he attempted to execute the process of the civil courts in arresting the conventionists. I firmly believe that had the military authorities been half as earnest as I was, in opposing this attempted usurpation, there would have been no meeting of the so-called convention, and consequently not a drop of human blood shed.

Gen. Sheridan, I never participated in the rebellion in any manner, and the idea of magnifying these conventionists into persecuted Union men, seems to me ridiculous. Some of its leaders raised troops for the Confederacy, others held office under it, and another voted for the hanging of Hon. B. F. Flanders, an original Union man, and aided in expelling him from the State.

As to the status of Northern men in New Orleans, whether they be Union or Conservatives, it is that of perfect safety, for since the establishment of civil authority in this State, in September, 1864, there has not been a single case, to my knowledge, in which a Northern man has been molested.

Those of them who come to this city with capital or skill, for the purpose of bettering their condition, are welcomed and favorably received; those who come to encourage strife, are entitled to no respect, and receive none. All good men must deplore the tragedy of the 30th of last month, but it was brought on by the meeting of a few adventurers, who proposed to alter the Constitution of the State, against the will of the people, and who had secured the attendance of a large number of armed negroes to defend them in their attempted usurpation. The meeting was not opposed by the military.

This, Gen. Sheridan, all must agree, was an act that could not be tolerated by the freemen of any town, city or State, from Maine to California. To alter the charter of a town or city, or constitution of a State, belongs to the people.

These men had no more right to alter the constitution of this State, than the negroes whom they called to defend them.

All sympathize with the colored people, who were deceived and misled by the leaders of the Convention. I assert that the colored people of this city and State would be peaceable, prosperous, happy and useful members of the community, if their pretended friends would let them alone.

General, I am now nearly fifty-five years old, and have never seen a more direct thrust at the character of a man, and in my case, without the least foundation, for I respectfully defy you or any other man to show an act of mine, dangerous to the peace of the city or State. If you think your assertion just or dignified, rejoice in it, I do not; nor do I think, among good men of this great country, it will add to your reputation, or injure mine. You, however, have done me the honor to connect my name with that of His Excellency, Gov. Wells and Mayor Monroe, in your dispatch of the 3d to the President, the removal of whom you recommend. This seems, in connection with your charge against me, to form a sort of corner-dept in this, that had the President of the United States adopted your views, and removed the three of us, the people's treasury, city and State, as in the days of Banks and Butler, would have fallen into other hands.

General—My highest ambition is to serve the State with fidelity, while she requires my services; my greatest desire is the restoration at once of my country to unity, prosperity and greatness—my strongest antipathy against usurpation.

And, whether I fall by the hands of sneaking assassins, or my reputation be struck down by the defamed, those are my sentiments and they will not change. As Edmond Abell I would not reply to your unfounded assertions. As the Judge of the First District Court of New Orleans, it is my duty to reject them, and take this public mode of addressing you, as it is the public which has an interest in my services.

E. Abell.

New York, Sept. 4.—The following dispatch was received to-day. It is believed to be the first instance in which any message has been sent from mid ocean to Europe, and thence to America, on the same day:

"On Board Steamer Great Eastern, }
Atlantic Ocean, Sep. 4, 1866. }

"To D. H. Craig, General Agent of the Associated Press:

"We have just received telegrams from London, saying there is a serious outbreak in Canada. Please advise me accurately by cable via Heart's Content and Valentia in regard to the same. We expect to arrive at Heart's Content on Saturday next. All is going well.

Cyrus Field."

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

COTTON.—On Monday, in consequence of discouraging accounts from Liverpool and New York, operations were on a restricted scale, and although the inquiry was more general, still the sales amounted, at the close, to only 500 bales at prices from 1 to 2c below our quotations of Friday last. Yesterday the market presented little activity at the opening, but at a later hour holders exhibiting a disposition to the make concessions, and buyers being thus enabled to purchase at easier rates, the movement assumed more animation, the sales at the close summing up 875 bales at prices showing the advantage on the side of buyers.

Remarking that there are very few desirable lots of Cotton, on the market, and that when offered they command in general outside figures, we modify and quote as follows:

Low	— to —
Ordinary	21 to 26
Good Ordinary	28 to 30
Low Middling	31 to 32
Middling	31 to 35

TOBACCO.—The receipts have fallen off and are now limited. The stock on hand is small and the assortment is poor. The market continues steady and firm, and buyers on foreign account, for leading, and for the city trade are still looking around. Factors hold their stocks firmly and only a few small lots have been sold during the past few days at prices ruling within the range of the following quotations:

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused	3½ to —	— to 4½	Currency.
Good do	5 to —	— to 6½
Common Leaf	6½ to —	— to 10½
Fair	11½ to —	— to 14
Good	13 to —	— to 15
Fine	16 to —	— to 18
Choice Select	19 to —	— to 24

SUGAR.—The market is altogether bare of the production of Louisiana, but is well supplied with that of Cuba. The demand, however, is limited and only local, and the principal sales during the past three days comprise 20, 30, 40 and 50 hhds and 130 boxes Cuba on the basis of 12½ to 18 per lb for Fair. A slow and small retail business is doing at 16¾ to 17c. per lb for Yellow Clarified Cuba 17½ to 17¾c. for White do, 16 to 16½c for Refined, 12½c for Good Fair Cuba and 14¾c for Prime Porto Rico. Cuba is retailing in boxes at 12½ to 13½c. for Nos. 12 and 13, 14 to 14½c for Nos. 14 and 15, 15½ to 16½c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17½c for Nos. 19 and 20.

MOLASSES.—The market is bare of Louisiana and the supply of Cuba is small. The demand is very limited being altogether local and confined to dealers and distillers, who buy but little at a time. On Saturday there were sales of 85 barrels, and a cargo of 398 hogs heads, 18 tierces and 39 barrels Good Cuba, all on private terms, said to be below 52½c per gallon, which holders are asking for round lots. A retail business is doing at 55c per gallon for Good Cuba.

FLOUR—There were sales on Saturday and Monday of 400 barrels, of which about 2500 barrels at auction slightly damaged, but suitable for bakers' use, at $6 45 to $12 80 per bbl, and 1500 barrels by the regular trade, at $9 50 to $9 75 for Superfine, $10 25 for single Extra at $11 75 to $12 25 for double Extra, $12 75 to $13 25 for treble Extra, and 14 50 to 15 per bbl for family Extra.

BACON—A brisk retail demand prevails and Shoulders are selling at 19c., Ribbed Sides at 22½c. Clear Sides 23c and Sugar-cured Hams at 26½ to 27c per lb. We quote plain Hams at 21c per lb.

PORK—The market is dull, and there have been only a few small sales to dealers at $34 75 per bbl for Mess. The demand for the country is being supplied by dealers at $36 to $35 25 per bbl.

LARD—The supply is fair and ample for the local demand, but insufficient for buyers on foreign account to operate. Small or retail sales are making at 22½c per lb for Prime in tierces, and 23 to 24½c in kegs.

CORN—The market is well supplied, but dull and depressed, with prices ruling in favor of buyers. The sales on Saturday and Monday were confined to 7500 sacks at 75 to 77c for Mixed, 80c for White Mixed, and 82 to 84c per bushel for White.

OATS—Are in good supply and in moderate demand, and prices have been ruling with a downward tendency. On Saturday and Monday about 1,800 sacks were sold at 42 to 44 and 45c per bushel.

BRAN.—Is in good supply and in light demand for the city trade and for Havana. On Saturday and Monday about 1800 sacks were sold at $1 05 to $1 15 per 100 lbs.

HAY.—The market is well supplied but continues dull. There have not been any sales worthy of note. Prime Ohio River is selling in small lots at $26 to $27 per ton, and is retailing at $29 to $30 per ton.

INDIA BAGGING.—We have heard of several sales to dealers at 38 to 39c per yard. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 38 to 39c in rolls, 40 to 41c in bales, and 42c for blanket.

BALE ROPE—The market is steady and firm. Yesterday 100 coils and 200 half coils sold at 18½c per lb. There is a brisk demand for the country which is being supplied at 17c per lb. Iron Cotton Ties are selling at 11 to 12c per lb.

GUNNY BAGS — There are few in the market. We have no sales to report, but they are id request at 27 to 30c a piece.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—Choice Northern Butter is scarce and in demand while Western is plenty and dull. Northern is selling at 45 to 46c, and Western at 25 to 35c. Cheese is in good supply and is selling at 17 to 18c for Western and Northern, and English Dairy at 25 to 26c per lb.

HOPS.—There is only a small stock with a slack demand. Belgian are held at 80 to 82c. and American at 75c per lb.

COFFEE—There is none in first hands and not much in the hands of the dealers. The latter are supplying the demand at 27 to 28½c per lb currency for fair to good fair Rio. Prime is very scarce and would command 29c per lb. We quote Good Fair to 29½c per lb. gold, duty paid.

STAR CANDLES.—Are in good supply with a fair jobbing demand and there have been small sales at 20c per lb for 12 oz, 22½c for 14 oz, and 25 to 26c for full weight. 12 oz are in demand for the country trade.

SOAP.—Palm is jobbing at 8c per lb.

RICE—Owing to high rates and small supply, there is very little doing. There is no Carolina in market, none expected, and no India in first hands. The latter is selling at 12c per lb. Louisiana commands 12c per lb. There were sales yesterday of 200 sacks Louisiana and India in several lots at the e prices.

WOOL.—Is in good demand and small supply. We quote washed at 25 to 29c per lb, barry at 12 to 15c, native to ¾ merino, 16 to 18c, and ¼ to full do. 18 to 25c.

HIDES—Are in small supply and good demand and prices are ruling firmly at 10 to 10½c for Green Hides. Ho Br Kip Skins, and 13c for Dry, Mexican Hides command 18 to 21c per lb. Owing to the restrictions of the Board of Health the receipts continue very light.

MALT.—There is a good stock of Western in the city, while Canada is scarce. It is held at $2 10 per bushel for Prime Canada and —— to $1 50 for Western.

NAVAL STORES.—Are in request, but the market is nearly bare. Sales are making in a small way as follows; No. 3 $2 to $3, No. 2 Rosin at $4 to $5, No. 1 $5 to $7 00, No. 1 White $7, Pitch $6, Tar $2 50 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine commands 55 to 60c per gallon.

SALT.—Is in good supply and demand. Liverpool Coarse is selling in bulk at $1 90 to $2 00 per sack and Fine at $2, while dealers are obtaining $2 10 to 2 15 per sack for Coarse in store and warehouse, and $2 05 to $2 20 for Fine. There is only a small cargo of Turks' Island on hand. It is held at 65c per sack.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are dull, they are selling at $1 75 to $2 50 per bbl. Onions at $4 50 to $5 00 per barrel. Apples $1 to $5 00 per bbl. Cabbages 5c a piece.

POULTRY & EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $13 to $11 per dozen. Geese at $11 to $12 and Turkeys at $30 to $35 per dozen. Western eggs are scarce and are selling at $30 to $32 per hdd.

Cattle Market.

Jefferson City, }
Wednesday evening, August, 24, 1866. }

Western Beef, choice per lb net	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$12 to 20
Hogs per lb gross	12 to 13
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Choice Sheep, per head	$6 to $8
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $80
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12 to $25
Yearlings, per head	$ 7 to $12
Calves per head	$4 50 to $ 8

MONETARY.

Statement of New Orleans Gold Market, week ending Friday, Sept. 7, 1866.

31st August: 145, 146; 1st September: 144½, 145; 3d, 4th, 5th Sept: 144, 145; 6th September; 144, 145½.

Wm. S. MOUNT, Manager.

The City Bank of New Orleans,
15 Commercial Place, New Orleans.

OBITUARIES.

Died at Manville, Mobile Co., Alabama, on the 13th Aug. 1866, Sister NANCY D. WILLIAMS, aged sixty-six years. The subject of this notice was born on the 24th of April 1800, and converted in 1828. She was afflicted with Typhoid Dysentry, and was confined to her bed about six weeks. When first attacked, she felt conscious that she must die; and when her friends would go to part with her, she would request them to meet her in heaven. She was a faithful wife, devoted mother, and true christian. She was a member of the M. E. Church, for thirty-eight years. Religion with her was not a mere profession, but a living principle, within the heart, which influenced, and regulated her whole life, and shed along her pathway a fragrance of holiness. She was a bright and cheerful Christian, remarkable for deep piety, and uniform devotion.

Her last sickness was a beautiful exhibition of the efficacy and power of religion, in all trying support, when it is most needed. She was perfectly submissive and maintained a dignified calmness to the last. She died in the faith, and has gone to a better land, where sacrifice, toil, and suffering will be asked of her no more; where the tears so often flowing for other's woes, will be wiped away by God's own soft hand, forever from her eyes. She has gone home to glory, to the place "where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest—where there is no more suffering, sorrow, pains nor death." Her dying message was "tell my friends I am going home to glory, going home to Jesus." When asked what word she had to send to sister T., an intimate friend of hers, she said "tell her I am going home to Jesus, and want her to meet me in heaven."

She leaves several children to mourn, but they are followers of Jesus, and we trust will meet her in glory. To her children, and mourning friends, we would say, "she is not dead but sleepeth," and they that sleep in Jesus, will God bring with him. Follow your mother as she followed Christ, and heaven shall be your haven.

J. J. Grace.

Eastern shore, Ala., Aug. 28th, 1866.

Sister HANNAH J. (born Evans) wife of Rev. R. Parvin, of the Louisiana Annual Conference, was born near the city of Hamilton, in Canada, where her father probably still resides.

She was dedicated to God in infancy, and was trained up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord," by her pious mother, who was an exemplary member of the Wesleyan Methodist church. Sister Parvin experienced regeneration in early girlhood; and she ever afterward evinced her fidelity to the cause of God. In 1855 she came to Louisiana, whither her sisters and brothers had already preceded her. In 1859 she was united in marriage with Brother Parvin.

She departed this life in the full triumph of the christian religion, at the residence of G. W. Higgins, M. D., in Greenwood, La., on the 30th day of July, 1866. A few minutes before her death she exclaimed: "I have unlimited confidence in the living Redeemer." She repeated this expression afterwards. Finally, raising her eyes to heaven, she said to those around, "I bid you all an everlasting farewell,"—and was with the angels!

Sister Parvin was a Christian of the highest and purest type. Her friends (and all who knew her were her friends) will never forget the happy serenity of her countenance, the unselfishness of her life, nor that sweet charity which inspired all her thoughts and actions. She was a helpmate to her husband. She assisted him greatly in his ministry. She delighted in Class-Meetings, Sabbath-schools, and prayer meetings. She was fond of visiting the sick, and relieving the poor. Her native nobility of character was elevated continually by the sanctifying grace of God. In this fact we behold a symbol and assurance of the state of infinite exaltation which awaits christians.

"Close followed by their works they go,
Their Master's purchased joy to know;
Their works enhance the bliss prepared,
And each hath its distinct reward."

S. J. Hawkins.

☞ The Memphis Christian Advocate, and Arkansas Christian Advocate, will please copy.

OPELOUSAS LAND AGENCY.—At the solicitation of numerous friends, the undersigned has consented to become an Agent for the sale and purchase of land in this healthy and much sought after country, above any high water overflow, and where the prospects for crops are so encouraging. He will take very great pleasure in shewing the land to any persons visiting this country, and in giving any other information that may be desired concerning it.

For reference I refer to the Editors of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

JAMES H. HOUSTON,
Sept 4, 1866. Opelousas, La.

BOOKS! BOOKS!

The Agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, at 112 Camp street, New Orleans, has just received from the steamships George Cromwell and Merrimac, and by the steamboats Mephaa and Olive Branch, ample supplies of Sunday School requisites: Catechisms, Spellers Questions, Dictionaries, Primers, Reward Tickets, etc., etc. Also, Clarke's and Benson's Commentaries, and Hymn Books in sheep and roan.

Address:

R. J. HARP, Agent,
sep1R. 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

S. ANDERSON, PHOTOGRAPHER And PHOTOGRAPHIC STOCK DEALER, 61 Camp street, New Orleans.

Cartes de Visite,
Hallotypes, Ambrotypes,
Pictures on Porcelain,

And every description of Pictures known to the Art.

All kinds of Photographic Materials at the lowest price for cash. sep1 1y

[Established in 1828.]

EVANS' FASHIONABLE RETAIL Hat Emporium, No 62 CAMP STREET,

Next door to the Picayune Office, New Orleans.

A complete assortment of the Latest Styles by every steamer, at Moderate Prices. a18 6m

A GOOD COOKING STOVE

is one of the most necessary and desirable articles of household economy, and if properly managed, will promote the health, comfort, and happiness of every member of the family.

Time, money, and extreme vexation, by delays at your daily meals, may be saved by using the

CHARTER OAK COOKING STOVE.

Over 10,000 of these celebrated cooking stoves are on daily use throughout the city of New Orleans. Every one of them has been sold under a full guarantee, and we offer them as a reference wherever found.

The Improved Charter Oak Stove with Extension Top

has but one damper, and is so simple in its construction that a child can manage it. The ovens are larger, bake more uniformly, and the stove heavier than any cooking stove of corresponding size ever made.

The Hot Water Reservoir Boiler furnishes a constant supply of hot water at all hours of the day, and for hours after the fire has been extinguished, without additional cost for fuel, a practical illustration of the economy in using the Charter Oak.

The Reflector Gridiron, original with the Charter Oak, and used on no other stove—the most perfect manner to broil meats and poultry, whereby the offensive odors arising from meats during the process of broiling are carried up the flue, and fill the meats preserved.

The Hot Closet, in which meats and pastry are kept warm for hours when there has been a delay at meals, besides enabling the cook to furnish the greatest variety of dishes and desserts, and place them hot upon the table.

The Charter Oak Stove will do one-third more baking in a given time, and use 25 per cent less wood than any other stove now made.

Importers and Dealers in Hardware, Nails, Castings, Guns, Carpenters and Coopers' Edge Tools, etc.

RICE BROS. & CO., Sole Agents,
33 and 35 Camp street, near Poydras, and 565 Magazine street, near Magazine Market
sep1 1y

E. CIQUEL,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

FOREIGN, FANCY AND STAPLE

DRY GOODS.

Also, a large and varied supply of

HOUSEKEEPING and

PLANTATION GOODS,

Constantly on hand, at

126 Canal Street,

sep1 1y NEW ORLEANS.

D. H. HOLMES,

Direct Importation of

FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,

AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

No. 155 Canal Street,

sep1 6m NEW ORLEANS.

LOEB, SIMON & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

86 Canal Street,

sep1 3m NEW ORLEANS.

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c.

Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.

Skinning Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

SPEED, SUMMERS & CO.,

46 Carondelet street, New Orleans,

COTTON AND TOBACCO FACTORS,

General Commission Merchants,

And Commercial Agents. aug25 1y

J. H. CARTER,

Wholesale Grocer,

Nos. 8 and 10 Tchoupitoulas Street,

And 8 and 10 New Levee,

aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

H. P. ETHELL, New Orleans. NAT. H. THOMAS, Late of Alabama.

ETHELL & THOMAS,

FACTORS

And General Commission Merchants,

For sale of Bagging, Rope and Twine, Pork, Lard, Beef, Flour, Grain, Hay and Western Produce generally.

Sole Agents for the celebrated brand, "Grey Jacket" Flour.

No. 105 Poydras street, New Orleans.

Will give personal attention to the purchase of Merchandize and Groceries for the country. Cash orders solicited. Instructions strictly obeyed. sep1 6m

J. W. BURBRIDGE. THOS. D. MILLER

J. W. BURBRIDGE & CO.,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants,

No. 190 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

sep1 6m

H M WRIGHT C W ALLEN J HINDLESTON (1st August, 1866)

WRIGHT, ALLEN & CO.,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

169 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

aug25 1y

THOS. H. ALLEN, Memphis, Tenn. JAMES M. ALLEN PERRY NUGENT, New Orleans

T. H. & J. M. ALLEN,

(Successors to ROBSON & ALLEN),

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

102 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

aug18 1y

B. S. HARPER, N. J. THAXTON.

B. S. HARPER & CO.,

Cotton and Tobacco Factors,

AND GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No. 81 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

aug18 1y

Gen. James Longstreet. W. M Owen. E Owen

LONGSTREET, OWEN & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

37 Union Street, New Orleans.

aug25 6m

PEET, SIMMS, & CO.,

Importers and Wholesale Dealers in

DRY GOODS,

Nos. 23 & 25 Magazine street, New Orleans

JAMES PEET—N WILLIAMSON
JAMES SIMMS—J BOWLING

aug25 1y

F F FOLGER, L FOLGER, W H THOMAS

FOLGER & CO.,

Dealers in

Hardware, Iron, & Ship Chandlery,

37 & 39 MAGAZINE STREET NEW ORLEANS.

(Opposite the St James Hotel)

Nails and Castings; Hoop, Sheet and Bar Iron, Shovels and Spades; Sheet Copper and Zinc; Plows, Axes and Hoes; Lead Pipe and Sheet Lead; India Rubber Belting, Hose and Packing; Circular, Mill and Cross Cut Saws. aug25 1y

STEWART, GALBREATH & FIZER

Commission Merchants & Cotton Factors,

46 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Andrew Stewart, New Orleans.
Wm. H. Galbreath, } Memphis.
Wm. Stewart, }
John C. Fizer, }

sep1 3m

SAM'L. BARRETT. CHS. LE SASSIER.

BARRETT & LeSASSIER,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

Corner Common and Baronne Streets,

Entrance, 43 Baronne street.

aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

JOHN A. STEVENSON. A. H. MAY

STEVENSON & MAY,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

No 40 Perdido Street, New Orleans.

aug18 6m

P. H. FOLEY,

Of the Firm of FOLEY, AVERY & Co.

Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant

No. 32 Perdido Street, New Orleans.

aug18 6m

HARLOW J. PHELPS, Of New Orleans. S. B. BUCKNER, Of Kentucky.

HARLOW J. PHELPS & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

No 142 Gravier Street, New Orleans.

aug18 6m

W. C. TOMPKINS. H. R. ALSOBROOK.

WM. C. TOMPKINS & CO.,

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS,

No. 2 Magazine st., corner Canal, New Orleans.

A complete assortment of goods constantly on hand for the country trade. a18 6m

A. HENDERSON PEALE & CO.,

Successors to Thos. Henderson & Peale,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

No. 190 Common Street, New Orleans.

aug18 6m

J. W. CARROLL. JOS. HOY. CHAS. HARDENBERGH

CARROLL, HOY & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

No. 36 Perdido Street, New Orleans,

aug18 1y

C. L. WALMSLEY & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

No 31 Perdido Street, New Orleans.

aug18 1y

JOHN O. PARHAM, Of New Orleans. BEVARLY BLUNT, Of Hinds Co., Miss.

PARHAM & BLUNT,

COTTON FACTORS,

Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents,

No 26 Carondelet st (First Floor), New Orleans

aug11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY & CO.,

General Commission Merchants and

COTTON FACTORS,

57 Poydras street.

Cotton Office—192 Common street—in charge of Richard J. Nugent. aug4ff

B. K. WALKER. THOS. M'KNIGHT. J. F JOHNSON.

R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondelet street, New Orleans

jan 20-1y

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

W. R. Stuart, late Stuart & James. ap7

GEORGE L. HILL, ATTORNEY at Law, Marshall, Texas. Collections made in Eastern Texas and West Louisiana. mar27

WATTS, GIVAN & CO., Paducah, Ky. WAT

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

THE THREE KEYS.

THE IRON KEY.

"Mother, I want an apple." "Mother, give me an apple." "Mother, I want to go and see Hattie." That is the rough and unpolished iron key. So are the words no, yes, what, don't, I won't, where used by children toward parents, or persons much older than themselves, instead of no sir, yes sir, what say? or what, sir? please not, I had rather not.

THE SILVER KEY.

"Mother, please give me an apple." "I would like an apple, mother." "Mother, let me go and see Hattie a few minutes." "Mother, please excuse me," (from the table.) Now this silver key is a very good one, and generally safe for good and pleasant children to use, but it often jars the heart; and besides, there is something dangerous about it, and very curious, the secret of which will be explained by and by.

Sometimes, when used by children who are selfish and impatient, it will change into a rough iron key. In such cases it very rarely unlocks our hearts, but usually hurts the child who uses it, more than the parents or others. Just try this key in a cross manner, and notice how quickly it changes into an iron key. "Mother, please give me an apple."

Again, when used in another way, it will become changed, and appear so much like a gold key, that no one can tell the difference, for it will unlock the heart just as easily and quickly as the real gold one; and what is remarkable about it too, never jars the heart, as the silver one sometimes does.

This changing the silver key into an iron one, or into a gold one, just according as you use it, is very curious indeed, and peculiar to this key, for neither the iron key nor the gold key ever change into any other, but always remain the same iron key, or gold key, while the one of silver changes into both. We will now see

THE GOLD KEY.

"Mother, will you please give me an apple?" "Yes, dear," the mother says. "Mother, I would like an apple, if you please." "Yes, darling, you shall have one," replies the mother, almost before the request is finished. "Mother, may I be excused?" or "Please excuse me, mother?" "Yes, dear," she answers. "Mother, let me go and see Hattie a few minutes?" "Not now, my daughter," is the reply; "it is nearly schooltime, and you might get a tardy-mark." So you perceive that when she used the gold key, it unlocked the heart in every instance, except when the request, if granted, would have been improper, or an injury to her; and as parents have seen so much more of the evil and dangers of life they are always supposed to know better than their children what is right and best for them to do; and besides, the Bible says, "Children, obey your parents, for this is right;" and again, it says, "Honor thy father and mother, that it may be well with thee."

Now we will explain

THE GRAND SECRET

that changes the silver key into a a gold one. You recollect it changed into an iron one when a child used it while she was in ill-humor, or in a hurry, and that she was in danger of being hurt by it herself, instead of her parents or others.

But let us just glance again at the silver key. "Mother, please give me an apple." "I would like an apple, mother." "Mother, let me go and see Hattie a few minutes." "Please excuse me, mother." You see that is the silver key in every particular.

Now for the secret that changes the silver key into a bright and beautiful gold one. Take this little crooked mark (?) which means that a question is to be asked, and place it on each sample of the silver key, and observe how quickly and neatly it changes it into a beautiful gold key. Try it on one sample. "Mother, please give me an apple?" Try it again. "Mother, let me go and see Hattie a few minutes?" Try it once more, "Please excuse me, mother?" Now is it not very curious, and very funny, too, that such a little crooked mark as this (?) should change a silver key into a gold one? But you see it does, for that mark (?) can not help doing it.

And now if you will only bear that mark (?) in mind whenever you use the silver key it will make no difference with your parents or others which key you take, the silver one or the gold one. The heart is never pained by the gold key, nor jarred by the silver one changed into a gold one. Its presence is a comfort and a joy to every one, and pleases every heart.

Having now told you about the three keys, and the grand secret of their use, I sincerely wish that every little boy and girl who reads this story, will always try to use the gold key, and that whenever they shall use the silver key, they will be very careful that it shall not change into an iron key, and do them lasting hurt.

By using this key through life—this everbeautiful gold key, or the silver one changed into a gold one, they will unlock many a heart that no other key will unlock; nay, more than this, on every side hearts will open to them of their own accord; and smiles, good wishes, and good deeds will meet and welcome them wherever they may go. Sunshine will beam along their way, and o'er their path many a bud will blossom, and many a flower will shed its fragrance. Even the very songsters in the wayside trees and groves will seem to vie with each other in their efforts to fill the ears and souls of these immortals with their sweetest strains, while they are journeying through the world.

The Corn Crop—A Great Wealth.

The crop of Indian corn in the United States in 1860, according to the census returns, was 838,792,740 bushels. Vast as was this yield, it bids fair to be largely exceeded the current year. From the increased breadth of the land under cultivation and the generally favorable season, it is estimated that the crop of 1866 will reach 1,000,000,000 bushels; worth, at 60 cents per bushel, $600,000,000. This is truly a great wealth, and it is difficult to place a limit to the production of this cereal in our broad domain. It grows in abundance from Maine to Texas, though flourishing with greatest luxuriance in the Western States, side by side with wheat, where it waves its tassels and grows golden over the prairies and broad fields, reminding one forcibly of incipient forests. Broad as are our acres and extended our agricultural territory, there are few sections where corn cannot be profitably grown, while in most parts its production is enormous.

The commissioner of agriculture reports the corn crop of the single State of Illinois in 1865 as 177,065,857 bushels, or nearly one-third of the entire crop of the country in 1856, which was 592,071,104 bushels. The cultivation of the corn crop too, is attended with much less difficulty than it was fifteen or twenty years ago. The skill of invention and the hand of mechanic art have contributed largely to this result. There is not now that absolute need for careful manual husbandry which was deemed essential in former years. In the leading producing States, land well plowed, planted by machine with a man and team at the rate of many acres per day, and worked twice with an improved cultivator, is all that is now required, besides a good season, to insure a teeming harvest. In consideration of its utility, the corn crop is scarcely second to that of any other American staple. It is valuable for food, and is not only thus largely employed at home, but is annually used more and more in Great Britain and Ireland and elsewhere abroad.

It makes the best of food for stock; is used to an enormous extent for the distillation of spirits, and it is claimed that a process has been discovered whereby it can be converted into sugar. In addition to the uses to which the grain can thus be turned, the stalks make excellent winter fodder, and return to the soil as much in the shape of fertilizing material, perhaps, as they take from it.

Thus, year after year, the area of this great wealth enlarges, and it is difficult to say what untold millions are yet destined to be fed with the cereal from the lap of American agriculture. Let him who dreams of a "ruined country" look to its wonderful resources, and believe, if he can, that a land so infinitely endowed in natural wealth, and a people with such indomitable enterprise, can fail to make rapid strides in everything which pertains to material progress.

A Word to Cotton Planters.

There being some alarm among the cotton planters as to the probable appearance of the caterpillar this season, I would, with your kind permission, make some few suggestions, through your columns, in relation to means which may in some degree thwart, if duly employed, their relentless course of devastation.

It is well known to most of the older cotton planters that a marked amelioration of the effects of the ravages of the cotton worm has been observed in those fields contiguous to newly cleared land, wherein, either intentionally or accidentally, fires have been kept up at night. In such places there are frequently piles of brush and timber raked up along the turn-rows, which, if they are regularly kept burning during the appearance of the moth, would destroy millions of propagators of caterpillars, which might otherwise be spread over the adjoining fields.

Nay, it is my opinion that it would be means judiciously expended, were those who are interested in cotton growing to employ a certain force to cut wood and keep up bright fires of nights, for several weeks, during the moth season, along the borders of their cotton fields.

All have observed with what inevitable and reckless precipitancy the insect creation, on dark nights, dash themselves into the flame of a candle or other fires within their reach. Thus it may be perceived that this mark of their nature may be put to good account in the case of the moth, and millions of the cotton-devouring worm may be destroyed in this way.

One moth produces thousands of caterpillars, and the death of one moth is, of consequence, the death of them.

In this connection we would suggest a sort of trap contrivance in the shape of a field lamp for the destruction of the moth, which may be constructed at the tinner's or on the plantation, at a comparatively small expense. The description of it is as follows: Take a square piece of board or tin, say 12 by 12 inches; erect on the corners four posts, half an inch or more in thickness, with two grooves at sufficient angles, for the purpose of allowing the insertion of four glass plates, or sides, (common window panes may be used for this purpose,) over this frame erect a hip roof of tin or wood, attaching it to the frame by means of small pieces of wire or pegs of wood, allowing the eves to project an inch and-a-half or two inches over the edge of the glass sides, and leaving but a half inch intervening between the roof and sides as a passway for insects.

Finally bore a hole in the centre of the floor of the frame, for the insertion of a little square post three or four inches high and one inch square with small staples of wire or tin, to receive the hooks of four small tin reflectors. Now, if four small lamps be placed on the floor of this simple contrivance, and before the reflectors, and set burning, and then placed in the centre of the cotton-field infested with moths, it will soon be observed that thousands of the insect world will be attracted by its glare (providing the night be a dark one,) and lighting on its sides, will flutter their way up the side to the top of them and finally topple over into the heated chamber to suffocate by the gasses within. We would advise the use of coal oil for the lamps.

The trial of this lamp is a simple and cheap experiment, and we think it behooves those interested in cotton planting to try it, as it can be easily made by any one of the least mechanical turn. — Civic Guard.

To Prevent Horses being Teased by Flies.

Take two or three small handfuls of walnut leaves, upon which pour two or three quarts of cold water; let it infuse one night; pour the whole next morning into a kettle, and let it boil for a quarter of an hour.—When cold, it is fit for use. No more is required than to moisten a sponge, and before the horse goes out of the stable, let those parts which are most irritable be smeared over with the liquor, namely, between and upon the neck, flank, etc. Not only the lady or gentleman, who rides out for pleasure, will derive pleasure from the walnut leaves thus prepared, but the coachman, the wagoner, and all who use horses during the hot months.

Cure for Cholera.

A contributor to the National Intelligencer has the following:

Dr. Hamliu, of Constantinople, saved hundreds of lives by the following simple preparation, during the terrible raging of cholera in that city a few years since.

In no case did the remedy fail where the disease could be reached in season. It is no less effective in cholera morbus and in ordinary diarrhœa. A remedy so easily procured, and so vitally efficacious, should be always at hand.

An ordinary phial of it can be had for twenty-five cents, and no family should be without it over night. The writer of this received the recipe a few nights since, and having been evidently attacked with cholera morbus the past week, can attest to its almost magical influence in affording relief from excruciating pain.

He ardently hopes that every one whose eyes trace these lines will cut out the article from the paper, and procure the medicine without delay. Its prompt application will relieve pain, and, presumptively, save life. Take

One part laudanum,
One part camphorated spirit,
Two parts tincture of ginger,
Two parts capsicum.

Dose—One tea-spoonful in a wine-glass of water. If the case is obstinate, repeat the dose in three or four hours.

RACE OF PIGMIES.—It is singular how, as knowledge of the world increases, that of the Ancient Greeks is confirmed. We read in Homer of a race of pigmies upon whom the cranes make war as they fly around "Ocean's stream."

"To pigmy nations wounds and death they bring."

And here they are in Africa, as described by Dr. Du Chillu, an eminent traveller:

The males measure 4 feet 6 inches; the females 4 feet ¼ inch. The smallest woman had the largest head, viz: 1 foot 10 1-5 inches in circumference; the smallest 1 foot 9 inches around. They have only short tufts of hair upon their heads, and are thus strikingly distinguished from the settled inhabitants, who wear large turrets of hair upon their heads. They have a wild amorous and timorous expression in their eyes, and although I gave many beads to entice some of them to remain, and was brought to them stealthily by the natives, all the men except a young adult disappeared, leaving a few women behind."

It is more than probable that the further travels will discover even a more niminutive race of men, so that "pigmy men" may not be altogether a fable.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,
GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught

TERMS:

Tuition fees per term,.....$40 00
Contingent fee,..... 5 00

Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month
aug4ft W M WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

STONEWALL INSTITUTE.

The President of this Institution is gratified to announce to its patrons and friends that the regular scholastic year will open on the

FIRST MONDAY OF OCTOBER NEXT,

under the following Corps of Teachers:

D. C. B. CONNERLY, M. A., PRINCIPAL, AND TEACHER OF ANCIENT LANGUAGES.
G. M. CALLEN, M. A., TEACHER OF MATHEMATICS.
H. Y. WEISSINGER, M. A., ASSISTANT IN ANCIENT LANGUAGES AND ENGLISH LITERATURE.
JNO D LELAND, M. A., ASSISTANT IN MATHEMATICS AND MODERN LANGUAGES.

This school for boys and young men is located in the high and healthy hills of Perry County, Ala., thirteen miles North of Selma, and five miles North of Summerfield; and can be reached in a three hours' drive from Selma. Its locality is healthy almost beyond comparison. It is the property of no sect or set of men, and is not controlled by Trustees. It is the property solely of the Principal, who alone is responsible to the patrons of the Institute, for its management and discipline.

The Principal has engaged these three gentlemen of energy to join him in giving to the rising generation rare opportunities for acquiring an education. With the experience of fifteen years in controlling boys, and with the devotion and energy which will be given to the interest of our pupils, we think it proper to say that every right-minded man, who sends us a good boy, shall be satisfied with the results.

We do not intend to exhort men to send to us; but we do intend to make it the true interest of our friends to commit their sons to our charge.

Our experience during the past year enables us to say that here we have power to control, and subject to study, our pupils, far greater than we ever had in any village.

From October to July, we shall carefully superintend the morals, manners, and intellectual training of our students.

No boy will be received whose moral character is not satisfactory; nor do we purpose going beyond eighteen pupils to the teacher, thus giving great advantages to our classes. For Board, including washing, and tuition by night and by day, from October to July, no matter what the age of the boy is, and no matter what he studies, our charge is Three Hundred and Sixty Dollars; one hundred and eighty paid on entering and the remainder Feb. 14th, 1867.

Each student must furnish two blankets, two sheets, two pillow cases, and his own towel and lights.

Besides, every one must bring money, from ten to twenty dollars to pay for his books and stationery. These terms must be literally complied with.

If a student is dismissed for any cause, or if he has to retire, and does so with our approval, his money will be refunded, but if he leaves without this approval, or runs away, his money will not be refunded; nor will any deduction be made for absence unless occasioned by a protracted sickness of one month's duration.

The patrons of this school embrace many of the most distinguished men of Central Alabama. Their sons can furnish the best evidence and strongest assurances that all our plans and management look to the progress of the pupil: and that around the entire establishment we constantly throw an air of home and contentment.

Parties wishing to commit their sons and wards to a school all of whose movements are systematically controlled to advance the real mental training of inmates, and whose daily and weekly schedule, even on Saturdays and Sundays, is moved by the clock, are cordially invited to address the undersigned by letter.

D. C. B. CONNERLY,
Stonewall Institute, near Summerfield, Ala.

SOUTH-WESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Where is it located? Its Depository and Bible-House is at its own building, No. 163 Camp street, New Orleans.

When was it established? 1850.

Who is its General Agent to whom correspondence on its business should be addressed? Rev. James Beattie.

Where is the Society's field of labor? All of Louisiana, and all of Mississippi, south of the 33rd parallel of North latitude.

What is the object of the Society? To explore and supply (gratuitously where needed) the destitution of the Holy Scriptures.

What are the resources and whence the income of the Society? From the annual contributions of its members. Collections of Churches within its field, collections at public meetings and anniversaries. Appropriations of the surplus funds of its auxiliaries, the donations of generous individuals, testamentary bequests, and the annual donation in Books of the American Bible Society.

What is the Society's method of work? By cultivating its own local work in the city and district of New Orleans: then through Auxiliary Societies established or to be established in every Parish and County in the field, and the employment by them of such means as will accomplish the object of the Society.

What are the terms of membership?

The payment of $30 at one time constitutes a life member.

The payment of $150 at one time, constitutes a life Director.

The payment of $1000 at one time, constitutes a life Patron.

The payment of $3 annually, constitutes a member.

The taking up of a collection by a church constitutes the Pastor an honorary member.

Having thus briefly stated the main features of the Society's work, income and expenditure, the Board of Directors for the current year confidently ask the aid of all lovers of the Bible, whether professors of religion or not: to strengthen the hands of the S. W. B. S. by founding (or reviving Auxiliaries, by donating and urging donations, by exploring and reporting the destitution of the Scriptures, by commencing or renewing memberships of all grades and by establishing connections with the Society as the Lord has prospered them according to that Scripture which says "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal." To ministers and professing Christians of every Orthodox Protestant Church, the Board of Directors, representing in its body all such within our bounds, appeals with confidence to aid them by judicious effort, a prompt performance of duty and a prayerful commendation of the Society to the blessing of Almighty God, for except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it, except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain.

Our last thought is the heart-cry of the Great Reformation. No forbidding of the Word: no tampering with the text: no man's note or comment: God's Word: Christ's Word: the Holy Spirit's Word: Free: Free: Free. a25 1y.

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,
For the Autumn of 1866, and
FLORAL GUIDE,

is now Published. It contains Descriptions of the Best Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lillies, etc., With full descriptions, and plain and full directions for Planting; Culture, Prices, etc. Illustrated with numerous line engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the Single and Double Tulip and Scilla. My importation from the best Bulb Growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country. This Catalogue and Guide is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost. Postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my Catalogue. Address

aug. 25. JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANO.

A lady whose high attainments as a composer and as a performer on and successful teacher of the Piano, can be well attested, proposes to give lessons to a few pupils in the city, commencing in September or October.

Reference: Rev. J U Keener, D D; Rev J B Walker, D D; Rev L Parker.

For particulars address: "Pianist," Christian Advocate Office 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

WOODVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE SECOND SESSION

Will begin October 3rd 1866, and close July 10th, 1867. The system of instruction aims at the truest mental, moral, and social culture. The discipline seeks to embrace whatever is helpful to this end, and to exclude what is hurtful to it. Obedience to rightful authority, is a necessary to membership in the school.

TERMS PER SESSION.

Board, with fuel, lights and washing, $300 00
Tuition in Preparatory course, 60 00
" Academic " 80 00
" Collegiate " 100 00
Music, 80 00

Other ornamentals as low as can be afforded.

The Collegiate course embraces Latin and French without any extra charge. These charges are made from the beginning of the half month in which the pupil is entered, to the end of the session, and must be paid, one half in advance, and the other on the 1st of March, nor will assignment of a pupil to room, seat or class, be made until this demand is met. A sum sufficient to get books, music, and medicines for slight sickness, must be deposited with the Principal. Each boarding pupil must be provided with a supply of plain, neat clothing suitable to the season, and also with towels, table napkins—all marked in the owner's name. When a pupil, not residing in the Seminary, or one not remaining in it during her illness, is sick more than twenty consecutive days, a deduction of one half the charges for the time will be made.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Principal.
Woodville, Miss., Aug. 8th, 1866. aug25 3m.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.—

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.

The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.

TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $10.—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March,

Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.

Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.

Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.

As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.

W. H. N. MAGRUDER.
Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE

HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,

REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.

Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.

Next annual term opens first Monday in September.

For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.

Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A. M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.

The Fall Session of this institution will open on the 26th day of September next.

This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattrasses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.

The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:

For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks, $67 50
Regular Tuition, 25 00
Incidental Fee, 2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of instrument 37 50
French or Spanish, 15 00
Ornamental branches at usual prices.

☞ All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.

The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.

After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.

For other information address

CHARLES B. STUART, President,
ng4ft Mansfield, La.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,

Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. GEO. F. THOMPSON, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Millsaps, Rev. George H. Clinton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.

Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.

The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Jan. 31, 1867.

For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. a18ft

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M.,	President, Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight; Miss Anna M. Ross,	Music, French, Drawing. Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Marie S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout, the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bed clothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September. Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT.

D. G. HUMPHREYS, Pres. Board of Trustees. jy14 6m

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE
SUMMERFIELD, ALA.

The next scholastic year begins Monday, Oct. 1st, 1866. A quarter of a century in successful operation, with hundreds of cultivated daughters in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, and under the immediate care and patronage of the Mobile and Montgomery Conferences, this institution can afford and is determined to maintain a high standard of scholarships. Only experienced and skillful educators are employed by the Trustees. Among the recent additions to the Faculty are two gentlemen for a series of years Professors in the State University.

Those desiring really thorough culture for their daughters, will do well to investigate the claims of this institution.

For particulars or a circular apply to the President, Rev. R. K. Hargrove.

a1b 1m A. H. MITCHELL, Pres. Board.

NORTH, BRUSH & MASON,

Wholesale Dealers in

Fancy Goods,

STATIONERY, PERFUMERY, CUTLERY,

HOSIERY,

Furnishing Goods, etc.,

35 MAGAZINE STREET,

Opposite the St. James Hotel, New Orleans, La
aug25 1y

CHAS. H. CHURCHILL.
PETER G. TAYLOR.

HARDWARE AND GUNS.

TAYLOR & CHURCHILL,

DIRECT IMPORTERS,

41 MAGAZINE STREET, and 20 BANK PLACE, (Opposite St. James Hotel.) NEW ORLEANS, LA.

We have in stock, and are constantly receiving some choice patterns of English and American Table and Pocket Cutlery, to which we invite the attention particularly of country merchants. Also, a large stock of Trace, (ix and Log Chains, English and American Hoes, Anvils, Vices and Bellows; Scales, manufactured by the Novelty Iron Works; Files, English and American.

COTTON AND WOOL CARDS, NOVA SCOTIA GRIND STONES, PLOWS.
Hall & Speer's Peacock Plows, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; Hall & Speer's Cast Valley Plows, Nos. 1 & 2; King Cary (wood mould board) Plows.
GUNS, NAILS, SAWS, TIN WARE, AXES.
HOLLOW WARE.

Of all patterns and brands. All the above is offered for sale at the lowest market quotations. Orders from the country are respectfully solicited by TAYLOR & CHURCHILL, 41 Magazine street, and 20 Bank Place, opposite St James Hotel. Established in New Orleans without intermission, by the present senior member of the firm, in 1832. aug25 1y

W. H. HENNING & CO.,

Grocers and Commission Merchants,

95 and 97, CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Offers to Families, Planters and Traders a full stock of Fancy and Staple Goods, consisting in part of

CHAMPAGNE,
BRANDIES,
WHISKIES,
CLARET,
CORDIALS, ETC.

Also, a large lot of Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Pork, Beef, Bacon, Salt; anitahla for Plantation supplies,—all of which will be offered at the Most reasonable Rates.

☞ Country orders will receive the most careful and prompt attention.

W H HENNING & CO,
a25 6m 95 & 97 Camp street, New Orleans

WALLACE & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, and

PLANTATION CLOTHING,

No. 74 CANAL STREET, AND 91, 93 AND 95 COMMON STREET, (SLOCUMB BUILDING), NEW ORLEANS

☞ Sales guaranteed at New York prices. a18 1y

JAMES SYME,

Wholesale Druggist,

139 CANAL STREET, (Touro Buildings.)
NEW ORLEANS.

Importer and Dealer in Fine
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS,
DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES,
Fancy Goods and Perfumery.
Surgical Instruments.
French, English, and American, of every variety
Also—
Medicine Chests and Medical Saddle-bags.
aug25 1y

A. D. GRIEFF,
Wholesale Grocer,
COMMISSION MERCHANT, AND DEALER IN SOUTHERN AND WESTERN PRODUCE,
48, 50 and 52 Old Levee st., corner Bienville st.,
aug25 6m NEW ORLEANS.

A. H GRISWOLD. W. M. GOODRICH.

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,

Corner of Canal and Royal streets,
[Late HYDE & GOODRICH],

Established In New Orleans Fifty Years!

MANUFACTURERS OF JEWELRY & SILVER WARE,

Importers of Watches, Diamonds, Clocks, Bronzes, Porcelain, Plated Ware, Cutlery, Fancy Goods, Guns and Pistols.

The largest assortment in the South always on hand. aug25 6m

SOUTHERN SHOE MANUFACTORY.

DRAKE & MARKHAM,

Manufacturers of

Men's, Boys', Ladies', Misses' & Children's

BOOTS AND SHOES,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

No. 56 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

We call the attention of the public to our extensive stock of fine custom-made Creole Boots and Shoes, for Gents, Boys, Youths, Ladies, Misses and Children, made of the best imported stock, by skillful workmen.

We design furnishing goods that combine elegance with durability, at a less price than common goods are usually sold for in this city.

OUR LAST-FOR-EVER BOOTS!

Every man in this State should have a pair of our Last-for-ever Boots. They are warranted waterproof, and to last one year, or the money returned.

Our stock of Family and Plantation Shoes are the best that can be made.

One pair will outwear any three pairs bought at auction. Country Merchants will do well to make a note of this.

We have better goods and sell them lower than any house in Louisiana.

Orders filled at ten per cent. on the original cost of manufacture.

All goods warranted to satisfy, or they may be returned. Planters will instruct their Commission Merchants to buy their shoes of

DRAKE & MARKHAM, 56 CAMP STREET
aug18 1y

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY

Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,

Of the late Firm and Successors to G. W. COFFIN & CO.,

102 & 104 East Second street,
Cincinnati, Ohio,

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. je15

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This Institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address

6J-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles st., corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered in 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no copying from books.

Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law, English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages; Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics and Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.

For catalogues containing full information call at the office, or address

f3 1y GEO. SOULE, N. M.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD

Established, August, 1861.

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January, 1866.

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET, 18

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURE to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF, WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

C. E. CATE & CO.
feb17 18 Camp st., N. O.

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St. Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons Type. ap7-1

J. B. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.

JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.

Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans. ap14-1y

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 35, WHOLE NUMBER 601.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1866.

$3 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE. OFFICE—112 CAMP STREET.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

OUR GERMAN CORRESPONDENCE.

BREMEN, Aug. 16th, 1866.

MR. EDITOR: "What next?" is the anxious inquiry of the Germans. Hope and fear, joy and sorrow, fill their breasts. "Fear?" you say, "what fear?" has not Germany been greatly blessed through the Prussian victories? enabling, once in their life, the people of the fatherland, not to blush when, in foreign countries, the name of their country is expressed? They fear, because they mean to hear the distant mutterings of thunder, of war, a second war, compared with which the first will have been mere child play. Napoleon appears at last to show his "horse-foot," and at present all the German "press is on fire," indignant at the demands of the Emperor of France. Having done nothing in the late war, it seems that he wants to be remunerated for his inactivity. There is no doubt but that this Emperor, a few days ago, sent in his programme to the Cabinet of Berlin, according to which the French boundary line on the Rhine of 1814 is to be re-established.

Perhaps the Prussian Cabinet will accede to this programme, specially, too, because the Prussian territory on the Rhine, to be ceded to France, consists simply in a small province, Serralonis; the remainder of the claimed territory being now the property of Belgium and Bavaria. But there is reason to think that Remark will not be so willing to give the territory to France, as Cavour, of Italy, was in 1859. And furthermore, the people seem determined never to let go the Rhine. As soon as the subject is brought on, a thousand voices rise and sing:

"Sie sollen ihn nicht haben, den freien deutschen Rhein."

At all events, it is not at all improbable that ere long Germany will be precipitated into a war with France. This would be the more deplorable inasmuch as Prussia has, thus far, had no time to reorganize this country in a manner as effectually to withstand a formidable army. And at the same time, there is little telling what, in case of such a war, Austria would do. And furthermore, could Italy prove so recreant, so ungrateful as in Prussia's hour of need, not to hurry to its assistance. Yet, in all probability, such recreancy would be exhibited. Russia would probably side with Prussia. Of course, we all know what England will do: like an old woman, it will talk; and talk, and therewith be content.

In the meantime the reform projects of the Prussian Government are being carried out. The commissioners of peace between the belligerents have not yet brought matters to a close; howbeit, enough has been said by the Berlin official organs as to leave no doubt as to the terms already known to the public. Prussia claims no territory from its enemy; so that Austria will actually lose no more than the kingdom of Venetia, ceded to France, and now occupied by King Emanuel. But with this, Austria defrays the Prussian war-expenses; allows Prussia to absorb the Elbe Duchies, and so to reorganize Germany north of the river Main as may be deemed expedient by the Berlin Cabinet. A glance at the map will show you that such a new government, under Prussian auspices, would prove a formidable rival to France, being, in point of size and population, perfectly on a par with the same. No wonder that Napoleon has considerable hesitancy in acquiescing to Prussia's aggrandizement.

You are aware that in the beginning of the present war, Austria allured the most German minor governments to its side. But now, having not only not been able to assist these petty allies, but being also itself badly beaten in the stipulations of peace, the Vienna Cabinet expresses no concern about their doom. Hanover, Hesse-Cassel and others, let them now do what they can, this government was solely occupied with itself, with the only one exception of speaking a few words for King John, of Saxony. It appears, therefore, that in the reorganization of Germany, the territorial integrity of Saxony will not be affected. Howbeit, even Saxony, with the other North-German minor governments, will be deprived of the exclusive rights of sovereignty. It will neither be represented with foreign governments, nor will it have any further jurisdiction over its military contingent. Both of these rights fall to the share of Prussia. I doubt whether the former monarchs of Hesse and Hanover will be reinstated: very probably will their dominions be entirely absorbed by Prussia, in contradistinction from Oldenburg, Coburg, Gotha and others, which will, like Saxony, be allowed, with the resignation of exclusive sovereignty, to maintain a formal separate organization. All those retained German monarchs will, in the new order of things, be nothing more than civil commissioners of the Berlin Cabinet.

Only let the dreaded war with France be avoided, and it is obvious to you, that through the Prussian victories, Germany has been greatly benefitted. Long enough had Germany been the sport of its neighbors, neighbors who designedly encouraged the existing division of the fatherland so as never to be molested by the same.

Germany south of the Main is to be organized into another government under Bavarian auspices, and in which Austria is not to take any part whatever. No doubt that this separation of North and South Germany is simply a temporary affair, and that in the course of a few years, King William, like King Emmanuel now, will effect an entire and consummate union of all the country.

It will not surprise you to hear, that even among the people, there are a great many who are opposed to the Prussian work of reformation. With all the former despotism, there are thousands who are still greatly attached to the deposed and worsted "small fry" of monarchs. This strong sympathy is in part owing to the influence of the former and numerous officials, whose privileges, likewise, will in the new order of things be considerably curtailed. "The axe knoweth his owner." But of course this particularism of certain classes will not affect Bismarck's policy.

The cholera is now creating sad havoc in this country. The Prussian army has been seized with the same.

Yours,

J. B. A. AHRENS.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

KNOWLEDGE AND FAITH.

Both knowledge and faith are christian experiences. The former is common to all men; the latter is peculiar to the child of God, in his incohate and mature state. They are, in christian experience, intimately related, generally united; and they almost always reveal themselves to consciousness as objects of contemplation, contiguously if not contemporaneously; yet they are different in origin, in order of development, in nature, in objects and in moral character. Knowledge is not mind but the property of mind. It may spring from mind, considered as action, passion, or spontaneously productive; active when it goes out in search of truth, passive when truth enters as through the agency of the senses, and spontaneously productive as in original suggestion. Knowledge has this three-fold origin, yet it is all in and through and becomes the exclusive property of mind, of the intellect, and then it stops there. Not so of faith. Knowledge is not dependent upon, nor does it have its origin in the moral sense. The moral sense takes up the moral element involved, not in truth, but in its relations; and decides what ought to be done; and approves or condemns according as there has been action or non action in accordance with the rule. Not so of faith. Knowledge is not dependent on volition or the will. Truth cannot create, nor be created, annihilate nor be annihilated, transmute nor be transmuted, modify nor be modified, by volition. It has absolute attributes, it is eternal and unchangeable, but it is inert; a faithful picture drawn by a Divine Artist, but only a picture. The mind acts upon truth rather than truth upon the mind. Knowledge cannot, even when associated with volition, create a statue, annihilate granite, transmute lead into gold, nor so modify the laws of nature as to bring life out of death, nor can they, acting alone, command the agencies by which these things can be done. Not so of faith. Faith is done of these, nor all of these, yet implying all of them as antecedent and contemporaneous. Knowledge to furnish the rule, conscience to furnish the sense of obligation, and volition to bring into action the latent power of faith. Faith is the soul; considered as composed of intellect, sensibilities and will, in action; moving toward, laying hold upon, bringing itself to God and Christ, and holding itself there, in contact with the original fountain of creating and transforming power, until it is changed into the same image from glory to glory as by the spirit of God.

Knowledge, to know, knowing, ordinarily implies a mental state or possession consequent upon previous mental action, but does not necessarily presuppose moral action nor volition. Faith, saving faith implies all three of these as precedent, and some say not only as antecedent, but as constituent elements of faith itself.

Abelard's motto was, "knowledge precedes faith." Augustine says "faith precedes knowledge." Both of these maxims, in terms so contradictory, cannot be true, as predicable of the same, while they may be true as predicable of different experiences. To illustrate. One must know that Christ died to save sinners, before he can have that faith of the heart that is unto a present salvation. So Abelard's maxim is true. Again the faith that is unto justification and regeneration, that is unto spiritual life in Christ; must be antecedent to those experiences of justifying and regenerating grace by which we have the knowledge that, revealing itself to consciousness, enables us to say, "we know that we have passed from death unto life." In this case Augustine was correct. There is properly speaking no ground of quarrel, for the authors were speaking of different things. In the former case, knowledge precedes faith, is its foundation, and may possibly be called an essential though previously existing element of faith itself, and the knowledge was of something before, independent of, and without the believer, that is of Christ and of the purposes of his mission and death. In the latter case the experiences of justification and regeneration, intervene between and separate the antecedent faith from the subsequent knowledge of these states, and the knowledge is of something within, that is done for the believer, judicially in justification, and actually, creatively, in regeneration. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the word of God or instrumentally by preaching. The order then is, first the word or knowledge; second, faith, the soul affectionately accepting the word or knowledge previously received, as the rule of action and law of salvation; third, new experiences as the results of faith, which become objects of new knowledge, pleasures of a religious life, of a life of faith; peace, love and joy. The first knowledge, of which Abelard speaks, is of what God has revealed to man as a sinner, and goes before and along with fear and penitence, as a schoolmaster, leading the way to Christ; the second knowledge, of which Augustine speaks, comes after we have found Christ, and is based upon what God has done for us, and in us, as testified to by the two witnesses, our own spirit and the spirit of God. Abelard was not a rationalist, nor was Augustine a spiritualist or enthusiast. Knowledge may precede faith, and yet faith may by reaction intensify knowledge, because faith accepts it as a rule of action. Peter says, "we believe and know that thou art Christ." Faith may convert ordinary intuitive belief, conviction, into knowledge by the agency of the illuminating Spirit. "If any man will do the will of God," that is up to the measure of his belief or conviction of what is true, "he shall know of the doctrine" that it is from God. That is, use light and have more light. Thus the gospel reveals its infinitely unfolding glories not only by knowledge to knowledge, but as Paul says, from "faith to faith." John reversing the order of Peter and speaking with his remarkable philosophical accuracy says, "That ye may know and believe that the Father is in me and I in Him!" This view diverts christianity of enthusiasm in any opprobious sense, makes a faith based on knowledge a rational faith, and our christianity a rational religion; commending itself as it does to human reason, and to all men that come to its evidences, revelations and experiences, in simplicity and sincerity, desiring to know the truth and to be conformed thereunto. To all such the word leads to faith, and the word, though inert in itself, is, through faith, made not only the sword of the Spirit, but the power of God unto salvation.

Devils have knowledge, a moral sense, power of volition, and they believe, but they cannot have faith; for the gospel, though known, is not a rule of salvation to them. Sinners as such have knowledge, conscience, will and belief; but they have not faith: not because faith is impossible to them; not because the gospel is not a rule of salvation to them, but simply because they will not accept it as a rule of life, and walk by faith, that is "by the light that lighteneth every man that cometh into the world." Christ is that light. He is the candle, of the persistent wicked, that shall be put out. Unbelief crucifies Him. Faith brings him up from the dead. Under this view instructed, but perverse and persistent sinners, that will not have faith in Christ, are worse than devils, for faith and salvation are possible to the former, not to the latter. Genuine poetry is true to nature. In that "deep" the poet saw a "lower deep," opening wide. Nothing is made in vain. All the necessities and wants of the physical and spiritual universe are met. Wants for pleasure, wants for pain, for rewards and punishment, for the ends of redeeming mercy and of distributing justice. O God! thy work is perfect, thy judgments just, none can charge them. No deficiency, no redundancy. Nothing ultimately out of its place. The prince of the power of the air may mobilize all the legions of darkness, and he cannot open heaven to one of his subjects; and man, though he anathematize all the hosts of heaven, earth, and hell, cannot keep one sinner, having faith in Christ, from eternal life; nor one sinner, without faith, from endless death.

Again, knowledge is of the intellect only. To know, is a mental state, and implies mind, and truth as the property of mind: and the phrase expresses the relation of possession. The mind may be active in gaining or reviving the memory of truth, but it is passive in retaining it. Faith is not mind, nor is it action; it is not truth, nor is it volition; it is not memory, nor is it conscience; but it expresses the soul, the whole intellectual and moral nature, in action; under the guidance of the moral sense, and moved by volition, in accordance with knowledge, and the moral rule revealed by its relations. Faith is the soul, the man, acting in accordance with the rule of right, the law and the gospel. Hence, whatsoever is not of faith is sin.

Knowledge is predicable of a being conceived to be devoid of a moral nature, and even of the power of volition, choice, passions or affections. Not so of faith. It chooses, reaches after, attains the object that presents itself through knowledge to, and as worthy of the affections. Constituted as we are, the intellect, in its individual and moral action, considers only what is and what is not. Combined in its action with the moral sense, it determines what ought and what ought ought not to be done, thus giving the law or rule to faith. Faith says the rule shall be kept, faith acts upon the rule. Faith not in action, without works, is dead. "Show me thy faith without thy works," that is, not in action, and you will show me a dead faith, that having the name only; and "I will show you my faith by my works," that is a faith in action, a living faith, that has not only the name, but that is the thing. Knowledge reveals Christ as the way, the truth, the life. Faith takes, appropriates, as a Him as such. The intellect perceives Him for to this end is He the light that lighteneth every man, but faith affectionately embraces Him as a Saviour. The mere knowledge of Christ is compatible with aversion, repugnance, and opposition to Him; but faith implies love for and harmony with Him. Knowledge is the promise, but faith is the "substance" of the promise; it brings the thing promised into immediate possession and enjoyment. Knowledge may be Christ in History, in the Church, in Prophecy, in Providence; but faith is Christ incarnate, living, interceding, reigning as Prophet, Priest and King. Knowledge may be Christ in the apprehension of the intellect, but faith is Christ enthroned within us, as gracious sovereign over the intellect, will and the affections. "I in you."

The faith of the gospel is the faith of the heart, out of the understanding; for "with the heart man believeth unto righteousness." Knowledge may work death, faith works only life. Knowledge may work by hatred and contaminate the heart, "faith works" only "by love and purifies the heart." Knowledge may give the rule to intellect, sensibilities and will; but faith subordinates all of these to the rule. Knowledge is not a cause, a producer, an agent. Faith is all of these combined, or if not so in itself, it yet draws at pleasure, under the promise, from the original and uncreated fountain of agency, production and causation, from God Himself. "Whatsoever I do, that shall ye do also, and greater things than these shall ye do," because I go unto my Father." Thus is the Father "glorified in the Son," through faith in Him.

Knowledge does nothing. Faith does all things. Read the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. Faith offers a sacrifice acceptable to God; translated and delivers from death; builds an ark which condemns the world to destruction, and yet repeoples it after the deluge; finds a country, and a city, which knowledge has not revealed; revivifies the barren womb and gives the ancestry of Christ, from one as good as dead; binds the "child of promise" to the altar, and restores him as from the grave; subdues kingdoms; stops the mouths of lions; quenches the violence of fire; by faith they that were weak are made strong, and escape the edge of the sword, for the aliens flee before them; and by faith, others endure mockings, scourging, bonds, imprisonment, are stoned and sawn asunder, and wander about in sheepskins, and goatskins, in deserts and in mountains, and in dens and caves of the earth, being destitute and afflicted, and tormented; "of whom the world was not worthy." Walking, working, and enduring, by faith, they would not "accept deliverance," though offered, for they had reference to the "recompense of reward," and waited for a "better resurrection." By faith all these obtained a good report, and though dead they speak to and wait for us, on whom the ends of the world are come, for "they, without us," who walk by the same faith, shall "not be made perfect." Knowledge is good, for it gives, it is the expression of the divine will and purposes, and promises, as written on the pages of nature and revelation, but faith is better, for it secures for us and in us the accomplishment of those gracious promises.

FIDES.

Mississippi Conference.

NAPOLEON III.—"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad," and they have certainly of late too frequently had the intoxicating bowl to the lips of Napoleon. His course for the last six months has been downward with accelerated speed. He has received snub after snub, followed by no open rebuff. Austria refused to enter his peace conference, Italy treated with contempt the transfer of Venetia to his hands, and Prussia hailed her fist and openly defied his insolent demand for German soil. It is, indeed, a mystery how Napoleon could have been led into his last fatal error; the merest tyro in German policy and feeling could have told him that his proposition would be received with scorn and resolve. What a change in the European situation within a few short weeks! Austria humiliated into the dust; Italy, though the gainer of a province, a great loser in national glory and pride, the victor in spite of defeat, simply from the happy fact of an alliance with Prussia; France precipitated from her high estate as the arbiter of nations, with her counsels and her threats unheeded; and Prussia—we hope soon to be able to say Germany—risen like a brilliant sun, as a star of the first magnitude. Verily, man proposes, but God disposes.—Western Christian Advocate.

That man is not good enough for any place who thinks no place good enough for him.

SUMMER RAIN.

Beautiful rain of Summer
Trickling down the pane,
Falling with softest murmur
Into the heated drain,
Pouring its gushing life-drops
Down on the parching sod;
Making each flower and grass-blade
Spring up to worship God.

Beautiful rain of Summer!
Never was strain so sweet
As thy refreshing murmur
After the dust and heat.
O, how the cold drops patter
Down on the thirsting earth,
Calling a thousand nemadies
Up to a second birth.

How the dear days of childhood
Come with their rainbow hues!
How thy prismatic colors
Brighten the faded views!
How the dear, vanished voices
Sound on the heart again,
Mingling with thy sweet chorus—
Beautiful Summer rain!

Beautiful rain of Summer!
Bringing the welcome breeze;
Washing the dust of the city
Off from the grateful trees;
Rippling down the gutters,
Gambolling down the eaves,
Dropping a shower of diamonds
Over the emerald leaves!

Filling the lowly washtub
Full of the pearly flood;
Easing the weary shoulder,
Cooling the heated blood;
Blessing the black man's hovel,
Blessing the herds and flocks,
Spreading the soft green mosses
Over the barren rocks.

Gushing as from Mount Horeb,
Struck by our Father's wand,
Bringing a flood of blessing
Over the scorching land;
Drenching the parching valley,
Soothing the bed of pain,
Filling the world with beauty—
Beautiful Summer rain!

Beautiful rain of Summer!
Falling like words of love,
With thy delicious music,
Down from the heavens above;
Where is the thankless spirit,
Where is the hardened brain,
Lifting no glad thanksgiving
For the refreshing rain?

God of the blessed rain drops!
God of the boundless sea!
Give me a thankful spirit
Ever to worship Thee.
Thanks to the clouds of morning,
Thanks for the ripened grain,
And the love that falls on the spirit
Like the blessed summer rain!

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

A WELL MANAGED SCHOOL.

The public has reached, to all appearance, a final decision as to the value of education as an agency to promote intelligence and virtue. And no longer as a custom, but as a duty in which solicitude is felt, do men educate their sons and daughters? In this, as in the case of other public utilities, a long time, many efforts, and much perseverance was needed to fix the present satisfactory opinion. As the next and sequential stage of public feeling on this subject, a closer scrutiny will be bestowed upon the management of schools claiming the patronage of the public. The defect in school keeping incident to the enterprise, will be found to be the difficulty of combining instruction and government. Observation and experience, to no inconsiderable extent, has led us to the conclusion that this difficulty has been overcome in very few instances; there are many schools that offer a full and satisfactory course of instruction, imparted under the best established methods of mental cultivation, but all government, except in the class room, is abandoned as inconsistent with success in giving instruction.

In other schools, government is administered as a specialty, but cultivation suffers as a consequence. A good disciplinarian may be a very poor teacher, and few of the many excellent teachers we know are good disciplinarians. For reasons known as yet to but few, most schools fall below public need and expectation in one or the other of the above mentioned respects.

We believe that one of the most remarkable examples of success in combining, in just proportions, instruction and government, is to be found in Prof. Magruder's Institute in this city. The Prof. has devoted many years, both as a teacher and the proprietor of a school, to secure a management which will afford all the advantages to be derived from a school; his success has fixed the merits of his establishment, and entitles him to signal distinction in school keeping.

His plan, as observed and concurred in by the thousands who have visited the school on business or otherwise, is simply the systematic administration of family government.

The large and well ventilated hall for study is separate from the other buildings of the establishment. This hall is lighted with gas, and during the hours of study, whether in the day or at night, the Prof. and his Tutors are present to conduct the preparation and establish the best habits of study among the boys. The recitation rooms form a part of this building, so as to place the body of students in access to each tutor, and under his observation. The dining hall forms a wing of the dwelling, the meals are prepared and used after the most approved family style. It is precisely at these hours that the visitor is impressed with the agreeable character of the school. Those pernicious habits which young people acquire in large boarding houses, where the provisions are scant, or of uniform character, or poorly prepared, are all guarded against, both by the plan of the professor, the presence of the family, and the refinements and amenities which are so judiciously recommended, both by example and instruction.

The sleeping apartments are upon the second floor of the mansion, and in two wings closely adjoining, so that it might be said the school, as a family, sleep under one roof. The object of the Prof. in this arrangement is to place himself in as close proximity as possible to every boy in case of indisposition, or otherwise, precisely the same solicitude and supervision that a father feels towards and exercises over his family.

The Prof. has a good knowledge of medicine, and is an admirable nurse, and unless otherwise instructed, takes every case of indisposition under his own treatment. The boys soon feel at home, acquire a ready confidence in the Prof., and last but not least receive their clothing from the hands of the Professor's excellent wife who seems to be as finished a helpmate for the Prof. as either he or the boys could desire.

Prof. Magruder ranks with the very best teachers of the country, and at his school a youth can prepare for admission into any college or university in the South or North, or can finish his education at the Institute.

Baton Rouge, the location of this school, is certainly one of the healthiest towns in Louisiana. In other respects no distinction is claimed for it.

Notice of the closing exercises of the past session was not furnished for publication, as was expected; the session was a successful one, and affords an evidence that the celebrity of the school has not been obtained by advertisements or puffs.

We have written this much and in this simple form to attract if possible the attention of many old and valued friends to this school, conceiving that we do them a real service in pointing a school suitable in all respects for their sons.

W. E. M. LINFIELD.

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 25th, 1866.

CLINTON FEMALE INSTITUTE.

The undersigned visiting committee appointed at the last session of the Mississippi Conference, to attend the examination and annual exhibition of the above named institution, take this method to make known to the church and the country, some facts concerning it, that we deem worthy of consideration by all the friends of Southern education.

First, as matter of interest, especially to Methodists, we will state that it is a Methodist school. It is under the direction and control of Methodists. The associate principals, Mrs. Mary S. Wall and Mrs Dunbar, were both reared and educated in the Methodist Church. The former is the daughter of the lamented Dr. Winans, and as a teacher has been long and favorably known. The latter is connected with some of the most eminent members of our church known to the literary world, and is a lady of much experience, acknowledged piety, and rare ability as a teacher. These ladies have been for several years associated in this great educational enterprise, and there are now many among the teachers and mothers of the land who were educated at Clinton Female Institute. Those are their Epistle.

Second. It is worthy of note that the cause of instruction and discipline in this school partakes more largely of a truly christian education than we are accustomed to observe in most institutions of the kind in our country. God and the great truths of his word are kept prominently before the minds of the pupils.

Third. The last annual exhibition took place on the 18th, 19th and 20th ultimo. Closing with a concert in the evening of the 20th. The examination of the several classes satisfied the committee, as well as the public, that much labor and care had been bestowed by faithful teachers, and more than ordinary proficiency had been made by the pupils in acquiring a knowledge of the several text books. With all candor we must say that we have never witnessed such promptness in answering the numerous questions—scarce a single failure.

Fourth. The musical department is under the special direction of Mrs. Dunbar. We but speak the sentiments of the entire community of Clinton, La., when we say that the concert given by her pupils on Friday evening was a "great success"—perhaps the best entertainment of the kind they have ever enjoyed at that place.

Fifth. The Clinton Female Institute is and has been for many years under the patronage of the Mississippi Conference. It is located at a most healthful and eligible point—is the only denominational school for young ladies in the Florida Parishes of Louisiana. The society of Clinton will, for intelligence and morality, compare favorably with any village in the State. There will soon be communication direct with the Mississippi River, by means of the Clinton and Port Hudson Rail Road, affording transportation from that direction. With the advantages enumerated, it does seem that a school for young ladies, under the supervision of the most experienced and thoroughly competent christian ladies, ought to succeed, and we cheerfully recommend Clinton Female Institute to public favor.

J. G. GODFREY,
C. J. HARRIS,
J. L. FORSYTH,
} Com.

APPEARANCE OF THE SUN FROM THE NORTH POLE.—To a person standing at the north pole, the sun appears to sweep horizontally around the sky every twenty-four hours, without any perceptible variation during its circuit in its distance from the horizon. On the 21st of June it is twenty-three degrees and thirty-eight minutes above the horizon—a little more than one fourth of the distance to the zenith, the highest point that it ever reaches. From this altitude it slowly descends, its track being represented by a spiral or screw with a very fine thread; and in the course of three months it worms its way down to the horizon, which it reaches on the 23d of September. On this day it slowly sweeps around the sky, with its face half hidden below the icy sea. It still continues to descend, and after it has entirely disappeared it is still so near the horizon that it carries a bright twilight around the heavens in its daily circuit. As the sun sinks lower and lower, this twilight grows gradually fainter and fainter till it fades away. On the 20th of December the sun is twenty three degrees and thirty-eight minutes below the horizon, and this is the midnight of the dark winter of the pole. From this date the sun begins to ascend, and after a time his return is heralded by a faint dawn, which circles slowly around the horizon, completing its circles every twenty-four hours. This dawn grows gradually brighter, and on the 20th of March the peaks are gilded with the first level rays of the six months' day. The bringer of this long day continues to wind his spiral way upward till he reaches his highest place on the 21st June, and his annual course is completed.

PLANETS DESTROYED.—The belief that this world is ultimately to be destroyed by fire is supported by the discovery that such a fate has befallen far larger planets than ours. French astronomers assert that no fewer than fifteen hundred fixed stars have vanished from the firmament within the last three hundred years. Tycho Brahe gives an interesting account of a brilliant star of the larger size, which, on account of its singular radiance, had become the special object of his daily observation for several months, during which the star gradually became paler until its final disappearance. La Place states that one of the vanished fixed stars of the northern hemisphere afforded indubitable evidence of having been consumed by fire. At first the star was dazzling white, next of glowing red and yellow lustre, and finally became a pale and ashen color. The burning of the star lasted sixteen months, when the sunny visitor, to which perhaps a whole series of planets may have owed allegiance, finally departed and became invisible forever.

NAPOLEON AND THE POPE.—Writes the Rome (Aug. 3) correspondent of the London Herald: "The reports current in Rome, if not absolutely alarming, are such as to create considerable uneasiness. A letter is said to have reached the Pope within the past few days from the Emperor Napoleon, stating that, in consequence of the progress of the revolution both at home and abroad, he should no longer be able to provide for the maintenance of the temporal power, and that the Pope must now prepare for the execution of the convention in December. The Pope received the intimation, it is said, with the greatest calmness, and said that he had long ceased to rely on the aid of man, and committed his cause and that of the church to God. Gen. Rufus King, the Minister of the United States, subsequently waited on his holiness, and offered him the escort, if necessary, of the American squadron, now cruising in the Mediterranean. The Pope declined the offer, with a strong expression of thanks, saying he had no intention of deserting his post, save in case of the most urgent necessity, or that the freedom of the church's action was coerced."

M. Guizot is about to add to his numerous works by the publication of Meditations on the Present State of the Christian Religion. He speaks mournfully of the prevalence of religious indifferentism, as well as the more positive errors of rationalism, materialism, and pantheism. And yet he declares, unhesitatingly his "firm belief in the final victory of Christianity over all forms of irreligion," and says: "Let not the enemies of Christianity deceive themselves; they are waging war unto death, but it is no dying foe with which they have to deal." And he does not hesitate to add, that "in the midst of these obstacles, oscillations, deviations, and faults which may be observed, there is an evident Christian awakening in Catholic France. There has been evidently progress in Christian faith, in Christian strength—progress incomplete and insufficient it may be, but still real and fruitful, the symptoms of a powerful vitality and a hopeful future."

ORIENTAL POLITENESS.—A Berlin correspondent of the London Times reports what he terms a delightful piece of Oriental courtesy, from Astrabad, the noted military port on the southern shore of the Caspian. It appears that the Shah of Persia, who had been travelling in those distant parts of his dominions with a suite of no less than three thousand persons, graciously bestowed a visit upon the Admiral of the Russian fleet anchored in that harbor. Among the amusements afforded the illustrious guest was a trip on the sea in a splendid steamer. The Shah no sooner found himself on the unwonted element than he experienced the ordinary sensations of humanity in visiting Neptune for the first time. The Russian admiral stood aghast, fearing the anger of the untrammelled despot. "I am afraid your Majesty is unwell," he at length observed, apologetically. "Not in the least," immediately retorted the polite Moslem; "I am now a guest in the house of my brother, Czar. How—how—how—can I feel otherwise than happy and delighted under his roof?"

RECEIPTS.—The American Tract Society received $165,883 last year, greatly exceeding the receipts of any year except the previous. The American Congregational Association received $123 216 last year, to be loaned or given for church-building purposes.

If you would be nothing, just wait to be something.

N. O. Christian Advocate

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery.
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1866.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27.—REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS.—By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precinded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, } Executive Com.
J. B. WALKER, } Joint Board of
L. PARKER, } Publication.

To the Presiding Elders of the Louisiana Conference.

BISHOPS' APPORTIONMENT.

Dear Brethren: By direction of the General Conference, the Delegates of each Annual Conference are instructed to apportion to the several Districts of their Conferences the amount required for the support of the Bishops. The total amount assigned to our Conference is $1140, which we have apportioned as follows:

New Orleans District	$300 00
Opelousas District	100 00
Alexandria District	100 00
Homer District	150 00
Minden District	150 00
Shreveport District	200 00
Bastrop District	100 00
Tensas District	50 00
	$1150 00

It is very important that this collection be taken up immediately by the Presiding Elders, or by the preachers in charge, and the amounts forwarded to the Book Agent at Nashville. We have made the apportionment with reference to the condition of the Districts, and we hope in a satisfactory manner.

JOHN C. KEENER.
LINUS PARKER,
J. B. WALKER,
ROBERT J. HARP,
W. E. LINFIELD.

NEW CARDS.

We call special attention to the cards of the following parties:

Messrs. VIOLETT, BLACK & Co., Cotton Factors, No. 138 Gravier street,—old and well known citizens and business men of New Orleans.

Messrs. LOTT, WOOD & Co., Wholesale Grocers, 65 Common street, formerly of Madison county, and Canton, Mississippi, long and favorably known throughout that State.

Messrs. CHENOWETH, CASEY & Co., General Commission Merchants, 53 Gravier street. Senior late Major of the 13th Ky. Confederate Cavalry—formerly of Cincinnati. Mr. Casey, formerly of St. Louis, was twice wounded in Confederate service.

JACOB BURCKETT, Grocer, 110 Camp street. Mr. Burckett, pays particular attention to country orders for Plantation and family supplies. He is one of our oldest grocers.

Messrs. RACE, FOSTER and JUDGE E. T. MERRICK—Attorneys at Law, practicing in the courts of this city, Corner of Camp St. and Commercial Alley. Judge Merrick, was for a number of years Chief Justice of the State. Messrs. Race and Foster have been practicing in this city for twenty years.

Mr. FELLOWES Jr., Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant No. 186 Common street.

Messrs. OBER, ATWATER & Co., Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, No. 39 Union street.

Messrs. HEWITT, NORTON & Co., Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, 188 Common street.

Messrs. WM. EDWARDS & Co., Commission Merchants, 27 Camp street.

Our endorsement of the above firms could add but little to the high estimate in which they are already held by the community and country.

INDIFFERENCE.

At this particular moment there are thousands of persons in the Southern States who feel no interest, anxiety, or care respecting any thing: as Cato,

"Indifferent in his choice to sleep or die."

This apathy of disappointed expectation, pervades every department of common life, and holds equally the energies of the church and of the state in its cold fetters.

Some are heartbroken from the loss of dear friends, some have seen the comforts and creations of a lifetime of toil and thought exhale, as dew, before the fires of war. Crops, granaries, mansions, homesteads, churches, the city and the field,

"Sublimed with mineral fury."

Struggling to escape one evil, it would seem as if many had overtaken them. Those liberties which were purchased by the blood of the revolution of '76, which they sought to maintain for themselves and children, have been put to hazard, and still tremble in the possibility of civil strife. That prayer and faith upon which they at one time staked so much, failed in the hour of need, and God has "forgotten to be gracious." Meanwhile, as David, they see "the wicked in great power spreading himself."

The effects of this stoicism of misfortune are traceable in the sluggish movements of classes of men who have herotofore been noted for activity. The planter, instead of promptly accepting the great change which has come over the system of labor, and at once passing from the large and full cultivation of planting, to the contracted and more economic, but no less comfortable condition of farming, follows numbers of slow-moving negroes to the field, who can eat faster than they work, as if yet doubtful of the great fact that the glory of the cotton culture of the South had forever fled. The politician, always seeking if not his own, his country's welfare, has forgotten that after the battle of the sword, it is often necessary to fight the still greater battle of diplomacy. Those who by long experience in this costly and difficult part of public service, are fitted to aid by counsel, have not risen to the demands of the occasion, but in great selfishness of soul have abandoned the South to its fate, by leaving the whole field of political office and influence to be occupied by men the most incompetent, inexperienced and unprincipled. Addison says, "it was a remarkable law of Solon, that any person who, in the commotions of the republic, remained neuter, or an indifferent spectator of the contending parties, should be condemned to perpetual banishment."

The minister of the gospel, the man who above all others was made for such times as these, must, forsooth, because the alarum of war has ceased, hang his trumpet on the wall! Having strongly involved his Master's message with the passions of the hour, and with what he felt to be a righteous cause; having with Peter drawn in the defence of all that was just and innocent, he cannot now brook the slightest displeasure of the Master. The extent to which God was pledged, by him, to save us out of all our troubles, now brings both the Lord and the preacher into question. Satan is prone to take advantage of sorrow and defeat. The lesson is one of the oldest. The suggestions of the Spirit of Evil have been repeated to myriads of great souls suffering under fortunes far less disastrous than that of the Patriarch, though it may be a discipline equally momentous. And it is, alas for our fallen nature, easier to receive than to resist his dark whisper, "Curse God and die."

That is a cheap philosophy which reckons success to be the measure of virtue: that human disaster is God's disapprobation. How stupid to suppose that the pains and ills of this life are only the punishment of the wicked! and how great the mistake of him who supposes that a good man has no use for sorrow; for sorrow in all its mystery, for without the mystery there is no trial. It is a matter of infinite import and angelic observation what effect the losses and sorrows of the past five years have had, and are now having upon the Church of God, and upon you personally, O reader. In many men the result has been, a truer purpose for good, sobriety of thought, greater firmness of character, a juster estimate of this life, and a higher self-respect than could have been derived from any passage of life less severe. Such beauties do come forth from such a storm—the prismatic colors rest upon an angry cloud. In some the elements of a spiritual as well as of a moral manhood have been developed: the Holy Spirit taking advantage of the discipline of the hour, has begotten in them repentance, prayer, humility, and living faith. The minister and the Church of God should be able to "endure as seeing him who is invisible;" to rise above the immediate storm-circle, as Luther and Melancthon and Spalatin used to, by climbing to the inspired heights of the forty-sixth Psalm. There is time enough at this late hour for faith to gain another and a greater battle; and after the defeat, like Buonaparte at at Marengo, come off conqueror.

The higher "citizenship of Heaven" seems never to have entered the minds of men who see only the history of an hour in the complications and reverses of the country. May there not be in reserve for our children and the Church a greater good, in consequence of the solution of the great problem of slavery? We confess that the prospect of thirty-two millions of slaves pressing the soil and loading the air of the country, within the short period of sixty years from the present, always filled us with gloomy apprehensions for our children. So in regard to the Church; the prospect brightens, because the country, instead of becoming one vast negro quarter, will in the end be filled with white people. The school-house and the church everywhere will evidence the presence of a race whose very history is the realization of christian hope, if unfettered by the fortunes and inherent weakness of the African.

In some regions of our work, men of God are shaking off this apathy of "doubt:" they are ridding their minds of the agitations of "wrath" which, like a ground swell, still threatens; they are "lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting," and praying that God would overrule the craft and malice of designing men to save the country.

When Job was nothing but a clot of blood, instead of yielding to the stupor of calamities as inscrutible as they were vast, he cried out in all the majesty of a great and pure heart, "WHEN HE HATH TRIED ME I SHALL COME FORTH AS GOLD."

We now need in our ministry that practical heroism of the Wesleys, which made an appointment at the hour the earthquake was expected, at the Foundry, and while it was shaking the house, Charles preached from "Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea,"—which can seize reverses, darkness and the discipline of earthquakes, for impressing the people with the doctrines of life. Action is the remedy. O Man of God, no longer sit brooding over the past. Out of the wind, the earthquake, and the fire a voice asks, *What doest thou here, Elijah? * * * go return on thy way.* Let not that inert state of soul triumph over you which is only occupied in feeling and weighing its own misfortunes; which finds no illustration in the life of an Apostle, who wrote the epistles to Ephesus and Timothy, from the gloomy chambers of the Mamertine prison: "But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry."

BISHOP McTYEIRE ON LOTTERIES.

We extract from the Bishop's able discourse upon this important theme—delivered in Montgomery, on Sunday evening, the 26th of August—published in the Montgomery Advertizer. Text: Eph. v 2, And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them:

Our people have hardly yet realized that a lottery was chartered at the late session of their legislature and is now in full blast. One or two drawings have taken place; its schemes are out; its agencies established, and its tempting prizes placarded. This in Alabama, among a christian people and in the latter half of the nineteenth century! State after State had gotten rid of this nuisance: its principle condemned it and its fruits. Public schools and Sabbath schools, Bible societies and the rising tide of Christianity, had, it was hoped, exorcised it thoroughly. It took refuge in Havana, and at that distance gave us some trouble, for unfortunately and unlike that lesser evil, the yellow fevor, it could not be rigidly quarantined. The papers tell us the drawings are conducted strictly on the Havana principle. So there can be no mistake as to the character of our institution.

The lottery is like, if not identical in principle with, gambling. This will hardly be denied. It goes upon the wager, the risk, the hazard — getting something for nothing. It may have a genteel form and be a subdued manifestation; but, at the last analysis, it is gambling—nothing more, nothing less.

While many a snug fortune has, in the course of time, been swallowed up piecemeal, in this tempting vortex, can any one point to a case where a legitimate and solid business has grown up on the basis of a prize drawn in a lottery? One success is duly noised abroad, and becomes a bait for scores, and quite carries them away. Fortune favored him, why may not the fickle goddess favor them? And he, the lucky man, having got a prize once, why may he not again? And so the infection spreads and the lust of lottery gain grows by what it feeds on. It is a passion and a possession. What air castles! Visions of sudden wealth haunt the mind. The habits of industry are unhinged. Tame and slow are the accumulations of patient toil. Plain business is distasteful. Moderation and temperance are undermined. Dissipation and idleness are superinduced, with want and perhaps crime in their train.

It is a mistake to regard the lottery ventures as taken from the superfluous cash of the rich or the spare money of the luxurious. Blank tickets are generally bought with hard-earned dollars. The poor and straitened man, the well nigh insolvent debtor, the young clerk already behind in his accounts—these are tempted by the very pressure of circumstances to try this desperate remedy for relief. One more venture and perhaps all may be retrieved! And another—and so deeper and deeper they get into the mire. A coroner's inquest or the revelations of a police court often gives the sequel to this tampering with lottery tickets. And is it possible that the State has spread this snare for her own children!

The lottery, as authorized by the legislature and now at work among us, is worse than vulgar gambling, and for these reasons:

The gambler creeps to his den, after nightfall. Back rooms and dark alleys are his haunts, with signs and passwords. The circle of his influence, though malignant, is necessarily contracted. Not so here. The papers tell us that at a drawing in Mobile, in broad day light, one of the largest halls of the city was filled with men, women and children, eagerly watching the turn of the wheel, and drinking in the intoxicating excitement.

The gambler is not respectable. No young lady will be seen in his company. No young man without shame, associates with him. But this lottery is made respectable "by authority." The broad seal of the State is on its charter. It comes to us under the patronage of education—of adorning and refitting and refurnishing the University of Alabama. The stockholders are to have a liberal per cent. for manipulating it, and then the University comes in for its share. It may be asked, Did not the legislature in response to the appeal of that upright and great and good man who is its President, make liberal provision for rebuilding the University? is not its endowment ($25,000 a year) ample? Better its walls should never rise from their ashes; better its foundations were sowed with salt and ploughed up, than that, by such means, it should be helped. The friends of the University are blind to its interests if they allow it to be prejudiced by being made a stalking horse for lottery dealers.

We learn by one of the advertisements that there is a "wild excitement" about the next drawing, which is to come off in a few weeks. And that the ladies have bought most of the tickets. Here again, it is worse than gambling, for even woman is swept into it. So fascinating, and respectable; coming to us with the prestige of University Education and State authority; so praiseworthy in its ostensible purposes—who does not see the dire and wide spread evils that threaten public morals. The plague has begun. Its agents are establishing themselves over the State; its tempting baits are being flung abroad, and simple souls are catching at them.

It is intimated in some quarters, that the people are not only to be corrupted but cheated in the end. Reference is made to the last lottery scheme that was foisted upon Alabama. Its ostensible aim and its feeble justification was to build up an academy in one of the eastern counties: Fredonia or Formosa academy; one name will do as well as another name inasmuch as it never was built, and those who held the scheme never intended to build it. It was the lottery privilege they were after. That obtained, it was run, and a fortune made for the schemers, while the literary part of the charter was lost sight of. The affair is like a kite with its tail. The tail is the main thing; as for the kite—it may go. But let us hope for better things, and from the names associated with this lottery we are entitled to look for better. It would be too bad not to get the poor reward of our sin.

How long is this nuisance to be inflicted upon us? Since the adjournment of the body which gave it corporate existence, it has unmasked its real character and gone to work vigorously. Run at the present rate, it will soon overrun every town, village and hamlet in the State. How long is it to last? twenty-five years! A quarter of a century! well nigh a generation! This is the legal limit of its life. Think of it. Children yet unborn are to be corrupted by it. Parents who to-day are carefully guarding their little ones from temptation, training them to industry and laying up a frugal store for them, may live to see them stumble at this stumbling stone; or will die, with the reflection that they leave them exposed to it. If the cholera comes, it stays but a few months, and passes away. But this is to abide with us and do its work for twenty five years. Expires in the year of grace 1890. By that time what evil will it not have done?

Is there no remedy? Must we quietly wait all our appointed years till the change come? The church trying to preach the gospel: and the State, in the name of education, scattering from her maternal hand firebrands, arrows and death.

* * * * * *

Meantime, if we would have no fellowship with this work of darkness, it becomes us to exhaust every legitimate means by which it may be abated, limited, checked, protested, condemned, exposed or wiped out. Let pulpit and press and people bear a vigorous and faithful testimony till this is done.

And to you, my congregation, I would say both young and old, male and female:—"Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it and pass away." Touch not, taste not, handle not, and keep others from the snare, as many as you can.

OPELOUSAS LAND AGENCY. We can commend most heartily and fully our friend, Mr. Houston, whose advertisement is inserted, to all persons wishing to purchase lands in the beautiful regions of Opelousas. Mr. Houston, is from Alabama; has resided for some years in St. Landry parish; and is competent and reliable as an agent for any who may desire his services.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

The following items from the Rev. Dr. Watkins, the President of this well known institution of Louisiana, will be read with interest.—Many of our citizens in the South-West cannot afford to send their sons far from home; and many others have no inclination to do so when they can find such excellent advantages for educating youth in their own State, and under their own eye. The mere expense of going and returning from some distant point, will pay the price of a year's tuition in Centenary. We have, on more than one occasion, noticed at length, the high claims of this institution to the patronage of the public:—

Centenary College, located at Jackson, La., was established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and transferred to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1845. It is now under the joint patronage of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences.

The College exercises were necessarily suspended during the war; but were regularly resumed, after reorganization, on the first Monday in October, 1865. The approaching session will open on the first Monday of October next.

Tuition, $75 per annum, payable semi-annually, in advance.

Boarding can be obtained at from $20 to $25 per month.

The Buildings, Libraries, Apparatus, Laboratory and Society Halls, the location in point of beauty, health, ease of access and good society, are all unsurpassed by those of any institution in the Southern States.

The past history of the College is the pledge of its future prosperity.

The Board and Faculty promise the public that nothing shall be wanting on their part to secure the thorough education of the young men committed to their care, in both Preparatory and Collegiate Departments.

The old students, alumni, and friends of the Institution, are requested to give publicity to the full reorganization and opening of the College, as stated above.

SECRETS OF NORTHERN PRISONS.

These are yet to be told. A writer in The Watchman is doing a good work for history and the truth by collecting and arranging the items published from those who have tasted the clemency of Northern war prison-keepers:

Now let us look into Fort Delaware. An escaped prisoner says:

"A few hard crackers twice a day, together with four ounces of putrid meat, and a scant supply of water, offensively stagnant, constitute the fare of these unhappy men. The prison discipline is brutal and rigorous, and of course, in these circumstances, with no attention paid to cleanliness, and the fort crowded to suffocation, the mortality among the prisoners is very great. Among those who have died there recently, victims to the heartless treatment of their inhuman jailers, is private Riety of the Thirtieth Virginia regiment, who, though an invalid when captured, was mercilessly thrust into this noisome dungeon, and there died for want of the commonest care."

Another says: "The treatment of our prisoners beggars all description. Fort Delaware presents within its walls all the horrors of the Hole of Calcutta. The suffering of our men is so great and the treatment so excessively cruel, that disease has broken out among them, and is sweeping them off by hundreds.... A few crackers are allowed to each man a day; the meat is the toughest and poorest kind of beef, and is often so offensive from the warm weather, that it cannot be brought within six inches of the mouth. Worse than all, the water used is nothing but the pumpings from the bay, and when the wind blows from the sea, it is made so bad, that it is but little better than the runnings of a sewer."

A returned surgeon, in speaking of this, says: "At one time they had nine thousand prisoners crowded into quarters which are insufficient for the comfortable accommodation of two thousand men, and the suffering among them is indescribable."

Another says of Fort McHenry: "Of the treatment at Fort McHenry, as a general thing, the darkest picture ever drawn by the New York Herald of 'Life at the Libby,' conveys but a faint conception. The rations consist of hard tack, (except where it is completely excavated by worms,) meat once a day, and a kind of slop in the morning, which the Yankees politely style coffee. No fire has yet been allowed in the quarters of the officers, although the weather has been quite severe."

The sufferings of the prisoners at Point Lookout were very severe. A prisoner says: "The prisoners' camp at Point Lookout covers about thirty acres in area, and is inclosed by a board fence of about twenty feet high, around which, a few feet below the top, is laid a plank walk, upon which the sentinels pace to and fro. In this enclosure are tents in which our men live, sixteen to seventeen men in a tent. These tents are nothing more than a covering of thin canvas, and for their bed the prisoners have nothing but the bare ground. Their prison ration consist of eight crackers a day, the size of the common soda-cracker, a small bit of rancid pork, not more than four ounces, and a cup of slops, dignified by the name of soup. They never get even the smell of sugar or coffee.... No check or restraint is held upon the negro guard by their officers, and they are left free to follow out the instincts of their brutal and savage natures. Our men are shot down like dogs on the slightest pretext, and in some cases they were murdered in cold blood while lying in bed."

Another says: "The prisoners are the hewers of wood and the drawers of water for the whole prison post. On one occasion the prisoners detailed for wood passed too closely upon the gateway before it was opened. A brute, named Sides, with the title of 'captain' prefixed, who was outside, ordered them to 'fall back,' but not being obeyed in a moment, he drew a five-shooter, and discharged each of its barrels through the aperture into the crowd gathered at the gate, shooting one through the head, another through the arm, and the third in the leg. No more notice was taken of the bloody occurrence by the authorities in charge, than if Sides had fired into a flock of sheep.... The hospital was wretchedly managed, or rather not managed at all. With two hundred and upward of patients down with the small pox, the apothecary was oftener without medicine than with it. The dead accumulated at the rate of twenty per day, and were buried in the blanket on which they gasped their life out, with no coffin except the earth into which they were huddled."

Here is a picture before which Andersonville "pales its ineffectual fires." We commend it to those who thus far have seen but one side of the picture. The New York News published the following from a private letter, dated Chicago, December twenty-seventh:

"... "The condition and suffering of the rebel prisoners at Rock Island is a source of agony to every heart not absolutely dead to the feelings of common humanity, and the scantiest Christian mercy. There are from six to eight thousand confined here. Many have taken 'the oath,' any oath to save themselves from actual starvation. These released prisoners, though liberated at different periods of time, all tell the same story. The allowance to each man has been one small loaf of bread—it takes three to make a pound—and a piece of meat, two inches square, per day. This was the rations! Lately it has been reduced. Think of it! All the released ones say that no man can live on the rations given, and that there are men who would do any thing to get enough to eat. Such is the wretched, ravenous condition of these poor starving creatures, that several dogs which have come to the barracks with teams, have fallen victims to their hunger, and they are trapping rats and mice for food, actually to save life. Many of them are nearly naked, bare-footed, bare-headed, and without bedclothes; exposed to ceaseless torture from the chill and pitiless winds from the Upper Mississippi. Thus naked and hungry, and in prison, enduring a wretchedness which no tongue can describe, no language tell, they suffer from day to day, each day their number growing less by death — death, their only comforter, their merciful visitor."

THE CROPS.

Our correspondents write gloomily. One, from the best part of Alabama, Green county, says: "Want, as an armed man, stands confronting us; yes, want—not imaginary but real—want of bread. The richer districts will have no surplus of corn, and the poorer neither money or bread, so that the question, what shall we eat? is serious indeed and hushes all others."

A writer in the Southern Advocate says:

The drought is so extensive as to cause serious fears of famine; and without stringent economy and industry in preparing this winter and next spring, there will be actual suffering of man and beast. I have traveled over a good portion of Middle Georgia, and I have seen but a limited portion of the country that will make enough to subsist upon the coming year, and as there is but very little money in the country, and nothing making to bring in money, we must depend upon our extra ingenuity in making large supplies through winter and spring. How is this to be done?

We should sow rye, oats and barley, and yellow clover to subsist our horses and hogs; sow oats and wheat in large quantities for bread next Summer and to feed our horses; we must sow dry all the fruit we can; save all the hay we can, such as pea vines and swamp-grass. These will all aid in subsisting man and beast.

And let every family plant Irish potatoes to do them until next Fall, and let every man sow turnips and gather peas to fatten his hogs, for with meat and Irish potatoes we can do without bread, and having meat we can cook vegetables. Therefore, let us plant largely of all kinds of vegetables, to supply the place of bread; for bread is out of the question with many.

The Picayune gives news on this important matter, from several quarters:

A factor favors us to-day with an extract from a letter from the parish of Avoyelles, dated the 8th, which says: "I have to report that the caterpillars are throughout this country, and have now entirely stripped the cotton in this neighborhood. One-third of a bale per acre is all we can expect on an average."

The same factor has a letter from Caddo parish, dated 29th August, which says: "Our prospects on Red River, for a cotton crop, are very doubtful. We have a good weed of young cotton, but very few bolls, though plenty of blooms and squares. The time, however, for squares to mature has passed. We also have the army worm plentifully in our cotton-fields, and there is no doubt, if their ravages continue, not more than one eighth of a crop will be gathered."

Another factor has a letter of the 10th, from the parish of St. James. The gentleman in question had gone into partnership with a person who furnished the hands, and he writes for bags in which to ship his seed cotton to be ginned. He says: "We have three hundred arpents in cotton, and when I returned from the city our prospects were fair for a crop, but it has rained nearly every day of the last fifteen, and for the last four it has poured. The young forms are all sheddiog, and some of the larger bolls. The persons who had the gin last year in the neighborhood have sold it. In fact every one is trying to get back to sugar, and do not want to go to the expense of putting up a gin. This is no part of the country for cotton; too much rain and coco. Our prospects at one time were fair for one hundred and fifty bales, and if we get now seventy-five I will be somewhat disappointed."

The Rev. T. B. White, writing from Sicily Island, La., Sept. 5th, says: "The crops in this country are very poor. We will not realize more than half a crop of cotton if all things are favorable from now on. And as to corn, there is not one-tenth enough made to supply the demand."

BISHOP KAVANAUGH. — The Louisville Editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate says, Bishop Kavanaugh and wife spent Sunday, Aug. 12, in Louisville. The Bishop preached in the morning at Chestnut street, and at night at Sholby street. On Monday, accompanied by Mrs. K., he started for California, via N.Y.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

We have notices of gracious revivals of the work of God in some parts of the country, while in others the reports of the spiritual condition of the Church are, to use the language of a brother writing from Alabama, "cold," "backslidden," "lukewarm," or "much as formerly."—It's a blessed thing that it does not rain everywhere at once.

A letter from New Iberia, La., is encouraging. Rev. J. D. Adams writes:

"The third Quarterly Meeting for New Iberia station was held on the 18th ult., and by previous appointment was continued nine days, resulting in twenty accessions to the Church; about the same number professed conversion; while many who had wandered from the way of duty renewed their allegiance to God. To the Church it was indeed "a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." A deep religious influence pervaded the entire congregation." Bro. A. E. Goodwyn (the Presiding Elder) was with us till the close of the meeting, in labors abundant, blessed of God to the profit of many and the pleasure of all. Our Sabbath School is prospering under the superintendence of Bro. Riggs, who reports eight scholars and a corps of efficient teachers. Our colored people evince much interest in religion; congregation largely increased; recently received fourteen into the Church, baptized fifteen; many who had strayed have returned to the old fold and Shepherd's care."

Another cheering letter from Rev. J. W. McNeil, Crystal Springs, Mississippi Conference:

"Our protracted meeting closed last night, after having continued sixteen days, with unabating interest. Most of the time our church was crowded with earnest, anxious and attentive hearers, especially where the weather was good. The altar often was more than crowded with mourners—in several instances fifty or more—some praying, some weeping, some shouting. There were thirty accessions, seventeen conversions that we know of, many reclaimed and many strengthened and made happy. One word I would say in reference to the preaching we had during the meeting. There was not an instance but that every thought of doing good seemed to be the burden of the speaker's mind. Bishop Paine arrived a few days before the meeting closed, and preached with great power and acceptability. Long will we all remember his earnest appeals, especially to the sinner. The Bishop is in good health; has the work much at heart. Long may he live and have strength and power to bless the Church with his labors. Let brethren not be discouraged at coldness or indifference, for we have had here in all its fullness. Preach faithfulness, pray in earnest, and in due time God will send a blessing. We praise God for what we have seen, for what we have heard, and for what we have felt in the last few days. May these divine showers continue until they cover the whole land."

Rev. W. B. Hines, writes Aug. 20th: "We have just closed a ten days meeting at Bethel on the Winkinson circuit, Miss. Conference. There were several conversions, several reclaimed, twelve received into the church, and the church much refreshed. Bros. James Muse, T. W. Brown, and P. S. Pelt labored with us in the meeting. On the fifth Sabbath this year we have held meetings at Midway, with the freedmen, beginning on Saturday before, and have organized a society of over one hundred members, and now have a flourishing society in that place.

WHICH IS THE OLDER?—The Nashville Christian Advocate thinks Bishop Soule the oldest Methodist minister in the world. The Methodist thinks differently, and announces the venerable Henry Boehm several years his ministerial senior. Joshua Soule, according to the Minutes, was admitted into the traveling connection in the Fall of 1789, when eighteen years of age. Henry Boehm was born in the township of Conestoga, Lancaster county, Penn., June 8, 1775, one year before the Declaration of Independence of the United States. He began his regular work as an itinerant preacher, January, 1800, when twenty-four years of age. So the Nashville Advocate is right. Bishop Soule is the older itinerant, but Mr. Boehm is the older man.

PRESIDENT'S PROGRESS.

The President's reception at St. Louis, was immense in its proportions and enthusiasm. He was escorted from Alton to St Louis by thirty-six steamboats, representing the thirty-six States. One of them, the "Andy Johnson," conveyed the President and his party.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 10.—The President left St. Louis this morning, and was heartily received all along the route.

There was a large number of Democratic Clubs, in torch light procession. There was a fine display of pyrotechnics from different points, and many buildings were illuminated.

The President was introduced by Gen. Meredith from the portico of the Bates House, and while many cheered for him, others called for Grant. The confusion was almost deafening. Secretaries Seward and Welles were next introduced, the spectators applauding them. Gen. Grant next appeared.

It will be impossible for the President to visit any city south of Louisville, as he has decided to make it necessary to arrive in Washington on the 17th inst.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 11.—The Presidential party have arrived in this city. Thousands upon thousands of people arrived early to greet them.

Over one hundred and fifty thousand spectators gathered in the streets to welcome the President, which they did with demonstrations of great joy and prolonged cheering. They were escorted.

Hon. James Guthrie introduced the President to complimentary terms, bidding him a cordial welcome.

The President spoke for a long time on the topics of the day, and was frequently cheered. He referred in very feeling terms to the manner in which he had been received by the State of Kentucky, and particularly by the city of Louisville.

He referred in complimentary terms to the distinguished gentlemen and to Senator Guthrie, who acted as their representative on the occasion. He then drew a graphic outline of his own political career, showing throughout his devotion to the Constitution and the Union.

He said that when the crisis came and the rebellion commenced he took sides in favor of the maintenance of the Union, but with all his devotion to the common country he was no less opposed to the consolidation of power of government. If the present Congress were permitted to continue their course it would finally succeed in establishing a despotism concentrated in one department of Government, and eventually in the establishment of a monarchy. He referred to the passage of the freedmen's bureau bill, the civil rights and Montana bills as testimony to this opinion.

Secretary Seward was then vociferously called for. He spoke acceptably to the dense assemblage in support of the restoration policy of the President. Secretary Seward thanked the audience for the kind reception. He stated that this was his first appearance before a Kentucky audience, but he was nevertheless free in mind, in heart and in utterance, to express his genuine sentiments before the people of Louisville. He would not hold different language here in the slightest degree from what he would in other cities and States of the Union. On reflection it had particularly suggested itself during his tour, that from the capital through the State of Maryland, and what was generally called the Key Stone State, and the great State of New York, and Michigan, and through a part of Illinois to St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, and again through the southern parts of Illinois and Indiana to the city of Louisville, he had found that while in the Northern States there was a great difference on the subject of the restoration of the Union, in the State of Kentucky, and he might with equal propriety say in all the Southern States, there was an entire unanimity of opinion in favor of the Union of the States. The South is sound and sincere in its loyalty to the Union. The reason of this was obvious and founded on simple principles of human nature. The ideas on which this war had been undertaken, were nurtured in the South fifty years before their practical execution. The battle had been fought, and the South had lost, and naturally the reaction was greater, and the party that had suffered most in its efforts to break up the Union was evidently now best satisfied in accepting the results of the contest. At the conclusion of the war President Johnson summoned three persons to consult with him as to the conditions on which the Southern States could be readmitted into the Union. He (Seward) was one of these parties, and he advised that when the flag of secession and slavery was hauled down from its staff, the Union should be restored in its full integrity.

In answer to a demand from the crowd to tell them something about Mexico, he replied: "Yes, I will" tell you something about Mexico. Take care of the States you have already got, and when you have secured them, we will talk to you about Mexico."

THE PRESIDENT IN OHIO.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 12.—The City Council of Cincinnati refused to extend the municipal hospitalities to the President and party, but the Chamber of Commerce and citizens generally took the matter in hand, and made the welcome one of great enthusiasm.

The Chairman of the Reception Committee was a prominent Republican.

The President arrived in Cincinnati at 9 A. M. Mr. Groesbeck made the reception speech, which was responded to by the President in one of his happiest strains.

At 1 P. M. he left for Columbus, where he arrived at 4 P. M. He was received in Columbus with tremendous joy. All the military, Fire Department and several societies, turned out to welcome him. The reception was of a most hearty character. Mayor Hall received him in a speech.

The President leaves for Pittsburg to-morrow.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 13.—The Presidential party left Columbus this A. M., at 8 o'clock; arrived here at 6 this evening. All through Ohio, and especially at Newark and Steubenville, the President was received with great respect, if not entire cordiality. He delivered a few remarks at Newark and Steubenville, which were received with universal approbation.

A tremendous crowd of people has assembled at the depot in this city, and the party was received with immense enthusiasm. The escort was very fine composed of military, firemen and trade associations. All along the route to the hotel the buildings were exclusively attired in national colors and magnificent pyrotechnic displays were made.

The President arrived at the hotel about 8, and after long and continued calls, proceeded to the balcony, and attempted to make a speech. There were at least fifteen thousand persons present, and immediately he commenced to address them they set up unearthly yells and groans, mingled with cries of "Grant," "Grant," "Farragut," "Farragut," "Shut up," "Dry up," "Put him out," "New Orleans," "Brownlow," "Seward," and the like.

The President made several attempts to continue his remarks, but it was evident that the crowd had determined to annoy him. He was ultimately compelled to retire, Grant and Farragut having retired in disgust some time before, the crowd keeping up their yelling and hooting until near midnight, when it had entirely dispersed.

About 10 o'clock, Gen. Grant attempted to address the crowd, but it would not listen to him and he speedily retired.

A grand banquet came off at St. Charles Hotel at 9 o'clock.

THE RADICAL CONVENTION AT PHILADELPHIA.

The "appeal of the loyal men of the South to their fellow citizens of the United States" may be imagined by one or two sentences which we give:

"Others have related the thrilling story of our wrongs from reading and observation. We come before you as unchallenged witnesses and speak from personal knowledge—our sad experience. If you fail us we are more utterly deserted and betrayed than if the contest had been decided against us, for in that case even victorious slavery would have found profit in the speedy pardon of those who had been among its bravest foes.

Unexpected perfidy in the highest place of the Government, accidentally followed by one who adds cruelty to ingratitude, and proscribes the guilty as he proscribes the innocent, has stimulated the almost extinguished revenge of beaten conspirators, and now the rebels, who offered everything to save their own lives, are seeking to consign us to bloody graves. Where we expected to find a benefactor, we find a persecutor. Having lost our champion, we return to you who can rebuke Presidents, and punish traitors. Our last hope, under God, is the unity and firmness of the States that elected Abraham Lincoln and defeated Jeff. Davis.

The best statement of our case is the appalling, yet unconscious confession of Andrew Johnson, who, in savage hatred of his own record, claims his purpose to abolish four million traitors with the power to impoverish and degrade eight millions loyal men. Our wrongs bear alike on all, and our tyrants, unchecked by you, will award the same fate to white and black. We can remain as we are only as inferiors and victims. We may fly from our homes, but we should be afraid to trust our fate with those who, after denouncing and defeating treason, refused to right those who have bravely assisted them in the good work. Till we are wholly rescued, there is neither peace for you nor prosperity for us."

Among the wonderful developments of the age, this one for perfidy and political baseness is not the least marvellous. These are men evolved by the Radical party—Brownlow, Jack Hamilton, and Botts—like three Apocalyptic frogs coming out of the mouth of the Dragon.

The Northern Methodist papers are fully identified with the most intense wing of the Republican party. The "Advocate and Journal," the "Methodist," and all of them, continue to insert the most barefaced falsehoods about the South, and the "New Orleans riot." Statements which have been corrected repeatedly, but which they continue to repeat. A long editorial in the Advocate and Journal, was based upon the loyal constitution of the attempted New Orleans Convention, and asserted roundly that it was called by the President of the Convention of '64, as empowered. The President of that Convention was Judge Durell, and he refused to call it. But this correction will never be made, nor will any truth be stated by those Radical Journals which may conflict with their prejudices.

RECONSTRUCTION.

LETTER FROM REV. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, having been invited to act as chaplain to the Convention of Soldiers and Sailors, at Cleveland, returned the following answer.

PEEKSKILL, Aug. 30, 1866.

Charles G. Halpine, Brev. Brig. General; H. W. Slocum, Major General; Gordon Granger, Major General, Committee:

Gentlemen—I am obliged to you for the invitation which you have made to me to act as chaplain to the Convention of Sailors and Soldiers, about to convene at Cleveland. I cannot attend it, but I heartily wish it, and all other conventions, of what party soever, success, whose object is the restoration of all the States late in rebellion to their Federal relations.

Our theory of government has no place for a State except in the Union. It is justly taken for granted that the duties and responsibilities of a State in federal relation tend to its political health, and to that of the whole nation. Even territories are hastily brought in, often before the prescribed conditions are fulfilled, as if it were dangerous to leave a community outside of the great body politic.

Had the loyal Senators and Representatives of Tennessee been admitted at once on the assembling of Congress, and, in moderate succession, Arkansas, Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina and Virginia, the public mind of the South would have been far more healthy than it is, and those State, which lingered on probation to the last would have been under a more salutary influence to good conduct than if a dozen armies watched over them.

Every month that we delay this healthful step complicates the case. The exalnded population, enough unsettled before, grow more irritable; the army becomes indispensable to local government, and supercedes it; the Government at Washington is called to interfere in one and another difficulty, and this will be done inaptly, and sometimes with great injustice; for our Government, wisely adapted to its own proper functions, is utterly devoid of those habits, and unequipped with the instruments which fit a centralized government to exercise authority in remote States over local affairs. Every attempt to perform such duties has resulted in mistakes which have excited the untinn. But whatever imprudence there may be in the method, the real criticism should be against the requisition of such duties of the General Government.

The Federal Government is unfit to exercise minor police and local government, and will inevitably blunder when attempts it. To keep half a score of States under Federal authority, but without national ties and responsibilities; to oblige the central authority to govern half the territory of the Union by Federal civil officers and by the army, is a policy not only uncongenial to our ideas and principles, but pre-eminently dangerous to the spirit of our government. However humane the ends sought and the motives, it is in fact a course of instruction preparing our government to be despotic, and familiarizing the people to a stretch of authority which can never be other than dangerous to liberty.

I am aware that good men are withheld from advocating the prompt and successive admission of the exiled States by the fear, chiefly, of its effects upon parties and upon freedmen.

It is said that if admitted to Congress the Southern Senators and Representatives will coalesce with Northern Democrats and rule the country. Is this nation, then, to remain dismembered to serve the ends of parties? Have we learned no wisdom by the history of the last ten years, in which just this course of sacrificing the nation to the exigencies of parties plunged us into rebellion and war?

Even admit that the power would pass into the hands of a party made up of Southern men, and the blitherin dishonored and misled democracy of the North, that power could not be used just as they pleased. The war has changed, not alone institutions, but ideas. The whole country has advanced. Public sentiment is exalted far beyond what it has been at any former period. A new party would, like a river, be obliged to seek its channels in the already existing slopes and forms of the continent.

We have entered a new era of liberty. The style of thought is freer and more noble. The young men of our times are regenerated. The great army has been a school, and hundreds of thousands of men are going home to preach a truer and nobler view of human rights. All the industrial interests of society are moving with increased wisdom toward intelligence and liberty. Every where—in churches, in literature, in natural sciences, in physical industries, in social questions, as well as in politics—the nation feels that the winter is over and a new spring hangs in the horizon and works through all the elements. In this happily changed and advanced condition of things no party of the retrograde can maintain itself. Everything marches, and parties must march.

I hear with wonder, and shame, and scorn, the fear of a few that the South once more in adjustment with the Federal Government will rule this nation! The North is rich—never so rich; the South is poor—never before so poor. The population of the North is nearly double that of the South. The industry of the North, in diversity, in forwardness, in all the machinery and education required for manufacturing, is half a century in advance of the South. Churches in the North crown every hill, and schools swarm in every neighborhood; while the South has but scattered lights, at long distances, like light-houses twinkling along the edge of a continent of darkness. In the presence of such a contrast, how ignoble and craven is the fear that the South will rule the policy of the land! That it will have an influence, that it will contribute, in time, most important influences or restraints, we are glad to believe. But if it rises at once to the control of the Government, it will be because the North, demoralized by prosperity and besotted by gravelling interest, refuses to discharge its share of political duty. In such a case the South not only will control the Government, but it ought to do it.

2. It is feared, with more reason, that the restoration of the South to her full independence will be detrimental to the freedmen. The sooner we dismiss from our minds the idea that the freedmen can be classified, and separated from the white population, and nursed and defended by themselves, the better it will be for them and us. The negro is part and parcel of Southern society. He cannot be prosperous while it is unprospered. Its evils will rebound upon him. Its happiness and reinvigoration cannot be kept from his participation. The restoration of the South to amicable relations with the North, the reorganization of its industry, the reinspiration of its enterprise and thrift, will all rebound to the freedmen's benefit. Nothing is so dangerous to the freedman as an unsettled state of society in the South. On him comes all the spite and anger and caprice and revenge. He will be made the scapegoat of lawless and heartless men. Unless we turn the Government into a vast military machine, there cannot be armies enough to protect the freedmen while Southern society remains insurrectionary. If Southern society is calmed, settled, and occupied, and soothed, with new hopes and prosperous industries, no armies will be need d. Riots will subside, lawless hangers on will be driven off or better governed, and a way will be gradually opened up to the freedmen, through education and industry, to full citizenship, with all its honors and duties.

Civilization is a growth. None can escape that forty years in the wilderness who travel from the Egypt of ignorance to the promised land of civilization. The freedmen must take their march. I have full faith in the results. If they have the stamina to undergo the hardships which every uncivilized people has undergone in their upward progress, they will in due time take their place among us. That place cannot be bought, nor bequeathed, nor gained by slight of hand. It will come to sobriety, virtue, industry, and frugality. As the nation cannot be sound until the South is prosperous, so on the other extreme, a healthy condition of civil society in the South is indispensable to the welfare of the freedmen.

Refusing to admit loyal senators and representatives from the South to Congress will not help the freedmen. It will not secure for them the vote. It will not protect them. It will not secure any amendment of our Constitution, however just and wise. It will only increase the dangers and complicate the difficulties. Whether we regard the whole nation or any section of it or class in it, the first demand of our time is entire reunion!

Once united, we can, by schools, churches, a free press and increasing free speech, attack each evil and secure every good.

Meanwhile, the great chasm which rebellion made is not filled up. It grows deeper and stretches wider! Out of it rise dread spectres and threatening sounds. Let that gulf be closed, and bury in it slavery, sectional animosity, and all strifes and hatreds!

It is fit that the brave men, who, on sea and land, faced death to save the nation, should now, by their voice and vote, consummate what their swords rendered possible.

For the sake of the freedman, for the sake of the South and its millions of our fellow countrymen, for our own sake and for the great cause of freedom and civilization, I urge the immediate reunion of all the parts which rebellion and war have shattered. I am truly yours,

HENRY WARD BEECHER.

Henry Ward Beecher has written another long letter on political affairs, which was read in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., Monday. He reiterates the sentiments and opinions of the Cleveland letter, and defines his position more distinctly on general topics. He favors negro suffrage but considers it impracticable now. He does not endorse all the President's policy, but distinctly disapproves of the speeches the President is now making throughout the country. He describes them impolitic, repellant and in bad taste. He does not endorse Congress; thinks there is wrong on both sides, and prefers a medium course. He desires to remain identified with the Republican party, but wishes Congressmen elected who will vote for the admission of the Southern representatives.

Rev. Dr. Tyng, of St. Stephens' Episcopal Church, New York, and Capt. Worden, of monitor fame, are out in letters approving of the Cleveland Convention of soldiers and sailors.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY, Wednesday evening, Sept. 11, 1866.

Western fleet, choice per lb net	— to —
Western fleet, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$12 to 20
Hogs per lb gross	12 to 13
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $ 425
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $ 525
Choice Sheep, per head	$6 to $8
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $80
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12 to $25
Yearlings, per head	$ 7 to $12
Calves per head	$6 00 to $12

Departed this life, at his residence in Catahoula Parish, La., Nov. 8th, 1862, Brother REEVES.

Bro. Reeves was born in South Carolina, (District noknown) Feb. 20th, 1811, from whence his father moved to the State of Georgia, when the subject of this obituary was a child, where the deceased remained six years; thence to Catahoula Parish, La., and there remained until his earthly pilgrimage was ended.

Brother Reeves professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1843, and for three years was a consistent member of said church; when, by death, he was removed from the Church militant to the church triumphant. For he died in the triumph of a living faith. By the death of Br. Ther Reeves the church in that vicinity has sustained a dreadful double loss.

Brother Reeves was highly esteemed by all who knew him for kindness of heart—goodness of soul and in every day godly walk. He was an affectionate husband a kind father, and a faithful friend; ever ready to relieve the suffering—comfort the bereaved and sympathize with the distressed. During his last illness, was not heard to murmur, but often expressed he himself perfectly resigned to the will of his Heavenly Father. His last words were, "if it is the Lord's will I am ready to go," and then he gently fell asleep. At his death, his family was equally divided, there being three children

"In that sun bright clime."

A wife and two children on the shores of time. He desired to live only to see his two sons who were in the army, return home. He had not more than greeted his children,—who had preceded their father to the "better land"—till he turned to welcome another child to the joys of heaven.

A. W. MOORE.

Centreville, La., Aug. 15th, 1866.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

Our leading staple (says the Price Current of Wednesday) under the combined influence of discouraging accounts from the interior, and favorable news from Liverpool has evidenced a tendency to stiffer rates, although the sales have been to a fair extent.

COTTON.—On Monday the sales at the close summed up only 650 bales at prices showing a tendency to stiffer rates. Yesterday the market opened with a fair enquiry, and continued quite animated throughout the day, the sales at the close comprising 2000 bales. Prices indicated increased firmness, many holding that even running lots and desirable description of the higher qualities commanded figures 1c per lb in advance of our outside quotations, but in consequence of the irregularity of the market we forbear to make any change.

Remarking that the market is very poorly supplied with the higher descriptions, we quote as follows:

Low	— to —
Ordinary	24 to 26
Good Ordinary	28 to 29
Low Middling	31 to 32
Middling	34 to 35

TOBACCO.—There have been sales of nearly 1000 hhds, of which some small lots taken for the trade and for bailing, 10 hhds Leaf and 178 Lugs taken for export and 700 hhds in one lot taken for France, at 8¾c for Good Luge and 9¼c for Common and Fair Leaf. We quote:

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refuse	3½ to —	— to 4½	Currency.
Good do	5 to —	— to 5½
Common Leaf	6 to —	— to 7½
Fair	8 to —	— to 10
Good	11 to —	— to 12
Fine	13 to —	— to 15
Choice Selec's	19 to —	— to 22

SUGAR.—The market is bare of the production of Louisiana, and the supplies of the production of Cuba are light. The demand continues limited, however, and only a retail business has been done.

FLOUR—The market has been dull and depressed, and prices have been drooping. There is only a limited local demand. Yesterday 2,300 bbls were sold, in small lots, at $9 50 for Superfine, $10 to $10 87½ for Single Extra, $11 25 for Double Extra, $12 25 to $12 75 for Treble Extra, and $13 37½ to $13 50 for Choice family Extra.

BACON—Is in better supply but the demand is small, being confined to the local trade. Shoulders are held in small lots at 15½c and at retailing at 16c. Ribbed Sides are held at 21½ and are retailing at 22c, and Clear Sides are held at 22½c and are retailing at 23c per lb. Sugar-cured Hams are retailing at 26½ to 27½c per lb. There are few or no plain Hams in market.

PORK—The market is very dull, there is no demand for round lots and only a retail business is doing at $35 75 to $36 per bbl for Mess. Round lots of Mess might be quoted nominally at $35 25 to $35 50 per bbl.

LARD—The market is well supplied but is dull, and only small or retail sales are making at 22½c per lb for Prime in tierces, and 24 to 24½c in kegs. A lot of 35 tcs Prime sold yesterday at 22½c per lb.

CORN—The demand is only moderate, but the receipts being light prices have further advanced about 5c per bushel. Yesterday the sales were confined to 1200 sacks at 85c for Mixed, 90c for Prime Yellow and 95c per bushel for White.

OATS—Are held very firmly and although there is very little demand, better prices are realized. Yesterday about 100 Prime Old, in lots, brought 50c per bushel.

BRAN.—Is scarce and in request and prices have advanced 5 to 10c per 100 lbs. Yesterday 1200 sacks sold at $1 20 per 100 lbs.

HAY.—There have been considerable sales at easier prices. About 5000 bales changed hands at $22 50 to $25 per ton for Prime St. Louis and about $25 00 to $27 50 for Ohio River.

INDIA BAGGING.—Is in small supply and in good request. There have been sales, to dealers, since our last semi-weekly review, of 30, 31 and 40 bales at 40c, and 28 bales in rolls at 40½c per yard. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 39c in rolls, and 41c in bales.

BALE ROPE—The market is quiet but steady and firm. We have no round sales to report, but quote round lots at 18½c per lb. There is a brisk demand for the country which is being supplied at 19c per lb. Iron Cotton Ties are selling quickly at 11 to 12c per lb.

GUNNY BAGS.—There are few in the market. We have no sales to report, but they are in request at 29 to 30c a piece.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—Choice Northern and Western Butter is in fair supply and demand. Northern is selling at 45 to 46c, and Western at 25 to 35c per lb. The inside figures for both are the rates for the larger lots. Cheese is in good supply and is selling at 17 to 18c for Western and Northern, and English Dairy at 25 to 26c per lb.

COFFEE—Is in fair demand and the market is very firm. There is none in first hands and not much in the hands of dealers. The latter are supplying the demand at 27 to 28½c per lb currency for fair to good fair Rio.

STAR CANDLES.—Are in good supply with a fair jobbing demand and there have been small sales at 20c per lb for 12 oz, 22½c for 14 oz, and 25 to 26c for full weight. 12 oz are in demand for the country trade.

RICE.—There is no Carolina in market. The demand for Louisiana is very brisk, while supplies are limited. Choice new crop is held at 14c per lb. Choice old crop commands 13 to 13½c per lb. Receipts of the new crop thus far have summed up about 25 bbls, but owing to the recent heavy rains which have visited the rice growing section of our State, interrupting the process of harvesting, further supplies may not be expected for two or three weeks to come.

WOOL.—Is in good demand with increased receipts during the past three days. We quote washed at 25 to 33c per lb, unwashed 18 to 25, burry at 12 to 16c, native tub merino 14 to 18c, and ¼ to full do. 18 to 25c.

HIDES—Continue in small supply and good demand, and prices are ruling firmly at 10 to 10½c for Green 11c for Kip Skins, and 13c per lb for Dry Hides. Mexican Dry Hides commond 18 to 21c per lb.

NAVAL STORES.—Are in request, but the market is nearly bare. Small lots of Rosin are held at $2 to $3 for No. 3, No. 2 $4 to $5, No. 1 $5 to $7, No. 1 White $7, Pitch $6, Tar $3 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine may be quoted at 50 to 60c per gallon.

SALT.—Is in good supply and fair demand. Liverpool Coarse is selling in lots at $2 00 per sack and Fine at $2 05, while dealers are obtaining $2 to $2 25 per sack for Coarse in store and warehouse, and $2 25 to $2 30 for Fine.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $2 25 to $2 75 per bbl. Onions at $6 50 per barrel. Apples $5 to $4 per bbl. Cabbages are unsaleable.

POULTRY & EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $7 per dozen for the young and $12 for the old. Geese at $12 and Turkeys at $36 in $42 per dozen. Western eggs are selling at $25 to $27 per bbl.

FISH—Are in small supply with an active demand. We quote No. 1 Mackerel at $24 to $26 per bbl. No. 2 at $21 to $22, No. 3 at $17 50 to $18. Codfish are selling at $2 per box.

R ATKINSON & CO: New York. JAMES HEWITT & CO., Liverpool.

HEWITT, NORTON & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And Commission Merchants,

188 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

☞ Cash advances made on consignments to me by HEWITT, SWISHER & Co., Galveston, Texas. sep15 1y

WILLIAM FELLOWES, JUN., (Successor to FELLOWES & Co.)

Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant

186 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

DAN. P. LOGAN, Agent. sep15 1y

OSBR. NANSON & CO., New York. LEWIS, NANSON & CO. St. Louis.

OBER, ATWATER & CO.,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

38 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

sep15 1y

WM. EDWARDS & CO.,

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

27 Camp Street, New Orleans.

WM. EDWARDS. EDWD. J. GAY. sep15 3m

GEO. W. RACE. W. H. FOSTER. E. T. MERRICK. La's Chief Justice La.

RACE, FOSTER & E. T. MERRICK,

Attorneys at Law,

CORNER OF CAMP STREET & COMMERCIAL PLACE, sep15 1y New Orleans.

W A VIOLETT. R Y BLACK. S H SNOWDEN.

VIOLETT, BLACK & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

s15 6m 138 Gravier street, New Orleans.

W. B. LOTT, Madison County, Miss. O. W. WOOD, Canton, Miss.

LOTT, WOOD & CO.,

Wholesale Grocers & Commission Merchants

65 COMMON & 46 CANAL STS, NEW ORLEANS.

☞ Maj. G. C. Sebastian has charge of our sales Department. sep15 1y

JACOB BURKETT,

GROCER,

And Dealer in Fine Wines & Liquors,

s15 6m 110 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

CHENOWETH, CASEY & CO.,

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

For sale of Pork, Bacon, Beef, Flour, and Western Produce generally, 53 Gravier street, New Orleans.

sep15 1y

H M WRIGHT. O W ALLEN. J HIDDLESTON (1st Auditor, 1865)

WRIGHT, ALLEN & CO.,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

169 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

aug25 1y

THOS H. ALLEN, Memphis, Tenn. JAMES M. ALLEN / PERRY NUGENT, } New Orleans

T. H. & J. M. ALLEN, (Successors to ROBSON & ALLEN),

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

192 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

aug18 1y

PEET, SIMMS, & CO.,

Importers and Wholesale Dealers in

DRY GOODS,

Nos. 23 & 25 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS

E PEET—N WILLIAMSON P SIMMS—J BOWLING aug25 1y

F P FOLGER. L FOLGER. W H THOMAS

FOLGER & CO.,

Dealers in

Hardware, Iron, & Ship Chandlery,

37 & 39 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS. (Opposite the St James Hotel)

Nails and Castings; Hoop, Sheet and Bar Iron, Shovels and Spades; Sheet Copper and Zinc; Plows, Axes and Hoes; Lead Pipe and Sheet Lead; India Rubber Belting, Hose and Packing; Circular, Mill and Cross Cut Saws. aug25 1y

H. P. ETHELL, New Orleans. NAT. H. THOMAS, Late of Alabama.

ETHELL & THOMAS,

FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

For sale of Bagging, Rope and Twine, Pork, Lard, Beef, Flour, Grain, Hay and Western Produce generally.

Sole Agents for the celebrated brand, "Grey Jacket" Flour.

No. 105 Poydras street, New Orleans.

Will give personal attention to the purchase of Merchandize and Groceries for the country. Cash orders solicited. Instructions strictly obeyed. sep1 6m

J. W. BURBRIDGE. THOS. D. MILLER

J. W. BURBRIDGE & CO.,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants,

No. 190 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

sep1 6m

Gen. James Longstreet. W M Owen. E Owen

LONGSTREET, OWEN & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

37 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

aug26 6m

JOB PRINTING.

CATALOGUES, CONFERENCE MINUTES, SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORTS, PAMPHLETS, CIRCULARS, CARDS, And everything else in the line of job printing, executed in The Very Best Style, at Moderate Prices.

Send your orders to J. WILKINSON, Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans.

BOOKS! BOOKS!

The Agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, at 112 Camp street, New Orleans, has just received from the steamships George Cromwell and Merrimac, and by the steamboats Mepham and Olive Branch, ample supplies of Sunday School requisites: Catechisms, Spellers Questions, Dictionaries, Primers, Reward Tickets, etc., etc. Also, Clarke's and Benson's Commentaries, and Hymn Books in sheep and roan.

Address: R. J. HARP, Agent, sep1t 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

OPELOUSAS LAND AGENCY.—At the solicitation of numerous friends, the undersigned has consented to become an Agent for the sale and purchase of land in this fine, healthy and much sought after country, above any high water overflow, and where the prospects for crops are so encouraging. He will take very great pleasure in shewing the land to any persons visiting this country, and in giving any other information that may be desired concerning it.

For reference, I refer to the Editors of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

JAMES H. HOUSTON, Sept 4, 1866. Opelousas, La.

A GOOD COOKING STOVE

Is one of the most necessary and desirable articles of household economy, and if properly managed, will promote the health, comfort, and happiness of every member of the family.

Time, money, and extreme vexation, by delays of your daily meals, may be saved by using the CHARTER OAK COOKING STOVE.

Over 10,000 of these celebrated cooking stoves are in daily use throughout the city of New Orleans. Every one of them has been sold under a full guarantee, and we offer them as a reference wherever found.

The Improved Charter Oak Stove with Extension Top has but one damper, and is so simple in its construction that a child can manage it. The ovens are larger, bake more uniform, and the stove heavier than any cooking stove of corresponding size ever made.

The Hot Water Reservoir Boiler furnishes a constant supply of hot water at all hours of the day, and for hours after the fire has been extinguished, without additional cost for fuel, a practical illustration of the economy in using the Charter Oak.

The Reflector Gridiron, original with the Charter Oak, and used on no other stove—the most perfect manner to broil meats and poultry, whereby the offensive odors arising from meats during the process of broiling are carried up the pipe, and juices of the meats preserved.

The Hot Closet, in which meats and pastry are kept warm for hours when there has been a delay at meals, besides enabling the cook to furnish the greatest variety of dishes and desserts, and place them hot upon the table.

The Charter Oak Stove will do one-third more baking in a given time, and use 25 per cent less wood than any other stove now made.

Importers and Dealers in Hardware, Nails, Cast Irons, Guns, Carpenters and Coopers' Edge Tools, etc.

RICE BROS. & CO., Sole Agents, 93 and 95 Camp street, near Poydras, and 565 Magazine street, near Magazine Market sep1 1y

E. GIQUEL,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

FOREIGN, FANCY AND STAPLE

DRY GOODS.

Also, a large and varied supply of

HOUSEKEEPING and PLANTATION GOODS,

Constantly on hand, at

126 Canal Street,

sep1 1y NEW ORLEANS.

D. H. HOLMES,

—Direct Importation of

FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,

AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

No. 155 Canal Street,

sep1 6m NEW ORLEANS.

S. ANDERSON, PHOTOGRAPHER And PHOTOGRAPHIC STOCK DEALER, 61 Camp street, New Orleans.

Cartes de Visite, Hallotypes, Ambrotypes, Pictures on Porcelain, And every description of Pictures known to the Art.

All kinds of Photographic Materials at the lowest price for cash. sep1 1y

[Established in 1828.]

EVANS' FASHIONABLE RETAIL Hat Emporium, No 62 CAMP STREET, Next door to the Picayune Office, New Orleans.

A complete assortment of the Latest Styles by every steamer, at Moderate Prices. s18 6m

LOEB, SIMON & CO., Importers and Jobbers of FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS, 86 Canal Street, sep1 3m NEW ORLEANS.

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c. Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.

Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

SPEED, SUMMERS & CO., 46 Carondelet street, New Orleans, COTTON AND TOBACCO FACTORS, General Commission Merchants, And COMMERCIAL AGENTS. aug25 1y

J. H. CARTER, Wholesale Grocer, Nos. 8 and 10 Tchoupitoulas Street, And 8 and 10 New Levee, aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

B. S. HARPER. N. J. THAXTON.

B. S. HARPER & CO., Cotton and Tobacco Factors, AND GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS, No. 81 Carondelet street, New Orleans. aug18 1y

STEWART, GALBREATH & FIZER Commission Merchants & Cotton Factors, 46 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS. Andrew Stewart, New Orleans. Wm. R. Galbreath, Wm. Stewart, John C. Fizer, } Memphis. sept 3m

SAM'L BARRETT. CHS. LE SASSIER.

BARRETT & LeSASSIER, Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants, CORNER COMMON AND BARONNE STREETS, Entrance, 43 Baronne street. aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

JOHN A. STEVENSON. A. H. MAY

STEVENSON & MAY, COTTON FACTORS, And General Commission Merchants, No 40 Perdido Street, New Orleans. aug18 6m

P. H. FOLEY, Of the Firm of FOLEY, AVERY & Co. Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant No. 32 Perdido Street, New Orleans. aug18 6m

HARLOW J. PHELPS, Of New Orleans. S. B. BUCKNER, Of Kentucky.

HARLOW J. PHELPS & CO., COTTON FACTORS, And General Commission Merchants, No 142 Gravier Street, New Orleans. aug18 6m

W. C. TOMPKINS. H. E. ALSOBROOK.

WM. C. TOMPKINS & CO., WHOLESALE DRY GOODS, No. 2 Magazine st., corner Canal, New Orleans.

A complete assortment of goods constantly on hand for the country trade. s18 6m

A. HENDERSON PEALE & CO., Successors to Thos. Henderson & Peale, Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants No. 190 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS. aug18 6m

J. W. CARROLL. JOS. HOY. CHAS. HASENKAMP.

CARROLL, HOY & CO., COTTON FACTORS, And General Commission Merchants, No. 36 Perdido Street, New Orleans, aug18 1y

C. L. WALMSLEY & CO., COTTON FACTORS, And General Commission Merchants, No 31 Perdido Street, New Orleans. aug18 1y

JOHN G. PARHAM, Of New Orleans. BEVERLY BLUNT, Of Hinds Co., Miss.

PARHAM & BLUNT, COTTON FACTORS, Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents, No 26 Carondolet st. (First Floor), New Orleans aug11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY & CO., General Commission Merchants and COTTON FACTORS, 57 Poydras street. Cotton Office—192 Common street—in charge of RICHARD J. NUGENT. aug4t

E. E. WALKER. THOS. M'KNIGHT. J. F JOHNSON.

R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondelet street, New Orleans jan 20-1y.

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans. W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

GEORGE L. HILL, ATTORNEY at Law, Marshall, Texas. Collections made in Eastern Texas and West Louisiana. mar27

WATTS, OLVEN & CO., Paducah, Ky. WATTS, CRANE & CO. New York. W. O. WATTS & CO., Liverpool, England.

GIVEN, WATTS & CO., COTTON Factors & General Commission Merchants, No. 103 Poydras street, New Orleans. Parties shipping their Cotton to us, can make their election, and have their choice of this, the New York or Liverpool markets. Advances made on consignments to our houses, Watts, Crane & Co New York, and W. C. Watts & Co, Liverpool. feb3-1y

W. A. BELL. FRED N. OGDEN. H. E. WITHERSPOON

WM. A. BELL & CO., General Commission Merchants, And dealers in Bagging, Rope, Iron Ties, Gunny Bags, Coffee and Western Produce, 41 NATCHEZ STREET, NEW ORLEANS. Particular attention given to the filling of orders for Factors, for Country Merchants and for Planters. je30-1y

ROBERT L. WALKER, Cotton Factor and

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

The Little Stranger.

Though a man of very strict principles, no man ever enjoyed a joke more than Dr. Byron; he had a vast fund of humor, and very ready wit, and with children, particularly, he loved to chat familiarly and draw them out. As he was one day passing into the house, he was accosted by a very little boy, who asked him if he wanted any sance, meaning vegetables. The doctor inquired if such a tiny thing was a market man. "No, sir, my father is," was the prompt answer.

The doctor said, "Bring me in some squashes," and passed into the house, sending out the change. In a few moments the child returned bringing back part of the change. The doctor told him he was welcome to it; but the child would not take it back, saying his father would blame him. Such strange manners in a child attracted his attention, and he began to examine the boy attentively; he was evidently poor, his jacket was pieced and patched with every kind of cloth, and his trowsers darned with so many colors that it was difficult to tell the original fabric, but scrupulously neat and clean withal. The boy very quietly endured the scrutiny of the doctor, while holding him at arm's length, and examining his face. At last he said:

"You seem a nice little boy; wont you come and live with me and be a doctor?"

"Yes, sir," said the child.

"Spoke like a man," said the doctor, patting his head as he dismissed him.

A few weeks passed on, when one day Jim came to say there was a little boy with a bundle down stairs waiting to see the doctor, and would not tell his business to any one else.

"Send him up," was the answer, and in a few moments he recognized the boy of the squashes—but no squash himself, as we shall see; he was dressed in a new, though coarse suit of clothes, and his hair very nicely combed, his shoes brushed up, and a little bundle, tied in a homespun checked handkerchief, on his arm. Deliberately taking off his hat, and laying it down with his bundle, he walked up to the doctor, saying:

"I have come, sir."

"Come for what, my child?"

"To live with you and be a doctor," said the child, with the utmost naivete.

The first impulse of the doctor was to laugh immoderately; but the imperturable gravity of the little thing rather sobered him, as he recalled, too, his former conversation, and he vowed he never felt so perplexed in his life. At the time he felt he needed no addition to his family.

"Did your father consent to your coming?" he asked.

"Yes sir."

"What did he say?"

"I told him that you wanted me to come and live with you and be a doctor; and he said you were a very good man, and I might come as soon as my clothes were ready."

"And your mother, what did she say?"

"She said Dr. Byron would do just what he said he would, and God had provided for me. And," said he, "I have on a new suit of clothes," surveying himself, "and here is another in the bundle," undoing the handkerchief and displaying them, with two shirts, white as snow, and a couple of neat checked aprons, so carefully folded it was plain none but a mother would have done it. The sensibilities of the doctor were awakened to see the fearless, the undoubting trust with which the poor couple had bestowed their child upon him, and such a child. His cogitations were not long; he thought of Moses in the bulrushes, abandoned to Providence; and above all, he thought of the child that was carried into Egypt, and that the divine Saviour had said, "Blessed be little children," and he called for the wife of his bosom, saying, "Susan dear, I think we pray in church that God will have mercy upon all young children."

"To be sure we do," said his wondering wife, "and what then?"

"And the Saviour said, 'Whosoever receiveth one such little child in my name, receiveth me;' take this child in his name and take care of him;" and from that hour this good couple received him to their hearts and home. It did not then occur to them that one of the most eminent physicians and best men of the age stood before them in the person of that child; it did not occur to them that this little creature, thus thrown upon their charity, was destined to be their staff and stay in declining age, a protector and more than son to themselves; all this was then unrevealed; but they cheerfully received the child they believed Providence had committed to their care; and if ever beneficence was rewarded, it was in this instance.—Family Circle.

You Can't Catch It.

You can't catch it, boys or girls. You may be as fleet of foot as the antelope, or you may fly as on the wings of an eagle, yet you cannot overtake it.

Cannot overtake what?

The bad word which has passed your lips! It fled to heaven, and wrote itself on the book of God. You can't catch it.

The wicked deed you performed! It soared to the judgment, and was stereotyped on the memory of the Judge. You can't catch it.

The sinful thought you indulged! Its image was caught by the light of God's eye, and photographed on the roll of your history. You can't catch it.

Beware, then, O my children, what you think, what you do, what you say.

Grass and Flesh.

"All flesh is grass," saith the prophet. When grass becomes flesh, as it does in the ox, a good deal of useless matter is got rid of, and the true food in the grass is stored up by the ox in one part or other of its carcase. That part which forms the edible portion of the animal, and which is generally called beef, has been sifted, so to speak, by the ox, from the dross accompanying it in grass, and the portion really useful to man is presented to us in the form in which we can, with least work to ourselves, make a proper use of it. What is stated here of the ox applies also to the sheep, goat, the deer, and, indeed, to all the animals on which we feed, and which in their turn live upon grass. The ox, sheep, etc., aid us in preparing our flesh by taking the crude, material, grass, and so treating it that they disentangle the good from the bad, and hand over to us only that which can be useful to us. We may live upon grass, or parts of grasses, such as the seeds, but it requires a greater degree of force for us to form our flesh from such food than from an animal diet, as in the latter case a part of the work has already been done for us in the stomachs of the ox and the sheep. Living on a diet consisting in part of animal food is a saving to our digestive powers, and a saving of work implies a storing-up of force. Each man in a healthy condition has a stock of force which he can expend in manual labor at the anvil or elsewhere, or in thinking, writing, or speaking. In either case the force so expended may be the direct means of procuring bread for himself or his household. To think and work are, in popular language, so separated from each other that at first sight they appear quite different in all their relations; but the thinking or mental powers, and the bodily or physical—in other words, the thought and the arm—draw on the same bank or stock-in-trade. They are two partners in the same concern; and the more there is squandered on the one, the less there is left for the other. And thus the smaller the force which is expended in the digestion of food—and of all work, stomach work is the hardest—then the more force or power there remains for the exercise of thought.—Macadam's "Chemistry of Common Things."

Evangelization in Spain.

At the Synod of the Free Church of the Canton de Vand, held at Morges in the month of May last, Don Manuel Matamoros gave some account of the work in favor of the evangelization of Spain. He says there are now ten Spanish young men pursuing their studies for the ministry at the Swiss seminary with him. A preparatory school had been commenced at Lausanne, in France, but it was given up for lack of funds and other causes. In this discouraging emergency he says:

"An American widow lady, rich in good works, was called upon some months since to endure a most bitter trial, in the death of her only and much loved son. From the moment of his birth this Christian mother had prayed earnestly that the heart of her child might be truly given to God; and when, after many years, her prayers were fully answered, the Lord saw fit to take this young man to Himself. In the midst of her deep affliction, she resolved to rouse herself and glorify God, by taking part in the work for Spain. 'During the life of my son,' said she, 'a sense of what might be due to him kept me back; but now that the Lord has taken him to heaven, I will lay up my treasure where my child is, with his Saviour, and devote myself in this way to glorify Jesus while I am left here below.' She thereupon determined to establish and entirely support a school for Spanish boys, with the special object of preparing them for future studies at Lausanne. All the necessary arrangements are now made, and twelve youths are ready to avail themselves of this work of faith, which excites our warmest hopes. Pan has been fixed upon as the most suitable place for such an establishment, its climate affording an excellent medium between that of Spain and Switzerland. Until it is opened, some of the boys are spending the summer with excellent pastors in this canton, improving their knowledge of the French language and accustoming themselves to life in a foreign land."

Matamoros then gave some account of an admirable establishment for Spanish girls undertaken by an English lady at Pau: and most interesting details of what is going on in Spain itself; these, however, owing to the present condition of that country, it would not be prudent to repeat.

Prayer is the path that God made, on which man travels back to Him.

MARRIAGE IN PRUSSIA.—The winter evenings find all servants together in the dining room; the girls do sewing, knitting, etc., of their own, in view of a future household, and the men smoke and carry on flirations with the girls. Many engagements are here formed, resulting, after many years saving of linen, clothes, and ready money to buy furniture, in marriage, when the landlord lets them a cottage to live in, and enrolls them among his laborers. They never crowd into their parent's dwellings. If there be no room in the village they will go to a neighboring one; young families being generally welcome to landlords. Early marriages are not in favor, and twenty-five years must be considered as an early average on male and female side.

Many young men after reaching twenty years have to serve as soldiers for three years. This may be considered of doubtful benefit, but the men certainly bring some improved manners and a spirit of order and cleanliness, which remain with them and give a good example to others. The other young people engage as servants to the parsons, schoolmasters, to such tradesmen as there are, to the neighboring peasants, or go as domestic servants into the towns; some of the boys learn a trade. Amongst all these you will see the superior intelligence come into play; and as education has put these laboring people on a par with the peasant and landowning cottager and country tradesmen, some marry into these classes, whilst, on the other hand, peasant's and trades-people's children, when poor, come to be laborers. Sometimes, when they have some money, this step is only taken till they find an opportunity to buy a small property or emigrate to some new district to be broken up, where land is cheap.

POLYNESIA.—About the year 1797, after the discoveries of Captain Wallis, Cook, and others, the churches of England and America conceived the idea of undertaking the work of the evangelization of the Islands of Polynesia. The beginnings of this enterprise were very difficult and discouraging. The task was to lift up to the light of civilization and Christianity a population so utterly degraded that they had retained of humanity nothing but the name. After more than sixty years of missionary labor the following is a summary of results:

The London Missionary Society has founded in different parts of Polynesia 105 churches with some 12,841 members; and 372 schools with 21,560 scholars. The Wesleyan Missionary Society, that began its labors only in 1822 in the Friendly, and in 1835 in the Feejee Islands, has at present in the former 8,452 church members and 8,712 scholars in its schools; and in the latter among a people heretofore abandoned to the most frightful canibalism, 14,273 communicants and 34,522 scholars.

The Anglican Mission Society, that has been for some years laboring among the natives of New Zealand, has 5,525 communicants, and three-fourths of the population profess Christianity.

"ALMOST."—The Episcopalian says: "Almost transubstantiation in the doctrine and administration of the Lord's supper; our charitable societies almost nunneries; our theological schools almost monasteries; our clergy almost stage actors and man-milliners; our communion tables almost idolatrous shrines; our choirs almost opera houses; our bishops almost inquisitors—is there nothing startling to the instincts of Christians in all these things? Is there nothing to make the ears to tingle and the cheeks to blush? Nothing to alarm the fears and to make us tremble for the fate of the church?"

TO RESUSCITATE DRY TREES.—It not unfrequently happens that trees imported from abroad, and even those sent from nurseries, a long way overland, are quite dry and shriveled when the bundles are opened, and some persons would throw them away at once as worthless. Two subscribers to the Agriculturist inform us that they received some fruit trees in this condition, and at once planted out the freshest of them, and buried the others, root and branch, in the earth. —Those planted out when received mostly died, while the others, after remaining buried for a week, were set out, and nearly all lived. They were found to be restored to freshness when taken from the trench in which they were covered.

CURE FOR HYDROPHOBIA.—The Leipsic (German) Journal publishes the following antidote for the bite of a mad dog, which, it says, was an exclusive secret with a Saxon forester, but who, growing old, was unwilling to let it die with him, and therefore procured its publication. He is said to have used it for fifteen years, and rescued many human beings and cattle from the fearful death hydrophybia. The antidote: Take immediately warm vinegar or tepid water; wash the wound clean therewith, and then dry it; then pour on the wound a few drops of hydroohlorio acid, because mineral acids destroy the poison of the saliva, by which means the latter is neutralized.

Look out for the man or woman who is always telling you to look out for others.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,
GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next, instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught

TERMS:
Tuition fees per term,.....$40 00
Contingent fee,.....5 00
Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month
aug4ft W M WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

STONEWALL INSTITUTE.

The President of this Institution is gratified to announce to its patrons and friends that the regular scholastic year will open on the
FIRST MONDAY OF OCTOBER NEXT,
under the following Corps of Teachers:
D. C. B. CONNERLY, M. A., PRINCIPAL, AND TEACHER OF ANCIENT LANGUAGES.
G. M CALLEN, M. A., TEACHER OF MATHEMATICS
H. Y. WEISSINGER, M. A., ASSISTANT IN ANCIENT LANGUAGES AND ENGLISH LITERATURE.
JNO D LALAND, M. A., ASSISTANT IN MATHEMATICS AND MODERN LANGUAGES.

This school for boys and young men is located in the high and healthy hills of Perry County, Ala., thirteen miles North of Selma, and five miles North of Summerfield; and can be reached in a three hours' drive from Selma. Its locality is healthy almost beyond comparison. It is the property of no sect or set of men, and is not controlled by Trustees. It is the property solely of the Principal, who alone is responsible to the patrons of the Institute, for its management and discipline.

The Principal has engaged these three gentlemen of energy to join him in giving to the rising generation rare opportunities for acquiring an education. With the experience of fifteen years in controlling boys, and with the devotion and energy which will be given to the interest of our pupils, we think it proper to say that every right-minded man, who sends us a good boy, shall be satisfied with the results.

We do not intend to exhort men to send to us; but we do intend to make it the true interest of our friends to commit their sons to our charge.

Our experience during the past year enables us to say that here we have power to control, and subject to study, our pupils, far greater than we ever had in any village.

From October to July, we shall carefully superintend the morals, manners, and intellectual training of our students.

No boy will be received whose moral character is not satisfactory; nor do we purpose going beyond eighteen pupils to the teacher, thus giving great advantages to our classes. For Board, including washing, and tuition by night and by day, from October to July, no matter what the age of the boy is, and no matter what he studies, our charge is Three Hundred and Sixty Dollars; one hundred and eighty paid on entering and the remainder Feb. 15th, 1867.

Each student must furnish two blankets, two sheets, two pillow cases, and his own towel and lights.

Besides, every one must bring money, from ten to twenty dollars to pay for his books and stationery. These terms must be literally complied with.

If a student is dismissed for any cause, or if he has to retire, and does so with our approval, his money will be refunded, but if he leaves without this approval, or runs away, his money will not be refunded; nor will any deduction be made for absence unless occasioned by a protracted sickness of one month's duration.

The patrons of this school embrace many of the most distinguished men of Central Alabama. Their sons can furnish the best evidence and strongest assurances that all our plans and management look to the progress of the pupil; and that around the entire establishment we constantly throw an air of home and contentment.

Parties wishing to commit their sons and wards to a school all of whose movements are systematically controlled to advance the real mental training of inmates, and whose daily and weekly schedule, even on Saturdays and Sundays, is moved by the clock, are cordially invited to address the undersigned by letter.

D. C. B. CONNERLY.
Stonewall Institute, near Summerfield, Ala.

SOUTH-WESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Where is it located? Its Depository and Bible-House is at its own building, No. 163 Camp street, New Orleans.
When was it established? 1850.
Who is its General Agent to whom correspondence on its business should be addressed? Rev. James Beattis.
Where is the Society's field of labor? All of Louisiana, and all of Mississippi, south of the 33rd parallel of North latitude.
What is the object of the Society? To explore and supply (gratuitously where needed) the destitution of the Holy Scriptures.
What are the resources and whence the income of the Society? From the annual contributions of its members. Collections of Churches within its field, collections at public meetings and anniversaries. Appropriations of the surplus funds of its auxiliaries, the donations of generous individuals, testamentary bequests, and the annual donation in Books of the American Bible Society.
What is the Society's method of work? By cultivating its own local work in the city and district of New Orleans: then through Auxiliary Societies established or to be established in every Parish and County in the field, and the employment by them of such means as will accomplish the object of the Society.
What are the terms of membership?
The payment of $30 at one time constitutes a life member.
The payment of $150 at one time, constitutes a life Director.
The payment of $1000 at one time, constitutes a life Patron.
The payment of $3 annually, constitutes a member.
The taking up of a collection by a church constitutes the Pastor an honorary member.
Having thus briefly stated the main features of the Society's work, income and expenditure, the Board of Directors for the current year confidently ask the aid of all lovers of the Bible, whether professors of religion or not: to strengthen the hands of the S. W. B. S: by founding or reviving Auxiliaries, by donating and urging donations, by exploring and reporting the destitution of the Scriptures, by commencing or renewing memberships of all grades and by establishing connections with the Society as the Lord has prospered them: according to that Scripture which says "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal." To ministers and professing Christians of every Orthodox Protestant Church, the Board of Directors, representing in its body all such within our bounds, appeals with confidence to aid them by judicious effort, a prompt performance of duty and a prayerful commendation of the Society to the blessing of Almighty God, for except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it, except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain.
Our last thought is the heart-cry of the Great Reformation. No moulding of the Word; no tempering with the text: no man's note or comment: God's Word: Christ's Word: the Holy Spirit's Word: Free: Free: Free." n25 ly.

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,
For the Autumn of 1866, and
FLORAL GUIDE,
Is now Published. It contains Descriptions of the best Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lillies, etc., With full descriptions, and plain and full directions for Planting, Culture, Prices, etc. Illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the Single and Double Tulip and Scilla. My importation from the best Bulb Growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country. This Catalogue and Guide is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost. Postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my Catalogue. Address
aug. 25. JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANO.

A lady whose high attainments as a composer and as a performer on and successful teacher of the Piano, can be well attested, proposes to give lessons to a few pupils in the city, commencing in September or October.
Reference: Rev J C Keener, D D; Rev J B Walker, D D; Rev L Parker.
For particulars address: "Pianist," Christian Advocate Office 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

WOODVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE SECOND SESSION
Will begin October 3d, 1866, and close July 10th, 1867. The system of instruction aims at the truest mental, moral, and social culture. The discipline seeks to embrace whatever is helpful to this end, and to exclude what is hurtful to it. Obedience to rightful authority, is a necessary to membership in the school.

TERMS PER SESSION.
Board, with fuel, lights and washing, $300 00
Tuition in Preparatory course, 60 00
" Academic " 80 00
" Collegiate " 100 00
Music, 80 00
Other ornamentals as low as can be afforded.

The Collegiate course embraces Latin and French without any extra charge. These charges are made from the beginning of the half month in which the pupil is entered, to the end of the session, and must be paid, one half in advance, and the other on the 1st of March, nor will assignment of a pupil to room, seat or class, be made until this demand is met. A sum sufficient to get books, music, and medicines for slight sickness, must be deposited with the Principal. Each boarding pupil must be provided with a supply of plain, neat clothing suitable to the season, and also with towels, table nap-kins—all marked in the owner's name. When a pupil, not residing in the Seminary, or one not remaining in it during her illness, is sick more than twenty consecutive days, a deduction of one half the charges for the time will be made.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Principal.
Woodville, Miss., Aug 8th 1866. aug25 3m.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.
The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.
TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March.
Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.
Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.
Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.
As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.
W. H. N. MAGRUDER.
Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE
HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,
REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.
Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.
Next annual term opens first Monday in September.
For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.
Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A. M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.
The Fall Session of this Institution will open on the 26th day of September next.
This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattrasses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.
The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:
For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—
Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks, $67 50
Regular Tuition, 25 00
Incidental Fee, 2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of Instrument 37 50
French or Spanish, 15 00
Ornamental branches at usual prices.
☞ All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.
The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.
After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.
For other information address
CHARLES B. STUART, President,
ug4ft Mansfield, La.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. GEO. F. THOMPSON, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Millsaps, Rev. George H. Clinton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.
Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other Institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.
The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Jan. 31, 1867.
For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. u18ft

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M., President,	Natural Sciences and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Marie S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.
Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bed clothing.
Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.
The next session commences 10th September.
Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to
A. J. WRIGHT.
D. G. HUMPHREYS, Pres. Board of Trustees.
jy14 6m

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE
SUMMERFIELD, ALA.
The next scholastic year begins Monday, Oct. 1st, 1866. A quarter of a century in successful operation, with hundreds of cultivated daughters in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, and under the immediate care and patronage of the Mobile and Montgomery Conferences, this institution can afford and is determined to maintain a high standard of scholarship. Only experienced and skilful educators are employed by the Trustees. Among the recent additions to the Faculty are two gentlemen of a series of years Professors in the State University.
Those desiring really thorough culture for their daughters, will do well to investigate the claims of this institution.
For particulars or a circular apply to the President, Rev R. K. Hargrove. a18 1m A. H. MITCHELL, Pres. Board.

NORTH, BRUSH & MASON,
Wholesale Dealers in
Fancy Goods,
STATIONERY, PERFUMERY, CUTLERY,
HOSIERY,
Furnishing Goods, etc.,
35 MAGAZINE STREET,
Opposite the St. James Hotel, New Orleans, La
aug25 1y

PETER G. TAYLOR.
HARDWARE AND GUNS.
TAYLOR & CHURCHILL,
41 MAGAZINE STREET, and 20 BANK PLACE, (Opposite St. James Hotel,) NEW ORLEANS, LA.
DIRECT IMPORTERS,
We have in stock, and are constantly receiving some choice patterns of English and American Table and Pocket Cutlery, to which we invite the attention particularly of country merchants. Also, a large stock of Trace, Ox and Log Chains, English and American Planters' Hoes, Anvils, Vices and Bellows; Scales, manufactured by the Novelty Iron Works; Files, English and American.
COTTON AND WOOL CARDS, NOVA SCOTIA GRINDSTONES, PLOWS.
Hall & Speer's Peacock Plows, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; Hall & Speer's Cast Valley Plows, Nos. 1 & 2; King Cary (wood mould board) Plows.
GUNS, NAILS, TIN WARE, AXES.
HOLLOW WARE, SAWS.
Of all patterns and brands. All the above is offered for sale at the lowest market quotations.
Orders from the country are respectfully solicited by TAYLOR & CHURCHILL, 41 Magazine street, and 20 Bank Place, opposite St. James Hotel. Established in New Orleans without intermission, by the present senior member of the firm, in 1832.

W. H. HENNING & CO.,
Grocers and Commission Merchants,
95 and 97, CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
Offers to Families, Planters and Treders a full stock of Fancy and Staple Goods, consisting in part of CHAMPAGNE,
BRANDIES,
WHISKIES,
CLARET,
CORDIALS, Etc.
Also, a large lot of Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Pork, Beef, Bacon, Salt, suitable for Plantation supplies,—all of which will be offered at the Most reasonable Rates.
☞ Country orders will receive the most careful and prompt attention.
W H HENNING & CO,
n25 6m 95 & 97 Camp street, New Orleans

WALLACE & CO.,
Importers and Jobbers of
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, and
PLANTATION CLOTHING,
No. 74 CANAL STREET, AND 91, 93 AND 95 COMMON STREET, (SLOCUMB BUILDING), NEW ORLEANS
a18 1y
☞ Sales guaranteed at New York prices.

A. B. GRISWOLD. W. M. GOODRICH
A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,
Corner of Canal and Royal streets,
[Late HYDE & GOODRICH],
Established in New Orleans Fifty Years!
MANUFACTURERS OF JEWELRY & SILVER WARE,
Importers of Watches, Diamonds, Clocks, Bronzes, Porcelain, Plated Ware, Cutlery, Fancy Goods, Guns and Pistols.
The largest assortment in the South always on hand. aug25 6m

JAMES SYME,
Wholesale Druggist,
139 CANAL STREET, (Toure Buildings,)
NEW ORLEANS.
Importer and Dealer in Fine
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS,
DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES,
Fancy Goods and Perfumery.
Surgical Instruments,
French, English, and American, of every variety
Also—
Medicine Chests and Medical Saddle-bags.
aug25 1y

A. D. GRIEFF,
Wholesale Grocer,
COMMISSION MERCHANT, AND DEALER IN SOUTHERN AND WESTERN PRODUCE,
48, 50 and 52 Old Levee st., corner Bienville st.,
aug25 6m NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN SHOE MANUFACTORY,
DRAKE & MARKHAM,
Manufacturers of
Men's, Boys', Ladies', Misses' & Children's
BOOTS AND SHOES,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,
No. 56 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

We call the attention of the public to our extensive stock of fine custom-made Creole Boots and Shoes, for Gents, Boys, Youths, Ladies, Misses and Children, made of the best imported stock, by skillful workmen.
We design furnishing goods that combine elegance with durability, at a less price than common goods are usually sold for in this city.
OUR LAST-FOR-EVER BOOTS!
Every man in this State should have a pair of our Last-for-ever Boots. They are warranted waterproof, and to last one year, or the money returned.
Our stock of Family and Plantation Shoes are the best that can be made.
One pair will outwear any three pairs bought at auction. Country Merchants will do well to make a note of this.
We have better goods and sell them lower than any house in Louisiana.
Orders filled at ten per cent. on the original cost of manufacture.
All goods warranted to satisfy, or they may be returned. Planters will instruct their commission Merchants to buy their shoes of DRAKE & MARKHAM, 56 CAMP STREET.
aug18 1y

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!
BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY
Established in 1837.
VANDUZEN & TIFT,
Of the late Firm and Successors to G. A. COFFIN & CO.,
102 & 104 East Second street,
Cincinnati, Ohio,
Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.
Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.
All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.
Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. jy14

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address
f3-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles, corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no coming from books.
Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law, English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages, Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics of Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.
For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address
f3 1y GEO. SOULE, P. S.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,
HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD
Established, August, 1861.
Destroyed, May, 1863.
Re-established, January, 1866.
SALES ROOMS,
C. E. CATE & CO.,
18 CAMP STREET, 18
Under the City Hotel.
We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURE to the various styles of
LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS.
Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.
We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.
A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.
C. E. CATE & CO.
feb17 18 Camp st., N. O.

GEO. H. VINTEN,
PAPER WAREHOUSE,
No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St. Charles streets, New Orleans.
Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.
Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams' Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons' Type. ap14

J. B. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.
JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.
Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans. ap15ly

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 38, WHOLE NUMBER 602.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1866.

$3 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE OFFICE—113 CAMP STREET.

POETRY ON TWELVE SHILLINGS A-WEEK.

Among the countless "copies of verses" sent to The Argosy, there reached us last month a few pages entitled "Fairy Revels." These verses had a freshness as of early flowers; there was a happy music in their rhyme, and their theme was so graceful and so gay that it seemed as if they must be the production of some young poet, with the spring-time working in his blood. And yet it was no "new poet" who had written "Fairy Revels," but, as we have since learned, an old man who has borne the burden of half a century of poverty and toil.

About thirteen years ago, when more than forty years of his life had passed in labour which at no time yielded him more than twelve shillings a-week, the passing of a stranger through a field in which the poet was reaping brought about the first recognition of his genius. Born before the days of National and British Schools, a good mother taught him to read, and by dint of buying and borrowing, principally the latter, he made acquaintance with the English poets, and learnt the art of song. He says:—"I well remember taking Shakspeare in sixpenny numbers when I was working for seven shillings a-week, and had to maintain myself and pay for lodgings; and even then I regretted not the loss of a day's work in wet weather (scanty as my earnings were) if I could spend it in reading. I have sat up many nights in reading Milton when others have been sleeping, and passed many, many hours with Shakspeare when perhaps I should have been otherwise employed. And thus my youth passed away, with but few enjoyments in the estimation of those around me, whose company I shunned, preferring the solitary walk in the fields or lanes to the noise and laughter of the streets,—calm communion with silent nature to the mad excitement of intoxication,—and the joy of the nightingale to the song of the drunkard. In all my lonely musings I had learnt to eat that they knew not of: from a boy I loved the trees and flowers, woods and waters, and have conversed more with them than with men. I loved all that was beautiful in nature; and, if I cannot express myself as a poet, I have always felt as one."

Of his power of expression the reader may judge for himself.

FAIRY REVELS: A FRAGMENT.

Now the full moon climbs the sky,
And birds in heavy slumber lie;
The bleating sheep are penn'd at rest,
Their fleeces on the daisies press'd;
And all around is hush'd and still,
Except the tinkling of the rill,
And songs of wakeful nightingales
Stealing o'er the dewy vales.
Now is the time we fairies meet,
And dance our rounds with noiseless feet.

Hie thee! my attendant sprite,
To yonder mead with kingcups bright,
And bring me from the cowslip pale
A freckled flower, called a male.
There is music in that flower,
And children know its magic power,
For late I in a primrose lay,
When a group had met to play;
One had pluck'd the wild white rose,
He wreathed her lair unwrinkled brows;
Another, round her flaxen head,
Wore bindweed blossoms, white and red;
A third had cull'd the light blue-bell,
And it became her beauty well;
Another's dark and glossy hair
Was intermixed with lilies fair;
And all were happy, all were gay,
Though mortal creatures form'd of clay.
How they laugh'd, and danced, and sang,
Till the answering echoes rang;
One, the merriest of them all,
Tom'd and caught a cowslip ball,
Till, warm and wearied, down she sank
In softest moss upon the bank;
And from that globe of fragrant flowers
She pinch'd a tube of wondrous powers,
And biting off its slender tip,
With swollen cheek and pouting lip,
She blew its trumpet sound so clear,
It charm'd and won my listening ear:
And much I wished that each could be Always, as then, from sorrow free,
Exempt from suffering, care, and sin,
They seemed to us so near akin.
That flower shall new our trumpet be,
Sound it loudly, three times three.

SONG.

Awake, awake, ye fairies all,
Come at the cowslip trumpet's call;
Come from the rose, where all day ye sleep,
Come from the banks where the wild vines creep,
Come from the foxglove's painted cells,
Come from the lily's waxen bells,
Come from the tubes of the sweet woodbine,
Come from the leaves of the eglantine.
Awake, awake, ye fairies all,
Come at the cowslip trumpet's call.

Ye that couch in the gorse and broom,
Ye that hide in the clover's bloom,
Ye that peep from the pansy's hood,
Ye that shroud in the dark green wood,
On sycamores with honey wet,
Or willows by the rivulet,
Awake, ye elves and fairies all,
Come at the cowslip trumpet's call.

From the plaits of the daisy's frill,
From the folds of the daffodil,
From the May buds on the thorn,
From the larkspurs in the corn,
From the cockles white and red,
From the wild thyme's fragrant bed,
Awake, arise, ye fairies all,
Come at the cowslip trumpet's call.

Ye that in the tulips lie,
Rocking as the winds go by,
Ye that in the harebells swing,
Or to the sturdy orchis cling,
Ye that sleep in the leafy bowers,
Curtain'd by the lilac's flowers,
Hasten o'er the spangled green,
To the summons of your queen.

You my trusty guards attend,
And this sacred place defend.
Here in armour tried and true,
Helmets of the monkshood blue,
Lances keen and pointed spear
On the thistle standing near:
And for shields, my champions hold,
Daisy disks embossed with gold.
Whilst this mystic ring we dance
Let no noxious thing advance,
Newt, or toad, or beetle black,
Snail with castle on his back,
Bloated spider, sly and grim,
Earwig gaunt, or earthworm slim,
Slimy slug, or centipede,
Or caterpillar, ravenous breed.
Enemats pinched, and smull grass flies,
Mining moles, and pilfering mice,
Prowling, lurking, green-eyed cats,
Weasels fierce, and whisker'd rats,
Thorny hedgehog, scaly snake,
Hiding under fern and brake.
Chase them, keep them far away,
While we feast, and dance, and play.
Sweetly blow your breathing flutes,
Mellow flutes from oaten sheaves,
Notes of stringed plantain leaves,
Clarionets of knotted reeds,
Kettledrums of poppy seeds;
Head in hand the measure tread,
Keep the heading cowslip's head,
With springing toe and lightsome heel,
And eat in mazy reel;
Thus wealing, and dance, and play
Till the blushing dawn of day.

Come, the banquet now prepare;
Brings the viands rich and rare.
Here's a mushroom, white and round,
Peeping from the heaving ground—
Now I touch it with my wand,
See its swelling globe expand;
Now its stalk is shooting up,
Now it opens its pinky cup,—
This shall be our festive board,
Here shall sup our merry horde.

Here are kingcups, bright with gold,
Bowls of acorns, carved and old,
Tankards of primrose pale,
Stoups of lilies of the vale;
Nettle flagons, ivory white,
Chalices of silver bright,
That in shady thickets gleam,
Or shine like stars beside the stream;
Flasks of purple columbine,
Filled with liquor crystalline,
Whate'er the wild bee sips
Is not grass for fairy lips.
Let the vessels all be fill'd
With pearly dew by night distill'd,
And honey wrung from sweetest flowers,
From lilies and valleys, woods and bowers.
Candied drops from bluebells deep
Tears the blue-eyed violets weep,
Aroma by roses shed,
Spices from the wild thyme's bed,
Ruddy drops from bleeding cherries,
Juices crush'd from swelling berries,
Nectar press'd from purple plums,
Pulp of peaches, amber gums.
Temper well and mix the whole
In our acorn wassail bowl.

Sit we now upon the grass,
Quaff the cup and let it pass;
Freely drink and do not fear,
So inebriate fumes are here.

Hark, I hear the booming chime
By which dull mortals measure time;
And the high ascending moon
Tells that night is at its noon.
—The Argosy.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LAY REPRESENTATION—No. IV.

Mr. Editor: We wish to contemplate this subject in any and every light possible, that we may arrive at the truth, as near as may be, and therefore wish to look at some of the considerations presented by some of the advocates of this measure.

OPPRESSION.

Are we to put a layman beside each clergymen in the General Conference in order to save the laymen from oppression? It seems to us that the laity have ample security from oppression, first, in the fact, that they select the ministry from among themselves, voting on each case some three different times before the candidate can become an itinerant minister. The laity by their vote make him exhorter. Then they try him for a time. Then by their vote, they give him license to preach, and again try him a while; and then by their vote recommend him to the traveling connection; and they do this too, when they know that these men, thus sent by themselves, are to be their ministers, and thus, at different times occupy different positions in the legislative, judicial and executive departments of our church government. And the laity do choose or refuse with reference to these facts. The ministry are their sons, their brothers, their neighbors, sent by themselves for these very ends among others. Are the laity in danger from these men? Has the past hundred years demonstrated that the laity have been oppressed? On the other hand have not these ministers given nearly everything to their lay brethren?

Again, the laity have ample security against oppression in the fact that the ministry are entirely dependant on the laity for its support. The support is entirely voluntary. The laity may pay or not just as laymen please, and the ministers know it. The dog will not bite the hand that feeds it, unless there be violence that must be resisted. Even if the preachers were to become bad men, they would not knowingly, by oppression, injure or destroy the church, for there are no sufficient motives for this, as all the motives are on the other side, the greatest prosperity of the church being the greatest good of the ministry. It seems to us, then, that in this respect the laity are safe.

WISDOM OF THE LAITY.

Or is it to avail ourselves of the wisdom of the laity, that we seek this change? This wisdom our preachers already avail themselves of, gathering it in their constant intercourse with the church as they go from house to house in their pastoral work, and in their itinerant labors from place to place, and especially in the Quarterly Conference capacity of our laymen, and in our Monthly Meetings. No ministry has better opportunities for learning of the membership than ours.

Again, could we, if we would, avail ourselves of this wisdom in our General Conference? Would this wisdom and talent go to the Conference? The class of men called for, by this measure, are men of so much talent and business, that they could, not, or would not attend. What intelligent enterprising planter or farmer would leave his plantation for six weeks or more to attend to this work of legislating for the church? What able lawyer would do the same and leave his clients to fall into the hands of others? Or what popular physician would go and leave his patients to the quackery of others? No, this class of men will say: "Let the ministers attend to that business, it is theirs, and we will attend to ours;" and thus they would stay at home, and the church would be compelled to choose men who had nothing to do, and they would not benefit the church much by their councils. The former class are not available, and hence, to fill up the delegation, the church must choose the latter. The wise laymen in our church will attend the monthly meetings and the Quarterly Conferences, and there tell what they want done, and then let the preachers go and do it. They support the ministry for this purpose and others, and they feel that each man should be best prepared for his own business or calling.

Not long since, we conversed with a clergyman of the Evangelical Lutheran Church on this subject, and his views were very like those expressed above. Said he: "Our church has this lay representation in her various assemblies, one layman for every clergyman who has a charge, and the result is, sometimes a little benefit, and sometimes a great evil. We can not get the men we want, and hence, have to take such laymen as we can get." "Democracy in church government," said he, "may be very beautiful in theory; but, it will not work. It proceeds on the ground, that all men are alike wise, good, perfect, and alike interested on all subjects; and as this is not the fact, it does not do well, and if I were a Methodist I should oppose the introduction of the lay element into the ecclesiastical assemblies of the church." We coincide with him in this opinion.

Again, is it supposed that the ministers, who are always studying church economy, and administering church discipline, and watching the results of administration and the workings of church polity; is it to be supposed, we ask, that they are less qualified for the work of the General Conference than even the best of our laymen? And then if the best of our laymen stay at home, what will be the result?

"BUSINESS MEN."

We have heard it said; (by preachers, not by laymen,) that we want laymen in the General Conference, that we may avail ourselves of their business talents. We admit the business talents of our laymen; but while we admit this, we do not admit the truth of a remark often made when some one preacher fails in some one or more worldly calculation. It is this: "Methodist preachers are not business men."

In their deliberative bodies, in their congregated capacities, we esteem them inferior to no other deliberative bodies that assemble in this country. Would our Annual Conferences lose any thing in a comparison with our State Legislatures composed of all laymen? You have seen both in session. Compare chairmen and members of the two bodies. Does not the Annual Conference understand Jefferson's Manual? And does not our General Conference compare well, in point of business talent, even with Congress. Some may think us boasting, but we are not. We are defending the ministry against the virtual charge of ignorance or imbecility. True, Congress has had some great men, as Clay, Webster, Calhoun, etc., but even they have not towered above Bishop Soule, Bishop Bascom, Bishop Roberts and others. No, no, be assured that there is business talent enough in the ministry, with the blessing of heaven, to do all for the Church that laymen could do, even if the General Conference were composed of all laymen. How would that do? And then the preachers would have nothing in the world to do, but to preach.

CONGREGATIONALISM.

We fear that this measure, if adopted, will lead us finally into congregationalism. We see that nearly all of the churches, which have adopted the system of lay delegation, are congregational in their form of church government; and then we think we see a kind of congruity between lay representation and congregationalism; and hence, we infer, that if we grant the one on to our economy, ere long we shall fall into the other. We do not think that the advocates of this lay system desire or design such a result, and yet our conviction is, that this will be the inevitable terminus, if we take this grant, first step.

But, one may say, why not let it be so? We answer, first, If the government of the church by the ministry is scriptural, as we showed in our third article, then congregationalism is unscriptural, and as such we should avoid it. Again; congregationalism leads to diversity of practice and discipline, and often even to diversity of doctrine; and diversity leads to error, until the different congregations of the same church so widely differ that they must declare each other heretics, and the one or the other, or both, are doubtless in error, and deserve to be excommunicated. Once more: In congregationalism the minister is but one, while his congregation is many; and as the laity are called to be more secular, and too often are more worldly, and as they are the more numerous, the one yields to the many, the minister to his wandering flock, the spiritual succumbs to the worldly; and thus being led, instead of leading as God has appointed, the minister follows his wandering sheep till finally their "feet stumble upon the dark mountains."

And as there is one or more churches of congregational form in nearly every community in Christendom, we think it best to avoid any thing that will draw us into that form of church government, and thus preserve, to the world, to the general church, and to God, one Church of the Apostolic, Itinerant, Missionary, Episcopal form.

LOCAL ITINERANT.

Louisiana, Sept. 10th, 1866.

Errata.—In my article No. III, Luke 10th; 4th, should have been Luke 10, I. "This trinity" should read the Trinity.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

SKETCHES OF MEN AND THINGS.

FACTS AND INCIDENTS IN THE HISTORY OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

NUMBER I.

Mr. Editor: I propose in a series of articles under the above caption, to furnish the readers of the Advocate a succinct account of the rise and progress of our beloved Methodism within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, which embraced, at the beginning, all the territory now included in the Memphis, Mississippi, and Louisiana Conferences—together with a considerable portion of that included in the Alabama Conferences.

This work was done in part, some years ago, by my venerable friend and Bro., J. G. Jones. The very interesting series of letters written by him, and published in the Advocate, occupied ground, and were intended to supply a lack of history, anterior to the period from whence I shall undertake to pursue it. His object was mainly to show who first planted the standard of Methodism in the wilds of the South-west, and who were among the first fruits of their ministry; and furnish such incidents as were worthy of note prior to the organization of the Mississippi Conference. If I remember correctly, he extended his account as far down as the first regular Conference, which was held at the house of Bro. William Foster, in Adams county, Miss., Oct. 10th, 1816.

In the notes I shall furnish, the official record will be my guide. Even with this at hand, however, it is impossible to give a perfect official history of many great and good men, who deserve to live in the church while memory endures. The Conference journal in those early days was imperfectly kept. Facts, essential to the official history of the members, are omitted entirely.

The first record we have of the men and their doings who composed the original Mississippi Conference, bears date "Nov. 1st, 1813." Their place of meeting is not given. The following members were present: viz., Samuel Sellers, Miles Harper, Richmond Nolly, Lewis Hobbs, Wm. Winans, Thomas Griffin, John S. Ford, John Phips, John Schrock and John J. E. Bird—ten in all. These all belonged properly to the Tennessee Conference. They organized by electing Samuel Sellers, President, and Wm. Winans, Secretary.

I infer from the minutes that at the preceding General Conference, arrangements had been made to set those brethren off into a separate Annual Conference, and that the perfection of these arrangements was dependant upon some action of the mother Conference, (Tennessee.) When these brethren came together, they concluded they were not yet a legally constituted Conference. But in "view of the necessities of the work of God," they adopted the following resolution, and proceeded to business:

"Resolved, That we are not authorized to transact the business of an Annual Conference in a legal way, yet, as most of the business in which the work of God in this section of the Tenn. Conference, has not been attended to in consequence of a Conference being expected in this country, we will transact the business of an Annual Conference, and submit our proceedings to the Tenn. Conference for their decision."

The remoteness of their field of labor from the main body of the Tennessee Conference, the difficulties of travel to and from Conference, their very limited means, made it highly important that they should at the earliest practicable day be organized and duly empowered to act for themselves in a Conference capacity. Those, too, who might wish to join them in their great work, or such Local Preachers as might desire ordination, and whose services in those days were very important, could not well afford to travel to and from the seat of the Tenn. Conference, to be admitted or to receive ordination.

These men were all true moral heroes. They braved all the perils of a journey through the wilderness for hundreds of miles on horseback, packing rations both for man and beast, camping out at night, and standing guard by turn, as two and two, or perchance in larger companies. Some of them had to pass through the territory of two or three savage tribes in coming from Kentucky, Tennessee and Ohio, to what was then called the "Natchez country." We heard with startling interest some of these noble pioneers tell of their perils and hairbreadth escapes.

At this first informal Conference, Miles, Harper, Louis Hobbs, and Wm. Winans, were the committee to "prepare rules for the government of the Conference." These were few and simple: In accordance, however, with the most approved parliamentary usage. They bear the marks of having been prepared and arranged by the great mind of Winans. A comparison of the style of the youthful Winans with that of the afterward great divine of the Southern Methodist Church, cannot fail however to impress one with the difference between the two. In the maturer years of his ministry, and up to the time of his death, he was eminently distinguished for perspicuity and comprehensiveness, both in his composition and declamation. He could express and enforce an idea with as much clearness, and power, with as few words as almost any living man. In younger days he was rather verbose. By dint of labor and toil, to which only such a mind was equal—he not only expanded his mental power to a capacity for storing all the rich treasures of thought, but improved his style, until in point of rhetoric and logic, it was faultless.

Of the ten who composed the first conference, only one survives: John J. E. Bird. The rest have all gone to their reward, some of them many years ago. For the last twenty-five years, (the period of our personal acquaintance,) Bro. Bird has alternated between the effective and superannuated relations to the Conference. How many times he has been pronounced superannuated, worn out, we cannot call to mind. But after a little rest he has again and again come up to the Conference, and asked for work. Those heroes of a former day seem to retain to the last the fire of their youth. They are loth to quit the field till every foe is vanquished, or until, like valiant knights, they fall themselves upon their "red cross shield." For many years Bro. Bird has been almost deprived of vision, and consequently unable to travel alone, to read for himself or write without an amanuensis. Still he would not consent to be placed again upon the superannuated list, until his failing health compelled it. He has been a traveling preacher more than fifty-five years. If we are not mistaken, he preached the first Methodist, if not the first sermon of any kind, in East Baton Rouge Parish, La. He was the first to raise the standard of the cross in that section. In 1850, we knelt beneath the shade of a beautiful oak near the residence of sister Hawes, mother of the late Samuel Hawes, of the La. Conference. Bro. H. was with us. We had retired to offer up our evening prayer. As we were about to kneel, said he: "Right here, where we now stand, uncle Ira Bird preached, nearly forty years ago, the first sermon ever preached in this country." The speaker was unborn when that sermon was preached. But his father and mother were in the little company that heard the word and kept it. They believed, and consorted with the disciples, and when God gave them children, they trained them in his nurture and admonition. We felt that this was, indeed, enchanted ground. We caught an inspiration here, as from many a hallowed spot on earth, and many a precious scene in the life of the great and good who had "gone this way before us."

At the period of which we write, the Mississippi Conference embraced two Presiding Elder's Districts and ten circuits—no stations. Or rather, this was the ecclesiastical arrangement of that portion of the Tennessee Conference afterwards included in the Mississippi Conference. There was a Mississippi District, and a Louisiana Dist. The former embraced all the territory lying between the Tombigby and Mississippi Rivers; extending northward to the boundary of the Choctaw nation, a line running first along the Northern boundary of Claiborne County, Miss., due east and west to these two rivers named, and southward to include the Florida Parishes of Louisiana, and all that part of Miss. lying between the Pearl and Tombigby rivers. The Louisiana Dist. embraced all of the State of Louisiana not included in the Mississippi Dist. To give the reader some idea of the circuits of those days, we will state that, according to the most authentic account we can obtain, what is now called Wilkinson circuit, having only some four or five appointments, every one of them easily reached on Sunday morning, from the parsonage, by 11 o'clock, then included all of Wilkinson county, Miss., and the Parishes of East and West Feliciana, East Baton Rouge, Washington, Livingston, St. Helena, St. Tammany, and all the territory indeed that was accessible on the east side of the Mississippi river, in the State of Louisiana. Not long since, in conversation with the venerable Tabor, the oldest living Methodist preacher in all this region, we learned that he was not content with the Circuit in that shape (for he traveled it once) but extended his labors across the Mississippi, far down on the other side.

Of the ten members of the Conference of 1813, six had passed away before we had learned to know and love the names of Methodist traveling preachers: but during a ministry of nearly thirty years, we have traveled over the same territory and have seen their footprints on the sand—time has not yet, even, obliterated them. They were truly great and good men. Their like will not soon again arise to bless the church. Miles Harper, Samuel Sellers, Richmond Nolly, Lewis Hobbs, John S. Ford, John Phips, John Shrock, a list worthy never to be forgotten. We do not know of any descendant of John Phips, but it has been our pleasure to share, in our pilgrimage, the generous hospitality of those in whose veins still courses the noble blood of Sellers, Hobbs, Ford and Schrock. Nolly had no family we believe.

Thomas Griffin was a rare character—bold, earnest and faithful to his Master's work. And when he could no longer consistently remain in the traveling connection, he located and became one of the most successful planters in Mississippi. He was an illiterate man, but had a mind of extraordinary powers; he had a style peculiar to himself, and operated more effectively upon his audience than almost any man it has been our privilege to hear. He had frequent collisions with the world on account of his stern and oft repeated rebukes of the popular sins and fashionable follies of the times. He was a delegate to the General Conference of '36, if we mistake not, and took an active part in the contest with Radicalism in that Conference. He located not long after this—lived many years known as an exemplary Christian, an active Local Preacher, and died in peace a few years ago, at his residence in Madison county, Mississippi.

Simon Gentry, Jonathan Kemp, Thos. Owens, Peter James, and Josiah B. Daugherty, were received on trial at the Conference of 1813. Elisha Lott was continued on trial. John Phip, John T. E. Bird, and John Schrock, were the Deacons. Wm. Winans, John S. Ford, and Thos. Griffin, were elected to Elders' orders. Lewis Hobbs was made supernumerary, and Miles Harper located. The numbers in society were: Mississippi District, whites, 1125; colored, 279; Louisiana District, whites, 1526; colored, 432. Total, whites, 2651; colored, 711.

There are still some other items of interest marking the history of this Conference and the prominent characters in it, which we reserve for a future number.

H.

LETTER FROM OPELIKA, ALA.

Dist. Conference for Montgomery Dist.—Organization—Business Programme—Church—Colored People—Sunday Schools—Ministerial Support—Bp. McTyeire—Protracted Church Service.

It has come—it has gone: the Dist. Conf. Bro. McCurty said it was coming; Bro. Wardlaw engaged homes—Col. Pollard furnished return tickets. The men talked, the women "fixed." Rooms, larders, wardrobes were made ready. Thus the Conference came; and glad were we to see it. Traveling preachers, Local Preachers, S. S. officers, Class-leaders and Stewards met—met in Christian fellowship for christian counsel.

On Friday, 11 A. M., Aug. 11th, Bro. Sykes, of Mt. Meigs Ct., preached in M. E. Church; theme, "Christian Warfare." At 3 P. M., Bishop McTyeire organized Conference—Bro. S. W. Lowther, elected Secretary. Minutes, as adopted, to go to permanent record, in a suitable book. Reports submitted covered state of the church, relation of colored people, condition of Sabbath Schools, and Amounts for Ministerial Support. A summing of items on the first point showed an increase in the number of persons attending Divine Service, and a seeking after higher spiritual experience by many church members. A special committee was raised on each of the other points. Rev. C. D. Oliver presented a well considered report on the colored population. It was calmly and wisely discussed. The final action was tantamount to the action of the late General Conference. An earnest interest is felt in the negro race. The obligation binding the church to make effort for the improvement of this people, so suddenly elevated to the rank of citizens, is very generally recognized. The manner of meeting the obligation is a question of gravest character. A broad philanthropy may devise a safe system, but a pure christianity, of the highest gospel type, will be needed to give the system vital energy, and render it practically effective. So many views, honestly entertained in other days, must be changed: so much prejudice, the result of education and interest under the old order must be uprooted: so complete a victory over self, involving self-denial and sacrifice, must be obtained: that nothing less powerful than Divine grace can enable us to see the subject in the new light of new relationships. Policy, however correct, will not do: the principle is too unsound, the motive too sordid. Higher ground must be taken. Religion, in its genius and spirit, must restrain passion and sanctify nature. Christ must reign within the heart, filling it with gentleness and love. God's hand must be seen in the sad and sorrowful result of the arbitrament of the sword, and submissively resigning all to Him who careth for all. There must be heard in the very depths of our affliction, a cry, sincere, though plaintive, "Not our will, but thine be done."

While the report was before the Conference, Bishop McTyeire gave an interesting account of the two church organizations among the negroes in the North. The Methodist Episcopal African Church had its origin, nearly fifty years ago, in Philadelphia. It is compact, has organic law and working machinery similar to ours, has had much experience, has advanced steadily. The Methodist Episcopal African Zion Church arose, at a later day, in New York. It has Superintendents instead of Bishops, is not so prosperous, lacks efficiency, somewhat.

The Bishop also stated incidly the feelings and purposes, as he understood them, of the General Conference, upon this delicate but momentous question. In concluding, he so pressed his own warm, decided convictions that the District Conference realized the truth, that "The church ought not to wait for public opinion to get right, but by the force of her moral dignity and spiritual power, ought to mould, and shape, and direct public opinion."

Rev. W. B. Neal, Chairman of Committee on Sunday Schools, brought in report. Preamble brief—resolutions searching. First, urged each pastor to connect himself personally with each school under his care, and in some way to labor personally for its success. Second, recommended each Sunday School in the District to be organized into a Sunday School Society, auxiliary to a District Sunday School Union, to be hereafter formed. Third, required each Superintendent to report, in writing, to the District Conference, or to the Union, if formed, fuller statistics than are carried to the Annual Conference, as (a) No. of conversions, (b) No. of accessions to any church from Sunday School, (c) No. of deaths, (d) No. entering ministry, (e) No. passed from rank of pupil to teacher. Fourth, embodied the sentiment that each branch of Christ's Church best promotes its own prosperity and the general religious interests by establishing denominational Sunday Schools. Fifth, directed the officers of each school to labor for three particular objects: 1st, to improve in singing; 2nd, to supply good reading books; 3rd, to secure, under Divine blessing, the moral development and conversion of pupils.

The resolutions had point and cut sharply, in some directions. The debate was warm, but kindly. Have attended many Annual Conferences. Have never known the Sunday School cause so examined, lifted, emphasized. Bishop McTyeire proved himself the friend of Sunday Schools. He knows the value of the Institution.

The Committee on Ministerial Support consisted of laymen, practical, intelligent, pious. Bro. J. Harris, of Oak Bowery, Ct., read report. Its suggestions were such as working Stewards, burdened with a sense of responsibility, would make. The "assessment plan" is the plan. To support the church, in all her operations, is a duty and a privilege. Each member owes a contribution. It is a debt of most sacred nature. Nothing but utter, absolute poverty justifies failure in payment. The amount is not in question. The widow's "farthing" illustrates. The "mites" should come in, out of "penury," if need be. The offering may be richer for being small. Christ altteth "over against the treasury." He sees the heart. He will judge, rightly. When these thousands of rills join, what a stream appears! Grains of sand are small. Yet they form mountains. Assess each member, let each pay. Then each will grow in grace. Then Christ's kingdom will be built.

One other thing the Conference should have looked into: the number, condition, and value of church buildings and parsonages in the District.

There were some drawbacks upon the Conference. But for these its results might have been fuller and more valuable. 1. The Presiding Elder was absent, sick. He lost much, the Conference more. 2. The charges were not all represented. 3. Many delegates asked leave of absence, and left on Saturday evening. The Conference, of right, includes Sunday. Delegates should remain until Monday. 4. The closing work was hurried. In the hurry, base mention was made of educational interests. It should have been otherwise.

On Sunday, Bishop McTyeire preached to appreciative hearers. Text 1st Tim. i, 19v. Subject: 1. A correct creed essential. 2. Conscience defined. 3. The relation one's conscience bears to his creed. Sermon after his own style, imitable by none. Effect, decidedly marked and wholesome. The exposition of conscience was lucid and satisfactory, beyond what the writer has heard from the pulpit or read in the books. Ordained one Deacon, Rev. Jas. F. Dowdell. Afternoon, ordained one Elder, Rev. N. W. Pattillo. Night, explained nature of Eucharist, and gave reasons for its observance by all christians. Many sincere souls will ever feel grateful for both, the explanation and exhortation. In Conference room and in pulpit, the Bishop maintained his high reputation. His honors are worn meekly. A gentle, though living spirituality, as a crown, adorns and beautifies his rare intellectual endowments.

Religious services was conducted in the M E Church, until 27th Aug. Bros. Andrews, Dowdell, and Hays aided. For the conversion of souls, and improved condition of the church, we render devoutest thanks to the Head of the Church.

Our Now.

Opelika, Ala., Sept. 8th, 1866.

Making a Solid Mass of Ice.—Where a supply of water can be had with a little fall, and where there is sufficient cold weather, an ice-house can be readily filled with a solid mass of ice at trifling expense. Arrange a pipe so that the water can be thrown out over the floor of the ice-house in the form of fine spray as from the nose of a watering pot. This will freeze as it falls quite rapidly in cold weather, and in a brief time a whole house can be thus filled with a solid mass.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. D. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1866.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27.—REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS.—By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared with other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, } Executive Com.
J. B. WALKER, } Joint Board of
L. PARKER, } Publication.

The Annual Conferences.

FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP PIERCE.

Arkansas Conference—Searcy, Sept. 26.
Little Rock Conf.—Arkadelphia, Oct. 10.
North Carolina " —Fayetteville, Nov. 7.
Virginia Conference—Norfolk, Nov. 21.
Baltimore Conf.—Baltimore, March—.

SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP DOGGETT.

W. Virginia Conf.—Parkersburg, Sept. 5.
Kentucky Confer.—Winchester, Sept. 19.
Louisville Conf.—Elizabethtown, Oct. 3.
Missouri Conference—Richmond, Oct. 17.
St. Louis Conference—Lexington, Oct. 31.

THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP WIGHTMAN.

South Carolina Conf.—Marion, Nov. 7.
Mobile Conference—Enterprise, Nov. 21.
Montgomery Conf.—Jacksonville, Dec. 5.

FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP PAINE.

Memphis Conference—Jackson, Nov. 14
Mississippi Conference—Natchez, Nov 28
Louisana Conf.—Baton Rouge, Dec. 12.

FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP M'TYEIRE.

Holston Conference—Asheville, Oct. 10
Tennessee Conference—Huntsville, Oct 24.
Georgia Conference—Americus, Nov: 28.
Florida Conference—Quincy, Decem. 13.

SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP MARVIN.

Indian Mission Con.—Bloomfield, Sept 12.
N. W. Texas Con.—Waxahatchie, " 26.
East Texas Conference—Marshall, Oct 10.
Texas Conference—Galveston, October 24.
West Texas Conference—Seguin, Nov. 7.

SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KAVANAUGH.

Pacific Conference—Petaluma, Sept. 19.
Columbia Conference—Corvallis, Oct. 10.

To the Presiding Elders of the Louisiana Conference.

BISHOPS' APPORTIONMENT.

Dear Brethren: By direction of the General Conference, the Delegates of each Annual Conference are instructed to apportion to the several Districts of their Conferences the amount required for the support of the Bishops. The total amount assigned to our Conference is $1140, which we have apportioned as follows:

New Orleans District	$300 00
Opelousas District	100 00
Alexandria District	100 00
Homer District	150 00
Minden District	150 00
Shreveport District	200 00
Bayou District	100 00
Texas District	50 00
	$1150 00

It is very important that this collection be taken up immediately by the Presiding Elders, or by the preachers in charge, and the amounts forwarded to the Book Agent at Nashville. We have made the apportionment with reference to the condition of the Districts, and we hope in a satisfactory manner.

JOHN C. KEENER.
LINUS PARKER,
J. B. WALKER,
ROBERT J. HARP,
W. E. LINFIELD.

A letter from Rev. J. F. Bellamy, Winfield, La., Sept. 8, says: "Bro. J. F. Wynn is having some gracious revivals on his work, aided by Bro. T. S. Collier and myself. To God be all the glory!"

POVERTY AND METHODISM.

Bishop Asbury greatly feared the effect of wealth upon his preachers. He affirmed that it led to inaction and location. Were he now alive, he would experience, we doubt not, a great relief from those considerate fears. There probably has not been a time since the days of Wesley, when preachers were so likely to divine, from the disposition of events, the full advantage and security of original Methodist Itinerant poverty. Mr. Wesley's own £25 annual expense, and the very narrow outfit which he voted the two first missionaries to America, at the Missionary meeting held in the gallery of the Church at Leeds—some four or five pounds sterling—gave Mr. Asbury a prevailing notion that but very little of this world's substance was necessary to enable a man to preach the Gospel. Mr. Wesley grew up in a communion whose ministry were supported in comparative affluence. Prelates, deans, rectors, and curates of the English Church were state-fed, and consequently full. But from some cause he conceived a horror of wealth as an element in the Christian Church. He warned his people against its accumulation. To get all they could, save all they could, and give all they could, was his aphoristic advice. They heeded well the two first parts of it, but halted at the last. So that he declared, in old age, that he took it all back; the aphorism had failed in its most important member, and therefore deserved to be rejected; he warned the man who would not give against the dire effects of making and saving.

Wealth and spirituality he reckoned incompatibles in the Church of Christ. Whenever rich men become necessary to the movements of Methodism, he declares that the first woe of its dissolution will have been sounded. These views were entertained by him in sight of the structure of a Protestant Christianity resting for support upon the strong pillars of a liberal and enlightened government. A condition which left the clergy free to consider only the concerns of their ghostly office; which gave them bread, and insured them water; which sent them out unencumbered with baggage, and provided for them daily manna without a miracle. So admirable a system for shutting out all creaturely care, would seem, judging beforehand, to be exactly suited to securing a devoted and highly spiritual Ministry. But, to the contrary, with many shining exceptions, the great body of the Clergy, in Mr. Wesley's day, were somewhat noted for their worldliness. They were loyal enough—had that mark of godliness—hated dissent as disloyalty, and hated the Pope as Antichrist; but then they floated with the current, could wind a horn, or sing a song, or play at whist, or help to keep the squire sober by drinking a fair share of his Christmas bowl.

Mr. Wesley saw an end of that perfection. To relieve the ministry from the conditions incident to direct dependence upon the people, was to remove them from the people; to place them in affluence, was to deprive them of that spiritnality which the Scriptnres delare to be an inheritance for the poor. He, therefore, threw himself and his preachers upon the people, and the people only, for a support. He did not stipulate what the support of a preacher should be, so much as what it should not be. He placed a limit upon his receipts, and left all annual arrearages to be collected in Heaven. He not only faced poverty, but embraced it, that he might forever secure the gospel to the poor. And we believe that so long as a poor man can sympathize with the poor, the Wesleyan Ministry will preach to the people.

The constant tendency of Churches is to get away from the poor,—not by a disposition to avoid the poor, so much as by the natural effect of the teachings of the gospel. The gospel inculcates sobriety, economy, and industry. Its believers obey, and wealth ensues. But the gospel also commands those who have goods to distribute to the poor—this but few regard. It therefore came to pass, that in our Church there was probably, before the war, more wealth than ever was held by the same number of professing Christians. And, it is a hard saying—who can hear it?—this wealth effected nothing; nothing in comparison with its boundless power. The Church holding it was not remarkable for its missions, its churches, its colleges, or the support of its ministry; only for its wealth! Well, any fortune, any condition, we say, is preferable to that—in view of the Judgment. We can answer for our poverty, possibly; but for all that wealth—let us pray God to lead us into temptation no more. And it does now seem, sure enough, that in that direction we shall be gratified; that the field which we now cultivate will be as noted hereafter for poverty, as it was once remarkable for wealth.

This is the Wesleyan condition; the state of things, if it were only voluntary, instead of being despite our wills, the most favorable to spiritual life, the most approved of God. The freest condition for both preachers and people. Yet testimony comes up, from many sides, that Zion languishes, the people no longer bring tithes into the sanctuary, and the ministry halt. This is true only in part. There are now, and have been during the past four years, many gracious outpourings of the Spirit—"wells in the valley of Baca." The ministry stands true in the main. When we consider the demoralizing effects of war, the wonder is, that our Zion has come out of the wilderness with unbroken front. This is attributable to a discipline which maintained Mr. Wesley's itinerant ministry in its primeval poverty and purity. It continued poor, surrounded by boundless profusion—"as poor, yet making many rich." The flames of war which could find nothing to burn, left them harmless, as the bush of Midian.

We now start afresh, with all the advantages of the new situation.—The pillar of cloud has become a pillar of fire, suiting itself to the darker fortunes of our Israel, and makes the night about us as bright as the day. The Spirit of God hovers with healing wing over the multitudes of our people. "Jehovah holds us with his powerful hand."—

"Strong Deliverer!
Be thou still our strength and shield."

TRANSITION.

The country is in a state which this heading describes. What has been born of the recent birth throes cannot yet be certainly determined. What manner of thing is breaking forth from the Chrysalis: whether golden winged, ephemeral or otherwise, we cannot tell. The political problem is under solution, but not solved. Conservatism is trying to hold things where they were: and to say that nothing has been born; that there is politically no transition in our affairs. The Constitution and the Union are as they were.

In a state of passive and loyal submission, we only speculate about this matter, leaving it to the logic of events. The South is certainly in transition. She is not where she was—probably not altogether as she will be. In her domestic and industrial interests a change of tremendous import has passed over us. Sudden and indiscriminate emancipation has sapped the foundation of our material prosperity. The tap root has been cut, and the flowers and foliage are withering from the boughs. The agriculture of the country is ruined—as in comparison with former times; and this involves the ruin of every thing.

Free negroes as a reliable element of labor cannot be depended upon. Our experience is proving this from day to day, and the history of the case for thousands of years proves the same thing. Free negroes, as a race and people, have never labored and lived to much purpose. We may conclude they never will. The crops of our prosperous days are not to be produced by them. The experiment of the present year has been affected by exceptional circumstances. Rains, droughts and floods have embarrassed the planter—also the worm. But there is enough of testimony from all quarters to show that the labor has been indifferent. Will it grow better? Northern men have tried planting with it to their cost. Southern men have succeeded better, but are generally disgusted and discouraged. We see no reason to suppose that the freed people will become more industrious, and more productive as a class. Old associations, habits and ties have kept them to their work to some extent this year. These influences grow weaker every year, and will at length cease to operate altogether. The white serfs of Russia, suddenly emancipated, may do very well—and in the long run better than they did before. Free white labor may be controlled and made productive by capital, but with colored we doubt.

Will not education and general enlightenment lead them to industry? If it would, we must remember that this is a slow process, and that in the meantime the fields are untilled. Will not the conviction be forced upon us by another year's trial that there is no reliable productive labor in the South? Is it not the fact of to-day? If, beyond any surplus, the negro for the next ten years keeps himself from starvation he will do better than we hope. Foreign laborers, coolies, and others may be introduced to some extent, but a generation must pass before an adequate supply can be drawn from these sources.

To go on then in the old way is impossible. The staple products, the scale and methods of cultivation, and the expanded plans of the past are bound to be modified. We are now clinging fondly and tenaciously to all of these, unwilling to realize the state of transition as a necessary and existing fact. The meaning of this state of things in the main is work. There is a large influx to the towns and cities; everybody that can leave the country does so. Because to stay there means work. Young men and old men are crowding into mercantile pursuits, and the learned professions. Lawyers are becoming more numerous than their clients; there are more doctors than there are patients. The itinerant drummers are more numerous than the drummed. The manhood of the South ought to grapple this problem in a more manly way. Young men who, as clerks and agents in the city, barely live under meagre salaries and exhorbitant rates of living, could live far more comfortably and independently in the country.

The labor for great things, nor the capital may be there, but with a mind to work, competency, independence and comfort may be secured. Our bone and sinew are not dwindled to pipe-stems and whiskers. The late war shows that there is white brawn and Caucasian muscle in the South. They may not be equal to the sugar and cotton fields of yore, but they are capable of a varied and prosperous industry. The agriculture must be shaped to the altered condition of things. There is not labor for the old system, and to attempt to keep it up, is to fight against the plainest dictates of interest. Instead of filling the sugar bowls and the looms of the world, it is enough now if sweeten our tea and wear our own shirts. Do the best we can with and for the negro, but the sooner we cease to lean upon this broken reed the better for us. There must be producers as well as factors; the country must be populated and cultivated, or the cities will go to decay.

We have accepted defeat and emancipation, and we must now accept the political, economical, and social transitions which these have entailed: and the latter as sincerely and loyally as the former. No matter what may be the result of pending conflicts in the politics of the country, the South is not as she was, and never can be. The mud sills have been knocked out; and for us, there is something more than political reconstruction. It must extend to our modes of living, eating, cooking, ploughing: to our habits of thought, enterprise and ambition. Two things are greatly in the way of accepting the transition: One is the desire to live without work; and the other, a desire to become quickly and easily rich. These are as a bane and mildew upon us. Any thing but right down manly work; any thing but slow returns and small profits.

Whilst the South is not as she was and never can be again, the Chrysalis may nevertheless develop into something golden and beautiful. So far from leaving the golden age behind us, the traditionary lesson may be reversed. In the old way we cannot prosper, in the new it is possible that we shall be permitted to do so. The Puritan, whether round-head, regicide, witch hunters, or negro worshippers, like many other malignant things in this sinful world, probably has his mission. He who makes the wrath of man to praise Him and restrains the remainder, may use him not only as "the scourge of God," but as the unconscious instrument of good to us in the end. That this shall be so depends upon our genuine manhood, our just penetration of the circumstances about us, and above all upon our faith in God.

POLITICAL PREACHING.

JUDGE BLACK'S RESPONSE TO REV. DR. NEVIN'S DEFENCE OF POLITICAL PREACHING.

This able document, now exciting a great deal of interest in the North is too long for our columns. We give the concluding part, to show our readers how a statesman has stormed and taken one of the strongholds of Fanaticism. Such an argument, so clear and conclusive, ought to change the course of all good men at the North, who have been deluded into a toleration of partisan politics in the pulpit:

I acknowledge that your commission is a very broad one. You must "declare the whole counsel of God," to the end that sinners may be convinced and converts built up in their most holy faith. Truth, justice, temperance, humility, mercy, peace, brotherly kindness, charity — the whole circle of the Christian virtues — must be assiduously taught to your hearers; and, if any of them be inclined to the opposite vices, you are to denounce them without fear, by private admonition, by open rebuke, or by a general delivery of the law which condemns them. You are not bound to pause in the performance of this duty because it may offend a powerful ruler or a strong political party. Nor should you shrink from it when bad men, for their own purposes, approve what you do. Elevate the moral character, enlighten the darkness, and purify the hearts of those who are under your spiritual charge, at all hazards; for this is the work which your great Task-maker has given you to do, and he will admit no excuse for neglecting it.

But this is precisely what the political preacher is not in the habit of doing. He directs the attention of his hearers away from their own sins to the sins, real or imputed, of other people. By teaching his congregation that they are better than other men, he fills their heart with self-conceit, bigotry, spiritual pride, envy, hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness. Instead of the exhortation, which they need, to take the beam out of their own eye, he incites them to pluck the mote from their brother's. He does not tell them what they shall do to be saved, but he instructs them very carefully how they shall act for the destruction of others. He rouses and encourages to the utmost ability those brutal passions which result in riot, bloodshed, spoliation, civil war, and general corruption of morals.

You commit a grievous error in supposing that politics and religion are so mingled together that you cannot preach one without introducing the other. Christ and his apostles kept them perfectly separate.

It is true that Paul counselled obedience to the government of Nero; and I am aware that modern clergymen interpret his words as a justification of the doctrine that support of an existing administration is "part of their allegiance to God." Several Synods and other ecclesiastical bodies have solemnly resolved something to that effect. But they forget that what Paul advised was simple submission, not active assistance to Nero. The Christians of that day did not indorse his atrocities merely because he was "the administration duly placed in power." They did not go with him to the theatre, applaud his acting, or praise him in the churches when he kidnapped their brethren, set fire to a city, or desolated a province. Nor did they assist at his apotheosis after his death, nor pronounce funeral sermons to show that he was greater than Scipio, more virtuous than Cato, and more eloquent than Cicero. Political preachers would have done this, but Paul and Peter did no such thing.

The experience of fifteen centuries proves that political preachers are the great curse of the world. More than half the bloody wars which at different periods have desolated Christendom were produced by their direct instigation; and, wherever they have thrust themselves into a contest commenced by others, they always envenomed the strife and made it more cruel, savage and uncompromising. The religious wars, so called, had nothing religious about them except that they were hissed up by the clergy.

Coming to our own country you find Massachusetts and Connecticut in colonial times under the sole domination of political preachers. Their treacherous wars upon the Indians for purposes wholly mercenary, their enslaving of white persons, as well as red ones, and selling them abroad, or "swapping them for blackamoors," their whipping, imprisoning, and killing Quakers and Baptists, for their conscientious opinions; and their base treatment of such men as Roger Williams and his friends, will mark their government through all times as one of the cruelest and meanest that ever existed.

Political preachers have not behaved any better since the Revolution than before. About the commencement of the present century they were busy in their vile vocation all over New-England, and continued it for many years. The willful and deliberate slanders habitually uttered from the pulpit against Jefferson, Madison and the friends who supported them, were a disgrace to human nature. The immediate effect of this was the Yankee plot to secede from the Union, followed by corrupt combinations with a foreign enemy to betray the liberties of the country. Its remoter consequences are seen in the shameless rapacity and bitter malignity which, even at this moment, are howling for the property and blood of an unarmed and defenceless people.

I could easily prove that these clerical politicians, who have tied their churches to the tail of the abolition party, are criminal on a grander scale than any of their predecessors. But I forbear, partly because I have no time, and partly because it may, for aught I know, be a sore subject with you. I would not excite your wrath, but rather "provoke you to good works."

Apart from the general subject there are two or three special ideas expressed in your letter from which I ventured to dissent.

You think that, though a minister may speak from the pulpit on politics he ought not to indicate what party he belongs to. It strikes me, that if he has a party, and wants to give it ecclesiastical aid or comfort, he should boldly avow himself to be what he is, so that all men may know him. Sincerity is the first of virtues. It is bad to be a wolf, but a wolf in sheep's clothing is infinitely worse.

You represent the Church as an unfinished structure and the State as its scaffolding. I think the Church came perfect from the hand of its divine Architect—built upon a rock, established, finished, complete—and every one who comes into it by the right door will find a mansion prepared for him. It needs no scaffold. Its founder refused all connection with human governments for scaffolding or any other purpose.

You say (in substance) that, without sometimes taking political subjects, a minister is in danger of falling into a "vague, indefinite, and non-committal style," which will do no good and bring him no respect. The gospel is not vague, indefinite, or non-committal upon the subjects of which it takes jurisdiction, and upon them you may preach as loudly as you please. But I admit that in times of great public excitement—an important election, or a civil war—men listen impatiently to the teachings of faith and repentance. A sermon which tells them to do justice, love mercy, and walk humbly before God, is not an entertainment to which they willingly invite themselves. At such a time a clergyman can vastly increase his personal consequence, and win golden opinions from his audience, by pampering their passions with a highly seasoned discourse on politics. The temptation to gratify them often becomes too strong for the virtue of the preacher. I fear that you yourself are yielding to it. As a mere layman I have no right to advise a Doctor of Divinity, but I hope I am not over presumptuous when I warn you against this specious allurement of Satan. All thoughts of putting the Gospel aside because it does not suit the depraved tastes of the day, and making political harangues to win popularity in a bad world, should be sternly trampled down as the suggestions of that Evil One, "who was a liar and a murderer from the beginning."

CHANGES IN DISCIPLINE.

The late General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, took action on the subject of the change of the name of the Church and on Lay-representation, as follows:—On April 27, the vote on the question on the change of name, after some previous voting, was 59 for the "Episcopal Methodist Church," and 71 for "The Methodist Church." There being not the requisite majority, on motion of J. B. McFerrin, the vote was taken on "The Methodist Church," and stood 111 to 21. But at the evening session, the action was reversed by the adoption of the following:

Substitute for Report No. I. of the Committee on Changes of Economy:—"On the change of the style and title of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

The subject of changing the style and title of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has been brought before the General Conference by memorials from various Conferences, asking for the change. Therefore,

Be it declared and ordained, and by a vote of two thirds of the Delegates from the Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, present and voting, in General Conference assembled in the city of New Orleans on this 27th day of April, A. D. 1866, it is declared and ordained, that the style and title of our Church shall be "The Episcopal Methodist."

PROVIDED, that the Bishops or other Presidents shall lay this ordinance before each of the Annual Conferences; and when three-fourths of the members of the said Annual Conferences present and voting shall have concurred in the aforesaid ordinance, then the Bishops shall declare and proclaim that the legal style and title of our Church shall then and hereafter be "The Episcopal Methodist Church."

The vote on the foregoing stood, Ayes, 102; Noes, 42.

On May 2, the General Conference, by a vote of 89 to 46, adopted the following REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON LAY-REPRESENTATION.

The Committee, charged with the duty of bringing in a plan for effecting lay-representation in the Annual and General Conferences, submit the following:

IN THE ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

After the word service, in Ans. 1, Sec. 3, Chap. 2—page 48 of Discipline, insert: And four lay-representatives, one of whom may be a local preacher, from each Presiding Elder's District, to be chosen annually by the district stewards, or in such other manner as the Annual Conferences may direct, who shall participate in all the business of the Conference, except such as involves ministerial character and relations—provided that no one shall be a representative who is not twenty-five years of age, and who has not been for six years, next preceding his election, a member of the Church.

IN THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Substitute for Ans. 1, to Ques. 1, Sec. 2, pages 42-3 of Discipline—.

The General Conference shall be composed of one clerical member for every twenty-eight members of each Annual Conference, and an equal number of lay members, one-fourth of whom may be local preachers, to be appointed as follows: The clerical representatives shall be elected by the clerical members of the Annual Conference—provided that such representatives shall have traveled at least four calendar years from the time that they were received on trial, and are in full connection at the time of holding the Conference. The lay-representatives shall be elected by the lay-members of the Annual Conference — provided that such representative be twenty-five years of age, and shall have been members of the Church for at least six years, at the time of holding the Conference. No Conference shall be denied the privilege of two lay delegates. 2. The ministers and laymen shall deliberate in one body; but upon a call of one fifth of the members of the Conference, the lay and clerical members shall vote separately, and no measure shall be passed without the concurrence of a majority of both classes of representatives.

The following changes in the Discipline are also recommended:

Number the second paragraph as 3.

Number the third paragraph as 4.

On pages 43-4 of Discipline, fixing a quorum for General Conference, substitute "a majority" for "two-thirds."

Resolved, That the proposition for the introduction of Lay-representation into the Annual and General Conferences, be submitted to the several Annual Conferences, and upon the approval of three-fourths of all the members of all the Annual Conferences present and voting, the plan herewith submitted shall become the law of the Church, provided the same shall have passed this Conference by a two-thirds vote.

H. N. MCTYEIRE, Chairman.

MRS. MARY MOORE.

Died in the city of Jefferson, near New Orleans, Sept. 13th, 1866, Mrs. Mary Moore, wife of Mr. David B. Moore, in the 38th year of her age. Mrs. Moore was for many years a member of the M. E. Church, South. Up to the time of her death she was a devoted Christian, and a worthy member of the Church. There can be no doubt that she is now with the great cloud of witnesses with which the militant Christian is compassed about. Deprived of consciousness in her last hours, there were no parting words of assurance and triumph, though during her short illness she expressed resignation to death, only regretting to leave a loved husband, and an interesting group of children needing a mother's care.

It was the privilege of the writer to sustain the relation of Pastor to the Church with which sister Moore was connected for several years. During these years I knew her well and formed a high estimate of her piety and conscientious devotion to her religious duties. She was imbued with the spirit of Christian charity, and the law of kindness was upon her lips. In her deportment the meekness, gentleness, and unobtrusive humility of our religion were eminently displayed. At home, in the true sphere of womanly duties, her virtues shone. Her presence shed light and happiness there.

None who enjoyed her society could fail to feel the sunshine of a cheerful, but pure and tranquil spirit. Here was a character such as enriches the piety of the Church, and adorns and beautifies society—a character without demonstration, it may be, quiet as the sunbeam or the zephyr, but like them, exerting a most profound and wide influence. Her life was Christianity displayed and illustrated in the daily walk, and amidst the solemn but sweet responsibilities of the family circle.

That she should thus suddenly be taken away, in the prime and maturity of womanhood, and that her mission as mother, wife and christian should be thus abruptly broken off, finds its solution in the wise and love of Him whose ways and thoughts are higher than ours. Her life has not been in vain. Her prayers, example and memory will surely lure to higher worlds those she has left behind. May the God of all consolation that comforts us in all our tribulations, spread over the bereaved the mantle of his grace and peace.

LINUS PARKER.

Sept. 20th, 1866.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. J. H. Mims, writing from Abbeville, Louisiana Conference, says: "I have just closed a few days' meeting on Upper Vermilion circuit. We had a good time. The Lord was pleased to manifest his gracious presence, and seven precious souls professed conversion at the altar. 'The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.'"

Rev. W. B. Lewis gives us, by letter, the following intelligence respecting the Church in Yazoo City, Miss:—

"Yazoo City is a place of about two thousand inhabitants, situated on a low bluff on the east bank of Yazoo River, about one hundred and twenty miles above Vicksburg. It contains four churches—Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and Catholic. The Methodist Church has about eighty members. Our house of worship is a large brick building, painted a slate color, well finished and well furnished. It is a little dilapidated from age, being, I believe, the oldest church in town, and needs some repairs, which the members intend putting on it as soon as money matters are a little revived. The ladies of this church are ever indefatigable in their labors. They have recently purchased a large and fine organ, which takes the place of an old, long-used melodion in the choir, and adds much to our church music. Several years before the war, the same zealous friends of the Church, with a few others who are not amongst us now, procured a comfortable parsonage in which to lodge their pastor, and his family, whose wants and comfort they have never indifferent. They manage the finances of the church principally, and one of them—Mrs. Kidd—superintends the Sabbath School, which is in a prosperous condition. You will see by these statements that the ladies are the bone and sinew of the Church in this place."

We have not been blessed with a revival, but our Church is in a very healthy, growing condition. About fifteen persons have been received into the Church this year, all of whom, I trust, will make substantial members. Several others are in a penitent state, and intend uniting with us soon. All things considered, I think the Church is growing in grace, and zeal, and usefulness; yet we need more of the unction of the Holy Spirit, and greater zeal and activity on the part of the membership—yes, and on the part of the minister, too. We have no regular class-meetings, except such as we hold with families in our pastoral visiting. We have weekly prayer-meetings, which are generally well attended. We also hold the Monthly Church Meetings, but they do not seem to succeed here like they do elsewhere. They are, however, not without good results, even among us. I suppose the hindrance to their full success is in us, not in the system itself. I wish somebody would write more about this new thing in Methodism, for however it may be with others, we need "more light,"—at least that is what I suppose we need."

NEWS FROM OTHER CHURCHES.

METHODIST E. CHURCH, NORTH.

The subscriptions in Grace Church, Buffalo, for endowment of Genesee College, in one day footed up $25,000.

At the Methodist centenary meeting, which is to be held in Bloomington Illinois, on the 24th of September, over eight hundred ministers will be present.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The Presbytery of California met at San Francisco on the fifteenth of March, and formed a dozen Chinese converts into a Christian Church—an event which may have historic interest hereafter.

Mrs. Sarah Higgins, aged seventy-eight years, died in the Park street Presbyterian church at Syracuse, New York, a few Sundays ago, while at the communion table.

The Cumberland Presbytarian General Assembly had a harmonious meeting at Owensboro, Ken., with one hundred and thirty-six commissioners from nearly all the States from Pennsylvania to Texas. All political questions were ignored by a large vote.

BAPTIST.

The Chesapeake Female College, situated near Fortress Monroe, is to be converted into a Theological Seminary for colored youths, under the patronage of the northern Baptist Home Missionary Society.

There is a Danish Baptist Church in Chicago of seventy members, the pastor of which edits and publishes a Danish magazine, and is very abundant in his labors for countrymen in the West.

EPISCOPAL.

Rev. Samuel Crowther, a native African, having received a thorough education, and shown much ability and piety, has been consecrated a bishop of the Church of England, and as special charge of an eminently prosperous mission in the valley of the Niger, in Central Africa.

Rev. W. H. Milburn, the well-known blind Methodist preacher, is officiating as rector of Trinity Episcopal church, Chicago.

NEW JERUSALEM.

We give the statistics of the New Jerusalem Church as presented at a recent convention of the denomination: In Maine and New Hampshire there are five societies, two ministers, and 262 members; in Massachusetts, 16 societies, 18 ministers, and 1050 members; in New York, six societies, with three ministers and 250 members; in Pennsylvania, ten societies, two ministers, and 400 or 500 members; in Ohio, ten societies, six ministers, and from 600 to 700 members; in Maryland and the District of Columbia, six societies, three ministers, and about 200 members; in Illinois, nine societies, seven ministers, and 504 members.

UNITARIAN.

The Rev. T. Hirst Smith, a Unitarian minister settled over Blackwater Chapel, Rochdale, England, has accepted a call from the Unitarian congregation of Charleston, South Carolina. This congregation being unwilling to take any ministers from the North in this country to be their pastor, has thus gone abroad for one.

CATHOLIC.

Cardinal Andrea, for the crime of sympathizing with Italy, has been deposed from his bishopric and from an abbacy that he held. He has written to his flock, protesting against the act, and appealing from the Pope of the present to "the Pope better informed," and—to the universal Church. This is a new sort of appeal for a cardinal to make.

A Catholic church for the exclusive use of the colored people is to be erected in St. Louis. A convent is to be attached, under the charge of colored nuns.

LUTHERAN.

The Lutherans in North Carolina are not so favorable to a reunion of the Southern and Northern churches as the German Reformed Church of that State. The subject was warmly discussed at the recent meeting of the North Carolina Synod, when the friends of reunion were found to be a minority. The General Synod has appointed a committee to open a correspondence with the Southern synods.

CANADA.

The General Conference of the Methodist E. Church in Canada is now in session, Bishop Richardson presiding. Fifty delegates are present representing their annual Conferences. As the ratio of representation is one to every four, the connection must comprise about two hundred preachers besides probationers. The membership it is said number about 25,000.

ENGLAND.

BAPTISTS.—The strict communion Baptists in England, are establishing schools for the education of their young ministers, somewhat upon the plan pursued by Mr. Spurgeon. The students are to reside with the president or preceptor, and "receive a thorough English, theological, pastoral, and denominational education." They are also "to be employed in Christian effort, such as preaching, holding cottage meetings, and visitation in the town and neighborhood, as part of their college course."

The managers state that "the object proposed, is not to send forth men of classical or high litererary edowments, but sound divines, and acceptable preachers."

One of these institutions, just going into operation, is to be under Rev M. Dowson, of Bradford, and is located at Chamber Hall, near Bury, where Mr. Dowson will reside.

GRIEVANCES OF NONCONFORMISTS.—A meeting of the Nonconformists of London was held on the 8th of August under the presidency of Sir S. M. Peto. Between thirty and forty gentlemen were present. The chairman stated, in his address, that a deep debt of gratitude was due to Mr. Hadfield for the perseverence by which he had at last been enabled to pass his bill for the abolition of qualifications for offices, the propriety of which measure had been fully recognized by Lord Derby himself in moving the second reading of the indemnity bill. The discussion of the Fellows of Colleges bill, in the House of Commons, has done a great deal of good. The feeling of the country in regard to this question was daily improving, and the rights of Nonconformists to share in the advantages which were afforded by our national universities were gradually becoming more and more generally recognized. He was quite prepared to reintroduce into Parliament a measure upon the subject of burials, but it had been suggested to him by members of the House of Commons and others that it would be sufficient to claim for Nonconformists the right to the use of the parochial burial grounds, without insisting upon the performance of a service at the grave. He should like, before the opening of Parliament for the next session, to be made acquainted with the opinion of dissenters generally upon the subject.

FRANCE.

The French Conference of the Wesleyan Methodist Church met at Auduze, a small town some forty miles north of Nismes. The session began June twenty-second, and lasted to June thirtieth. The Conference consisted of eighteen ordained ministers. The following are the statistics: Chapels and preaching-places, 184; ministers, 82; coiporteurs and school teachers, 16; local preachers, 91; church members 1799; members on probation, 159; day-schools, 7; day-schools, 261; Sunday-schools, 41; teachers, 222; Sunday-school scholars, 1951; average of hearers, 9385—an increase of two local preachers, forty-one members, one day-school, four Sunday-schools, and ninety-two schoolars.

INDIA.

The Bishops of Madras, Calcutta and Bombay have issued an address, in which they say that the number of Christian converts in India, Burmah, and Ceylon, is 213-182; and the number of English and American missionaries is 541. The children at the mission schools within the same bounds are 96,574. The number in all the schools is 500,000.

FOREIGN.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The French circular says the recent changes are favorable; France, Prussia and Italy are drawn nearer in ideas; the Convention of Rome will be legally carried out; the second class ouvriers are assured of the liberty of the Baltic and Mediterranean.

The note justifies the Emperor's mediation, and hints at the annexation of the people of the same language and interests where it shows the necessity of perfect defence and military organizations; not, however, as a threat, and expresses belief in lasting peace in Europe.

It is said the Emperor refuses to allow officers of the French army to hold offices in Mexico, owing to the protest of the United States thereat.

PARIS, Sept. 18.—The belief is general that Napoleon himself was the author of the note recently made public, and that his sincere desire is permanent peace.

BERLIN, Sept. 18.—The electoral law has passed the upper House of Prussia.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

The general market (says the Price Current of Wednesday) has undergone no material change during the past three days. The movement in Western produce, with the exception of Corn, which has slightly declined, has been to about the usual extent, and Sugar and Molasses have continued unchanged; while operations in our leading staple have been quite active, and although the sales have been rather light in proportion to the stock on hand, holders have been enabled to establish a further improvement of fully 1c per lb.

The accounts from the interior, with regard to the crops, are quite gloomy. The heavy rains and the ravages of the worm have materially injured the prospects.

COTTON.—On Saturday there was only a limited enquiry at the opening, but early in the day the demand became more general, and notwithstanding the restricted offerings of the higher descriptions—which were in request—as well as the increased stringency of factors, 950 bales changed hands at prices showing an advance of fully 1c per lb. On Monday there was a continuance of Saturday's demand, and despite the disadvantages to which buyers had to submit, the sales were to a liberal extent, amounting at the close to 1350 bales at prices within the range of our quotations. Yesterday the market opened with a fair enquiry, and although holders stiffened their pretensions in consequence of the favorable advices from Liverpool, still buyers came forward pretty freely, and 1900 bales changed hands at prices indicating a tendency to stiffer rates. It may be added, however, that it was difficult to obtain Good Ordinary at our inside figures.

Low	— to —
Ordinary	25 to 27
Good Ordinary	29 to 31
Low Middling	33 to 34
Middling	36 to 37

TOBACCO.—The stock on sale has been very much reduced and is small, but the assortment is very good and selections could be made very readily for any market or trade. Buyers on foreign account and for the city trade are still looking around, but they do not meet the views of holders as to prices and the sales are consequently confined to about 450 hogsheads, of which several small lots taken for the city trade, 20 and bbds Good Leaf, 40 hhds Lugs and 81 and 240 hogsheads taken for export at prices fully up to quotations below. The market is steady and firm; the stock on sale is held very strongly and we continue to quote:

	Light.	Heavy.
Low, Refused	3½ to —	— to 4½	Currency.
Good do	5 to —	— to 5½
Common Leaf	6 to —	— to 7½
Fair	8 to —	— to 10
Good	11 to —	— to 12
Fine	13 to —	— to 15
Choice Selec's	16 to —	— to 22

SUGAR.—Some 200 to 300 hhds. Louisiana are in store but are not offering. The principal sale was a lot of 26 bbds Porto Rico on private terms. Fair to Prime Cuba Sugar is selling in bbds. at 12½ to 13½c Yellow Clarified 15¾ and Prime Porto Rico at 15½c per lb. Cuba Sugar is selling in boxes at 12½ to 13c for Nos 12 and 13, 13½ to 14½c for Nos. 14 and 15, 15½ to 16½c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17½c for Nos. 19 and 20.

MOLASSES.—There is very little demand for round lots but a brisk jobbing trade is doing at 56 to 60c per gallon. The principal sales comprised 325 hhds Cuba, of which 175 on private terms. 150 do at 55c and 30th bbls at 55c per gallon. Several cargoes on the way from Cuba are expected.

FLOUR—There were sales on Saturday and Monday of 2300 barrels, mostly to dealers, at $6 50 for Fine, $9 62½ to $9 75 for Superfine, $10 50 to $11 for Single Extra, $11 50 to $12 for Double Extra, $13 25 to $13 50 per bbl for treble Extra, and $15 for Choice family Extra.

BACON—Is in moderate supply but the demand is small, being confined to the local trade. Shoulders are held in small lots at 18½c and are retailing at 19c, Ribbed Sides are held at 21½ and are retailing at 22c, and Clear Sides are held at 22½c and are retailing at 22½c per lb. Sugar-cured Hams are retailing at 26½ to 27½c per lb. Yesterday 30 tierces Hams were sold in lots, at 26½ to 27½c per lb.

PORK—The market still continues very dull, there is no demand for round lots and only a retail business is doing at $35 75 to $36 per bbl for Mess. Round lots of Mess might be quoted nominally at $35 25 to $35 50 per bbl. Prime Mess is retailing at $30 per bbl.

LARD—The market is well supplied but is dull, and only small or retail sales are making at 22½ to 23c per lb for Prime in tierces, and 24 to 24½c in kegs.

CORN—Prices have shown a drooping tendency and sales have been made at from 2 to 5c lower than those of last Friday. On Saturday and Monday we noticed sales of 2600 sacks at 83c for Mixed, 85c for Yellow, and 90c per bushel for White. Yesterday we noticed sales of about 1400 sacks, in lots at 82½c to 83 for Yellow Mixed, and 90c per bushel for White.

OATS—Are not much in demand, but held very firmly. Only 1100 sacks were sold in lots on Saturday and Monday at 50c per bushel for Prime Old. Yesterday about 500 sacks Prime old in lots, brought 50c per bushel.

BRAN.—The supply is light and being but little in demand prices have been less firm. On Saturday and Monday 700 sacks were sold in lots at $1 25 per 100 lbs. Yesterday there were sales of 1200 sacks, chiefly at the above mentioned figures.

HAY.—The stock on hand is small, but there is not much demand in a large or round way. The last sales were made at $20 for Ordinery, and $25 per ton for Primo St. Louis. Prime Ohio River is selling in small lots from warehouse at $30 per ton. Yesterday a lot of 87 bales Primo Ohio River sold on the levee at $29 per ton.

BALE ROPE—The market is quiet but steady and firm. We have no round sales to report, but quote round lots at 18½c per lb. There is a brisk demand for the country which is being supplied at 19c per lb.

IRON COTTON TIES.—The stock is very much reduced, but the demand is active at 11 to 12c per lb.

INDIA BAGGING.—Is in small supply and in good request. We quote round lots at 40 to 41½c per yard. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 39c to rolls, and 41c in bales.

GUNNY BAGS—There are not many in the market. There has been a speculative demand and about 400 bales have sold in lots on private terms. We furnish 30c as ruling figure.

BUTTER & CHEESE.—Choice Northern and Western Butter continues in fair supply and demand. The former is selling at 45 to 48c, and Western at 25 to 35c per lb. The inside figures for both are the rates for the larger lots. Cheese is in good supply and commands 17 to 18c for Western and Northern. We quote English Dairy at 23c per lb.

HOPS.—There is a very good demand for the new crop, but there are none to be had. Good Western will bring 95 to $1 30 per lb.

COFFEE—Is in fair demand and the market is very firm. Dealers are supplying the demand at 27½ to 29c per lb currency for fair to Prime Rio, at which 100 sacks were sold on Monday and 150 yesterday. There is no stock in first hands, and dealers hold only about 1500 bags. We quote Prime at 19¾c per lb gold, duty paid.

STAR CANDLES.—Are in good supply with a fair jobbing demand and there have been small sales at 20c per lb for 12 oz, 22½c for 14 oz, and 25 to 26c for full weight. 12 oz are in demand for the country trade. Yesterday we noticed sales of 500 boxes Shaffer's assorted, at 20 to 25c per lb.

RICE.—There is no Carolina in market. The demand for Louisiana is not active, but owing to light supplies rates remain the same. Choice new crop is held at 14c per lb. 13½c was offered and refused for one lot of 25 bbls new. Choice old crop is selling in lots of 10 to 20 bbls at 13 to 13½c per lb. Receipts of the new crop thus far have summed up about 25 bbls, but owing to the recent heavy rains which have visited the rice growing section of our State, interrupting the process of harvesting, further supplies may not be expected for two or three weeks to come.

WOOL.—There is a fair supply on hand, and a good demand prevails at 16 to 18c for Louisiana Natural, 18 to 22c for Texas ½ to ¾ merino, 23 to 25c for do ¾ to ⅞ Merino; 28 to 30c for washed and 13 to 15c per lb for burry.

HIDES—Are in small supply but the demand is beginning to slack, tanners being unwilling to pay the present high rates. Prices are ruling at 10 to 10½c for Green, 11 to 11½c for Kip Skins, 13c per lb for Dry Hides. Mexican Dry Hides command 18 to 21c per lb.

MALT.—There is no demand, and we furnish the following quotations for reference. Canada at $1 70 to $1 72, and Western 90c to $1 00.

NAVAL STORES.—Are in request, but the market is nearly bare. Small lots of Rosin are held at $2 to $3 for No. 3, No 2 $4 to $5, No. 1 $5 to $7, No. 1 White $7. Pitch $6. Tar $3 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine may be quoted at 50 to 60c per gallon. A few small lots have sold at 55 to 60c.

SALT.—A better feeling exists within the past two days, and prices exhibit an upward tendency. The supply of Turk's Island is confined to a small cargo which is held at 65c per sack. We quote Liverpool at $2 30 to $2 50 for Fine, and $2 25 to $2 40 for Coarse in warehouse, and $2 05 for the former, and $2 for the latter in cargo.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $2 75 to $3 00 per bbl. Onions at $4 00 to $4 25 per barrel. Apples $4 to $4 50 per bbl. Cabbages having been allowed to be placed on the market by the Board of Health, meet with ready sale at 25 to 30c apieco.

POULTRY & EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $5 to $7 per dozen for the young and $11 to $12 per dozen for the large. Geese at $12 and Turkeys at $35 per dozen. Western eggs are selling at $18 to $20 per bbl.

FISH—Are in small supply with an active demand. We quote No 1 Mackerel at $25 per bbl. No. 2 at $22. No. 3 at $17. Codfish are selling at $1 80 to $1 90 per box.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY,
Wednesday evening, Sept. 18, 1866.

Arrived since our last: 684 Texas beeves, 157 calves and yearlings, 156 hogs, 1443 sheep and 81 milch cows.

Sold, 711 Texas Beeves, 296 calves and yearlings, 88 hogs, 459 sheep, and 21 milch cows.

Stock on sale: 281 Texas beeves, 550 calves and yearlings, 188 hogs, 4817 sheep, and 52 milch cows.

Western Best, choice per lb net	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$12 to 20
Hogs per lb gross	12 to 13
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $ 425
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $ 525
Choice Sheep, per head	— to $9
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $60
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12 to $25
Yearlings, per head	$ 7 to $12
Calves per head	$6 00 to $13

MONETARY.

Statement of New Orleans Gold Market, week ending Friday, Sept. 20, 1866.

14th September: 141, 145; 15th September; 143½; 144; 17th Sept: 144, 145; 18th Sept: 144½, 145½; 19th Sept: 144, 145; 20th Sept: 144, 145.

WM. S. MOUNT, Manager.

The City Bank of New Orleans,
15 Commercial Place, New Orleans.

A WONDERFUL MICROSCOPE.—The editor of the New York Sunday School Advocate—Rev. Daniel Wise, D.D.,—says:

"The simplicity, cheapness and great magnifying power of the celebrated Craig Microscope struck me with surprise. Then I was examining a fly's eye by its aid, and was struck with wonder at the skill and power of the Creator which is displayed in its structure. When I saw a statement in an advertisement that this microscope magnified one hundred diameters, or ten thousand times, and could be bought for $2 50; I thought it was one of the many humbugs of the time, for I had paid $20 for a microscope not long before. But now I find it to be a really valuable instrument which I should like to see introduced into the families of our readers in place of the usual useless toys which please for an hour and then are destroyed. This microscope would both amuse and instruct them, and I advise every boy and girl who wishes to know the wonders which lie in little things to save his money until he has $2,75," and send it to George Meade, Thompsonville, Wisconsin, and you will promptly receive the beautiful microscope by mail, postage paid

A NEW THING UNDER THE SUN

PRICE'S

Patent Texas Tonic.

PURELY VEGETABLE.

It is a certain antidote against Constipation of the Bowels, Torpor of the Liver, Palpitation of the Heart, Determination of Blood to the Brain, Indigestion, Pain in the Head and Vertigo; also a remedy for

CHILLS AND FEVERS.

For particulars, see accompanying Envelope with each bottle.

For sale at 59 Camp street, New Orleans,
THOS. K. PRICE, Vendor.

Read the following opinions of some of our old and well known citizens of

PRICE'S PATENT TEXAS TONIC,
Or, Vegetable Medicine.

T. K. PRICE, Esq., Vendor of "Price's Patent Texas Tonic," or Vegetable Medicine:

DEAR SIR—After a fair and deliberate use and experiment of your Vegetable Medicine, known as PRICE'S PATENT TEXAS TONIC, we give it as our decided opinion, that it is the best recipe that we have ever known, for Indigestion, Torpor of the Liver, Constipation of the Bowels and Dyspepsia. We consider your Vegetables Medicine worthy of all commendation, and therfore feel no hesitation in recommending its use to all our friends, as well as the public at large, and that in doing so we are contributing to all the afflicted. Many of us have been suffering from these evils from ten to fifteen years, and have been greatly benefitted.

Wishing you great success in introducing this valuable medicine,

We remain yours truly,
J. J. MULLON, Pastor St. Patrick's Church.
J. H. CALDWELL, of Gas Works, City N.O.
SAM'L. SUMNER, of Home Insurance Office
T. GREENFIELD, of house of Fellowes & Co
LEWIS ELKIN, Merchant, New Orleans.
GEO. W. HINSON, Ship Agent.
JACOB BARKER, Bank of Commerce.
New Orleans, June, 1863.

TERMS:

4 oz Bottles	$2 00
6 " "	2 50
8 " "	3 00
12 " "	5 00

Sold to Druggists by the dozen bottles or more at 33⅓ per cent discount off retail price.

All orders will meet with prompt attention.
sep22 1y THOS. K. PRICE.

W O SHEPARD. A L ABBOTT. R C HUTCHINSON
SHEPARD, ABBOTT & CO.,
No. 55 Camp street, New Orleans,
Nearly opposite Picayune Office,
CROCKERY AND GLASS WARE,
PLATED WARE,
House Furnishing Goods,
AND KITCHEN WARE.

We beg leave to inform our friends and the public in general, that we have on hand a large and well selected stock of the above goods, and are constantly receiving them directly from the manufactories in France, England, and the United States; and we flatter ourselves that we can sell our goods as low as any house in the city.—For variety in the house-furnishing line, our stock is unequalled in the South.

Call in and see for yourself before purchasing elsewhere.

SHEPARD, ABBOTT & CO.,
sep22 1y 55 Camp street, New Orleans.

E. L. PIERSON & CO.,
Wholesale and Retail Dealers in CLOTHING,
AND
GENTLEMEN'S FURNISHING GOODS,
No. 27 Magazine Street,
Corner of Gravier street,
sep22 6m NEW ORLEANS.

R. BLEAKLY & CO.,
Wholesale Grocers,
COTTON FACTORS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS.
Nos. 56, 58, 60, 62 and 64 Poydras street,
Corner Poydras and Tchoupitoulas sts.,
NEW ORLEANS.

All cotton consigned to us will receive the personal attention of Mr. J. F. GIRAULT, (formerly with the house of Messrs Wright & Allen) who is specially charged with that department of our business. sep22 1y

E A HAMILTON, Memphis, Tenn. JOHN L. DUNNICA, New Orleans, La.
HAMILTON & DUNNICA,
Cotton and Tobacco Factors, and
GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
42 Union street, New Orleans.
sep22 1y

O HORTER, Late of Magee & Koenig, N.O. T I PETERSON, Late of Goff & Peterson, Philadelphia. E O FENNER, New York
HORTER, PETERSON & FENNER
(Sign of the Black Horse,)
MANUFACTURERS OF SADDLES HARNESS, AND TRUNKS.
Importers of Saddlery & Coach Hardware
7 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
s22 1y

L E WALKER, Missouri. C B FISHER, New Orleans.
WALKER & FISHER,
Commission & Forwarding Merchants
NO 6 (GROUND FLOOR) CARONDELET ST., N O.
Solicit consignments of all kinds of Manufactured Goods, and will make liberal advances on same.
GEO. W. WALKER, JUN., late of the firm of Harper, Walker & Co, will give his personal attention to the sale of all consignments to our House. sep22 6m

C A BANKS, W W LORING, O W VENABLE
BANKS, LORING & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants
26 CARONDELET STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep22 6m

CENTENARY COLLEGE,
Jackson, Louisiana,
was established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and transferred to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1845. It is now under the joint patronage of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences.

The College exercises were necessarily suspended during the war; but were regularly resumed, after reorganization, on the first Monday in October, 1865. The approaching session will open on the first Monday of October next.

Tuition, $75 per annum, payable semi-annually, in advance.

Boarding can be obtained at from $20 to $25 per month

The Buildings, Libraries, Apparatus, Laboratory and Society Halls, the location in point of beauty, health, ease of access and good society, are all unsurpassed by those of any institution in the Southern States.

The past history of the College is the pledge of its future prosperity.

The Board and Faculty promise the public that nothing shall be wanting on their part to secure the thorough education of the young men committed to their care, in both Preparatory and Collegiate Departments.

The old students, alumni, and friends of the Institution, are requested to give publicity to the full reorganization and opening of the College, as stated above.

R ATKINSON & CO: New York. JAMES HEWITT & CO., Liverpool.
HEWITT, NORTON & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And Commission Merchants,
188 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
Cash advances made on consignments to us by HEWITT, SWISHER & Co., Galveston, Texas. sep15 1y

WILLIAM FELLOWES, JUN.,
(Successor to FELLOWES & Co.)
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant
186 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
DAN. P. LOGAN, Agent. sep15 1y

OBER, ATWATER & CO., New York. LEWIS, NANSON & CO., St. Louis.
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
38 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep15 1y

WM. EDWARDS & CO.,
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
27 Camp Street, New Orleans.
WM. EDWARDS. } sep15 3m
EDWD. J. GAY. }

REO. W. RAGA. W. H. FOSTER. E. T. MERRICK, Late Chief Justice La.
RAGE, FOSTER & E. T. MERRICK,
Attorneys at Law,
CORNER OF CAMP STREET & COMMERCIAL PLACE,
sep15 1y New Orleans.

W A VIOLETT. R Y BLACK. S H SNOWDEN.
VIOLETT, BLACK & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
s15 6m 138 Gravier street, New Orleans.

W B LOTT, Madison County, Miss. C. W. WOOD, Canton, Miss.
LOTT, WOOD & CO.,
Wholesale Grocers & Commission Merchants
65 COMMON & 46 CANAL STS., NEW ORLEANS.
Maj. G. C. Sebastian has charge of our sales Department. sep15 1y

JACOB BURCKETT,
GROCER,
And Dealer in Fine Wines & Liquors,
s15 6m 110 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

CHENOWETH, CASEY & CO.,
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
For sale of Pork, Bacon, Beef, Flour, and Western Produce generally, 53 Gravier street, New Orleans.
sup15 1y

H M WRIGHT. O W ALLEN (1st August, 1865). J MIDDLETON
WRIGHT, ALLEN & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
169 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug25 1y

THOS. H. ALLEN, Memphis, Tenn. JAMES M. ALLEN, PARRY NUGENT, } New Orleans
T. H. & J. M. ALLEN,
(Successors to ROBSON & ALLEN),
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
192 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sug18 1y

PEET, SIMMS, & CO.,
Importers and Wholesale Dealers in
DRY GOODS,
Nos. 23 & 25 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS
S PEET—P WILLIAMSON
P SIMMS—J BOWLING } aug25 1y

F F FOLGER. L FOLGER. W H THOMAS
FOLGER & CO.,
Dealers in
Hardware, Iron, & Ship Chandlery,
37 & 39 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
(Opposite the St James Hotel)
Nails and Castings; Hoop, Sheet and Bar Iron, Shovels and Spades; Sheet Copper and Zinc; Plows, Axes and Hoes; Lead Pipe and Sheet Lead; India Rubber Belting; Hose and Packing; Circular, Mill and Cross Cut Saws. aug25 1y

H. P. ETHELL, New Orleans. NAT. H. THOMAS, Late of Alabama.
ETHELL & THOMAS,
FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
For sale of Bagging, Rope and Twine, Pork, Lard, Beef, Flour, Grain, Hay and Western Produce generally.
Sole Agents for the celebrated brand, "Grey Jacket" Flour.
No. 105 Poydras street, New Orleans.
Will give personal attention to the purchase of Merchandize and Groceries for the country. Cash orders solicited. Instructions strictly obeyed. sep1 6m

J. W. BURBRIDGE. THOS. D. MILLER
J. W. BURBRIDGE & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants,
No. 190 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep1 6m

Gen. James Longstreet. W M Owen. E Owen
LONGSTREET, OWEN & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
37 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug25 6m

J J WARREN. T W CRAWFORD. F A FLEITAS
WARREN, CRAWFORD & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants,
45 CARONDELET STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep22 6m

JOB PRINTING.
COLLEGE CATALOGUES, CONFERENCE MINUTES, SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORTS, PAMPHLETS, CIRCULARS, CARDS, And everything else in the line of job printing, executed in
The Very Best Style, at Moderate Prices.
Send your orders to J. WILKINSON, Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans

BOOKS! BOOKS!
The Agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, at 112 Camp street, New Orleans, has just received from the steamships George Cromwell and Merrimac, and by the steamboats Mepham and Olive Branch, ample supplies of Sunday School requisites: Catechisms, Spellers Questions, Dictionaries, Primers, Reward Tickets, etc., etc. Also, Clarke's and Benson's Commentaries, and Hymn Books in sheep and roan.
Address:
H. J. HARP, Agent,
sep15 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

OPELOUSAS LAND AGENCY.—At the solicitation of numerous friends, the undersigned has consented to become an Agent for the sale and purchase of land in this healthy and much sought after country, above any high water overflow, and where the prospects for crops are so encouraging. He will take very great pleasure in shewing the land to any persons visiting this country, and in giving any other information that may be desired concerning it.
For reference I refer to the Editors of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
JAMES H. HOUSTON,
Sept 4, 1866. Opelousas, La.

A GOOD COOKING STOVE
Is one of the most necessary and desirable articles of household economy, and if properly managed, will promote the health, comfort, and happiness of every member of the family.
Time, money, and extreme vexation, by delays of your daily meals, may be saved by using the
CHARTER OAK COOKING STOVE.
Over 10,000 of these celebrated cooking stoves are in daily use throughout the city of New Orleans. Every one of them has been sold under a full guarantee, and we offer them as a reference wherever found.
The Improved Charter Oak Stove with Extension Top
has but one damper, and is so simple in its construction that a child can manage it. The ovens are larger, bake more uniform, and the stove heavier than any cooking stove of corresponding size ever made.
The Hot Water Reservoir Boiler furnishes a constant supply of hot water at all hours of the day, and for hours after the fire has been extinguished, without additional cost for fuel, a practical illustration of the economy in using the Charter Oak.
The Reflector Gridiron, original with the Charter Oak, and used on no other stove—the most perfect manner to broil meats and poultry, whereby the offensive odors arising from meats during the process of broiling are carried up the pipe, and juices of the meats preserved.
The Hot Closet, in which meats and pastry are kept warm for hours when there has been a delay at meals, besides enabling the cook to furnish the greatest variety of dishes and desserts, and place them hot upon the table.
The Charter Oak Stove will do one-third more baking in a given time, and use 25 per cent less wood than any other stove now made.
Importers and Dealers in Hardware, Nails, Castings, Guns, Carpenters and Coopers' Edge Tools, etc.
RICE BROS. & CO., Sole Agents;
93 and 95 Camp street, near Poydras,
and 565 Magazine street, near Magazine Market
sep1 1y

E. GIQUEL,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in
FOREIGN, FANCY AND STAPLE
DRY GOODS.
Also, a large and varied supply of
HOUSEKEEPING and
PLANTATION GOODS,
Constantly on hand, at
126 Canal Street,
sep1 1y NEW ORLEANS.

D. H. HOLMES,
Direct Importation of
FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,
AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
No. 155 Canal Street,
sep1 6m NEW ORLEANS.

S. ANDERSON, PHOTOGRAPHER
And PHOTOGRAPHIC STOCK DEALER,
61 Camp street, New Orleans.
Cartes de Visite,
Hallotypes, Ambrotypes,
Pictures on Porcelain,
And every description of Picturas known to the Art.
All kinds of Photographic Materials at the lowest price for cash. sep1 1y

[Established in 1828.]
EVANS' FASHIONABLE RETAIL
Hat Emporium.
No 62 CAMP STREET,
Next door to the Picayune Office, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of the Latest Styles by every steamer, at Moderate Prices. a18 6m

LOEB, SIMON & CO.,
Importers and Jobbers of
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,
86 Canal Street,
sep1 3m NEW ORLEANS.

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c.
Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.
Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

SPEED, SUMMERS & CO.,
46 Carondelet street, New Orleans,
COTTON AND TOBACCO FACTORS,
General Commission Merchants,
And COMMERCIAL AGENTS. aug25 1y

J. H. CARTER,
Wholesale Grocer,
Nos. 8 and 10 Tchoupitoulas Street,
And 8 and 10 New Levee,
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

C. C. HARPER. N. J. THAXTON.
B. S. HARPER & CO.,
Cotton and Tobacco Factors,
AND GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 81 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

STEWART, GALBREATH & FIZER
Commission Merchants & Cotton Factors,
46 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
Andrew Stewart, New Orleans.
Wm. R. Galbreath, } Memphis.
Wm. Stewart, }
John C. Fizer, }
sept 3m

SAM'L. BARRETT. CHS. LE SASSIER.
BARRETT & LESASSIER,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
CORNER COMMON AND BARONNE STREETS,
Entrance, 43 Baronne street.
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

JOHN A. STEVENSON. A. H. MAY
STEVENSON & MAY,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 40 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 6m

P. H. FOLEY,
Of the Firm of FOLEY, AVERY & Co.
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant
No. 22 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug 18 6m

HARLOW J. PHELPS. S. B. SUCKNER, Of Kentucky.
HARLOW J. PHELPS & CO., Of New Orleans.
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 142 Gravier Street, New Orleans.
aug18 6m

W. C. TOMPKINS. M. R. ALSOBROOK.
WM. C. TOMPKINS & CO.,
WHOLESALE DRY GOODS,
No. 2 Magazine st., corner Canal, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of goods constantly on hand for the country trade. a18 6m

A. HENDERSON PEALE & CO., Successors to Thos. Henderson & Peale,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
No. 100 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 6m

J. W. CARROLL. ANS. HOY. CHAS. HANDSNAKER
CARROLL, HOY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No. 36 Perdido Street, New Orleans,
aug18 1y

C. L. WALMSLEY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 31 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

JOHN R. PARHAM, Of New Orleans. BEVERLY BLUNT, Of Hinds Co., Miss.
PARHAM & BLUNT,
COTTON FACTORS,
Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents,
No 26 Carondelet st. (First Floor), New Orleans
aug11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY & CO.,
General Commission Merchants and
COTTON FACTORS,
57 Poydras street.
Cotton Office—192 Common street—in charge of RICHARD J. NUGENT. aug4ft

E. K. WALKER. THOS. M'KNIGHT. J. F JOHNSON.
R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondelet street, New Orleans
jan 20-1y.

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

GEORGE L. HILL, ATTORNEY at Law, Marshall, Texas. Collections made in Eastern Texas and West Louisiana. mar27

WATTS,

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

"Does God Love Beggars?"

An old man knocked with his staff on a court-yard gate. Within the house, a happy family were clustered about a well-spread breakfast-table. The gate had been locked to keep intruders out.

A little girl, with a face as fair as a pippin apple-blossom, looked up on hearing the knock, and said—

"There he is again—the old beggarman. He comes every Monday morning, and you've never given him a crumb all winter. Do, now; he looks so pinched and hungry! May I give him a cup of coffee? It is my birthday; please let me?"

"No, no, Susie! If we give beggars coffee, we shall have a crowd around our gate every morning."

"But do, mamma, let Susie, just this once," asked little voices from all sides of the table; and even baby, who had not yet aspired to the second round year of his life, cried, "Div, mamma, div!"

"Oh, you are all beggars!" exclaimed the happy father. "Wife, we will risk the crowd, and let Susie give the coffee."

The mother smiled permission. The man still waited at the gate. He could see the breakfast-table quite plainly, and no head had been shaken to bid him go on his way. Susie waited for the cup, and even begged an extra lump of sugar, wherewith to make more sweet the coffee.

Oh how happy the delicious draught made the beggarman! Susie could see the wrinkles fade out from his face, and smiles come in their places.

"It's many a weary morning," he said, "since I have tasted coffee. Tell your mother I thank her," and, having caught up the last drop of sweetness, the old man went on his way.

The family group separated and were soon occupied with their various interests. At mid-day, tired of play, weary of his horses, his carts, and his toys, little pet Arthur stole up to his mother and said, "Kiss me, mamma." The kiss was given. Arthur turned again to his toys; but he was soon at his mother's side. "Kiss me another time," he said. The child received kiss number two; but it was not many moments before the golden head returned, and with a plaintive tone Arthur begged, "Do love me, mamma, and kiss me twenty times."

I am certain that the score of kisses were not counted by Arthur nor by his mother, as the lady gathered the boy in her arms and looked anxiously in his face to learn if he were ill.

Arthur lay quietly for some moments, and sleep seemed creeping in at his eyes; when suddenly the head of gold darted up from its place of rest, and, with his eyes of blue fixed on his mother's face, he asked, "Mamma, you don't love beggars, do you?"

"I love you, Arthur."

"But old men and women with dirty faces, I mean, and ragged girls and boys who keep knocking at the door?"

"No, Arthur, I am afraid I don't love them."

"Mamma, does God love beggars?"

"He loves all the creatures that he has made."

"But beggars I mean—folks who keep teasing and teasing for things he don't want to give them?"

"I should think not."

"But I guess he does, mamma. I guess God loves beggars for papa asks God every morning for just the same things, and every single night I beg God to keep me while I go to sleep, and Susie, and Bennie and Mary ask him just the same. We are all beggars, and I think God loves us; for he always takes care of us, and he never locks up his big courtyard gate; for if he did, he wouldn't hear us."

Arthur fell asleep, the color deepening and deepening in his cheeks until they burned into a flame-like hue; and, two mornings later, a little beggar boy was admitted, for Christ's sake, into the kingdom of heaven.—Child at Home.

Keep Good Company.

Sophronious, a wise teacher of the people, did not allow his sons and daughters, even when they were grown up, to associate with persons whose lives were not moral and pure.

"Father," said the gentle Eulalia, one day, when he had refused to permit her to go, in company with her brother, to visit the frivolous Lucinda—"Father, you must think that we are very weak and childish, since you are afraid that it would be dangerous to us to visit Lucinda."

Without saying a word, the father took a coal from the hearth and handed it to his daughter. "It will not burn you, my child," said he; "only take it."

Eulalia took the coal, and behold her tender white hand was black; and without thinking, she touched her white dress, and it was all blackened.

"See," said Eulalia, somewhat displeased, as she looked at her hands and dress, "one cannot be too careful when handling coals."

"Yes, truly," said her father. "You see my child, that the coal, even though it did not burn you, has nevertheless blackened you. So is the company of immoral persons."

HAYTI.—No. I.

This island is divided into two parts—the western portion being Hayti proper, and the eastern forming the Dominican Republic. It is next in size to Cuba, and is regarded as the most fertile of the Antilles. The entire island is 406 miles in length by a maximum width of 163. The number of square miles is 27,690, of which 10,091 are comprised in the Haytien or negro Republic, and the balance in the Dominican. It is very difficult to arrive at the exact population of Hayti, as no definite statistics exist, but it is variously estimated at from 500,000 to 650,000. The climate, natural productions and fertility of its soil are not surpassed by any other portion of the known world. Gold, silver, platina, mercury, copper, iron, tin, sulphur, rock-salt, marble, etc., etc., are found among its mineral productions. The gold mines have long since been abandoned, as has every employment requiring laborious industry. The climate is warm, but on account of the sea-breezes, generally agreeable and pleasant, even during the summer heats. Vegetation is of the richest and most luxuriant kind.

"It is extremely difficult," says a traveler, "to convey to one unacquainted with the richness and variety of the island scenery of the topics, a correct impression of its gorgeous beauty. Islands rising from a crystal sea, clothed with a vegetation of surpassing luxuriance and splendor, and of every variety, from the tall and graceful palm, the stately and spreading mahogany, to the bright flowers that seem to have stolen their tints from the glowing sun above them. Birds, with colors as varied and gorgeous as the hues of the rainbow, flit amid the dark green foliage of the forests, and flamingoes, with their scarlet plumage, flash along the shore. Fish of the same varied hues glide through waters so clear that for fathoms below the surface they can be distinctly seen. Turn the eye where it will, on sea or land, some bright color flashes before it. Nature is here a queen indeed, and dressed for a gala day.

"In the Island of St. Domingo, the rich beauty of the tropics is combined with some of the finest mountain scenery in the world. The broad, fertile lagoons, covered with groves of orange, citron, and coffee, with here and there a delicate column of smoke indicating the locality of some invisible dwelling; groves of mangroves, rising apparently from the midst of the waters, but indicating the presence of dangerous shallows, gradually become invisible. No rough promontory, as upon our northern shores, meets the eye; every angle is delicately rounded, every feature of the scenery undulating and graceful."

To this surpassing beauty is added almost all the natural productions that can be conceived. The mountains are covered with forests of pine, mahogany, fustic, satinwood, lignum vitæ and other cabinet woods. All the usual tropical productions grow spontaneously in great abundance, including plantains, bananas, yams, maize, millet, oranges, pine-apples, melons, grapes, etc. The staples of cultivation are coffee, cocoa, sugar, indigo, cotton and tobacco. Surely, such a country as this has been peculiarly blessed by the Creator, and it seems that nothing less than a crime against nature to allow its exhaustless resources to remain undeveloped. But what is its history?

In 1790 Hayti was in a high state of prosperity. At that time it supplied half of Europe with sugar. It was a French colony, and contained a population which numbered about 500,000, of which 38,360 were whites, 28,370 free negroes, mostly mulattoes. The remainder was negro "slaves." The period of which we speak was the era of the great French Revolution, when doctrines of "liberty, equality, and fraternity" had full sway in France. The colonists or white people of Hayti entered with great fervor into the support of these doctrines, but they intended them to apply to white men, and to white men only. But this did not suit the pleasure of the "Monntain Department" of the French Assembly. That demanded "impartial freedom," and "impartial freedom" it was. In 1793 the freedom of the blacks in Hayti was decreed, and the grand experiment of "impartial freedom" commenced. The result of that experiment is now, after seventy years' trial, before the world. If the negro has any capacity for self-government, any of the inherent, natural abilities or energies of the white man, surely he ought to have shown them during this time. With a country whose natural resources and fertility are beyond question, and with a climate exactly suited to the physical peculiarities of the race, surely there should have been no such word as fail. The island had been brought to a high state of cultivation, and to an exalted commercial prosperity by the French planters. It was turned over to its new masters like a garden ready cultivated, and all they had to do was to keep it as it was, and go on in the career of prosperity which had been so successfully inaugurated. But what are the facts? A few statistics will show, more vividly than words, how fearfully the island has retrograded and how fallacious are all the hopes which have been indulged in, as to the industry of negroes, when left to themselves. In 1790 the value of the exports of Hayti was $27,828,000, the principal productions being as follows:

Sugar, lbs.	162,405,220
Coffee, "	68,152,160
Cotton, "	6,286,126
Indigo, "	930,016

In 1826, about thirty years after emancipation, the figures stood thus:

Sugar, lbs.	32,864
Coffee, "	32,186,784
Cotton, "	620,972
Indigo, "	none.

Now there is no sugar at all exported, while coffee and logwood have become the principal items of export. The former is gathered wild from the mountains, or from the old abandoned French plantations, while all that is required in order to get the latter is to cut down the tree, which grows spontaneously, and take it to market. It is, therefore, seen that all cultivation is abandoned, and only those articles are now exported which require no labor to produce them. In 1849, the latest date of which we have any reliable statistics, and sixty years after emancipation, the exports of the articles we have named were as follows:

Sugar, lbs.	none.
Coffee, "	30,608,343
Cotton, "	544,516
Indigo, "	none.

It is impossible to state, with accuracy, what the present value of the exports of Hayti amount to. Mr. Sumner, in a recent speech in the Senate, placed them at $2,673,000. This, we apprehend, is just about double the real value. A recent traveler, Mr. Underhill, says he could find no statistics in Hayti as to her commerce, and Mr. Sumner's figures are, doubtless, mere guesswork. But grant what Mr. Sumner says, and what a doleful picture of commercial ruin it presents! In 1790, the exports of Hayti amounted to $27,828,000, and now, according to Abolition testimony, they foot up only $2,683,000! Comment is unnecessary.

The statistics we have quoted are taken from the "U. S. Commercial Relations," Vol. I. pp. 561–2, officially reported to Congress, and published by order of that body. But all these figures are fully corroborated by every candid and impartial traveler. A foreign resident at the capital of Hayti, under a recent date, writes:

"This country has made, since its emancipation, no progress whatever. The population partially live upon the produce of the grown wild coffee plantations, remnants of the French dominion. Properly speaking, plantations after the model of the English in Jamaica or the Spanish in Cuba, do not exist here. Hayti is really the most beautiful and the most fertile of the Antilles. It has more mountains than Cuba, and more space than Jamaica. Nowhere the coffee tree could better thrive than here, as it especially likes a mountainous soil. But the indolence of the negroes has brought the once splendid plantations to decay. They now gather coffee only from the grown wild trees. The cultivation of the sugar cane has entirely disappeared, and the island that once supplied the one-half of Europe with sugar now supplies its own wants from Jamaica and the United States."

A Night in Concord Jail.

I have paid no poll tax for six years. I was put into a jail once on this account, for one night; and, as I stood considering the walls of solid stone, two or three feet thick, the door of wood and iron, a foot thick, and the iron grating which strained the light, I could not help being struck with the foolishness of that institution which treated me as if I were mere flesh and blood and bones, to be locked up. I wondered that it should have concluded at length that this was the best use it could put me to, and had never thought to avail itself of my services in some way. I saw that, if there was a wall of stone between me and my townsmen, there was a still more difficult one to climb or break through, before they could get to be as free as I was. I did not for a moment feel confined, and the walls seemed a great waste of stone and mortar. I felt as if I alone of all my townsmen had paid my tax. They plainly did not know how to treat me, but behaved like persons who are underbred. In every compliment there was a blunder; for they thought that my chief desire was to stand on the other side of that stone wall. I could not but smile to see how industriously they locked the door on my meditations, which followed them out again without let or hindrance, and they were really all that was dangerous. As they could not reach me, they had resolved to punish my body; just as boys, if they can not come at some person against whom they have a spite, will abuse his dog.—Thoreau.

ONIONS AND POULTRY.—Scarcely too much can be said in praise of onions for fowls. They seem to be a preventive and remedy for various diseases to which domestic fowls are liable. Having frequently tested their excellencies, we can speak understandingly. For gapes, and inflammation of the throat, eyes, and head, onions are almost a specific. We would, therefore, recommend giving fowls, and especially young chicks, as many as they will eat, as often as twice or three times a week. They should be finely chopped. A small addition of corn meal is an improvement.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,
GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught.

TERMS:

Tuition fees per term, ... $10 00
Contingent fee, ... 5 00

Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month.

aug4ft W. M. WIGHTMAN, Chancellor.

STONEWALL INSTITUTE.

The President of this Institution is gratified to announce to its patrons and friends that the regular scholastic year will open on the

FIRST MONDAY OF OCTOBER NEXT,

under the following Corps of Teachers:

D. C. B. CONNERLY, M. A., PRINCIPAL, AND TEACHER OF ANCIENT LANGUAGES.
G. M. CALLEN, M. A., TEACHER OF MATHEMATICS.
H. Y. WEISSINGER, M. A., ASSISTANT IN ANCIENT LANGUAGES AND ENGLISH LITERATURE.
JNO. D. LELAND, M. A., ASSISTANT IN MATHEMATICS AND MODERN LANGUAGES.

This school for boys and young men is located in the high and healthy hills of Perry County, Ala., thirteen miles North of Selma, and five miles North of Summerfield; and can be reached in a three hours' drive from Selma. Its locality is healthy almost beyond comparison. It is the property of no sect or set of men, and is not controlled by Trustees. It is the property solely of the Principal, who alone is responsible to the patrons of the institute, for its management and discipline.

The Principal has engaged these three gentlemen of energy to join him in giving to the rising generation rare opportunities for acquiring an education. With the experience of fifteen years in controlling boys, and with the devotion and energy which will be given to the interest of our pupils, we think it proper to say that every right-minded man, who sends us a good boy, shall be satisfied with the results.

We do not intend to exhort men to send to us; but we do intend to make it the true interest of our friends to commit their sons to our charge.

Our experience during the past year enables us to say that here we have power to control, and subject to study, our pupils, far greater than we ever had in any village.

From October to July, we shall carefully superintend the morals, manners, and intellectual training of our students.

No boy will be received whose moral character is not satisfactory; nor do we purpose going beyond eighteen pupils to the teacher, thus giving great advantages to our classes. For Board, including washing, and tuition by night and by day, from October to July, no matter what the age of the boy is, and no matter what his studies, our charge is Three Hundred and Sixty Dollars; one hundred and eighty paid on entering and the remainder Feb. 14th, 1867.

Each student must furnish two blankets, two sheets, two pillow cases, and his own towel and lights.

Besides, every one must bring money, from ten to twenty dollars to pay for his books and stationery. These terms must be literally complied with.

If a student is dismissed for any cause, or if he has to retire, and does so with our approval, his money will be refunded, but if he leaves without this approval, or runs away, his money will not be refunded; nor will any deduction be made for absence unless occasioned by a protracted sickness of one month's duration.

The patrons of this school embrace many of the most distinguished men of Central Alabama. Their sons can furnish the best evidence and strongest assurances that all our plans and management look to the progress of the pupil; and that around the entire establishment we constantly throw an air of home and contentment.

Parties wishing to commit their sons and wards to a school all of whose movements are systematically controlled to advance the mental training of inmates, and whose daily and weekly schedule, even on Saturdays and Sundays, is moved by the clock, are cordially invited to address the undersigned by letter.

D. C. B. CONNERLY,
Stonewall Institute, near Summerfield, Ala.

SOUTH-WESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Where is it located? Its Depository and Bible-House is at its own building, No. 163 Camp street, New Orleans.

When was it established? 1650.

Who is its General Agent to whom correspondence on its business should be addressed? Rev. James Beattie.

Where is the Society's field of labor? All of Louisiana, and all of Mississippi, south of the 33rd parallel of North latitude.

What is the object of the Society? To explore and supply (gratuitously where needed) the destitution of the Holy Scriptures.

What are the resources and whence the income of the Society? From the annual contributions of its members. Collections of Churches within its field, collections at public meetings and anniversaries. Appropriations of the surplus funds of its auxiliaries, the donations of generous individuals, testamentary bequests, and the annual donation in Books of the American Bible Society.

What is the Society's method of work? By cultivating its own local work in the city and district of New Orleans: then through Auxiliary Societies established or to be established in every Parish and County in the field, and the employment by them of such means as will accomplish the object of the Society.

What are the terms of membership?

The payment of $30 at one time constitutes a life member.

The payment of $150 at one time, constitutes a life Director.

The payment of $1000 at one time, constitutes a life Patron.

The payment of $3 annually, constitutes a member.

The taking up of a collection by a church constitutes the Pastor an honorary member.

Having thus briefly stated the main features of the Society's work, income and expenditure, the Board of Directors for the current year confidently ask the aid of all lovers of the Bible, whether professors of religion or not: to strengthen the hands of the S. W. B. S: by founding or reviving Auxiliaries, by donating and urging donations, by exploring and reporting the destitution of the Scriptures, by commencing or renewing memberships of all grades and by establishing connections with the Society as the Lord has prospered them: according to that Scripture which says "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal." To ministers and professing Christians of every Orthodox Protestant Church, the Board of Directors, representing in its body all such within our bounds, appeals with confidence to aid them by judicious effort, a prompt performance of duty and a prayerful commendation of the Society to the blessing of Almighty God, for except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it, except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain.

Our last thought is the heart-cry of the Great Reformation. No forbidding of the Word: no tampering with the text: no man's note or comment: God's Word: Christ's Word: the Holy Spirit's Word: Free: Free: Free. n25 1y.

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,
For the Autumn of 1866, and
FLORAL GUIDE,

is now Published. It contains Descriptions of the Best Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lillies, etc., With full descriptions, and plain and full directions for Planting, Culture, Prices, etc. Illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the Single and Double Tulip and Scilla. My importation from the best Bulb Growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself this finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country. This Catalogue and Guide is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost. Postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my Catalogue. Address

aug. 25. JAMES VICK, Rochester, N. Y.

INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANO.

A lady whose high attainments as a composer and as a performer on and successful teacher of the Piano, can be well attested, proposes to give lessons to a few pupils in the city, commencing in September or October.

References: Rev J. C. Keener, D. D.; Rev J. B. Walker, D. D.; Rev L. Parker.

For particulars address: "Pianist," Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

WOODVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE SECOND SESSION

will begin October 3rd 1866, and close July 10th, 1867. The system of instruction aims at the truest mental, moral, and social culture. The discipline seeks to embrace whatever is helpful to this end, and to exclude what is hurtful to it. Obedience to rightful authority, is necessary to membership in the school.

TERMS PER SESSION.

Board, with fuel, lights and washing,	$300 00
Tuition in Preparatory course,	60 00
" Academic "	80 00
" Collegiate "	100 00
Music,	80 00

Other ornamentals as low as can be afforded.

The Collegiate course embraces Latin and French without any extra charge. These charges are made from the beginning of the half month in which the pupil is entered, to the end of the session, and must be paid, one half in advance, and the other on the 1st of March, nor will assignment of a pupil to room, seat or class, be made until this demand is met. A sum sufficient to get books, music, and medicines for slight sickness, must be deposited with the Principal. Each boarding pupil must be provided with a supply of plain, neat clothing suitable to the season, and also with towels, table nap-kins—all marked in the owner's name. When a pupil, not residing in the Seminary, or one not remaining in it during her illness, is sick more than twenty consecutive days, a deduction of one half the charges for the time will be made.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Principal.

Woodville, Miss., Aug 8th 1866. aug25 3m.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.

The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.

TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March.

Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.

Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.

Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.

As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.

W. H. N. MAGRUDER.

Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE

HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,

REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.

Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.

Next annual term opens first Monday in September.

For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.

Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A. M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.

The Fall Session of this institution will open on the 26th day of September next.

This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattresses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.

The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:

For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks,	$67 50
Regular Tuition,	25 00
Incidental Fee,	2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of instrument	37 50
French or Spanish,	15 00

Ornamental branches at usual prices.

☞ All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.

The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.

After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.

For other information address

CHARLES B. STUART, President,
aug4ft Mansfield, La.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,

Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. GEO. F. THOMPSON, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Milsaps, Rev. George H. Clinton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.

Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.

The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Jan. 31, 1867.

For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. a18ft

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M., President,	Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Marie S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bedclothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September. Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT.
D. G. HUMPHREYS, Pres. Board of Trustees.
jyl4 6m

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE
SUMMERFIELD, ALA.

The next scholastic year begins Monday, Oct. 1st, 1866. A quarter of a century in successful operation, with hundreds of cultivated daughters in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, and under the immediate care and patronage of the Mobile and Montgomery Conferences, this institution can afford and is determined to maintain a high standard of scholarship. Only experienced and skillful educators are employed by the Trustees. Among the recent additions to the Faculty are two gentlemen for a series of years Professors in the State University.

Those desiring really thorough culture for their daughters, will do well to investigate the claims of this institution.

For particulars or a circular apply to the President, Rev R. K. Hargrove.

A. H. MITCHELL, Pres. Board.
aug18 1m

NORTH, BRUSH & MASON,

Wholesale Dealers in

Fancy Goods,

STATIONERY, PERFUMERY, CUTLERY,

HOSIERY,

Furnishing Goods, etc.,

35 MAGAZINE STREET,

Opposite the St. James Hotel, New Orleans, La.
aug25 1y

CHAS. H. CHURCHILL.

PETER G. TAYLOR.

HARDWARE AND GUNS.

TAYLOR & CHURCHILL,

41 MAGAZINE STREET, and 20 BANK PLACE, (Opposite St. James Hotel,) NEW ORLEANS, LA.

DIRECT IMPORTERS.

We have in stock, and are constantly receiving some choice patterns of English and American Table and Pocket Cutlery, to which we invite the attention particularly of country merchants. Also, a large stock of Trace, Ox and Log Chains, English and American Planters Hoes, Anvils, Vices and Bellows; Scales, manufactured by the Novelty Iron Works; Files, English and American.

COTTON AND WOOL CARDS, NOVA SCOTIA GRIND STONES, PLOWS.

Hall & Speer's Peacock Plows, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; Hall & Speer's Cast Valley Plows, Nos. 1 & 2; King Cary (wood mould board) Plows.

GUNS, NAILS, HOLLOW WARE, SAWS, TIN WARE, AXES.

Of all patterns and brands. All the above is offered for sale at the lowest market quotations. Orders from the country are respectfully solicited by TAYLOR & CHURCHILL, 41 Magazine street, and 20 Bank Place, opposite St. James Hotel. Established in New Orleans without intermission, by the present senior member of the firm, in 1832. aug25 1y

W. H. HENNING & CO.,

Grocers and Commission Merchants,

95 and 97, CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Offers to Families, Planters and Traders a full stock of Fancy and Staple Goods, consisting in part of

CHAMPAGNE,

BRANDIES,

WHISKIES,

CLARET,

CORDIALS, &c.

Also, a large lot of Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Pork, Beef, Bacon, Salt, suitable for Plantation supplies,—all of which will be offered at the Most reasonable Rates.

☞ Country orders will receive the most careful and prompt attention.

W. H. HENNING & CO,
a25 6m 95 & 97 Camp street, New Orleans.

WALLACE & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, and

PLANTATION CLOTHING,

No. 74 CANAL STREET, AND 91, 93 AND 95 COMMON STREET,
(SLOCUMB BUILDING), NEW ORLEANS.

☞ Sales guaranteed at New York prices. a18 1y

A. B. GRISWOLD. W. M. GOODRICH.

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,

Corner of Canal and Royal streets,
[Late HYNE & GOODRICH],

Established in New Orleans Fifty Years!

MANUFACTURERS OF JEWELRY & SILVER WARE,

Importers of Watches, Diamonds, Clocks, Bronzes, Porcelain, Plated Ware, Cutlery, Fancy Goods, Guns and Pistols.

The largest assortment in the South always on hand. aug25 6m

JAMES SYME,

Wholesale Druggist,

139 CANAL STREET, (TOURO BUILDINGS,)
NEW ORLEANS.

Importer and Dealer in Fine
DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS,
DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES,
Fancy Goods and Perfumery.

Surgical Instruments,
French, English, and American, of every variety
Also—
Medicine Chests and Medical Saddle-bags.
aug25 1y

A. D. GRIEFF,

Wholesale Grocer,

COMMISSION MERCHANT, AND DEALER IN SOUTHERN AND WESTERN PRODUCE,

48, 50 and 52 Old Levee st.; corner Bienville st.,
aug25 6m NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN SHOE MANUFACTORY.

DRAKE & MARKHAM,

Manufacturers of

Men's, Boys', Ladies', Misses' & Children's

BOOTS AND SHOES,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

No. 56 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

We call the attention of the public to our extensive stock of fine custom-made Creole Boots and Shoes, for Gents, Boys, Youths, Ladies, Misses and Children, made of the best imported stock, by skillful workmen.

We design furnishing goods that combine elegance with durability, at a less price than common goods are usually sold for in this city.

OUR LAST-FOR-EVER BOOTS!

Every man in this State should have a pair of our Last-for-ever Boots. They are warranted waterproof, and to last one year, or the money returned.

Our stock of Family and Plantation Shoes are the best that can be made.

One pair will outwear any three pairs bought at auction. Country Merchants will do well to make a note of this.

We have better goods and sell them lower than any house in Louisiana.

Orders filled at ten per cent. on the original cost of manufacture.

All goods warranted to satisfy, or they may be returned. Planters will instruct their Commission Merchants to buy their shoes of

DRAKE & MARKHAM, 56 CAMP-STREET.
aug18 1y

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY

Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,

Of the late Firm and Successors to G. A. COFFIN & CO.,

102 & 104 East Second street,
Cincinnati, Ohio,

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Gennine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. jy15

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This Institution is mainly designed to qualifying young men as Clerks or Bookkeepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address

f3-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles st., corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered in 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no coming from books.

Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law, English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages, Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics and Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.

For catalogues containing full information call at the office, or address f3 1y GEO. SOULE, Pres't.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD

Established, August, 1861.

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January, 1866.

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET, 18

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURE to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

C. E. CATE & CO.
feb17 18 Camp st., N. O.

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St. Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 17, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams' Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons' Type. ap1-1

J. B. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.

JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.

Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, Corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 37.
WHOLE NUMBER 603.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1866.

$4 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE
OFFICE—118 CAMP STREET.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

SKETCHES OF MEN AND THINGS.

FACTS AND INCIDENTS IN THE HISTORY OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

NUMBER II.

Prolixity in narrative sometimes heightens the interest. Brevity is more generally considered, however, an excellence of style; and is therefore preferable, It is difficult to please every one. We must have a license to write just as we may feel, and if we "chance to fall below" the standard of our readers, we can only invoke the charity that is due to a novice in so important a work.

In our first number we gave a summary of the proceedings of the first informal Conference, and alluded to some of the prominent characters in it. Not all was said that might have been, and all that was likely to interest the reader.

As a specimen of primitive formalizing, we will give a few extracts:

"On motion resolved that we proceed to the business of the Conference, and we took up the first question in the minutes, viz: who are admitted on trial," and

"—— came forward and recommended to this Conference as a proper person to be received into the traveling connection, and on the vote being taken he was found to be admitted."

"—— came forward recommended to this Conference as a proper person to be received into the traveling connection, on trial, some difficulties arising: his case was referred till a future stage of our proceedings."

These specimens will appear rather curious to Dr. Dorman or Dr. Summers, the model secretaries of the present generation. The record is in the handwriting, and those are examples, of the style of that great and good man Dr. Winans, in his younger days.

Five were admitted on trial at this Conference (in 1813.) Two of them yet alive, Thomas Owen and Peter James, honored names among us. They are superannuated for many years on the U. S. list." These two brethren were special friends from their earliest associations as traveling preachers. Their manner, although who know them can testify, is quite different, yet are both men of great power in the polpit. They were working men in their day, and literally wore themselves in the ministry.

Simon Gentry, Jonathan Kemp, and Josiah B. Daughtry, the other three, have passed away. The two first did not long remain in the traveling connection, they continued to travel for many years—were sometimes connected with the Holston Conference—but was transfered back to the Mississippi Conference, filled two or three appointments — was superannuated and died among his early friends. Randal Gibson and George Fletcher, Local Preachers, were elected to Deacon's orders. The former, if we are not mistaken, was a brother of Tobias Gibson, who was among the first Methodist Preachers, that ever visited the "Natchez country." The history of these men (the Gibsons,) and their descendants who constitute a large portion of the population of the river counties of Mississippi, would make a volume—such a volume, too, as would be a bright epistle of that form of Christianity which, without boasting, we may say has done more to spread scriptural holiness over these lands than any other. From Bolivar, Miss., on the one side, and Lake Providence, La., on the other, of the great father of waters, down as far as New Orleans, and westward to the "Attakapas country," you can scarcely find a neighborhood in which there is not some one at least remotely connected with the Gibson family—and you will find them almost invariably adhering to the religion of their fathers.

Our fathers were careful to keep the law in everything, where there was a prescribed mode. They were not willing to "take things for granted," as we have since done in some instances to our mortification and to the injury of the Church. Pending the question of election to orders in the Local ministry, we have this entry upon the journal:

"—— came forward to this Conference recommended as a proper person to receive Deacons' orders. But in consequence of his not having been examined before the Quarterly Meeting Conference, which recommended him, his case was stopped."

Presiding Elders now-a-days present to the Conference a certificate that the applicant for orders has been duly examined. And their examinations in most cases are worthy, of being dignified as such, for we know of men who preach and administer sacraments of the Church, who by no means comprehend the nature of a sacrament themselves, and of course are totally incapable of explaining it to others. It is important always that the "man of God be thoroughly furnished unto every good work." It was especially important in the earlier days of the Church, when the foundations were being laid, that wise master builders should be employed to superintend the work. It was not then, as it is now, essential that the minister should be wise in "the wisdom of words," but the true secret of success was, and is, that they "speak the things which become sound doctrine — sound speech, that cannot be condemned."

We observe in looking over the proceedings of the Conference, in the earlier days of the Church, that there was much more secrecy in the proceedings than now. It appears from the action of the Conference of 1813, that probationers were only by courtesy allowed to be present, and witness their deliberations. They managed things on that occasion somewhat different from the present usage, and their action is suggestive. The day before Conference adjourned, the appointments were announced. Just before they were "read out," the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That the probationers be called into Conference to hear their appointments designated."

Now in regard to the secrecy of the proceedings, was it necessary? was it expedient? If we may be allowed to answer, we will say that it was both necessary and expedient. A Conference of Methodist Preachers is unlike any other deliberative body. It is not legislative: its action, so far as it affects the rights and interest of others, is only advisory. The preachers meet to consider and determine mainly such matters and questions as pertain to their peculiar vocation, to investigate the characters of each other, and to "correct, reprove, comfort, or exhort each other, as occasion may require." While it is necessary to keep the ministry pure, it is equally necessary to protect their reputation from the slanders and misrepresentations that might go out from those public examinations of character, that have become so popular in those days of progress. We remember some years ago, preceding the "examination of character" in the Miss. Conference, a question arose between two brethren; each was very positive in his statements, both equally certain that they were correct, but their statements were directly opposite. A wicked man standing by turned away seemingly disgusted, saying with an oath, "there is a lie out somewhere." Consider now "how great a fire this little matter" may have kindled on the heads of two brethren whom we know to be good and useful ministers of Christ. And is this an isolated case? At every Conference now, where the "examination of character" is had in the presence of a promiscuous assembly, the representation of some good man is made to suffer. We know it is attempted to justify the practice of "open doors," and palliate the evils by the argument that, seeing the scrutiny with which the world, "the religious" investigate ministerial character, which we invoke to appreciate our efforts to will more fully maintain the highest standard of purity, and have the greater confidence in our integrity." Neither the history of the past, nor the experience of the present, in my judgment, will sustain the argument.

This action of the embryo Conference, calling in "the probationers," etc., is suggestive of this frontier inquiry, at first, whether or not in those days of progress and reform, when it seems we are ready to concede everything else to the "Lord," it would be well to make some concessions to one another? We do not see the minds of our conference entered into the "proofs, that one or more of these "probationere" would demur to his appointment? But suppose they had demurred? What then? Was there no remedy for the afflicted Brother? None at all. There was the rule requiring, "above all, if you would be found in the Lord's vineyard, it is your bounden duty you should do that part of the work which we advise, at those times and places which we judge most for his glory." The rule is in the book yet. The late General Conference made no change in the fundamental law. The "matter of grace is merged into real support," the preacher has not the right to inquire into his appointment is "made known" at Conference whither he is going to get "real support." He is left in a state of "glorious uncertainty," as in former times.

No one can read the record of those men of God who "left all to follow Christ," without exclaiming "see how those Christians love!" We are sure there is not another class of men so united, and who have at all times so loved each other, as Methodist preachers. Yet we must confess, however powerful it be, that there is a great "falling off" in this regard, The fifth and sixth rules of a preacher are still in the book, but they are not "considered" as they were in the days of other years.

At the Conference of 1813, an address, as we have before stated, was recorded and read from the Tennessee Conference. Bro. Winans from the Committee appointed to draft an address in reply, submitted his report on the last day of Conference. It is an interesting paper, full of the spirit of their great mission, but we have room only for such items as will serve to illustrate the point we have already stated. We can see nothing in this reply that deserves modification. Yet those brethren must have it "amended" in several particulars. We mention only two, however: "3. That the strong expression "neglected" be stricken from the second sentence In the statement of our situation." 4. That we state the union, love, and divine presence we experienced in our Conference." Oh that the great head of the church would inspire all his servants with the same tenderness and care. Oh that he would at all our Conferences enable us to prove the same "union, love, and divine influence," that was vouchsafed to our fathers.

H.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LAY REPRESENTATION—No. IV.

MR. EDITOR: Was the wonderful action, of the late General Conference on this subject based on the ground of EXPEDIENCY?

If so, there must have been some fact or circumstances suggesting this expedient, and leading the Conference to adopt it; or, this not being the case, it is to be only an experiment. If the former was the case, what facts, or what circumstances were in the minds of the members of the General Conference, inducing them to look favorably upon this plan, and finally to adopt it? We cannot call to our mind any parallel case; that is, any case where an Episcopal Itinerant Church has grafted lay representation on to its ecclesiastical economy; and hence, if we adopt this system, we do it without precedent; we enter on a mere experiment, and our Methodist Israel must go in "a way it knows not," and along, as we think, not only, an untried path, but a dangerous one.

But there are lay systems, all differing very much from each other, as they attach themselves to the various denominations around us, and all differing from the one proposed for the M. E. Church, South; and if any great good has accrued, to any of our sister churches, from any of these lay systems, it must be somewhere apparent, and we can find it.

The Protestant Episcopal Church has a lay representation in its conventions; but it is not like the one which we seem to be in danger of adopting, as the members of her lay delegation need not be even communicants or members of the church; thus giving the church all the wisdom of the world, in and out of her pale, from which to select her lay representation. And this system works. And sometimes it works, as we are informed it did recently in your city, when the Episcopal chair, vacated by the death of the late, lamented Bishop Polk, was to be filled. In that case, after an incredible number of ballotings, the present incumbent was elected Bishop of the Diocese of Louisiana; and this was done by the laity and by their influence, when he was, by no means, the choice of the ministry; and another man was decidedly preferable, to a large majority of the clergymen holding seats in that convention. All this may have been right. The laity may have known best. They may have had the interests of the church, and of the cause of God more at heart, than the ministry had. This is a question for those to settle who are immediately interested. We have nothing to do with the internal machinery of other churches; nor have we anything to do with its working, only as there is an effort to introduce it into our young "Ship of Zion;" and when this is the case, it is not only our privilege, but our duty to examine it, its workings, its powers, and its capabilities, before we introduce it into our craft, and depend upon it, as our motive power. If we think its inevitable friction will set our bark on fire, we may not introduce the dangerous machinery. The Bishops in our Church have so much control over the ministers, being over them in office, and, by the appointing power, being able to determine the temporal destiny of every itinerant, that itinerant ministers will not be satisfied if the laity elect their Bishops, and thus determine their overseers. But, as the laity may often be the majority, they may elect the Bishops; or, though in the minority, by their influence over a part of the clergy, they may still elect the Bishops; and when they could, they doubtless would. Why not? And if they did, the ship would be on fire, and we fear it would burn up.

The provision for dividing the house, found in our proposed plan, was working in that Protestant Episcopal Convention, but would not work on the preacher's candidate; and so the preacher had to work out the will of the laity, and the will of this machine, or do nothing. It is a wonderful piece of machinery, a kind of "patent break," and should be well studied by our Methodist ministers before it is introduced into our General Conference. This New Orleans case should be studied, and even then the ball of its power will not be known. We may notice it more at length in a future article.

But, to return, what great good has accrued to the Protestant Episcopal Church, with lay representation, that has not accrued to Methodism without it? Do facts or figures show more piety, more zeal, less conformity to the world, a greater increase of numbers, or a more extended salutary influence on the part of the former than on the part of the latter? The Protestant Episcopal Church has been on this continent for more than two hundred years, as she was the Church of England before the revolution. It has had wealth and talent and learning, and every other facility for prosperity, and has done well; even with its lay representation appendage, it has done well; but what has it done compared with what anti-lay-representation Methodism has done in less than half of the time?

The Presbyterian Church, in this country, has a kind of lay representation in her ecclesiastical assemblies, but it differs from the lay element in most other churches. Her "ruling elders" are officers, with legislative functions for life; while there remains for the rest of the laity, in the church, only perpetual "tacit consent." Yet this is called lay representation by some, and hence it deserves notice. We think it better than the one in the Protestant Episcopal Church, as these representatives must be members of the Church, Presbyterian in their faith and practice, and the Church has a direct watch care over them; while in the Protestant Episcopal Church, as stated above, it is otherwise. We think the Presbyterian plan better, than the one proposed for us, for two reasons that we will mention here; first, in the Presbyterian plan, there are no annual, nor any quadrennial elections, as there must be in ours; and hence, we infer that their delegation will be less vacillating than ours, and less likely to be influenced by sudden popular excitements, politics, etc. Again, they being life-time legislators, like their ministers, study this business, and become experienced in it; while we shall be liable to a new delegation of raw legislators at each conference. But we will go no further in this comparison. We do not want the system in any of its shapes; but if we must have it, we wish our brethren would take a little more time, and bestow a little more attention upon it, and let us have it in its best possible form.

The Presbyterian Church has been at work, in this country, ever since the last year of the seventeenth century. She, too, has done well, done nobly, but still Methodism suffers nothing in a comparison with her. But it is said: "This and like comparisons are not fair tests; as unscriptural doctrines, or unscriptural forms, or something else may have hindered prosperity in these cases." We grant all that, and yet the case is no better, for lay representation is there, and it does not remove the difficulties or hindrances to prosperity, or it does not suffer the ministry to do it in such a manner as to secure great prosperity; while Methodism, legislated for by the ministry only, does do something that does secure this great prosperity; and the stubborn fact remains, that with lay representation there is this want of prosperity, and that, too, even where the doctrines and usages are nearly like ours, as in the case of the Methodist Protestant Church. But if we must not institute these comparisons, and look at the system where we can find it, how are we to know anything about it, or fall in love with it? And if we do not institute the comparisons fairly, let the friends of the system institute the comparisons for us. We will be thankful for light on this subject before we vote on it in our Annual Conference.

The Baptist Church has been here from the days of Roger Williams; and some of her ministers and laymen boast, that she is the most democratic church on the continent; yet other some, of both of the above classes, while they admit all that their brethren claim, go farther, and think her government a rope of sand, and so express themselves. One of her ablest ministers recently warned us against this lay element, as a source of weakness; and urged us, instead of this wandering, to go back, in all things, to John Wesley and to his usages, if we desired to be extensively useful, and still prosperous. And the Baptist Church has also done well; far better than many of her lay-delegate sister churches; and yet she has fallen behind Methodism, in the "race," though she had the start, in the course, by more than a century and a quarter, before Methodism crossed the Atlantic.

Mr. Editor, in all this we are not slandering other churches; nor are we boasting. God forbid that we should do either. We are only trying to reach the government of the Church of God by laymen.

And thus we might go on to speak of Quakers, Congregationalists, Lutherans, etc., etc., and the result will still be the same; Methodism, without lay representation, the youngest of them all, numbering, possibly, not quite as many as all of them together; yet give her a few more years, of the same comparative prosperity, and she will outnumber them all. Where is it, then, that the working of the lay system has demonstrated even its utility? Our sister churches being mostly congregational in their forms of government, may get along, after a manner, with lay representation, but we fear its effects on our Episcopal, Itinerant Economy.

LOCAL ITINERANT.

Louisiana, Sept. 17th, 1866.

CHURCHES WANTED IN BRAZIL. The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions are finding their work steadily growing on their hands. Already Mr. Blackford, at Rio Janeiro, has two young men preparing for the ministry. Both Mr. Blackford and Mr. Schneider, as well as Mr. Simonton, in former letters, urged the importance of their having churches at Rio Janeiro, Sao Paulo, and Rio Claro.

MISSOURI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

FIRST DAY.

RICHMOND, Mo., Sept. 5, 1866.

The session of an Annual Conference is always attended with peculiar interest to Methodist preachers and to the Church. No pen can reproduce the feelings and emotions of men circumstanced and surrounded as the members of a Methodist Annual Conference are on such occasions. Coming up from their various fields of labor, where they have toiled and suffered, it is with no little interest that they meet, mingle together and extend and receive kindly greetings with hearts filled with warmest brotherly love. To these men, and at this Conference, the meetings were of more than ordinary interest. Persecutions of no ordinary character, and annoyances and trials peculiarly severe, have multiplied in Missouri the past year. Many are under indictment in the civil courts of the State for not taking the oath of loyalty prescribed by the new Constitution of the State. Many are under bonds for their appearance at court to answer, in the language of indictments, "for preaching the Gospel without having taken, subscribed and filed the oath of loyalty prescribed by the Constitution of the State." Some have been driven out of their pulpits and churches by armed mobs, and others deterred from attending their appointments by the threats of lawless men. Some are just out of prison, and others still were forced to leave their work, and all for the great crime (?) of preaching the Gospel of Christ and attending to the legitimate and peaceable functions of the ministry. Is it any wonder that the greetings and mingling together of these men should be peculiarly warm, and their religious exercises attended with more than ordinary spirit and unction?

At 9 o'clock A. M. Bishop D. S. Doggett entered the Christian Church and opened the Conference session by reading a part of the tenth chapter of Luke, and announcing with peculiar pathos that old Conference hymn,

"And are we yet alive
And see each other's face?" &c., and a prayer, deep, fervent, appropriate, unctuous, finding many hearty responses from the preachers. Religious services were continued nearly an hour, led by Rev. A. Monroe and Rev. W. M. Rush. After these services the Bishop introduced himself and his episcopal duties with one of the most timely, appropriate and judicious speeches we ever heard from episcopal lips. As this is his first conference, and our circumstances peculiar, it would be well if, for his honor, the good of the Church and the glory of God, it could be reproduced. This may be done hereafter.

The morning session was taken up in the organization of the Conference and the appointment of the regular committees.

Rev. J. D. Vinell was elected Secretary, and Rev. J. O. Swinney Assistant.

The Conference sermon on Wednesday night was preached by Rev. B. H. Spencer, on "The Call to and Work of the Ministry." It was a plain, clear, Scriptural and forcible exposition of the divine call to the sacred office, and the importance and oneness of the work, and delivered in a forcible, earnest and unctuous manner. It did much good.

SECOND DAY.

Many more preachers were present this morning, and the Bishop entered upon the business of the Conference with the ease and promptness of a veteran in the episcopal chair.

Several questions of law arising out of the changes in our discipline made by the late General Conference, occupied a portion of the session, in the decisions of which the Bishop was cautious and correct. When satisfied himself, he was prompt and decisive; when the point was not clear he would take the matter under consideration for the future, and call up something else.

A committee of nine was raised, to whom is to be referred cases involving the character of preachers which require judicial investigation. This is a good rule, and will save the Conference much embarrassment and inconvenience, and protect the character of preachers more certainly.

The Bishop took up the examination of the character of elders, and elicited from the presiding elders much information as to the condition of the Church in different parts of the State, and the prospects and wants of the Church. This examination of the character of preachers is peculiar to our Church, and is important to the purity and fidelity of the Christian ministry. Other ecclesiastical bodies may be as learned, as talented, as eloquent, as pious, but none watch with more Gospel vigilance the personal and ministerial character of those who have a dispensation of the Gospel committed to them. It is of no small importance to the success of the Gospel, that the Church should know and feel that the character of those who fill our pulpits have the endorsement of the Annual Conference.

To-day the peculiar work of a pastor in visiting from house to house, catechising and instructing children, and teaching religion in the family circle, received a clear and very forcible exposition and injunction from the Bishop, suggested by remarks of Rev. A. Monroe. He thought that the neglect of pastoral work, to which there is now a strong tendency in the ministry, could not be atoned for by the talent and eloquence of an angel in the pulpit. It is of the first importance to the success of the ministry.

THIRD DAY.

Some little discussion was raised in regard to the proper report and distribution of the missionary funds collected by the preachers under the New Missionary Boards. There is some little friction in running the machinery of the Church under the new law.

Reports from several schools and colleges, and from the General Book Agent at Nashville, and the Secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions, were read and referred to appropriate committees; and the examination of character resumed.

A number of irregular cases were taken up and, after some discussion, were disposed of. Some of them had left the State years ago; had not taken work from the Conference, or transferred to any other Conference; one or more had united with other religious bodies, and what relation they sustain to the Conference now, and how to dispose of them, were questions more easily asked than answered. The Bishop is determined to clean up the register and know the relation of each member to the body.

The fifteenth question has taken up all the time to the present, except merely time to get in a few reports and attend to a little irregular business.

After the usual calls and announcements, the Conference adjourned, with the benediction by the Bishop.

FOURTH DAY.

Conference convened at 8 o'clock and opened with religious services, led by Rev. B. H. Spencer, assisted by Rev. W. Perkins.

In view of the fact that the examination of candidates for admission into the Conference, and candidates for Deacons' and Elders' orders were to be examined to-day, the Bishop made some very appropriate remarks, and the religious exercises were very solemn.

The names of the members of the old Kansas Conference, living in that portion of that Conference attached to the Missouri Conference were enrolled for examination. R. C. Mock, Thomas Wallace, J. O. Foresman and Joseph King, were the only members of the old Kansas Mission Conference present to enroll.

The examination of the Deacons and their election to Elders' orders occupied a considerable time.

The Bishop called up the candidates for Deacons' orders, and, in propounding the usual questions, he expounded the duties of a Methodist preacher clearly, and enforced them separately and forcibly, with peculiar power and unction.

After this examination, the Bishop notified the various committees to have their reports ready by Monday morning, as he was nearly through with the minute business, and he desired no delay in finishing up the work of the Conference.

After the appointments for preaching and the notices of committees were announced, the Conference adjourned, with the benediction.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

At 3 o'clock the Conference Missionary Society met at the Christian Church, when the ordinary business was transacted. The society wound up its business and prepared for its final anniversary to be held to-night, preparatory to disbanding the old society and the organization of a new board of missions under the new law.

The anniversary at night was largely attended. The usual reports were made, and the President, Rev. A. Monroe, announced that Bishop Doggett was too unwell to be present and address the meeting, and introduced Rev. W. M. Leftwich. The collection amounted to nearly $300. Considering the fact that the people of Richmond were just struggling to build a church now far advanced toward completion, and the further fact that the preachers came up to Conference over $6,000 deficient in their claims upon the Church, this was considered a good collection and the anniversary a gratifying success.

The Bishop occupied the pulpit of the Baptist Church on Sunday morning (which Church we had used during the session for public worship by courtesy.) His sermon was founded upon the trial of Paul before Agrippa, and was a forcible, logical, critical, eloquent and unctuous exposition of the facts, philosophy and gospel of that sublime and important event. Drawing largely upon the power of the Gospel, his language and logic were set on fire, and the hearts of the people were wonderfully baptized with a holy unction from on high. It is rare for a Conference to be blessed with such an exhibition of the spirit and claims of the Christian ministry or the power and triumph of the Gospel.

After the sermon the Bishop ordained to the office of Deacon the following preachers: Joseph King, Jesse Rickman, Thos. R. Hedgepeth, Henry Stanley and Marshall McIlhaney.

At 3 o'clock, in the same Church, Rev. A. Monroe preached a good practical sermon, though he was suffering greatly with hoarseness; after which the Bishop ordained the following preachers to the office of Elders in the Church of God: S. J. Huffaker, James O. Swinney, James Smith, Samuel Alexander, John W. Adkisson, Samuel J. Castlin, John O. Foresman, Jesse Craft, Lemuel G. Carroll and George S. Huffaker.

FIFTH DAY.

Conference met at 8 o'clock, Rev. A. Monroe in the chair, and services conducted by Rev. D. T. Sherman, after which Bishop Doggett appeared and took the chair.

The Bishop called up the case of the members of the Kansas Mission Conference, who fall into the Missouri Conference according to the provisions of the late General Conference. It was found to be quite difficult to determine the status of some of the members and fix their Conference relations.

Rev. Oliver McEwen, of Illinois, was represented as having lost his ordination papers, and the Conference ordered that certificates of ordination be furnished him.

Admitted on trial.—Hyter James. Readmitted.—Marshall McIlhaney, Jesse Bird and Hyram Davis.

Rev. Edwin Buck was admitted from the M. E. Church.

The Committee on Books and Periodicals presented report, which was read and adopted.

Committee on Bible Cause reported, and the report was adopted.

The most of the session was taken up with miscellaneous discussions on the relations of preachers, and an interesting and profitable discussion was had on the conditions of membership in the Church, and the effect of abolishing the old probation system.

The Bishop decided that we have no probationers, and that all persons applying for membership in the Church are candidates for membership until they are received into the Church according to the formula of the New Discipline. It is of the first importance that the preachers understand the provision of the Discipline, and that we act uniformly in receiving members into the Church. The Discipline states the conditions of members, and leaves with the pastor to be satisfied as to compliance with the conditions; and until the pastor and Church receive him into membership, the applicant is in the attitude of a candidate for membership.

SIXTH DAY.

Conference met at 8 o'clock and was opened with religious services, conducted by Rev. Horace Brown.

The Bishop, in the chair, resumed the examination of character, and the Conference fixed the relation of a number of its members whose cases had been laid over.

The Bishop called up the action of the General Conference on the change of name, and submitted the question for the concurrence or non concurrence of this Conference with the change of name proposed by the late General Conference.

Before the question was put, a resolution was offered and adopted appointing Revs. A. Monroe, J. O. Swinney and H. A. Bourland, a committee to prepare a design for a monument to be erected to the memory of the lamented Rev. W. G. Caples, and to report the next Conference.

A communication was read from the Rev. M. R. Jones, of Illinois, representing that there is no barrier to the union of the Christian Union with our Church, provided the Conference will concur in the action of the General Conference in the change of our Church name.

The question of a change of name was then taken up and consumed the balance of the morning session, and a portion of the afternoon session, in debate, in which P. M. Pinckard, A. Monroe, H. Brown, J. D. Vinell, W. M. Leftwich, W. M. Rush, C. I. Vandeventer, J. H. Pritchett and others, took an active part.

After the fullest discussion and the gravest consideration, the vote was taken by ayes and noes as follows: For concurrence, 28; against concurrence, 30. On the question of lay representation the vote stood: For concurrence, 40; against, 18. Thus these two questions were disposed of.

A resolution was offered and adopted appointing the first Friday in January, 1867, as a day of fasting, prayer and special service, that God would call and send forth more laborers into His vineyard. The Church is everywhere expected to attend to this important service in the proper spirit, keeping in view the great object to be accomplished.

Rev. W. M. Leftwich was elected to preach the Conference sermon at the next annual session.

SEVENTH DAY.

Conference met at 8 o'clock, and opened with religious services by Bro. Wm. Perkins.

The Board of Domestic Missions made their report, appropriating $1,000 missionary money in the bounds of the Conference this year, and requesting the preachers to take up collections for Domestic Missions before the first of April, 1867, and forward to P. M. Pinckard, Treasurer, that he may be able to meet the drafts.

The Conference engaged in religious exercises a short time, with Rev. W. M. Rush in the chair, while the Bishop and presiding elders withdrew for final consultation before announcing the appointments.

The following complimentary resolution was passed unanimously:

"Resolved, That with great pleasure we have welcomed among us, in this the first Conference of his episcopal district, our beloved Bishop, Rev. Dr. Doggett, and desire to express our high estimate of the ability with which he has discharged all the duties of the episcopal office, and devoutly pray that the blessing of God may rest upon and guide him in the varied and arduous labors of the superintendency."

The Bishop announced the following standing Committees on Examination:

Committees of Examination. — First Year—J. H. Pritchett, George Smith, C. Babcock. Second Year—L. Rush, Wm. Penn, R. H. Jordan. Third Year—W. A. Tarwater, D. R. Shackleford, B. F. Johnson. Fourth Year—H. A. Bourland, Jesse Bird, J. P. Nolan.

Examination of Candidates. — W. A. Mayhew, M. McIlhaney.

The Bishop then read the hymn.

"And let our bodies part,
To different climes repair!" &c.

During the reading, and singing, and prayer by Bro. Monroe, I never witnessed more religious feelings in a Conference. The Bishop made an appropriate address. His remarks were equal in point, elegance and unction, to his opening address. After which he announced the following

APPOINTMENTS.

ST. CHARLES DISTRICT. — Horace Brown, P. E.; St. Charles Station and Point Grove, J. Smith; Flint Hill Circuit, W. A. Tarwater; Warrenton Circuit, J. H. Pritchett, A. Albright; High Hill Circuit, W. M. Sutton; Montgomery City Circuit, George Smith; Fulton and New Bloomfield, Geo. Penn, Geo. Fentem; Mexico Circuit, M. McIlhany, F. A Savage; Ashley Circuit; A. Spencer; Louisiana Station, A. P. Linn; Clarksville Circuit, Wm. A. Mahew; Auburn Circuit, Jesse Sutton.

FAYETTE DISTRICT.—A Monroe, P. E.; Fayette Circuit, B F Johnson; Columbia, Thos Demoss; Columbia, H G McEwin; Rochport, D B Shackleford, R H Jordan, supernumerary; Glasgow Station, J O Swinney; Keytesville Circuit, Wm. Penn, H W James; Huntsville Circuit, D H Root, Wm. Warren; Middle Grove, John R Taylor; Paris, Wm. F Bell; Macon City Station, J D Vinell; Bloomington Circuit, Edwin Back, Walter Toole.

CHILLICOTHE DISTRICT.— W E Dockery, P. E.; Chillicothe Station, S W Cope; Chillicothe Circuit, J Metcalf; Linneus Circuit, Wm. Perkins; Gallatin Circuit, Jas. F Shores, S J Huffaker; Bucklin Circuit, J A Mumpower; Carrollton Circuit, J Devlin; Richmond Circuit, D M Proctor; Millville Circuit, S Alexander; Elkhorn Circuit, to be supplied; Kingston Mission, D Penney.

ST. JOSEPH DISTRICT.—Wm. Rush, P. E.; St. Joseph Station, Wm. Leftwich; Nashville Circuit, Wm. Barnett; Weston and Platte City, R A Austin; New Market Circuit, C W Collett; Liberty Circuit, to be supplied; Plattsburg Circuit, Jesse Bird; Oregon Circuit, Jacob McEwin; Maryville Circuit, H A Davis; Savannah Circuit, to be supplied; Mayaville Circuit, Thos. Hurst; Albany Circuit, B F Zumwalt.

HANNIBAL DISTRICT.— B H Spencer, P. E.; Hannibal Station, C I Vandeveater; Palmyra Station, Wm. M Newland; Lagrange Circuit, Thos J Starr; Monticello and Canton Circuits, R N T Holliday; Alexandria Circuit, Jas. Penn; Newark Circuit, Thompson Penn; Shelbyville Circuit, W W McMurray; Sharpsburg Circuit, Chas. Babcock; Florida Circuit, Jesse Fanbion; Hydesburg Circuit, L Rush; Memphis Mission, to be supplied.

LEAVENWORTH DISTRICT.—H H Hedgepeth; Wyandotte Circuit, to be supplied; Nebraska and Eastport, to be supplied; Leavenworth Mission, J O Foresman; Atchison Mission, S J Castlin; Doniphan Mission, F M Williams.

L. B. Stateler, Superintendent of Missions in Montana and Colorado Territories.

Kirksville Mission—W M Wood.

Central College—H A Bourland, Principal and Professor of Languages.

Macon High School—J P Nolan, Principal.

Pritchett Institute, Glasgow—Carr W Pritchett, Principal.

The next Conference will be held at Macon City, Mo.

Advocate.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1866.

CHANGE IN SUBSCRIPTION PRICE OF THE ADVOCATE, beginning with No. 27.—REDUCED TO ($3.) THREE DOLLARS.—By the liberality of our friends who cheerfully subscribed five dollars each for our paper, we were enabled to begin the publication of the Advocate without capital—and to continue it the past six months without incurring debt. For this they have our thanks.

The recent opening of the mail routes, and the price of all the other ADVOCATES of the Church South, induce us to change the subscription price of this paper from five to THREE DOLLARS. When the cost of living and of labor in this city are considered, as compared th other points in the South, we hope that our friends will give us credit for trying to supply them with a Religious Weekly Paper at the very lowest rates possible.

Our subscription list, and the condition of the mail service, precluded our yielding to their suggestions and wish at any earlier moment.

J. C. KEENER, } Executive Com.
J. B. WALKER, } Joint Board of
L. PARKER, } Publication.

The Annual Conferences.

FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP PIERCE.

Arkansas Conference—Searcy, Sept. 26.
Little Rock Conf.—Arkadelphia, Oct. 10.
North Carolina " —Fayetteville, Nov. 7.
Virginia Conference—Norfolk, Nov. 21.
Baltimore Conf.—Baltimore, March—.

SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP DOGGETT.

W. Virginia Conf.—Parkersburg, Sept. 5.
Kentucky Confer.—Winchester, Sept. 19.
Louisville Conf.—Elizabethtown, Oct. 3.
Missouri Conference—Richmond, Oct. 17.
St. Louis Conference—Lexington, Oct. 31.

THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP WIGHTMAN.

South Carolina Conf.—Marion, Nov. 7.
Mobile Conference—Enterprise, Nov. 21.
Montgomery Conf.—Jacksonville, Dec. 5.

FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP PAINE.

Memphis Conference—Jackson, Nov. 14.
Mississippi Conference—Natchez, Nov 28
Louisana Conf.—Baton Rouge, Dec. 12.

FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP M'TYEIRE.

Holston Conference—Asheville, Oct. 10.
Tennessee Conference—Huntsville, Oct 24.
Georgia Conference—Americus, Nov: 28.
Florida Conference—Quincy, Decem. 13.

SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP MARVIN.

Indian Mission Con.—Bloomfield, Sept 12.
N. W. Texas Con.—Waxahatchie, " 26
East Texas Conference—Marshall, Oct 10
Texas Conference—Galveston, October 24.
West Texas Conference—Seguin, Nov. 7.

SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KAVANAUGH.

Pacific Conference—Petaluma, Sept. 19.
Columbia Conference—Corvallis, Oct. 10.

To the Presiding Elders of the Louisiana Conference.

BISHOPS' APPORTIONMENT.

Dear Brethren: By direction of the General Conference, the Delegates of each Annual Conference are instructed to apportion to the several Districts of the Conferences the amount required for the support of the Bishops. The total amount assigned to our Conference is $1140, which we have apportioned as follows:

New Orleans District	$300 00
Opelousas District	100 00
Alexandria District	100 00
Homer District	150 00
Minden District	150 00
Shreveport District	200 00
Hastrop District	100 00
Texas District	50 00
	$1150 00

It is very important that this collection be taken up immediately by the Presiding Elders, or by the preachers in charge, and the amounts forwarded to the Book Agent at Nashville. We have made the apportionment with reference to the condition of the Districts, and we hope in a satisfactory manner.

JOHN C. KEENER.
LINUS PARKER,
J. B. WALKER,
ROBERT J. HARP,
W. E. LINFIELD.

Cardinal Cullen, the first Irish Cardinal, recently returned from Rome to Dublin. At a semi-public reception which he held at the College of the Holy Cross, the Cardinal took a most despondingly view of the fortunes of the Papacy.

MISSOURI CONFERENCE.

We publish this week an account of the session of this Conference, which met in Richmond, Missouri, on Sept. 5th. We extract it from the St. Louis Christian Advocate.—One very important item of the Conference action seems to be omitted: its discussion and decision upon the method of electing lay delegates to the Annual Conference. By the action of the General Conference, they are "to be chosen annually by the District Stewards, or in such other manner as the Annual Conferences may direct." Now it seems to us that the "manner" of electing these lay representatives contains the gist of the whole matter. As they, whether many or few, will wield as much power as the whole body of preachers, in the government of the Church, the method of their nomination and election is very important to the Conference. Shall the District Stewards nominate and elect? Shall the Quarterly Conferences elect, and the District Stewards nominate? Shall the Presiding Elder nominate, and the Quarterly Conference elect? Or, shall the Annual Conferences nominate and elect after the manner of the Wesleyan Conference, which selects the laymen who fill important places on its standing committees?

Each District is entitled by the General Conference bill to the same number of representatives. As at present constituted, Districts differ widely in membership, and in number of appointments. It will be important, upon the representative system, to avoid the rotten borough system of districting a Conference. Districts may no longer be arranged for the convenience of an Elder, or to leave out a swamp, but so as to include something like an equal proportion of the whole number of appointments and members in the Conference.

We suppose that these considerations came up in the Missouri discussion of the question, and only regret that the points made were not presented in the reporter's narrative. We need all the light we can get upon this momentous change in the organization of our Church. The General Conference passed the bill in the course of an hour's discussion, under the five minute's limit to each speaker. So that however much light it may have possessed on this great question, it gave out but a few fitful flashes. In the interim between the General Conference and the meeting of the Annual Conferences, men high in authority and in the affections of our people, have deprecated its discussion in the Advocates; so that unless the people speedily take up the question in their Monthly Meetings, and the Annual Conferences give it a thorough sifting, our Church will have changed her entire Constitution and construction, without debate, in the silence which indicates either full information and persuasion, or an indifference little short of apathy. No doubt a disinclination to open any question which may divide our Church at this present time, has something to do with the permitting so great a matter to go "by default." And the introduction of any grave action which might create differences among ourselves, was and is indeed to be deprecated. For we have many adversaries, and need all the strength we can command by unanimity and unity. These considerations have had weight, we doubt not, with very many of our people. But there are also a vast number who needed to be stirred from an apathy which would receive without discussion, emotion, or thought, any proposition, however momentous in itself, to change the Church, its doctrines, its discipline, its name, or in any particular, with the profoundest unconcern. In avoiding Charybdis we have neared Scylla. Smooth legislation is worthless. The vexed stir and rugged conflict of ideas by which healthy legislation determines its course, secures strength to the action itself, and makes the law vital. But that which has no opposition, which is born without throes and cries, arrives still-born. We believe that the general debate was to be desired. That there was so much unconcern among our people about everything and the Church, that no amount of argument could have created or can create any serious differences among them. It might have disturbed and aroused; nothing more. The reaction from the war could support a great deal of word-encounter without endangering the unity of our Zion. Measures which cannot stand the strain of the fullest and freest debate lack the strength necessary to an actual working existence. We hope, therefore, that the Annual Conferences will not conclude that what the General Conference has done must be right, and therefore needs no farther discussion; and so let the great questions which are jointly referred to them and the General Conference by the Constitution of the Church, pass without thorough examination; but that they will take them up as independent thinkers, and as the true fountain of legislative power and wisdom, and adopt them, if at all, with full light and a hearty conviction of their fitness for strengthening and continuing the Methodism which they have received by inheritance; or, if they reject them, do so with reason, fortified reason, and be able hereafter to give an account thereof.

We are glad to notice that, in the Missouri Conference, the general question of Constitutional Change was actively discussed by A. Monroe, P. M. Pinckard, H. Brown, J. D. Vincil, W. M. Leftwich, Wm. M. Rush, C. J. Vandeventer, J. H. Pritchett, and others.

This noble body of ministers are still passing through the fire. God, only, knows all that they have endured during the past four years.—And they stand as a breakwater against the dark waves of infidelity, atheism, radicalism, and fanaticism which are violently surging, and threaten every member of the M. E. Church South in Missouri.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE THEOLOGICAL ECLECTIC. A Repertory chiefly of Foreign Theological Literature. Bi-monthly.—Price $3 a year. Published by Moore, Wilstach and Baldwin, 60 Walker street, New York, and 25 West Fourth street, Cincinnati.

Editor: GEORGE E. DAY, D.D., Professor in Yale Theological Seminary. Associate Editors: P. H. SCHAFF, DD, Prof. in Theological Seminary of German Reformed Church, New York; H. B. HACKETT, D.D., Prof. in Newton (Baptist) Theological Institute, Mass.; JNO. MCCLINTOCK, D.D., Methodist, New York; W. H. GREEN, D.D., Professor in Theological Seminary of Presbyterian Church, in Princeton, New Jersey; C. M. BUTLER, D.D., Prof. in the Divinity School of Protestant Episcopal Church, Philadelphia; and L. J. EVANS, M.A., Professor in Lane Theological Seminary of Cincinnati.

"With the whole field of foreign Theological literature before them, and with the facilities at their command, it will be the aim of these gentlemen to place promptly in the hands of ministers and laymen in the different branches of the Church the most important and valuable papers published abroad; which else, on account of being written in foreign languages, or for other reasons, would be inaccessible, for the most part, to American scholars and readers.

"The Eclectic will in no wise interfere with Church periodicals, but comes in on the broadest grounds of a true Catholicity to do battle against religious error in the Protean forms which it assumes in these times of stirring thought and active investigation."

We have read the July and Aug. and the September and October numbers of this able publication, and find them to be all that the publishers promised. They are full of just such reading as every Christian minister should have for his mental training and spiritual improvement, as well as for enlarging his acquaintance with the Theological world, and with the wars that are now waging between the varied forms of unbelief and Christianity.

Contents of No. 1, vol. iv:—

I. Romanism and Rationalism as opposed to Pure Christianity.

II. Systematic Theology as an Inductive Science. British Quarterly.

III. Citations from the Old Testament by our Lord and his Apostles. From the Dutch Review.

IV. Isaac Taylor. British and Foreign Review.

V. Strauss's New Life of Christ. Fortnightly Review.

SOUTHERN PICTORIAL THIRD READER Prepared under the supervision of Prof. Geo. F. Holmes, LL.D, of the University of Virginia. New York: Richardson & Co., No. 540 Broadway.

This is the first book we have seen of the "Southern University Series." It is a neat looking book, with considerable freshness of matter; and the leaves are enlivened with an occasional wood-cut. It is a pot of ointment without the "fly."

TEARS.

Tears are the dew of sympathy, mute but eloquent. They are the voiceless utterances of the heart, or else the tides of the passion-stirred soul, that come rushing, unbidden and irrepressible. Tears have power, strange power; they unlock the miser's chest, they move the stoutest heart, they disarm the brave, and with humility adorn the great. Tears in mercy are allotted man; it is sweet to weep when the soul, burdened and crushed with its woe, bursts forth and finds relief in tears. Tears are the lot of all; who has not wept tears of tender sympathy, bitter anguish, or blest excess of joy. All men, from those of lowliest walk up to the proud height of him who might have said, "Creation's heir, the world, the world is mine," all have felt the soft sensibility whose voice is an ellent tear.

A baby's tears,—"and behold the babe wept." The gentle and womanly nature of Pharaoh's proud daughter was stirred at so sad, so piteous, so helpless a sight. Ah those pearly, but sad tear drops that hung upon the sweet and pleading face of the imperiled and helpless babe, eloquently told of Israel's wrongs, Israel's sorrow, and Pharaoh's crushing tyranny. More than a battle trumpet's blast, more than the din of mortal strife, more than flattery's wooing words, the silent but pleading tears as they coursed down the soft, sweet cheek, thrilled the unseen chords of the maiden's soul, and woke responses of tenderness and love, "and she had compassion on him and said, this is one of the Hebrew's children." Those little tears saved an illustrious life, gave Moses a home in a palace, the education of a Prince, and a career memorable from the banks of the Nile, to its glorious termination on Pisgah, when he was permitted to look over the Jordan and see the promised land, lying out before his eyes, like "Eden in its native loveliness, magnificent and wild."

A father's tears—"David therefore besought God for the child, and David fasted and wept, and lay all night upon the earth." What a scene is before us, the stern warrior of many a hard fought and gory field. Who had looked on ghastly wounds, and grim death without a tear, who had heard the cry of agony wrung from manly bosoms by excruciating pain, or the slow and stifling groans of strong men dying, all unmoved, now he looks on the suffering of helpless innocence, and he is overwhelmed with grief, all unmanned, he falls prone and heart subdued. He is a crowned King—but the throne, the crown, and the royal couch are forsaken, all forgotten, and like the houseless beggar he lies upon the earth. But these tears of the royal and warlike mourner, are more than the tears of a sorrowing father. They are the bitter tears of repentance and remorse. This helpless dying child, was the child of sin and shame. Its mortal sufferings, called up all the treachery and the ingratitude attendant upon the murder of a brave and generous Uriah. Each pang that wasted the babe's feeble frame, shot a thrill of agony into the grief-stricken and harrowed soul of the royal penitent; but Godly sorrow worketh repentance, and David said it is good for me to be afflicted; before I was afflicted I went astray.

A Saviour's tears—"Jesus wept." It never can be unmanly to weep, if the "Man Christ Jesus," the noblest man that ever lived or graced earth with his presence, wept tears of sympathy with the bereaved orphans of Bethany. Can earth ever be looked upon as the abode of innocence, or the final home of the good, if even immaculate goodness cannot sojourn here a little season without tears. In heaven alone no sin is found, and there's no weeping there. If Jesus wept, can it be wrong for good men to weep where sorrow bows the soul? No, but good men must not weep to murmur at God's dispensations, or despair of his love; his mercy is not clean gone forever, we must not sorrow as those who have no hope, but strange paradox of faith, we must rejoice even in tribulation.

Jesus "beheld the city and wept over it." He was approaching the city from the Mt. of Olives, which commands and overlooks the city on its eastern side. While others were spreading palm branches and garments in the way, and singing hosanah, he was looking at Jerusalem in the light of history, seeing all that she had been, and had enjoyed in the days of Solomon—the magnificent days of victory, prosperity, renown and power. He was looking at Jerusalem in the light of prophecy, not gay, crowded and prosperous as others saw her then, but surrounded by ironclad assailing host, within torn with discord, starved with famine, and wasted with pestilence. Her temple and palaces burned with fire, her walls thrown down, and all her foundations torn up, and not one stone left upon another; her people in chains, borne into cruelty, captivity. This awful prophetic panoramic picture which his Divinity rolled before his eyes, was more than his humanity could behold unmoved; "he beheld the city and wept over it.

Did Christ o'er sinners weep,—
And shall our cheeks be dry?
Let floods of penitential grief
Burst forth from every eye."

W.

THE HARVEST IS GREAT AND THE LABORERS ARE FEW.—The Baltimore Episcopal Methodist says: "There is a great demand for preachers in Maryland. Indeed it is like living the days of old Methodism over again. Our Presiding Elder can at this moment find work for forty additional preachers in Maryland alone.—Pray that the Lord of the harvest would send forth laborers into his harvest."

BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

The Board of Domestic Missions, as provided for by the late General Conference, convened on Wednesday, Sept. 12, 1866, at the Southern Methodist Publishing House, in Nashville, Tenn. Present: Rev. A. L. P. Green, D.D., President; Rev. A. H. Redford, Vice-President; Rev. J. B. McFerrin, Secretary; Rev. A. P. McFerrin, Treasurer; Rev. Drs. Baldwin and Young, Rev. John Morrow, W. T. Gates, M. Hamilton, G. W. Smith, Dr. W. H. Morgan, and Irby Morgan, Managers.

The meeting was opened by prayer by the President, and the Board was fully organized.

The Secretary presented the following paper, which was read, viz.

To the Board of Domestic Missions—Brethren: You were elected by the late General Conference for the purposes set forth in the following Constitution.

[Here the Secretary read the Constitution, which may be found in the late edition of the Discipline.]

The undersigned was elected Secretary, and entered upon the duties of his office in June last. But owing to the fact that the Book Agent and the Editor of the Christian Advocate could not enter formally upon their duties for a few weeks after the adjournment of the General Conference, it was necessary for him to remain in charge of the Publishing House and paper for a season. It is proper, too, for him to say that the condition of his health was such that he needed rest: of this, however, he has taken but little. He has visited Memphis; Cross county, Arkansas; Macon Circuit, Memphis Conference; Somerville, Tenn.; Bowling Green, Ky.; the Meeting of the District Conference, Russellville District, Louisville Conference; McKendree Church, in this city; Columbia, Tenn.; Franklin, Ky., and Woodburn Circuit, Louisville Conference. He has made addresses, lifted collections, and conversed with our ministers and members on the subject of Missions, and the best plan for raising money in support of this great enterprise of the Church. He has also made appeals through the papers, and prepared a circular for the Annual Conferences. He regards the prospects as encouraging.

The following is the Circular to the Annual Conferences:

To the Bishop and Members of the —— Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

REV. AND DEAR BRETHREN:—You are aware that the late General Conference revised our Missionary work, and organized two Boards—Foreign and Domestic.

The Foreign Board co-operates with the whole Church in sustaining Missions among the Indian tribes of North America, and in foreign lands. This Board is located at Baltimore: Rev. Dr. Sehon is the Secretary.

The Domestic Board is located at Nashville, and the undersigned is the Secretary.

By reference to the new edition of the Discipline, you will perceive that this Board co-operates with the several Annual Conferences in the organization and support of Missions in their respective bounds.

It is recommended that each Conference will take measures to collect funds to sustain Missions within its own territory.

One-tenth of all monies collected for Domestic Missions is to be transmitted to the Treasurer of the Parent Board.

You are hereby respectfully and earnestly requested, at your approaching session, to organize a Missionary Board. You will please to organize, as far as practicable, in your own Conference; Missions in your large cities; in sparsely settled neighborhoods; among foreigners, who may have settled in your midst; and among the colored people who may still desire to adhere to our Church.

You will ask your Treasurer to transmit to Rev. A. P. McFerrin, Treasurer, at Nashville, one-tenth of your collections, to be disposed of as the Constitution provides. This may be sent by Express, at our expense. You will please, also, to instruct your Board to make an annual report—to the undersigned—of the operations of your Board and Conference, in the work of Domestic Missions, stating the number and names of your Missions, the numbers in society, the Sunday-schools in operation, with the amounts collected and disbursed, and all other information of interest, appertaining to the work. The Secretary is bound to make an annual report, and this he cannot do without the necessary statistics.

Finally, we earnestly entreat you to engage heartily in this work, and may God crown your labors with abundant success.

J. B. MCFERRIN,
Secretary Domestic Board.

Nashville, August, 1866.

The Board will please — being fully organized—proceed to consider such matters as are of interest to the cause of Missions; and the Secretary will be much obliged for any suggestions appertaining to his work as shall be useful.

J. B. MCFERRIN, Sec'y.

Nashville, Sept. 12, 1866.

The first question considered by the Board was the payment of the old debt. After mature deliberation, it was Resolved, That this Board recommend to the Annual Conference Boards, that in their appropriations of Missionary funds, they will give precedence to the old debt.

The Secretary and Dr. Young were appointed a committee to draft rules and regulations for the government of the Board.

A committee consisting of Dr. Young, Dr. W. H. Morgan, and Irby Morgan, was appointed to prepare an Address to the Annual Conferences, and to the whole Church, on the cause of Missions.

It was resolved that the Board meet the first Wednesday in each month, at 10 o'clock, A.M.

Disposing of a few other matters of minor importance, the Board adjourned.

J. B. MCFERRIN, Sec'y.

ADDRESS FROM THE BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS.

To every Minister and Member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

DEARLY BELOVED:—The first meeting of the Officers and Managers of the Board of Domestic Missions, held since the adjournment of the late General Conference, closed its sessions this day. All the members were present, except those living at a distance. The questions that came before us were discussed freely, patiently, earnestly. The meeting was interesting and harmonious.

The undersigned—one minister and two laymen—were requested to write and publish a short address to the ministers and members of our Church, concerning our Missionary work. Brethren, we hope you will read it carefully, ponder it well, and then perform your duty in the sight of God.

First of all, we advise each presiding elder, preacher in charge, and missionary, to take up the new Discipline, turn to the 255th page, and read the entire chapter on the "Support of Missions." This will teach him exactly what is to be done, and in what manner it is to be done. This reading will convict most of us of having neglected our duty.

Our old Missionary debt is sixty thousand dollars! We are not afraid of damaging our speeches, our collections, or our cause, by the mention of this fact. The Southern people possess the soul of honor. It is an inheritance derived from our fathers. Let us transmit it unstained to our children. Our Church is composed of Southern people, and we had rather pay this old debt just now, than to send a missionary to each island of the ocean and leave it unpaid. Let the work be done this fall and winter.

We are especially instructed to remind you that it is the order of the General Conference, and the earnest desire of this Board, as well as the Foreign Board, to give this debt precedence in the appropriations and disbursement of moneys. That is to say, when the Missionary collections are paid over at the ensuing Annual Conferences, at each Conference, if possible, set apart the amount demanded of it by the General Conference for the payment of this debt. These amounts have been published in all our Church papers, so that no Conference can be in ignorance of the amount required of it. For example—the Tennessee Conference, at Huntsville, in October, will first appropriate, if possible, twenty-three hundred dollars, as her share of this debt, and then dispose of whatever moneys may remain in the usual way.

This large amount against our Church has, like the rust on our houses, been the accretion of years, from the simple fact that the drafts drawn in favor of our Domestic and Foreign Missions, exceeded the contributions of our people. The consequence was that the Board of Managers, from time to time, found it necessary to borrow money to meet the deficiencies. Ample measures were adopted in 1861 to liquidate this debt, and the drafts were diminished. But those drawn in favor of the Chinese and Indian Missions matured after our country was overrun with armies, and the war was proving disastrous. So the collections failed, the drafts could not be paid at maturity, and many of them went to protest.

These drafts drawn upon our Missionary Society are held by poor missionaries, who have "borne the burden and heat of the day"—who earned them in the midst of dangers, privations, and labors abundant. Let us pay them. Or, they are held by merchants who furnished these missionaries and their families with food and raiment during the five dark and troubled years just passed. Let us pay the merchants who had confidence in the honesty and solvency of our Church. Or, they have passed into the hands of traders and bankers, who are still waiting on us with marvelous patience. It will dishonor the sacred fame of the Church not to pay them.

Let each presiding elder perform his duty according to the Discipline, and that will put every pastor to work. Let every preacher in charge state these facts fully and bring the subject of Missions prominently before all his people, and the sixty thousand dollars will be brought to our Treasury. Let every member of our Church contribute out of the ability which God hath given him, and this old debt will be paid.

Then, dear brethren, we shall be able in the future to furnish the gospel to the destitute portions of our regular work; to the foreigners who may come to "them that we love;" to the people of color who are flocking into the old fields under the old Shepherds, and to the Celestial Empire, also.

And may the good gifts of God's grace and providence be with you, dear brethren, and with the Church and country.

ROBT. A. YOUNG,
IRBY MORGAN,
W. H. MORGAN.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 12, 1866.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Rev. J. H. Mims, writing from Abbeville, La., says: I have just closed a four days meeting on Upper Vermilion Circuit; we had a good time, the Lord was pleased to manifest his gracious presence, and seven precious souls professed the forgiveness of their sins while at the altar of prayer. "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad."

Rev. J. J. Clarke, from Hazlehurst, Miss., writes: We commenced our protracted meeting at Biloxi, on the 25th of August, closed with a prayer meeting of six hours on 30th. I have organized two African Churches, about fifty-three members.

Rev. A. B. Nicholson, of Union Church, Jefferson county, Miss., writes: We closed a meeting some two weeks ago, at Brandywine, Scotland Circuit, Miss. Conference. Thirty five or six joined the Church, same number converted. We received them into the Church, under the late rule baptised them, administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper to them. At Rehoboth Church, Bayou Pierre Circuit, Rev. W. G. Milsaps, Pastor, up to last Sunday night there were about fifty conversions—meeting still in progress.

Rev. R. A. Sibley, writes from Union Church, Miss. We commenced a meeting at Mt. Nebo, on Saturday, Sept., and continued until Thursday evening following. Some conversions, twelve accessions. One young man was converted while coming to the altar, or as soon as he reached it. The Church is considerably revived.

Rev. H. P. Lewis writes from Carmel, Miss., viz: On Sunday, 6th inst., we closed a very interesting meeting at Salter Church. "Meeting lasted ten days," during all of which the Lord was with us in great power." The congregations were large and interesting. There were many happy conversions, fifty-nine of whom were whites, and thirty-two were blacks.

NEWS FROM OTHER CHURCHES

METHODIST E. CHURCH, NORTH.

The address of the Centenary Central Committee, in New York, in the Christian Advocate, says: "Our Missionary Society was organized in 1819. In 1846 its gross receipts were $2,952. Since that period, in the last twenty years, that amount has been increased ten fold, and if this year our business amounts to a million of dollars, the proportionate increase of the last twenty years will make it in twenty years to come, ten millions a year."

GENEROUS DONATION.—Jacob [illegible], Esq., of Port Deposit, Maryland, has proposed to the Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church of that town, to give the congregation a new church, to cost $25,000, or to donate that amount of money to the congregation for the purpose proposed.

The corner stone of a Methodist Church was laid in Austin, Nevada, with appropriate ceremonies on the 5th ult. There is no other house of worship in the place. $50,000 have been raised to complete it.

PRESBYTERIAN.

THE REV DR HENRY J VAN [illegible]. It affords us great pleasure to learn, says the Southern Presbyterian, that the Board of Directors of the Theological Seminary in this place, at their meeting last week, resolved unanimously to tender to the General Assembly at Memphis the name of that distinguished great-grandson of the illustrious Witherspoon, as a suitable person to fill the chair of Didactic and Polemic Theology, rendered vacant by the death of the Rev. Dr. Thornwell.

At Peekskill, New York, recently, the claims of the Princeton Theological Seminary for an endowment were presented to the First Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Mr. Harlow. Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, who was seated with the trustees, rose, entered the pulpit, and in one of his happiest strains of remark, urged the claims of the enterprising and glowing, tribute to the institution whose claims were under consideration. The result of the collection, the addition of more than five thousand dollars to the funds of the Seminary.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States will meet in the city of Memphis, Tenn., on Thursday the 15th of November. The opening sermon will be preached by the Rev. George Howe, D. D., the Moderator.

BAPTIST.

The Rev. S. Jones, a Baptist minister, has been admitted into the Canada Presbyterian Church, having changed his views with regard to Baptism.

The First African Baptist Church of Columbus, Georgia, at a recent conference passed resolutions testifying their respect and esteem for the Rev. Dr. J. H. Dewitt, and declaring "that we feel as a part of the congregation and in full union with another church, the First Baptist Church of this city."

EPISCOPAL.

Rev. W. C. Hopkins has resigned the Rectorship of Calvary Church, in this city, and accepted that of Christ Church, St. Joseph, Mo. The resignation to take effect on the 8th of next October.

The Vestry accepted the resignation, and called the Rev. D. S. Lewis, D.D., of Franklinville.

The Rev. Dr. Hawks, who was in Southward in 1861, has returned to New York, and met with a cordial welcome from a large and influential congregation.

Bishop Hopkins, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Vermont, reports that there are no students at present in the theological department of the Episcopal institute of that State. There are candidates for the ministry in the usual case.

In an interesting letter written from England to the Richmond Christian Advocate by Rev. Jno. Bailey, we find the following:

"At the late convocation of the province of Canterbury, a communication was received from the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America, concerning which the eloquent Bishop of Oxford said it would be impossible for the House to receive such a communication without deep thankfulness. He thought that everything should be done to strengthen the bonds of Union between the Church of England and her daughter in America, and after a lengthened discussion it was decided that four of the Bishops should be appointed to draw up a fitting answer to the communication.—Jackson Mirror.

CATHOLIC.

A great National Roman Catholic Church is to open its session in Baltimore on the first Sunday in October. Among other questions to come before the Council will be that of revising and increasing the number of the diocesan districts. Several Romish priests of notable position have recently arrived from Europe, prepared to the opening of the Council.

UNITARIAN.

The Unitarians have a strong distinction to settle a Northern minister for themselves, and the following advertisement is to be found in the London Inquirer: "Wanted for the First Congregational Unitarian Church of New Orleans, United States, a gentleman of large experience and superior attainments; competent to the pastorship of the above Church, formerly presided over by the Rev. Thomas Clapp. A most distinguished and influential position now presents itself to a Unitarian clergyman of suitable ability."

ISRAELITISH.

It is computed that more than two thousand Jews have been converted to Christianity during the present century.

The seats in the new Jewish synagogue at Cincinnati were sold at auction recently, and brought extraordinary prices. The gross receipts were about $200,000, and some premiums of over $300 were paid for the choice of a first-class seat.

ENGLAND.

In addition to the sermon lately preached at the Chapel Royal by Rev Charles Kingsley, several other clergymen of the Church of England have published their disbelief in the eternal punishment of the wicked. The London Patriot of May 20th says: "Mr E F Litchfield, M.A.; Rev Thomas Davis, M.A., incumbent of Roundway; and the Rev John Bartlett, A.M., curate of Rivenhall, Essex, all contend that the natural immortality of the soul cannot be established either by reason or Scripture—that eternal life is conferred by God through Christ, upon the redeemed, and that the wicked are destined finally to perish.

The nave of Bristol Cathedral, established in the reign of Henry VIII. (when the whole building would have been swept away if not saved by Cranmer), is to be rebuilt, at a cost of over $200,000. The restoration of Salisbury Cathedral is making steady and satisfactory progress.

BAPTISTS OF GERMANY.—Since Oncken began his labors in 1823, at Hamburg, with ten hearers, 81 churches have been organized, with 1,000 preaching stations and about 15,000 members each of which is a professed missionary, pledged to spread the truth of Christ either in Holland, Belgium, Prussia, Sweden, Denmark, Austria, Bavaria, Saxony, Hungary, or Turkey. He has issued 1,000,000 Bibles and 15,000,000 evangelical tracts, and in the labors of himself and his missionaries there have been 40,000 hopeful converts, of whom about one-fourth have been from Romanism.

FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—The President to-day made the following appointments:

Gen. John A. Dix, of New York, to be Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to France.

Gen. Hugh Ewing, of Kansas, to be Minister resident at the Hague.

W. J. Valentine, of Massachusetts, to be a Commissioner to the Paris Exposition.

Hon. Henry May, an ex-Congressman, died in Baltimore to-day.

THE CLEVELAND CONVENTION.

The Committee appointed to present the proceedings of the Cleveland Convention, waited on the President to-day. Gen. Granger, in the course of his remarks, referred to the congratulatory dispatch sent by Gen. Forrest, and other ex-Confederates, and said the true spirit of the Southern men was there exhibited, and no one had a right to doubt the honesty and sincerity of their declarations.

The President, in responding, said: "While the war was a physical contest, conducted, of course, with intellect and intelligence, as far as the science of war was concerned; the struggle now is purely of a civil character, for the establishment of a basis upon which our institutions are to rest hereafter. The query which now arises is whether the character and genius of the nation is to be subverted, or whether it it to be settled upon the principles of the Constitution? I think we are now at the most important crisis of our country's history, when we are to fix a substantial and enduring basis upon which the institutions of the country are to rest. We are to return to constitutional limits, establishing the great fact that this is a Government of limitations, that it has a written Constitution and that its boundaries are to be observed and strictly guarded if a free Government is to exist, and, coming out of a rebellion, we ought to demonstrate to mankind that a free Government cannot exist upon hatred and distrust and ill will, and that with us the time has come for a re-establishment of all the relations of the States to the Federal Government. This I look upon as being of equal importance with any part of the war, if not the most important part. I have said more than I intended, but I repeat that the encouragement, the countenance and the confidence given me, coming from the source it does, is peculiarly acceptable to me, and, God being willing, I will, with your help, pursue the course I have been pursuing in the effort to save our Government. I know it has been said that the founders of a Government are entitled to the most conspicuous place in history, but my opinion is that the preservers of a Government should occupy the most conspicuous page.

From the Pacific.

Passengers from Cape St. Lucas report a rumor of a counter revolution in Lower California in favor of the exiled Governor, Antonio Pedria, who, with four hundred men, has started from San Jose for La Paz to reinstate Salvador Vallarius, Provisional Governor pending the arrival of Gov. Pedria, who is expected to return in the next steamer.

Another rumor says the Imperial garrison at Mazatlan started out to attack Corona, with a view of raising the siege of that place. They met with a disastrous defeat, and Corona followed them to Mazatlan, which town was captured and still held, the French fleet being at Guaymas.

The steamer Continental, not knowing that Corona occupied Mazatlan, ran into that port when the Liberal commander seized her with three thousand rifles and a quantity of ammunition, on the charge of being engaged in making war on Mexico.

Cholera Reports.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Seven cases of cholera and three deaths are reported in the city to-day; and in Brooklyn six fatal cases of cholera are reported and eight from dysentery.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 22.—There were eleven cases cholera and four deaths from old cases.

NASHVILLE, Sept. 22.—There were fifty-four cholera deaths reported by the Mortuary Committee, for the twenty-four hours ending at 7 P. M. The Committee say although the number of deaths are the same as yesterday, as far as could be ascertained, new cases have been much fewer to-day, and favorable auguries are drawn from this fact. The large mortality to-day is attributed to the epidemic proving fatal in nearly every case attacked last night.

The cholera deaths for the past seven days were 321. The estimate of deaths since the first appearance of the scourge is about 800, or one to every fifty-three of the population.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 26—Thirty-three new cases of cholera within the past twenty-four hours are reported. There were nine deaths; of these six were whites and three blacks. The weather is delightful. It is believed the disease will shortly disappear.

From Cyrus Field.

ASPY BAY, September 20.

I arrived here this afternoon. The cable across the Gulf of St. Lawrence was successfully completed this evening. I leave to-morrow to recover a few miles of cable lost in the Gulf during the gale of Monday, and then proceeding in the Medway to Pictou for coal, and afterwards go to lay the cable across the Straits of Northumberland. The steamer Terrible is to accompany us. All well.

CYRUS W. FIELD.

Napoleon's Lettor to Victor Emmanuel.

The following is the text of Napoleon's letter to the King of Italy in relation to the cession of Venetia.

My Brother—I have learned with pleasure that your Majesty has adhered to the armistice and the preliminaries of peace signed by the King of Prussia and the Emperor of Austria. It is, therefore, probable that a new era of tranquillity is about to open for Europe.

Your Majesty knows that I have accepted the offer of Venetia in order to preserve her from any devastation, and to prevent useless bloodshed. My intention has always been to restore her to herself, in order that Italy might be free from the Alps to the Adriatic. Mistress of her destinies, Venetia will soon be able to express her wishes by universal suffrage.

Your Majesty will recognise that, in this circumstance, the action of France has again been exercised in favor of humanity and the independence of the people.

I renew the assurance of the sentiments of high esteem and sincere friendship with which I am, your Majesty's good brother,

NAPOLEON.

St. Cloud, August 11, 1866.

Communion Plate Restored.

The missionary Bishop of Arkansas, makes the following acknowledgment of a becoming act on the part of a clergyman of Western New York, and a number of his friends;

"During the war, the church at Van Buren was robbed of a valuable communion service. It was the gift of friends in New Orleans, and I believe the only silver service in the State. It was supposed to be in Kansas, and I have been engaged in correspondence prosecuting inquiries in that quarter. Unexpectedly, however, I have received a letter from the Rev. Mr. Franklin, of Mount Morris, New York, informing me he had found the plate in question in the hands of a discharged soldier. With the assistance of some kind friends he bought it, at its estimated value as "old silver." $108. To day I have received the express receipt for it, and the commission vessels are returned to the parish free of all cost and charges. In the name of the parishioners, and in my own behalf, I tender to Mr. Franklin and his coadjutors sincerest thanks. They have done an act of kindness very grateful to the hearts of Southern Churchmen. And thus may it ever be. May the church still bind up the wounds which man in his violence has made, and out of her bounty restore that which man, in his selfishness, has taken away.

HENRY C. LAY, Missionary Bishop, of Arkansas and parts adjacent.

Huntsville, Ala. Aug. 6, 1866.

FOREIGN.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—The Prussian regiments destined to garrison the principal towns of Saxony have already been chosen. Only the towns of Belton and Boutzen will have Saxon garrisons, and the remainder of the Saxons will be transferred to Prussia.

The Prussian prohibition against the holding of public meetings in Saxony has caused great agitation in Dresden.

A rumor is current that the Emperor Francis Joseph has conceived the idea of abdicating and appointing a regency during the minority of the hereditary Prince. In any case, it is believed his Majesty will withdraw from public affairs and will appoint a regency to carry on the Government during his absence. Herr Von Beke is spoken of in this city as the future Austrian Minister of Finance.

All the South German Governments have informed the Prussian Cabinet of their readiness to introduce in their respective States the Prussian monetary system, taking the thaler and the groschen as the basis of their circulation. By this means unity of their currency will be established throughout Germany, and the rate of exchange between Prussian and other German moneys will no longer exist.

The agitation against the annexation of Hanover to Prussia continues, especially in the small towns of the kingdom.

A sanguinary conflict took place a few days ago at Celle between the Prussian patrol and some Hanover officers. Pamphlets and flying sheets couched in language hostile to Prussia have been seized and some persons who had sent an address of devotion to King George have been arrested by the Prussian authorities.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—It is asserted that the resignation of M. Drouyn de L'Huys, was caused by his having written a dispatch to M. Benedetti conceived in too advanced terms, and not quite in conformity with the spirit of the Imperial policy.

Earl Cowley will be replaced by Earl Malmesbury.

FLORENCE, Sept. 21.—Rumors have been current that Prince Humbert will marry the daughter of the Austrian Archduke Albrecht.

The relations between Italy and Austria have assumed so friendly an aspect, that the rumor is not altogether discredited.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times states that the Czar of Russia will soon announce in a diplomatic circular from the St. Petersburg foreign office, his position and policy toward Europe in its states of transition.

It is intimated that the paper is plain in its language, and very decided, and will declare there is no reason why Russia should be bound by the treaty of Paris of 1856; that the Black sea must be free to her again; and that the injurious obligations imposed on her by a coalition of the Western Powers are no longer binding.

The writer expresses the opinion that the Eastern question will be reopened, and a war result therefrom, France and Prussia coming out in alliance against Russia.

Joseph Mazzini is circulating a fierce invective against King Victor Emmanuel, his Cabinet, Generals, army and volunteers, for concluding a peace which overwhelms their country with dishonor.

The London Times disposes of M. Mazzini's most prominent arguments in a very severe and personal article.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 17.—The Russian who attempted to murder the Czar, has been executed. Joy was expressed in consequence of the punishment awarded the assassin, and demonstrations of respect were paid to the Czar at the same time.

The Secretary of the Interior is notified of the completion of another division of the Union Pacific Railroad.

Accounts from Tennessee say that the corn crop in that State is greater than during any previous year within the memory of the oldest inhabitants.

A foolish young Frenchman undertook a wager to drink twelve glasses of wine while the clock of the Tuileries was striking twelve. On emptying the ninth glass he fell dead upon the floor.

It is rumored that Henry Ward Beecher and the New York Independent have become entirely separate institutions. It is said that Mr. Beecher declined to furnish copy for a paper which so mercilessly handled him in its editorial columns.

In a lead mine at Memphis, Tenn., some specimens of red sandstone were broken open, and one was found to contain a petrified human hand, in a perfect state of preservation. In other cases parts of animals were found, and one black snake some five feet long, was found, of the consistency and weight of the stone.

There was a frost in several of the Western States on the night of the 21st, which did some damage to the crops. Corn is greatly endangered, owing to its backwardness.

There was considerable excitement at St. Louis on the 22d, on the subject of registering votes, owing to the rigid tests of loyalty, etc., which were enforced.

The Tribune's Washington special says the trial of Jefferson Davis cannot take place in October, and its postponement is a legal necessity, consequent upon the irregularity in the adjournment of the Circuit Court at Norfolk last April. Chief Justice Chase announces himself ready to call a special session and proceed with trial.

The Controller of Texas reports to the Senate of that State that the loss of revenue arising from the abolition of African slavery, as based on the value of slaves in 1860, at the then existing rate of taxation, being 12½ cents on the $100 valuation, is $183,361 17, that being the tax on $105,688,920 10. The aggregate value of taxable property of the State, as rendered for taxation for the year 1860, was $294,315,639. And the estimated number of acres upon which no tax was paid for the year 1865, was 56,821,220.

The Houma Civic Guard says the army worm having stripped the cotton of its leaves, what little cotton is on the stocks is opening rapidly and will be all gathered in a few days, if labor can be obtained.

The Cholera is at Howard Hospital, Lauderdale Springs, Miss.

Official Mexican news says the city of Herroptalilit, in the State of Oaxaca, has been taken by the Mexicans under Gen. Jiqueroa. On the 19th ult. the Austrians lost the city of Tacopostla, in the State of Puebla. Tuspan, a port on the coast north of Vera Cruz, was almost taken by the Liberals.

Reports of Indian depredations continue to come in from the West, but are usually much exaggerated by the time they reach here. A gentleman connected with the Central Indian Superintendence discredits these reports in most instances, but says the Indians complain bitterly of the encroachments of the whites, and threaten to open hostilities.

Protestant Missions in France.

It is a very common thing for the Catholic priests of Europe to assert that Protestants have never ventured to send a missionary across the seas, and they point to their foreign missions as evidence that they alone obey the great commission to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. And because there is no effective way to contradict this claim, millions of intelligent people on the continent believe the assertion. In order to give force to this statement, the Romish missionaries applied for space at the great French exhibition, which is to be made next year, to exhibit such things as would illustrate their missionary enterprises throughout the world, and the request was complied with.

The Protestants, hearing of this, made a similar request, and it was granted. The Protestants of Europe and America are to unite in this exhibition, and are to be represented in Paris by the committee of the Paris Evangelical Missionary Society, from which committee a member is to be admitted among the commissioners, who regulate every thing belonging to the exhibition. The Catholics and Protestants will appear side by side, and each will have a fair opportunity to show what they have accomplished in carrying the gospel to the ends of the earth.

How intensely interesting this exhibition will be, may be inferred from the wide range given to the exhibitors. It is permitted to the different societies to send all they deem calculated to give an idea of the religious, intellectual, and social condition of the nations among whom they labor—native implements, weapons, dress and produce, both in agriculture and industry, before and since the introduction of Christianity; imitations on reduced scale of their pristine dwellings; translations of the Bible, books, tracts; journals printed at the stations; works published by missionaries, especially on travels and philology; specimens of the writing, of native converts in their respective languages and those of Europe which they have learned; idols and all sorts of curiosities, together with specimens which may throw light on points of natural history.—National Baptist.

SUDDEN DEATH.—The Irish Wesleyan Conference, at its late session, appointed the Rev. Robinson Scott, D. D., and the Rev. Robert Wallace as a deputation to take part in the Centenary services of the present year in the United States and Canada. These gentlemen arrived in New York, on 23rd August. The Rev. R. Wallace went directly to the West, reached Cincinnati on 1st September, and died of cholera on the 2nd, about one hour before he was to have filled an appointment in Morris Chapel.

A Sacramento dispatch says the display of silk cocoons, silk manufacturers, native cotton and its fabrics at the California State Fair is remarkably fine.

King Victor Emanuel has invited the whole diplomatic corps to accompany him to the ancient City of the Doges on the day he will make his solemn entry into Venice.

The Newfoundland telegraph lines were badly damaged by the equinoctial.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

The general market (says the Price Current of Wednesday) has developed no new feature since our last publication. Sugar and Molasses have undergone no change. Tobacco has continued without variation, and Western Produce, with the exception of some little irregularity in Flour and Corn, has been attended with about the usual activity, while the movement in our leading staple, notwithstanding the reduced supplies on sale, and the increased firmness of Factors, has evidenced considerable animation, and holders, under the favorable influence of a further advance at New York, have been enabled to establish an additional improvement of 1c per lb on the principal grades, while we increase our quotations for Ordinary to the extent of 2c per lb.

COTTON.—Yesterday the market opened with a liberal enquiry, and despite inclement weather, restricted offerings, and increased pretensions on the part of holders, the movement was quite active throughout the day, the sales, at the close, summing up 2650 bales at prices showing an advance of 1c per lb us to Good Ordinary and Low Middling, while the rates paid for Ordinary disclose an improvement of fully 2c per lb on the past three days' business, the market closing with an upward tendency.

With the remark that the lower descriptions are in improved demand, we now quote as follows:

Low	— to —
Ordinary	28 to 30
Good Ordinary	31 to 33
Low Middling	35 to —
Middling	36 to 37

TOBACCO—The stock on sale is very small, but the assortment is good, and with the exception of fine cutting, selections could be made readily for foreign markets or for the local trade. Factors refuse to make any concessions in prices and hold firmly at full previous figures. The demand is for the local trade for baling and on foreign account. We continue to quote:

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused	¾ to —	— to 1¼	Currency.
Good do	5 to —	— to 5¾
Common Leaf	6 to —	— to 7¼
Fair	8 to —	— to 10
Good	11 to —	— to 12
Fine	13 to —	— to 15
Choice Selec's	16 to —	— to 22

SUGAR.—There is none of the production of Louisiana in the market, and the stock on hand of the production of Cuba is small. The demand is altogether local, however, and only of a retail character. Fair to Prime Cuba Sugar is selling in hhds. at 12¾ to 13¾c, Yellow and White Clarified, at 16 to 16¾c and Prime Porto Rico at 14¾c per lb. Cuba Sugar is selling in boxes at 12¾ to 13c for Nos. 12 and 13, 13½ to 14¾c for Nos. 14 and 15, 15¾ to 16½c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17½c for Nos. 19 and 20.

MOLASSES—There is no Louisiana in market and the stock of Cuba is very light, in fact it is nearly exhausted. Yesterday some retail sales were made at 55 to 60c per gallon.

FLOUR—Superfine brought $10 40, and 150 Choice Extra $15 00 per bbl.

BACON—Shoulders are retailing 18¼ to 18½c, Ribbed Sides at 21c, and Clear Sides at 22 to 22½c per lb. Sugar-cured Hams are retailing at 26 to 29c per lb. Green Shoulders command 17¼ to 18½c per lb.

PORK—The market still continues very dull, there is no demand for round lots and only a retail business is doing at $35 50 to $35 75 per bbl for Mess. Round lots of Mess might be quoted nominally at $35 25 per bbl. Prime is very dull and cannot be quoted above $29 50 to $30 per bbl.

LARD—The market is well supplied but dull, and only small or retail sales are making at 22½ to 23c per lb for Prime in tierces, and 24½ to 25c in kegs; 22c for the former and 24c for the latter is freely offered for larger lots.

CORN—There has been more animation exhibited throughout the market since our last semi-weekly review than we have noticed for some time past, 80c for Yellow Mixed, and 85c per bushel for White.

BRAN—The large receipts of Saturday enabled buyers to purchase at a decline of 5c on previous quotations. The stock however has been considerably reduced, and on Saturday and Monday about 500 sacks changed hands at $1 15 to $1 20 per 100 lbs.

HAY—There is a fair stock on hand chiefly in warehouses, but there is very little inquiry. Prime Ohio Hiver is selling in small lots from warehouse at $30 per ton.

BALE ROPE—The market is quiet but steady and firm. There is a brisk demand for the country which is being supplied at 19c per lb.

IRON COTTON TIES—The stock is very much reduced, but the demand is active at 11 to 12c per lb.

INDIA BAGGING—Is in small supply and in good request. We quote round lots at 40 to 41c per yard in bales. Dealers are supplying the demand for the country at 39c in rolls and 41c in bales.

GUNNY BAGS—There are but few in the market; we have heard of no sales of any importance for some time. We give 30c a piece as a fair quotation.

BUTTER AND CHEESE—Choice Northern and Western Butter continues in fair supply and demand. The former is selling at 46 to 46c, and Western at 25 to 35c per lb. Cheese is in good supply and commands 16 to 17c for Western and Northern. We quote English Dairy at 23c per lb.

HOPS—There is a very good demand for the new crop, but there are none to be had. Good Western will bring 65c to $1 30 per lb.

COFFEE—Is in fair demand and the market is very firm. Dealers are supplying the demand at 27½ to 29c per lb currency for Fair to Prime Rio.

STAR CANDLES—There is a good supply on hand and the demand has been active at 20c for 12 oz, 21c for Box and 25c per lb for full weight. 12 oz are in demand for the country trade.

WOOL—There is a fair supply on hand, and a good demand prevails at 16 to 18c for Louisiana Natural, 18 to 22c for Texas ¼ to ⅜ Merino, 23 to 25 for do ⅜ to ½ Merino; 28 to 30c for washed and 13 to 15c per lb for burry.

HIDES—Are in small supply, but the demand is beginning to slack, tanners being unwilling to pay the present high rates. Prices are ruling at 10 to 10½c for Green, 11 to 11½c for Kip Skins, 13c per lb for Dry Hides. Mexican Dry Hides command 18 to 21c per lb.

MALT—There is no demand, and we furnish the following quotations for reference. Canada at $1 70 to $1 72, and Western at 90c to $1 00 per bushel.

NAVAL STORES.—Are in request, but the market is nearly bare. Small lots of Rosin are held at $2 to $3 for No. 3; No. 2 $1 to $5, No. 1 $5 to $7, No. 1 White $7, Pitch $7, Tar $3 00 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine may be quoted at 50 to 60c per gallon. A few small lots have sold at 55 to 60c.

SALT—A better feeling exists within the past two days, and prices exhibit an upward tendency. We quote Liverpool $2 30 to $2 50 for fine, and $2 25 to $2 40 for Coarse in warehouse, and $2 05 for the former, and $2 for the latter in cargo.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $3 00 to $3 50 per bbl. Apples at $3 to $4 00 per bbl. Onions $1 75 to $2 50, and Cabbages 13 to 16c a piece.

POULTRY AND EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $5 to $6 for the young and $9 to $10 per dozen for the large. Geese at $14 and Turkeys at $36 to $40 per dozen. Western eggs are selling at $25 to $26 per bbl.

FISH—Are in small supply with an active demand. We quote No. 1 Mackerel at $25 per bbl, No. 2 at $22, No. 3 at $17. Codfish are selling at $1 80 to $1 90 per box.

RICE—There is no Carolina in market. The demand for Louisiana is not active, but owing to light supplies rates remain the same. Choice new crop is held at 14c per lb. Choice old crop is selling in lots of 10 to 20 bbls at 13 to 13¼c per bbl.

BEANS—Are dull at $3 to $7 per bbl.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY,
Wednesday evening, Sept. 25, 1866

Arrived since our last: 1283 Texas Beeves, 881 calves and yearlings, 46 hogs, 309 sheep, and 16 milch cows.

Sold, 800 Texas Beeves, 706 calves and yearlings, 132 hogs, 309 sheep, and 21 milch cows.

Stock on sale: 890 Texas beeves, 1177 calves and yearlings, 35 hogs, 1721 sheep, and 44 milch cows.

Western Beef, choice per lb net	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$45 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$12 to 20
Hogs per lb gross	12 to 13
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $ 425
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $ 525
Choice Sheep, per head	— to $9
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $80
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12 to $25
Yearlings, per head	$ 7 to $14
Calves per head	$6 00 to $12

MONETARY.

Statement of New Orleans Gold Market, week ending Friday, Sept. 27, 1866.

21st September: 144, 145; 22nd September: 143, 144; 24th Sept: 143½, 144; 25th Sept: 142½, 143½; 26th Sept: 142½, 143; 27th Sept: 143, 144.

WM. S. MOUNT, Manager.

The City Bank of New Orleans.
15 Commercial Place, New Orleans.

OBITUARIES.

MRS. ANNIE FLETCHER BREWER, wife of Capt. T. C. Brewer, (Editor of the "Wilcox Times"), daughter of Rev. Dr. Thomas Cottrell, died, in Clayboro, Ala., on Sunday, the 19th of August, 1866, just as the sun went down. She was a devoted Christian; a member of the Presbyterian Church for seventeen years. Eminent as a performer on several musical instruments, and a popular and successful teacher, she also was devoted to literature, and was accomplished to such a degree as to make her a universal favorite. She was buried at Camden on Tuesday, the 21st August, a sorrowing community, of which she had long been a cherished member, following her to the grave. By the side of our precious mother she sleeps. One who knew her well declares, "if any one was without sin, it was Annie Brewer."

Sept. 21st, 1866. J. B. COTTRELL.

CARRIE OLIVE, the beloved daughter of James and Sarah A. Woolf, aged five years, two months and twenty days, died on the 18th inst., on the Eastern Shore. No more will her merry, ringing laugh and innocent prattle be heard.—The little chair is left vacant. She is indeed gone; but her pure little spirit is now an angel in the bright home above.

SAMUEL THORNE, JUN., infant son of Kate Mumford and Davis Thorne, departed this life on Monday, the 10th September, 1866, at Laplace Plantation, La., of gastro enteretis, aged two months and seventeen days.

"The early dead
Are spared the toil and strife,
The dreams untrue—
The thousand ills of human life."

AMICUS.

A WONDERFUL MICROSCOPE.—The editor of the New York Sunday School Advocate—Rev Daniel Wise, D.D.,—says:

"The simplicity, cheapness and great magnifying power of the celebrated Craig Microscope struck me with surprise. Then I was examining a fly's eye by its aid, and was struck with wonder at the skill and power of the Creator which is displayed in its structure. When I saw a statement in an advertisement that this microscope magnified one hundred diameters, or ten thousand times, and could be bought for $2 50, I thought it was one of the many humbugs of the hour, for I had paid $20 for a microscope not long before. But now I find it to a really valuable instrument which I should like to see introduced into the families of our readers in place of the manifold useless toys which please for an hour and then are destroyed. This microscope would both amuse and instruct them, and I advise every boy and girl who wishes to know the wonders which lie in little things to save his money until he has $2,75," and send it to George Meade, Thompsonville, Wisconsin, and you will promptly receive the beautiful microscope by mail, postage paid

S. M. SWENSON, N.Y., late of Austin, Tex. | W. M. PERKINS, D. L. KERNION, Of Perkins & Co., N.O.

PERKINS, SWENSON, & CO.,
GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 48 Carondelet, corner of Union street,
NEW ORLEANS.

SWENSON, PERKINS & CO.,
GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
26 Exchange Place, New York.
s29 6m

JOB PRINTING,
COLLEGE CATALOGUES, CONFERENCE MINUTES,
SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORTS,
PAMPHLETS, CIRCULARS, CARDS,
And everything else in the line of job printing, executed in
The Very Best Style, at Moderate Prices.
Send your orders to J. WILKINSON, Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans.

BOOKS! BOOKS!
The Agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, at 112 Camp street, New Orleans, has just received from the steamships George Cromwell and Merrimac, and by the steamboats Mephan and Olivo Branch, ample supplies of Sunday School requisites: Catechisms, Spellers Questions, Dictionaries, Primers, Reward Tickets, etc., etc. Also, Clarke's and Benson's Commentaries, and Hymn Books in sheep and roan.
Address:
R. J. HARP, Agent,
sep1ft 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

OPELOUSAS LAND AGENCY.—At the solicitation of numerous friends, the undersigned has consented to become an Agent for the sale and purchase of land in this healthy and much sought after country, above any high water overflow, and where the prospects for crops are so encouraging. He will take very great pleasure in showing the land to any persons visiting this country, and in giving any other information that may be desired concerning it.
For reference I refer to the Editors of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
JAMES H. HOUSTON,
Sept 4, 1866. Opelousas, La.

A GOOD COOKING STOVE
Is one of the most necessary and desirable articles of household economy, and if properly managed, will promote the health, comfort, and happiness of every member of the family.
Time, money, and extreme vexation, by delays of your daily meals, may be saved by using the
CHARTER OAK COOKING STOVE.
Over 10,000 of these celebrated cooking stoves are in daily use throughout the city of New Orleans. Every one of them has been sold under a full guarantee, and we offer them as a reference wherever found.
The Improved Charter Oak Stove with Extension Top
has but one damper, and is as simple in its construction that a child can manage it. The ovens are larger, bake more uniform, and the stove heavier than any cooking stove of corresponding size ever made.
The Hot Water Reservoir Boiler furnishes a constant supply of hot water at all hours of the day, and for hours after the fire has been extinguished, without additional cost for fuel, a practical illustration of the economy in using the Charter Oak.
The Reflector Gridiron, original with the Charter Oak, and used on no other stove—the most perfect manner to broil meats and poultry, whereby the offensive odors arising from meats during the process of broiling are carried up the pipe, and juices of the meats preserved.
The Hot Closet, in which meats and pastry are kept warm for hours when there has been a delay at meals, besides enabling the cook to furnish the greatest variety of dishes and desserts, and place them hot upon the table.
The Charter Oak Stove will do one-third more baking in a given time, and use 25 per cent less wood than any other stove now made.
Importers and Dealers in Hardware, Nails, Cast Iugs, Guns, Carpenters and Coopers' Edge Tools, etc.
RICE BROS. & CO., Sole Agents,
93 and 95 Camp street, near Poydras, and 565 Magazine street, near Magazine Market
sep1 1y

E. GIQUEL,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in
FOREIGN, FANCY AND STAPLE
DRY GOODS.
Also, a large and varied supply of
HOUSEKEEPING and
PLANTATION GOODS.
Constantly on hand, at
126 Canal Street,
sep1 1y NEW ORLEANS.

D. H. HOLMES,
Direct Importation of
FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,
AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
No. 155 Canal Street,
sep1 6m NEW ORLEANS.

S. ANDERSON, PHOTOGRAPHER
And PHOTOGRAPHIC STOCK DEALER,
61 Camp street, New Orleans.
Cartes de Visite,
Hellotypes, Ambrotypes,
Pictures on Porcelain,
And every description of Pictures known to the Art.
All kinds of Photographic Materials at the lowest price for cash. sep1 1y

[Established in 1828.]
EVANS' FASHIONABLE RETAIL
Hat Emporium,
No 62 CAMP STREET,
Next door to the Picayune Office, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of the Latest Styles by every steamer, at Moderate Prices. n18 6m

PEET, SIMMS, & CO.,
Importers and Wholesale Dealers in
DRY GOODS,
Nos. 23 & 25 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS
A PEET—R WILLIAMSON
P SIMMS—J BOWLING
aug25 1y

LOEB, SIMON & CO.,
Importers and Jobbers of
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,
80 Canal Street,
sep1 3m NEW ORLEANS.

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c.
Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.
Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

SPEED, SUMMERS & CO.,
46 Carondelet street, New Orleans,
COTTON AND TOBACCO FACTORS,
General Commission Merchants,
And COMMERCIAL AGENTS.
aug25 1y

J. H. CARTER,
Wholesale Grocer,
Nos. 8 and 10 Tchoupitoulas Street,
And 8 and 10 New Levee,
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

H. T. ETHELL, New Orleans | NAT. H. THOMAS, Late of Alabama.
ETHELL & THOMAS,
FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
For sale of Bagging, Rope and Twine, Pork, Lard, Beef, Flour, Grain, Hay and Western Produce generally.
Sole Agents for the celebrated brand, "Grey Jacket" Flour.
No. 105 Poydras street, New Orleans.
Will give personal attention to the purchase of Merchandize and Groceries for the country. Cash orders solicited. Instructions strictly obeyed. sep1 6m

J. W. BURBRIDGE. | THOS. B. MILLER
J. W. BURBRIDGE & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants,
No. 190 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep1 6m

Gen. James Longstreet. | W M Owen. | E Owen
LONGSTREET, OWEN & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
37 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug26 6m

R. S. HARPER. | N. J. THAXTON.
S. HARPER & CO.,
Cotton and Tobacco Factors,
AND GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 81 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

JACOB BURCKETT,
GROCER,
And Dealer in Fine Wines & Liquors,
s18 6m 110 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

CHENOWETH, CASEY & CO.,
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
For sale of Pork, Bacon, Beef, Flour, and Western Produce generally,
33 Gravier street, New Orleans.
sep15 1y

H. M. WRIGHT | C. W. ALLEN (1st August, 1865) | J. MIDDLETON
WRIGHT, ALLEN & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
169 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug25 1y

THOS. H. ALLEN, Memphis, Tenn. | JAMES M. ALLEN, PERRY MCNEIL, | New Orleans
T. H. & J. M. ALLEN,
(Successors to ROBSON & ALLEN),
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
122 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 1y

F. F. FOLGER, L. FOLGER, W. H. THOMAS
FOLGER & CO.,
Dealers in
Hardware, Iron, & Ship Chandlery,
37 & 39 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
(Opposite the St. James Hotel)
Nails and Castings; Hoop, Sheet and Bar Iron, Shovels and Spades; Sheet Copper and Zinc; Plows, Axes and Hoes; Lead Pipe and Sheet Lead; India Rubber Belting, Hose and Packing; Circular, Mill and Cross Cut Saws.
aug18 6m aug25 1y

WM. EDWARDS & CO.,
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
27 Camp Street, New Orleans.
WM. EDWARDS.
EDWD. J. GAY.
sep15 3m

ROBERT L. WALKER,
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans. ap21-1y

W. A. VIOLETT. | R. Y. BLACK. | S. H. SNOWDEN.
VIOLETT, BLACK & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
s15 6m 138 Gravier street, New Orleans.

W. B. LOTT, Madison County, Miss. | O. W. WOOD, Canton, Miss.
LOTT, WOOD & CO.,
Wholesale Grocers & Commission Merchants
85 COMMON & 46 CANAL STS., NEW ORLEANS.
Maj. G. C. Sebastian has charge of our sales Department. sep15 1y

E. A. BANKS, | W. W. LORING, | G. W. VENABLE
BANKS, LORING & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
26 CARONDELET STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep22 6m

R. ATKINSON & CO. New York. | JAMES HEWITT & CO., Liverpool.
HEWITT, NORTON & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And Commission Merchants,
188 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
Cash advances made on consignments to us by HEWITT, SWIENEY & CO., Galveston, Texas. sep15 1y

WILLIAM FELLOWES, JUN.,
(Successor to FELLOWES & CO.)
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant
186 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
DAN. P. LOGAN, Agent. sep15 1y

OBER, NANSON & CO., New York. | LEWIS, NANSON & CO., St. Louis.
OBER, ATWATER & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
38 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep15 1y

R. BLEAKLY & CO.,
Wholesale Grocers,
COTTON FACTORS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
Nos. 56, 58, 60, 62 and 64 Poydras street,
Corner Poydras and Tchoupitoulas sts.,
NEW ORLEANS.
All cotton consigned to us will receive the personal attention of MR. J. F. GIRAULT, (for merly with the house of Messrs Wright & Allen) who is specially charged with that department of our business. sep22 1y

E. A. HAMILTON, Memphis, Tenn. | JOHN L. DUNNICA, New Orleans, La.
HAMILTON & DUNNICA,
Cotton and Tobacco Factors, and
GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
42 Union street, New Orleans.
sep22 1y

I. E. WALKER, Missouri. | C. B. FISHER, New Orleans.
WALKER & FISHER,
Commission & Forwarding Merchants
NO. 6 (GROUND FLOOR) CARONDELET ST., N.O.
Solicit consignments of all kinds of Manufactured Goods, and will make liberal advances on same.
GEO. W. WALKER, JUN., late of the firm of Harper, Walker & Co., will give his personal attention to the sale of all consignments to our House. sep22 6m

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet, street, New Orleans.
W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

A. HENDERSON PEALE & CO.,
Successors to Thos. Henderson & Peale,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
No. 190 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 6m

J. W. CARROLL. | JOS. HOY. | CHAS. HARRENDERGH
CARROLL, HOY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No. 36 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

C. L. WALMSLEY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No 31 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

JOHN O. PARHAM, Of New Orleans. | BEVERLY BLUNT, Of Illinois Co., Miss
PARHAM & BLUNT,
COTTON FACTORS,
Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents,
No 26 Carondelet st. (First Floor), New Orleans
aug11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY & CO.,
General Commission Merchants and
COTTON FACTORS,
57 Poydras street.
Cotton Office—192 Common street—in charge of RICHARD J. NUGENT. aug4ft

STEWART, GALBREATH & FIZER
Commission Merchants & Cotton Factors,
46 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
Andrew Stewart, New Orleans.
Wm. R. Galbreath, Wm. Stewart, John C. Fizer, } Memphis.
sep1 3m

SAM'L. BARRETT. | CHS. LE SASSIER.
BARRETT & LESASSIER,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
CORNER COMMON AND BARONNE STREETS

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

[illegible]

Dark —
On [illegible] away,
[illegible] golden down
[illegible] stay.

[illegible] my guide,
[illegible], strong to keep,
While the darkness [illegible],
Let me [illegible] sleep.

Safe and peaceful I shall be,
[illegible] spread,
[illegible] me,
[illegible] by my bed.

I will love [illegible], Saviour mild,
Who so tenderly doth care
For a helpless little child,
And his feeble infant prayer.

Naughty Katy.

Katy B. stood by the parlor window, [illegible] a heavy thunder shower. [illegible], who was greatly annoyed by the sharp lightning, called to her:

"Katy, come away from the window, dear; it is not safe for you to stand there. Come and sit by me on the sofa."

But Katy, with her thoughtful eyes still fixed upon the white sheet of hail and rain, said in her lisping way, for she could not yet speak very plainly:

"No, aunty; if it thunders, let it thunder; it is God makes it thunder, and he'll take care of me!"

The same little one, coming unexpectedly into her elder sister's chamber one afternoon, discovered her in tears.

"What's the matter, Lulie?" she cried in a tone of deep sympathy; "what's the matter? What makes you cry?"

"Because I am wicked," replied Lucy, sobbing.

"Why, don't you love God?" exclaimed Katy.

"No, I am afraid I don't."

"O, do love God, Lulie!" and Katy's little arms clung around her sister's neck as she spoke. "O, do love God, Lulie; don't be so stingy!"

I Must do More for my Mother.

"Is there any vacant place in this bank which I could fill?" was the inquiry of a boy, as with a glowing cheek he stood before the manager.

"There is none," was the reply. "Were you told that you might obtain a situation here? Who recommended you?"

"No one recommended me, sir," calmly answered the boy, "I only thought I would see."

There was a straightforwardness in the manner, an honest determination in the countenance of the lad, which pleased the man of business, and induced him to continue the conversation. He said, "You must have friends who could aid you in obtaining a situation; have you told them?"

The quick flash of the deep blue eyes was quenched in the overtaking wave of sadness, as he said, though half musingly, "My mother said it would be useless to try without friends;" then recollecting himself, he apologised for the interruption, and was about to withdraw, when the gentleman detained him by asking why he did not remain [illegible] a year or two, and then enter the business world.

"I [illegible] at home, and keep up with [illegible] boys."

"[illegible] had a place at [illegible]," his interrogator.

"[illegible] leave it?"

"[illegible] left it," answered the [illegible]; what [illegible] the [illegible] child hesitated, [illegible] with half re-

"I [illegible] for mother."

[illegible] talisman of success [illegible] everywhere. They [illegible] of the listener, [illegible] past. Grasping [illegible] of the astonished child, [illegible] is your name? You [illegible] vacancy that occurs [illegible] bank. If, in the meantime, [illegible] a friend, come to me. [illegible] give me your confidence. Why do you wish to do more [illegible] mother? Have you no [illegible]?

Tears [illegible] eyes, as he replied, "My [illegible] dead, my brothers and [illegible], and my mother [illegible] alone to help each other. [illegible] is not strong and I want to take care of her. It will please [illegible] you have been so kind, and I [illegible] obliged to you."

So [illegible] the boy left, little dreaming [illegible] the nobleness of character [illegible] as a bright glance [illegible] to that busy world [illegible] unwillingly entered.

Speak the Truth.

"As [illegible]," says a distinguished [illegible], I do not recede [illegible] of the need of theology [illegible] in my conception of the need of the simple virtues, as they are called, and of no one more than that of truth, not only in its outward parts, but unwardly in the work. The habit of yes, yes, [illegible], is but very poorly [illegible] in this country. All through [illegible] national character, the [illegible] to think before [illegible], the habit of saying [illegible] meaning another, [illegible] of equivocation, of half-[illegible], of exaggeration, of suppression [illegible] fearfully prevalent.

And I hold that among the things that should occupy the attention of Sabbath-schools and common schools and pulpits, is the indoctrination of this people in the necessity and simplicity and beauty of speaking the truth always."

HAYTI.—No. 2.

This same missionary, Mr. Webley, writing to the London Missionary Herald, in 1850, says:

"These Vandoux almost deluge the Haytien part of the Island. They practice witchcraft and mysticism to an almost indefinite extent. They are singular adepts at poisoning. A person rarely escapes them when he has been fixed upon as a victim."

It is thus seen that Obeism is quite as prevalent in Hayti as it is in the interior of Africa. What more need be said to prove the relapse of these negroes into their original barbarism? Such, then, is the condition of Hayti. Production gone, commerce gone, and the negroes themselves returning to their original African heathenism!

In order to show the present condition of Hayti more fully, we quote from a work just published in London, entitled "The West Indies—their Moral and Social Condition." The author, Mr. E. B. Underhill, was sent out by the Baptist Missionary Society of London, and is an Abolitionist of the deepest dye. While finding all the excuses he can for the island, he is forced to own the truth. He describes his journey to Port au Prince as follows:

"We passed by many or through many abandoned plantations, the buildings in ruins, the sugar mills decayed, and the iron pans strewing the roadside, cracked and broken. But for the law that forbids, on pain of confiscation, the export of all metals, they would long ago have been sold to foreign merchants.

"Only once in his long ride did we come upon a mill in use; it was grinding canes, in order to manufacture the syrup from which tafia is made, a kind of inferior rum, the intoxicating drink of the country. The mill was worked by a large over-shot or water-wheel, the water being brought by an aquednct from a very considerable distance. With the exception of a few banana gardens, or small patches of maize round the cottages, nowhere did this magnificent and fertile plain show signs of cultivation.

"In the time of the French occupation, before the Revolution of 1793, thousands of hogsheads of sugar were produced; now, not one. All is decay and desolation. The pastures are deserted, and the prickly pear covers the land once laughing with the bright hues of the sugar cane.

"The hydraulic works, erected at vast expense for irrigation, have crumbled to dust. The plow is an unknown implement of culture, although so eminently adapted to the great plains and deep soil of Hayti.

"A country so capable of producing for export, and therefore for the enrichment of its people—besides sugar, and coffee, cotton, tobacco, the cacao bean, spices, every tropical fruit, and many of the fruits of Europe—lies uncultivated, unoccupied, and desolate. Its rich mines are neither explored nor worked; and its beautiful woods rot in the soil where they grow. A little logwood is exported, but ebony, mahogany, and the finest building timber rarely fall before the woodman's ax, and then only for local use. The present inhabitants despise all servile labor, and are, for the most part, content with the spontaneous productions of the soil and forest."

The degraded, barbarous condition of the negroes of Hayti is well illustrated in a description given by Mr. Underhill, of what is known of "the religion of Vaudoux, or serpent-worship." It is a native African superstition, and proves, beyond all question, the rapid return of the Hayti negroes to the original savagism of their African ancestors. Mr. U. gives a full description of the ceremonies of this heathenish rite, as described to him by one of the president missionaries, which we regret we have not space to give entire. The performances are preceded by the following barbaric chorus!

"The object worshiped is a small green snake, and the custom is a purely African heathenism. The negro always has a predisposition to it, but it is repressed when he is under white control. Of late years it has been revived extensively in Hayti.

"The Vaudoux," says Mr Underhill, "meet in a retired spot, designated at a previous meeting. On entering they take off their shoes, and bind about their bodies handkerchiefs, in which a red color predominates. The king is known by the scarlet band around his head, worn like a crown, and a scarf of the same color distinguishes the queen. The object of adoration, the serpent, is placed on a stand. It is then worshiped; after which the box is placed on the ground, the queen mounts upon it, is seized with violent tremblings, and gives utterance to oracles in response to the prayers of the worshipers. A dance closes the ceremony. The king puts his hand on the serpent's box, a frenzy seizes him, which is communicated to the circle. A delirious whirl or dance ensues, height-ened by the free use of tafia. The weakest fall, as if dead, upon the spot. The bacchanalian revelers, always dancing and turning about, are borne away into a place near at hand, where sometimes, under the excitement of * * drunkness and darkness, scenes are enacted, enough to make the impassible gods of Africa itself gnash their teeth with horror."

What a disgusting picture of savagism and heathenism does not this present! And yet, there are people who try to palm off upon the world the idea that negroes can remain civilized when left to themselves.—Vanguard.

WIRE CLOTHES LINE.—We have used a wire clothes line for over five years. It has not been housed at all, and is just as good as ever. It does not injure the clothes a bit.—It is an old telegraph wire about a quarter of an inch in diameter and "galvanized," (that is, coated with zinc.) The wire was a present to us, so I do not know what it costs, but can assure you it will pay for everybody to get one.

The sweetest word in our language is Love. The greatest word in our language is God. The word expressing the shortest time is Now. The three making the greatest and the sweetest duty man can perform!

A NEW THING UNDER THE SUN

PRICE'S

Patent Texas Tonic.

PURELY VEGETABLE.

It is a certain antidote against Constipation of the Bowels, Torpor of the Liver, Palpitation of the Heart, Determination of Blood to the Brain, Indigestion, Pain in the Head and Vertigo; also a remedy for

CHILLS AND FEVERS

For particulars, see accompanying Envelope with each bottle.

For sale at 59 Camp street, New Orleans,

THOS. K. PRICE, Vendor.

Read the following opinions of some of our old and well known citizens of

PRICE'S PATENT TEXAS TONIC,

Or, Vegetable Medicine.

T. K. PRICE, Esq., Vender of "Price's Patent Texas Tonic," or Vegetable Medicine:

DEAR SIR—After a fair and deliberate use and experiment of your Vegetable Medicine, known as PRICE'S PATENT TEXAS TONIC, we give it as our decided opinion, that it is the best recipe that we have ever known, for Indigestion, Torpor of the Liver, Constipation of the Bowels and Dyspepsia. We consider your Vegetables Medicine worthy of all commendation, and therefore feel no hesitation in recommending its use to all our friends, as well as the public at large, and that in doing so we are contributing to all the afflicted. Many of us have been suffering from these evils from ten to fifteen years, and have been greatly benefitted.

Wishing you great success in introducing this valuable medicine,

We remain yours truly,

J. J. MULVIHILL, Pastor St. Patrick's Church.
J. H. CALDWELL, of Gas Works, City N. O.
SAM'L. SUMNER of Home Insurance Office
T. GREENFIELD, of house of Fellowes & Co
LEWIS ELKIN, Merchant, New Orleans.
GEO. W. H. NSON. Ship Agent.
JACOB BARKER Bank of Commerce.

New Orleans, June, 1863.

TERMS:

4 oz Bottles	$2 00
6 " "	2 50
8 " "	3 00
12 " "	5 00

Sold to Druggists by the dozen bottles or more at 33⅓ per cent discount off retail price.
All orders will meet with prompt attention.
sep22 1y THOS. K. PRICE.

W. C. SHEPARD. A. L. ABBOTT. R. C. HUTCHINSON

SHEPARD, ABBOTT & CO.,

No. 55 Camp street, New Orleans.

Nearly opposite Picayune Office,

CROCKERY AND GLASS WARE,

PLATED WARE,

House Furnishing Goods,

AND KITCHEN WARE.

We beg leave to inform our friends and the public in general, that we have on hand a large and well selected stock of the above goods, and are constantly receiving them directly from the manufactories in France, England, and the United States; and we flatter ourselves that we can sell our goods as low as any house in the city.—For variety in the house-furnishing line, our stock is unequalled in the South.

Call in and see for yourself before purchasing elsewhere.

SHEPARD, ABBOTT & CO.,
sep22 1y 55 Camp street, New Orleans.

E. L. PIERSON & CO.,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

CLOTHING,

AND

GENTLEMEN'S FURNISHING GOODS,

No. 27 Magazine Street,

Corner of Gravier street,

sep22 6m NEW ORLEANS.

G. HORTER, late of Magee & Knease, N. O. T. K. PETERSON, late of Goff & Peterson, Philadelphia. E. C. FENNER, New York

HORTER, PETERSON & FENNER

(Sign of the Black Horse,)

MANUFACTURERS OF SADDLES HARNESS, AND TRUNKS.

Importers of Saudlery & Coach Hardware

7 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

s23 1y

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,

For the Autumn of 1866, and

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now Published. It contains Descriptions of the Best Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lilies, etc., With full descriptions, and plain and full directions for Planting, Culture, Prices, etc. Illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the Single and Double Tulip and Scilla. My importation from the best Bulb Growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country. This Catalogue and Guide is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost. Postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my Catalogue. Address

JAMES VICK Rochester, N. Y.

aug. 25.

INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANO.

A lady whose high attainments as a composer and as a performer on and successful teacher of the Piano, can be well attested, proposes to give lessons to a few pupils in the city, commencing in September or October.

References: Rev J. C. Keener, D. D.; Rev J. B. Walker, D. D.; Rev L. Parker.

For particulars address: "Pianist," Christian Advocate Office 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,

Jackson, Louisiana,

was established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and transferred to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1845. It is now under the joint patronage of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences.

The College exercises were necessarily suspended during the war; but were regularly resumed, after reorganization, on the first Monday in October, 1865. The approaching session will open on the first Monday of October next.

Tuition, $75 per annum, payable semi-annually, in advance.

Boarding can be obtained at from $20 to $25 per month

The Buildings, Libraries, Apparatus, Laboratory and Society Halls, the location in point of beauty, health, ease of access and good society, are all unsurpassed by those of any institution in the Southern States.

The past history of the College is the pledge of its future prosperity.

The Board and Faculty promise the public that nothing shall be wanting on their part to secure the thorough education of the young men committed to their care, in both Preparatory and Collegiate Departments.

The old students, alumni, and friends of the Institution, are requested to give publicity to the full reorganization and opening of the College, as stated above.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,

GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught.

TERMS:

Tuition fees per term.....$40 00
Contingent fee.....5 00
Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month
aug4ft W. M. WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

STONEWALL INSTITUTE.

The President of this Institution is gratified to announce to its patrons and friends that the regular scholastic year will open on the

FIRST MONDAY OF OCTOBER NEXT,

under the following Corps of Teachers:

D. C. B. CONNERLY, M. A., PRINCIPAL, AND TEACHER OF ANCIENT LANGUAGES.
G. M. CALLEN, M. A., TEACHER OF MATHEMATICS
H. Y. WEISINGER, M. A., ASSISTANT IN ANCIENT LANGUAGES AND ENGLISH LITERATURE.
JNO. D. LELAND, M. A., ASSISTANT IN MATHEMATICS & MODERN LANGUAGES.

This school for boys and young men is located in the high and healthy hills of Perry County, Ala., thirteen miles North of Selma, and five miles North of Summerfield; and can be reached in a three hours' drive from Selma. Its locality is healthy almost beyond comparison. It is the property of no sect or set of men, and is not controlled by Trustees. It is the property solely of the Principal, who alone is responsible to the patrons of the Institute, for its management and discipline.

The Principal has engaged these three gentlemen of energy to join him in giving to the rising generation rare opportunities for acquiring an education. With the experience of fifteen years in controlling boys, and with the devotion and energy which will be given to the interest of our pupils, we think it proper to say that every right-minded man, who sends us a good boy, shall be satisfied with the results.

We do not intend to exhort men to send to us; but we do intend to make it the true interest of our friends to commit their sons to our charge.

Our experience during the past year enables us to say that here we have power to control, and subject to study, our pupils, far greater than we ever had in any village.

From October to July, we shall carefully superintend the morals, manners, and intellectual training of our students.

No boy will be received, whose moral character is not satisfactory; nor do we purpose going beyond eighteen pupils to the teacher, thus giving great advantages to our classes. For Board, including washing, and tuition by night and by day, from October to July, no matter what the age of the boy is, and no matter what he studies, our charge is Three Hundred and Sixty-Dollars; one hundred and eighty paid on entering and the remainder Feb. 14th, 1867.

Each student must furnish two blankets, two sheets, two pillow-cases, and his own towel and lights.

Besides, every one must bring money, from ten to twenty dollars to pay for his books and stationery. These terms must be literally complied with.

If a student is dismissed for any cause, or if he has to retire, and does so with our approval, his money will be refunded, but if he leaves without this approval, or runs away, his money will not be refunded; nor will any deduction be made for absence unless occasioned by a protracted sickness of one month's duration.

The patrons of this school embrace many of the most distinguished men of Central Alabama. Their sons can furnish the best evidence and strongest assurances that all our plans and management look to the progress of the pupil; and that around the entire establishment we constantly throw an air of home and contentment.

Parties wishing to commit their sons and wards to a school all of whose movements are systematically controlled to advance the real mental training of inmates, and whose daily and weekly schedule, even on Saturdays and Sundays, is moved by the clock, are cordially invited to address the undersigned by letter.

D. C. B. CONNERLY,
Stonewall Institute, near Summerfield, Ala.

SOUTH-WESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Where is it located? Its Depository and Bible-House is at its own building, No. 163 Camp street, New Orleans.

When was it established? 1850.

Who is its General Agent to whom correspondence on its business should be addressed? Rev. James Beattie.

Where is the Society's field of labor? All of Louisiana; and all of Mississippi, south of the 33rd parallel of North latitude.

What is the object of the Society? To explore and supply (gratuitously where needed) the destitution of the Holy Scriptures.

What are the resources and whence the income of the society? From the annual contributions of its members. Collections of Churches within its field, collections at public meetings and anniversaries. Appropriations of the surplus funds of its auxiliaries, the donations of generous individuals, testamentary bequests, and the annual donation in Books of the American Bible Society.

What is the Society's method of work? By cultivating its own local work in the city and district of New Orleans: then through Auxiliary Societies established or to be established in every Parish and County in the field, and the employment by them of such means as will accomplish the object of the Society.

What are the terms of membership?

The payment of $30 at one time constitutes a life member.

The payment of $150 at one time, constitutes a life Director.

The payment of $1000 at one time, constitutes a life Patron.

The payment of $3 annually, constitutes a member.

The taking up of a collection by a church constitutes the Pastor an honorary member.

Having thus briefly stated the main features of the Society's work, income and expenditure, the Board of Directors for the current year confidently ask the aid of all lovers of the Bible, whether professors of religion or not: to strengthen the hands of the S. W. B. S: by founding or reviving Auxiliaries, by donating and urging donations, by exploring and reporting the destitution of the Scriptures, by commencing or renewing memberships of all grades and by establishing connections with the Society as the Lord has prospered them: according to that Scripture which says "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal." To ministers and professing Christians of every Orthodox Protestant church, the Board of Directors, representing in its body all such within our bounds, appeals with confidence to aid them by judicious effort, a prompt performance of duty and a prayerful commendation of the Society to the blessing of Almighty God, for except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it, except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain.

Our last thought is the heart-cry of the Great Reformation, "No forbidding of the Word: no tampering with the text: no man's note or comment: God's Word: Christ's Word; the Holy Spirit's Word: Free: Free: Free. a25 1y.

WOODVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE SECOND SESSION

Will begin October 3rd 1866, and close July 10th, 1867. The system of instruction aims at the truest mental, moral, and social culture. The discipline seeks to embrace whatever is helpful to this end, and to exclude what is hurtful to it. Obedience to rightful authority, is a necessary to membership in the school.

TERMS PER SESSION.

Board, with fuel, lights and washing,	$300 00
Tuition in Preparatory course,	60 00
" Academic "	80 00
" Collegiate "	100 00
Music,	80 00

Other ornamentals as low as can be afforded.

The Collegiate course embraces Latin and French without any extra charge. These charges are made from the beginning of the half month in which the pupil is entered, to the end of the session, and must be paid, one half in advance; and the other on the 1st of March, nor will assignment of a pupil to room, seat or class, be made until this demand is met. A sum sufficient to get books, music, and medicines for slight sickness, must be deposited with the Principal. Each boarding pupil must be provided with a supply of plain, neat clothing suitable to the season, and also with towels, table nap-kins—all marked in the owner's name. When a pupil, not residing in the Seminary, or one not remaining in it during her illness, is sick more than twenty consecutive days, a deduction of one half the charges for the time will be made.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Principal.
Woodville, Miss. Aug 8th 1866. aug25-3m.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.

The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.

TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March.

Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.

Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.

Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.

As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.

W. E. N. MAGRUDER.
Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE

HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,

REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.

Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.

Next annual term opens first Monday in September.

For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.

Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A. M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.

The Fall Session of this institution will open on the 26th day of September next.

This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattrasses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.

The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:

For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks,	$67 50
Regular Tuition,	25 00
Incidental Fee,	5 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of instrument	37 50
French or Spanish,	15 00
Ornamental branches at usual prices.

☞ All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.

The daughters of travelling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular inition.

After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.

For other information address

CHARLES B. STUART, President,
Mansfield, La.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. GEO. F. THOMPSON, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Millsaps, Rev. George H. Clinton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.

Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.

The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Jan. 31, 1867.

For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. a18f;

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M., President,	Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Maria S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bedclothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September. Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT.
D. G. HUMPHREYS, Prep. Board of Trustees.
jy14 6m

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE

SUMMERFIELD, ALA.

The next scholastic year begins Monday, Oct. 1st, 1866. A quarter of a century in successful operation, with hundreds of cultivated daughters in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, and under the immediate care and patronage of the Mobile and Montgomery Conferences, this institution can afford and is determined to maintain a high standard of scholarship. Only experienced and skillful educators are employed by the Trustees. Among the recent additions to the Faculty are two gentlemen for a series of years Professors in the State University.

Those desiring really thorough culture for their daughters, will do well to investigate the claims of this institution.

For particulars or a circular apply to the President, Rev. B. K. Hargrove.

A. B. MITCHELL, Pres. Board a18 1m

NORTH, BRUSH & MASON,

Wholesale Dealers in

Fancy Goods,

STATIONERY, PERFUMERY, CUTLERY,

HOSIERY,

Furnishing Goods, etc.,

35 MAGAZINE STREET,

Opposite the St. James Hotel, New Orleans, La
aug25 1y

CHAS. H. CHURCHILL. PETER G. TAYLOR.

HARDWARE AND GUNS.

TAYLOR & CHURCHILL,

(Opposite St. James Hotel,) No. 20 Bank Place, New Orleans, La.

41 MAGAZINE STREET, and 20 BANK PLACE, (Opposite St. James Hotel,) No. 20 Bank Place, New Orleans, La.

IMPORTERS,

DIRECT

We have in stock, and are constantly receiving some choice patterns of English and American Table and Pocket Cutlery, to which we invite the attention particularly of country merchants. Also, a large stock of Trace, Ox and Log Chains, English and American Planters Hoes, Anvils, Vices and Bellows; Scales, manufactured by the Novelty Iron Works; Files, English and American.

COTTON AND WOOL CARDS, NOVA SCOTIA GRIND STONES, PLOWS.

Hall & Speer's Peacock Plows, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; Hall & Speer's Cast Valley Plows, Nos. 1 & 2; King Carry (wood mould board) Plows.

SAWS, TIN WARE, AXES.

GUNS, NAILS, HOLLOW WARE.

Of all patterns and brands. All the above is offered for sale at the lowest market quotations. Orders from the country are respectfully solicited by TAYLOR & CHURCHILL, 41 Magazine street, and 20 Bank Place, opposite St. James Hotel. Established in New Orleans without intermission, by the present senior member of the firm, in 1832.

W. H. HENNING & CO.,

Grocers and Commission Merchants,

95 and 97, CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Offers to Families, Planters and Traders a full stock of Fancy and Staple Goods, consisting in part of

CHAMPAGNE,

BRANDIES,

WHISKIES,

CLARET,

CORDIALS, Etc.

Also, a large lot of Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Pork, Beef, Bacon, Salt, suitable for Plantation supplies,—all of which will be offered at the Most reasonable Rates.

☞ Country orders will receive the most careful and prompt attention.

W. H HENNING & CO,
n25 6m 95 & 97 Camp street; New Orleans

SOUTHERN SHOE MANUFACTORY,

DRAKE & MARKHAM,

Manufacturers of

Men's, Boys', Ladies', Misses' & Children's

BOOTS AND SHOES,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

No. 56 Camp Street, New Orleans.

We call the attention of the public to our extensive stock of fine custom-made Gents' Boots and Shoes, for Gents, Boys, Youths, Ladies, Misses and Children, made of the best leather in stock, by skilful workmen.

We design furnishing goods that combine elegance with durability, at a less price than common goods are usually sold for in this city.

OUR, LAST-FOR-EVER BOOTS!

Every man in this State should have a pair of our Last-for-ever Boots. They are warranted waterproof, and to last one year, or the money returned.

Our stock of Family and Plantation Shoes is the best that can be made.

One pair will outwear any three pairs bought at auction. Country Merchants will do well to make a note of this.

We have better goods and sell them cheaper than any house in Louisiana.

Orders filled at ten per cent. on the cost of manufacture.

All goods warranted to satisfy, or the money to be returned. Planters will instruct their commission Merchants to buy their negro shoes of us.

DRAKE & MARKHAM, 56 Camp street.
aug16 1y

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY,

Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,

Of the late Firm and Successors to

COFFIN & CO.,

102 & 104 East Second st. and

Cincinnati, Ohio,

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and hung with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent upon application.

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, Usual and Carondelet streets, entrance Carondelet. This institution is mainly designed to o qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. This is an institution for private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have not completed their education, can here speed fly perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 1-4, or address

f3-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles street, corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no coaching from books.

Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law, English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages, Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics, Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.

For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address

f3 1y GEO. SOULE, L. L. D.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD,

Established, August, 1861.

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January, 1866.

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET,

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all persons desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURE to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING BOOTS AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

C. E. CATE & CO.
fah17 18 Camp st., N. O.

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St. Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams' Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons' Type. sep7-1

J. B. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS

JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.

Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans. ap14 1y

JAMES SYME,

Wholesale Druggist

139 CANAL STREET, (Touro Buildings,) NEW ORLEANS.

Importer and Dealer in FRENCH, ENGLISH, AND AMERICAN

DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS,

DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES,

Fancy Goods and Perfumery,

Surgical Instruments,

Also—

Medicine Chests and Medical Saddle-bags.

aug25 1y

A. D. GRIEFF,

Wholesale Grocer,

COMMISSION MERCHANT, AND DEALER IN SOUTHERN AND WESTERN PRODUCE,

48, 50 and 52 Old Levee st., corner Bienville st.,

aug25 6m NEW ORLEANS.

A. B. GRISWOLD. W. M. GOODRICH

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,

Corner of Canal and Royal streets,

[Late HYDE & GOODRICH],

Established in New Orleans Fifty Years.

MANUFACTURERS OF JEWELRY & SILVER WARE,

Importers of Watches, Diamonds, Clocks, Bronzes, Porcelain, Plated Ware, Cutlery, Fancy Goods, Guns and Pistols.

The largest assortment in the South always on hand.

aug25 6m

WALLACE & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, and

PLANTATION CLOTHING,

No. 74 CANAL STREET, AND 91, 93 AND 95 COMMON STREET,

(SLOCUMB BUILDING); NEW ORLEANS.

☞ Sales guaranteed at New York prices.

a18 1y

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 38.
WHOLE NUMBER 604.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1866.

$3.00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE.
OFFICE—112 CAMP STREET.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

OUR GERMAN CORRESPONDENCE.

GOTTINGEN, Aug. 30th, 1866.

MR. EDITOR: When the night was dark and tempestuous, when the billows had with wildest fury raged, no one rejoices more than the poor sailor-boy to see the sun rise early in the cloudless sky. Similarly rejoice the Germans over the restoration of the reign of peace. As it were, a large fleet of German governments had sailed out on the ocean of war; soon furiously raged the storm of ambition and rivalry; here a sail was torn, there a mast was broke, another lost its rudder: now more madly raged the storm,—all is confusion! there are some shrieks!—Thank God! the storm has ceased, the sun of peace has risen.

But what a scene now opens to our view! Many of the crafts which, unconscious of their leaky and rotten condition, quite dauntlessly started out in the fray, have sunk forever. Only homeless sea-birds sing their funeral dirge. Another vessel, Austria, was almost lost: she sank, and continued to sink—almost the water reached the boilers—when fortunately she was run ashore. She barely saved her existence; for all her valuables, her armament, her treasure, and even her honor had gone overboard.

Only one large three decker, Prussia, came out without hurt: nay, more, she gained very great advantages. For instance: Bavaria was about to sink, and applied to Prussia for help. Help was given, but not without the remuneration of a considerable bit of territory, and thirty million florins. So also was Wurtemburg saved upon paying twenty million florins, and Baden upon enriching the Berlin treasury with ten million thaler. Frankfort-on-the-Main was rapidly going the way of all flesh. She too called on the three-decker for help. But it was refused until twenty-five million florins should have been paid down. The money was not to be had. What must the poor craft do? She gave herself entire to Prussia and—was saved. A few other small vessels, such as Oldenburg, Brunswick, etc., were from the outset saved upon taking Prussian pilots, and promising hereafter solely to be managed by the firm, Count Bismark & Co. But, alas! the other vessels went to the bottom. Hanover, Hesse, Nassau, etc., are no more. Though most of the crew were saved, the ships are lost. Howbeit, in a praiseworthy manner, is Prussia now trying to save the fragments, aware of the fact that some of them are very valuable material wherewith to strengthen her own walls and rigging.

When Prussia was thus engaged in gathering the wrecks, suddenly appeared the pirate, Napoleon, in the distance, desirous to secure Saarlanis on the Rhine; but Prussia's captain showed him the needle-gun, and induced him to retreat. Napoleon, in order to secure his dynasty, is anxious to reframe the European governments. Those hitherto existing have always regarded him as an usurper. Not so the new Prussia and Italy.

But no more allegory. Viewing the latitude and longitude — the vastness of the concluded struggle — the mind is filled with admiration at the Prussian brilliant success. Exceeding alacrity and promptness, characterized every Prussian division. "Stonewall" Jackson's programme of rapid locomotion was also that of Gen. Moltke, King William's chief of staff, and who is reported to have planned all the undertaken campaigns. It is certainly remarkable that after this war not one Prussian officer is charged with neglect of duty. Every one and all were so thoroughly prepared for their tasks, operated in such perfect harmony with each other, were so thoroughly actuated by the same spirit and motives as was never exhibited by any other large army.

And poor Benedek — the German McLellan; he stands arraigned before a court martial to account for the sins—of his Emperor. Francis Joseph is too soft for these boisterous and soul-trying times. Perhaps he will at last learn that worth and not birth must determine whether a man is qualified to hold a high position in the army. In vain had Benedek tried to convince him of this ere now.

Perhaps many of your readers are not aware of the fact that the late war was to a great extent at the same time a war between Reform and Roman Catholicism. Since the "Thirty-Years-War" has the latter been sedulously trying to maintain its mastery over the fatherland. Of course, Austria with its Concordat was its base of operation. It is an obvious truth that for the last century all the German minor governments, no matter whether their respective monarchs were Protestants or not, managed their ecclesiastical affairs in such a manner as the Pope could not have desired ever to be altered. E. g., in the Kingdom of Hanover, whose king and inhabitants are exclusively Lutheran, the most bigotted religious intolerance was hitherto pertinaciously adhered to. This was all the result of Austria's influence.

Very different it was with Prussia and the other German monarchies under Prussian influence. Here the people, for nearly fifty years have enjoyed the fullest religious tolerance, enabling Christianity to develop itself to its fullest extent. What true lovers of the Church of Christ could therefore sympathize with Austria or Bavaria, or King John of Saxony, or Hanover in their present misfortune? Their fortune would have been the greatest obstacle to the cause of Christian civilization.

Perhaps it would surprise you to hear that the Berlin Cabinet will not give the right to the subjects of the dethroned monarchs to dispose of themselves according to their choice. I agree with Bismark that wherever Napoleon carried out his reputed programme of "suffrage universal," it was in every instance a mere comedy. And besides, as a general thing the Germans are not sufficiently practical, and were, through the particularism flowing from the policy of the former "Bund," disqualified as to be allowed by ballot to determine whether they will be Prussians or not.

Vale!

J. B. A. AHRENS.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

WEARING MOURNING.

The fashion of wearing mourning costume is of ancient date and wide extent, and great variety of expression. The European races, whether at home, or in the countries they have colonized, wear black as their mourning dress, as emblematical of the darkness of death. The Chinese wear white to express their idea of the purity of the dead. The Egyptians wear yellow to express the blight of hope as seen in the sere and yellow leaf. The Ethiopians wear brown as an emblem of the dust to which the dead have returned, while the Turks wear blue, as indicative of the home in the skies whither the dead have gone to dwell.

The custom of wearing mourning may be too firmly established, and the rule of fashion too arbitrary and unyielding, to encourage the hope of overthrowing or abolishing it, and it may seem a useless labor to write on such a theme, but I feel impelled to utter my convictions in relation to it.

I dislike the fashion because it is oppressive, and oppressive to a class least able to bear oppression. To illustrate, a father sickens and dies; his family perhaps are dependent on his exertions for their support, his accumulations may be small, nothing perhaps beyond his salary or wages. His sickness had its expenses in drug and medical bills—these added to house rent, housekeeping, and to the undertaker's and burial expenses have exhausted all their money, perhaps run them in debt. With the death of the husband and father, the income of the family is cut off. The family must now reduce their expenses, and with these many of the comforts to which they have been long accustomed. All this is sad, and sorely intensifies their great bereavement.

But fashion comes to rule with iron and unrelenting rod. The family have purchased their dress suits for the Fall and Winter, but these are not the color prescribed by the laws of fashion; they must purchase dress suits of black. They are not able to purchase these goods without the most serious inconvenience—must, perhaps, incur a debt which they see no near probability of paying. Why all this inconvenience, and additional care upon the hearts of these unhappy people, the weeping wife and almost helpless orphan? To prove that their hearts are sad, and that they feel their loss and mourn their dead. No, no one can doubt that. To prove that the wife respects her husband, and that the children revere the memory of their father? No, there is no reason to doubt their reverence and love. Why then this burden they are so ill able to bear? No reason, but that it is the fashion. Now it may be said—"A suit of black dress clothes is a small matter." So it is to persons in easy and affluent circumstances, but it is no small matter for a poor widow to incur a debt of a hundred dollars, which she sees not how she is to pay. How much stinting, how much toil, and how much anxiety, with perhaps humiliation and oppression superadded, must she endure, all for a mere fashion, that so far as I know has no good reason to be a fashion at all. But so long as people of means chose to observe this fashion, so long must and will the poor be oppressed by it. Let them give it up, then the poor can, and will gladly do the same.

But I have another objection, that while the custom of wearing mourning is intended to express the sorrow of the grief-stricken heart, and to pay respect to the memory of the dead, it is made the vehicle of pride and display. How carefully, how elegantly, how expensively do we express our sorrow! With what a nice observance of the latest, the very latest mode! The idea of being sorry in an old fashioned coat, or gown, why the thing is preposterous! Then after we have been sorry in the deepest black, and the latest fashion for a certain number of months, we must inform our acquaintances, by half mourning, that our sorrow has much mitigated, that our grief has nearly subsided. Then another step, and only some little edgings and slight traces remain to tell that we once were sorry, but are now scarcely sorry at all.

I object, again, because this fashion is too often made to express what we have reason to believe the parties do not feel. Look into that gay reunion, and see the merry flirting dancing crowd, many of them in deep mourning! Dress and demeanor how contrasted!

See that gay, ogling, flirting widow; see that old widower in deep black, see how with dyed hair and whiskers he tries to look young. How gallant? How he smiles and strives to make "December as May." Now is not all this absurd? Ought such a custom to be maintained? It is told of a French innkeeper who lost his wife on Monday, married on Tuesday, and appeared with his bride at the funeral on Wednesday in deep black. This is an extreme case, but do we not see much in the same direction, not so prompt, not so far along, may be, but in spirit the same.

This fashion would seem to express some want of resignation, as well as an ostentatious display of our grief. I have always thought there was some force in the Quaker's remark to a lady friend long after the death of a child, yet still in deep black. "I see thee has not forgiven God Almighty yet." Domestic sorrow is in my apprehension, too deep and too sacred for public notice and ostentatious display. It looks strange that we should endeavor to blend grief and pride, gaity and sorrow; yet such we all know is the case.

From conviction of its impropriety the writer has never yet worn mourning, and without a great and unexpected change in his views, never will. W.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

COL. THOS. C. BILLUPS.

Sorrow and mourning mantled many faces in our community, at the sad announcement of the death of this truly great and good man; which occurred at his residence in Columbus, Miss., on the 3rd of August, after a few days illness, in the sixty-third year of his age.

He was a native of Oglethorpe County, Georgia, and was educated, I think, at Franklin College, same State. He married Sarah A. Moore, Feb. 25th, 1823, than which a more suitable union was never formed. He joined the M. E. Church, at a camp meeting held in the neighborhood of his residence, Oct. 1825. The venerable Dr. L. Pierce, then in the zenith of his ministerial glory, contributed largely to his religious movements. He returned home from the camp meeting and commenced prayer in his family. Some months after this time, at the place where he was accustomed to retire for private prayer, he was powerfully converted to God. In the ecstacies and rapture of his first love, his excellent wife met him, and she too was instantly filled with the assurance of faith and joy.

He moved from Georgia, and settled in Noxubee county, Miss., in 1836. There he buried the companion of his youth. He was married a second time to Miss F. A. Swoop, of Courtland, North Alabama, Sept. 13th, 1847, with whom he lived happily till his death. He left five children, one of whom by his last marriage, and a number of grandchildren. His family and a large circle of friends mourn their irreparable loss, but they sorrow not as others who have no hope, for his life and death both demonstrate the power of Divine grace, and give indubitable proof that he has gone to the blissful haven prepared for all the followers of Jesus.

The writer enjoyed an intimate acquaintance with the social and religious character of the deceased from early manhood, and can testify that for strength of will, firmness of purpose, and consistency of life, he has not known his superior. System and order, in every day business, were prominent traits in his character. A place for every thing, and everything in its place, was his motto; and the maxim, do everything exactly at the time, he strictly observed. Hence, his many engagements and large business were met, and carried smoothly forward, without being hurried or driven by them. He was a model for young men. Religion was first in time, in place, and in importance, hence success crowned all his labors. By his superior judgment and energy he amassed a large fortune, but this did not divert his attention from the great interests of eternity. He loved the church most sincerely, and was always ready to contribute to her prosperity, with his time, talents, and property. He aided by his zeal and liberality, in the erection of a number of houses for the worship of God. The elegant and spacious church in Columbus, commenced before the war, and not yet completed, gave him great concern. He desired to see it finished, and have his venerable friend Dr. Pierce, of Georgia, dedicate it to the worship of Almighty God. He abhorred ostentation, and eternity alone will fully reveal all his noble deeds.

He was no mere formalist in religion, but enjoyed a real experience of grace. Family prayer he regarded both a privilege and a duty. Often when indisposed he was assisted out of bed to officiate at the domestic altar, rather than have this duty omitted.

A life thus exemplary we would expect to be crowned with a glorious death, and it was the most sublime the writer ever witnessed. He was not merely resigned to death, but his death chamber was like the vestibule of heaven. Some hours before he died, he calmly gave directions respecting the dying scene, and the funeral which was to follow:

"When I am dying I do not wish my family and friends to crowd round my bed—be seated and quiet, that I may die easy and in peace. Moisten my lips every twenty minutes with a teaspoonful of water, till I cease to breathe. I wish Bro. Andrews, my pastor, to make a prayer at my funeral, you to deliver, short sermon, and Bro. Shaeffer a few remarks. I have heard funerals. I thought did harm, the subjects were represented as almost perfection. I am not of that class; the most I can say is, I have tried sincerely to serve God—a sinner saved by grace. I am not what I might have been, not what I desire to be, but by the grace of God, I am what I am."

He sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. Never did the sun go down with more majesty and glory than his sun of life declined to rise in an eternal day. God grant that his children may treasure up and profit by his dying admonition, and follow his noble example. The world is poorer that he has left it. The church has lost one of its most valuable members; the country a prudent and patriotic citizen; his family a wise counselor and example; the poor a friend; his wife an affectionate and faithful husband. But our loss is his infinite gain. W. MURRAH.

Columbus, Miss., Aug. 28th, 1866.

The Compensations of Sorrow.

There is comfort in the thought of an order beyond which nothing can pass, into to which each sorrow is adjusted; and in the thought of a Supreme Hand that can mold all things to its purpose, and thus guarantees the stability of that divine order. They are like resting places on the stairway up a gray cathedral spire, platforms on each of which you stop and breathe; and rest and enjoy the widening landscape, and the promise of the view that is to crown the whole, and grow familiar with a feature here and there. So, resting as we pass, in these lower thoughts, we reach the last: that the end of all things is our good. The particular sorrow may hurt, but the drift of the whole is good. And sometimes the very sorrow has wrought us good. We know that already by experience. It was good for our temper to suffer. It calmed, restrained, chastened us, made us less impatient, or fretful, or violent. Trial has been purifying us, from the throng of vulgar, animal desires, from restless cravings, from the stain of passion. It has done good by preventing us from laying hold of the present world, loosening our attachment to it, setting us a little apart from its painted shows, out of its babble and haste. It has strengthened our sympathies with others. We have entered into the fellowship of sorrow. We have learned to feel the common burden. We can comfort, for we know what it is to be comforted. But the most of what we know is by faith. We have not seen or felt it yet. We have but caught a glimpse of the system here and there. If you ever spent a misty day upon the Rigi, you will have seen, through shifting rifts in the lower clouds, the edge of a lake, or the fringe of a wood, or the gray fragment of a town, vague, transitory hints of a great world beneath. And such vague hints are the sum of what we know in part, visions into God's working that we have seen closed as suddenly as opened. We must hold on and wait, living in this as in every thing else, by faith.

"Ready for Either."

Such is the beautifully significant legend that underspans the seal of the Baptist Missionary Union, which represents an ox standing patiently with a plow on one side and an altar on the other. How comprehensive of all Christian duties is the design, as interpreted by the inscription!

Service or sacrifice should be the motto of every follower of Christ. Willing to bow our necks to the yoke, and then to toil through all the years our heavenly Father may demand our labor in the mellow fields or on the rugged hill-sides, or amid the matted roots and hardened stumps and impacted stones of the new grounds, to which we may be appointed, should our hearts ever be; and yet patient under all those delays which may be deemed necessary by an all-wise Providence, but which seem so provoking to our zeal, as well as in those severe trials which shake our whole spiritual being, like the many obstacles that jar the sturdy limbs of the strongest ox.

Should Infinite Wisdom decree as rather to suffer than to serve, we should as willingly accept this lot for the glory of God, laying all we have and are, even to life itself, upon the altar. It is lamentable to reflect—and we make the remark without intending to be censorious—how little of this Christian grace is manifested even by those who profess the religion of the meek Nazarene. Great trials, it is true, we sometimes withstand with commendable courage and fortitude; but when called to descend into the dark and rugged passages of the strait and narrow path that lead through the wilderness, strewn with sharp, angular pebbles which pierce our feet, and obstructed by prickly brambles which lacerate our quivering flesh—in other words, when we meet the petty annoyances of life, what fretfulness we are apt to indulge!

God help us to temper zeal with patience, and to animate meekness with activity, so that, come toil or sacrifice, we may ever be "Ready for Either."

Strong Men.

Strength of character consists of two things, power of will and power of self-restraint. It requires two things, therefore, for its existence, strong feelings, and strong command over them. Now we all very often mistake strong feelings for strong character. A man who bears all before him, before whose frown domestics tremble, and whose bursts of fury make the children of the household quake, because he has his own way in all things, we call him a strong man; it is his passions that are strong; he, mastered by them, is weak. You must measure the strength of a man by the power of those that subdue him. And hence composure is very often the highest result of strength. Did we ever see a man receive a flagrant injury, and then reply quietly? That is a man spiritually strong. Or did we ever see a man in anguish stand as if carved out of solid rock, mastering himself? or one bearing a hopeless daily trial remain silent, and never tell the world what cankered his home peace? That is strength. He who, with strong passions, remains chaste; he who, keenly sensitive, with manly powers of indignation in him, can be provoked and yet restrain himself and forgive, those are the strong men, the spiritual heroes.

WEIGHING THE BABY.

How many pounds does the baby weigh
Baby, who came but a month ago?
How many pounds from the crowning curl
To the rosy point of the restless toe?

Grandfather ties the 'kerchief's knot,
Tenderly guides the swinging weight,
And carefully over his glasses peers
To read the record "Only eight."

Softly the echo goes around;
The father laughs at the tiny girl;
The fair young mother sings the words,
While the grandmother smoothes the golden curl.

And stooping above the precious thing,
Nestles a kiss within a prayer,
Murmuring softly, "Little one,
Grandfather did not weigh you fair."

Nobody weighed the baby's smile,
Or the love that came with the helpless one;
Nobody weighed the threads of care
From which a woman's life is spun.

No index tells the mighty worth
Of a little baby's quiet breath—
A soft, unceasing pretrauma,
Patient and faithful unto death.

Nobody weighed the baby's soul,
For here on earth no weights there be
That could avail; God only knows
Its value in eternity.

Only eight pounds to hold a soul,
That seeks no angel's silver wing,
But shrines it in this human guise,
Within so fair and small a thing.

Oh, mother, laugh your merry note;
Be gay and glad, but don't forget
From baby's eyes looks out a soul
That claims a home in Eden yet.

Virginia.

In a recent speech in New Jersey, Mr. Henry Clay Dean, of Iowa, pays the following glowing and beautiful tribute to Virginia, the mother of States, statesmen, and heroes:

"I dare speak one kind word of the oppressed in the very teeth of the oppressor. Since Adam took possession of Eden, no part of his heritage has given to man such an hundred years of history as that of Virginia, beginning with the public life of George Washington, and ending with the surrender of the armies of Gen. Robert E. Lee. The great orator, Patrick Henry, whose spirit lighted up the first great revolution, and whose mild, sweet voice called armies up the valley and down from the mountains to defend New York, New Jersey, and Massachusetts from the invader's hoof, was a Virginian; Thomas Jefferson, whose great soul encompassed the world and lifted its light upon a benighted age to teach it liberty, was a Virginian; James Madison, who environed our rights by a flame of living fire which the most illustrious periods in the past and present century preserved unharmed—all that was sacred in life and precious in hope—the Constitution of the United States—was a Virginian; John Marshall, whose luminous mind, guided by immutable justice, gave being to a most profound and comprehensive judiciary, the bulwark of American institutions, the marvel of mankind, was a Virginian; Henry Clay, whose commanding majesty of soul drew after him whithersoever he went one full half of the whole moral and intellectual powers of, America, who did obeisance in his name was a Virginian; the Lees, Richard Henry, Arthur Francis Lightfoot, Light-Horse Harry, and his illustrious son, Robert E. Lee, were Virginians; Thomas Jonathan Jackson, the great military genius of the Western hemisphere, was a Virginian. The courts and legislatures and forums and pulpits of every State in the Union, and every government on the continent, have been adorned by Virginians. Their blood shed in noble defense of liberty, has fattened every valley, and their bones have bleached on every mountain from Bunker Hill to the city of Mexico. With such a history and such a race of freemen, Henry Wilson, Horace Greeley, and Charles Sumner would disfranchise this illustrious people, and place them under the tutelage of negroes! Proud, glorious old Virginia, what American with American pride, whether Abolitionist or Democrat, would not rather be Stonewall Jackson, buried in the bosom of Virginia, dead and immortal, than live and be Butler, loathed by mankind?"

Probable Existence of a great Cavern.

It is a well settled belief among many of the most intelligent residents of Lancaster and vicinity that there exists beneath their city and vicinity a vast cavern. The most plausible theory on this point seems to be the following, which we clip from the Scientific American. The writer says:

"The city is located within the great limestone belt extending across the southeastern part of the State, and of all the geological formations limestone most abounds in caverns, many of which are known to be of vast extent. In sinking wells in various parts of Lancaster City, the bottom crust breaks through before reaching water, and the pump is suspended from above by chains."

There are several well authenticated cases in the vicinity of the city of the earth breaking and engulphing farm animals. In two instances men engaged in plowing saw their teams disappear beneath the surface, and only a funnel-shaped cavity remained to mark the spot. Several shocks of an earthquake felt in Lancaster last September, are accounted for by this theory.

Hugo masses of rock breaking from the roof of the cavern and falling into the depths beneath, may cause such a quaking of the upper crust and dull rumbling noise as that which astonished the inhabitants of that day. But one of the most convincing proofs of the existence of this subterranean cavity is the discovery of an eyeless catfish in the waters of the Conestoga, a stream flowing past the city, and supposed to connect with the hidden waters beneath. This fish is entirely destitute of organs of sight, having only small spots in place thereof. In a celebrated grotto of Italy eyeless fish have been found. It is inferred that the eyeless fish of the Conestoga must originate in a similar underground of the locality and escape through the fissures of the rock.

Portrait of the Mother of Bishop Asbury.

The Rev. Dr. George C. M. Roberts, of Baltimore, furnishes No. 1 of the new Methodist Centenary Magazine, published by the Centenary Committee for the National Local Preachers' Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with the following interesting sketch:

Among the valuable pictures in the collection of the American Methodist Historical Society in Baltimore, Md., is the portrait of Mrs. Asbury, the mother of the Bishop. Having heard that such a picture was to be seen in a neighboring city, I went there for the purpose, among other things, of seeing and, if possible, gaining possession of it. After some little trouble, I succeeded in finding the house. The family were all in the country, save the lady who kept the house. On mentioning my name and business, she told me there was such a picture, and that it was kept in a bedroom up stairs. I followed her to the room where it, in company with some others, was. Among the rest was one of Bishop Asbury, of later date than the one in our possession. It seems that the Bishop had this likeness of his venerable mother brought out from England. He deposited it with the forefathers of the family, who have long since passed away. Whenever, in his annual tours around the country, he came to this city, he was accustomed to put up with this family. Every day in which he remained, it was his habit to go to the room where it was and remain there some time—doubtless in prayer, and for the purpose of gazing upon the features of one near to him as life itself, and the living face of whom he was destined never to behold again. It is smaller in size than the portrait we have of the Bishop. She appears to have been an elderly lady, and is represented as having been reading the Holy Scriptures, which lie open before her. Her attention for the time being is attracted by something at which she is looking very earnestly, and with some degree of firmness. It manifests great firmness of character, amounting almost to sternness. I endeavored by every means in my power to possess myself of this picture, but in vain. The family could not be induced to give it up, upon any consideration. My only alternative was to have a copy taken from it, this family readily consenting to this. Mr. Thomas O. Ruckle, our artist, accompanied me subsequently to the place, applied himself to the work, and has reproduced it in a masterly manner. The painting is a much finer one than the original. The only thing that mars the pleasure of our possessing it is, that it is not the original, though vastly superior to it in an artistic point of view. In her last letter to her beloved son, written in 1800, Mrs. A. counseled him with motherly tenderness. None can tell how polignantly he felt when the news reached him at Baltimore of her death. She closed her suffering mortal life on January 6, 1802, aged eighty-eight years, and joined her husband who died some time before. She was an afflicted, yet most active woman, of quick powers and great understanding. Her strong mind quickly felt the subduing influence of Christian sympathy. For more than fifty years her house was open for the preachers of the Gospel, and her heart, in unison with her hands, led her to do all in her power for their relief. Through her instrumentality a great light was lighted in that dark place, Great Barr, in Great Britain. Mr. Asbury says of her: "As a woman and a wife, she was chaste, modest, blameless; as a mother—above all the women in the world would I desire her for my own—ardently affectionate; as a mother in Israel, few of her sex have done more, by a holy walk, to live, and by personal labor to support, the Gospel, and to wash the saints' feet; as a friend, she was generous, true, and constant." Peace to her memory! Peace to the memory of her beloved son! They have long since met in that world of light and glory where the "wicked cease to trouble and the weary are at rest." They were destined, in the order of Divine Providence, to be long separated on earth—he in the new and she in the old world. But now their weary spirits are at rest, and "forever with the Lord." None will wonder, after reading the estimate he placed upon her character, at his turning aside to this room from the toils of laborious life, for an hour every day, when he was sufficiently near it, to look upon the only representation he then could have of her, to hold communion with her sainted spirit, and bow in worship before God.

Doing versus Blowing.

In making a plea for carrying out as well as passing resolutions by a Conference, we heard Dr. Monroe, of the Church Extension Society, tell in substance the following: "I was once a presiding elder and had charge of a camp meeting. One evening, toward the close of the meeting, we were troubled a good deal with persons parading up and down the aisles, walking simply to walk or gratify their curiosity. Statement after statement was made that during service all persons within the space inclosed by the first tier of tents were expected to take seats and be silent; but in vain. The expedient of placing a long board across the most frequented aisle was resorted to and with partial success. I was standing near the plank, directing the comers and goers to seats, when a man of commanding presence, but partially intoxicated, came up, and in guttural words wished to know what that piece of fence was for. 'It is intended as a hint, my friend, for you to be seated and to be silent. I want you to come this way and listen to the preaching.' The man looked up to me, half listening to the voice from the stand, and said, 'Father Monroe'—all presiding elders in my Conference were called father—'Father Monroe, that man there is n't preaching, he's only blowing; there's no use my settin' down.'" The application was, that sometime there is pretense for action, but no action itself. A Conference passes certain resolutions in regard to a certain thing — all well enough in its place, but it's only blowing if nothing beyond the resolves are made. There must be doing as well as blowing, acting as well as resolving, before any object, however good, is fairly possessed of justice.

The Cripple and his Dollar.

A few days ago, I called on an afflicted brother whose limbs have both been paralyzed for many years. Utterly unable as he is to walk, he is still very industrious. When the weather is pleasant he crawls into the garden, and manages to raise an abundance of onions and other vegetables for the market.

When the state of the weather confines him to the house, he occupies his time in reading. The missionary papers are always a favorite with him. I found him fully posted in relation to all our missions, and deeply interested in their progress. When I was about to take leave of him, he stopped me by asking if I were not still acting as agent for the Board. I replied in the affirmative. "I wish then to give you a dollar—it is my rule to give a dollar a year. I am a poor cripple and cannot do much. The dollar I made crawling round on my hands and knees in the garden. But I must help a little; and I won't be any poorer, for the Lord sends it back to me. I give something to each of the Boards, and to every good object that is presented, but it all comes back in some shape or other. The other day I gave a dollar to help buy a bell for your church, and the next day a man called whom I had never seen, to get me to bottom some chairs for him. The job brought me about the same that I had given, and now my onions are all engaged before they are grown." I had not thought of asking him for a cent; but when it was so cheerfully offered I could not refuse it. Indeed, it seemed to me there was a value in the dollar of this poor cripple that I never saw in one before. That dollar, methought, will accomplish something, for surely a blessing is in it. Happy will be the day for the church and for the world, when all the disciples of the Redeemer have such a mind to work, as this excellent but deeply afflicted brother.—Presbyterian Index.

MALIGNANT CHRISTIANS.—Some persons pride themselves on being blunt, or, as they call it, "honest;" but very blunt people do little good to others, and get little love to themselves. The Scriptures recommend gentleness and kindness. There is nothing in all this world of ours half so mean as a vindictive and malignant disposition. Yet many Christians gratify this spirit, and deceive themselves with the idea that they are rebuking sin. Christians should take heed of getting fond of the work of "rebuking." Such "spiritual constables" do a great deal of mischief without intending it. They are in the church what a very witty and sarcastic person is in society, or what a tell-tale is in school, and approximate very closely to that class which the apostle terms "busy bodies in other men's matters." Such Christians come in time to be regarded as nuisances in society; constantly to be avoided, and the little good they may do is thrown away. Our manner must be tender and winning. The nail of reproof, says an old writer, must be well oiled in kindness before it is driven home.

TESTIMONY OF INFIDELS TO THE CHARACTER OF JESUS CHRIST.—Vanina, an Italian scholar, who suffered death for his atheism, frankly acknowledged that he could find nothing in the history and actions of our Saviour, that he could charge with secular interest or design by which to blast him or his religion. Bolingbroke allows that Jesus taught, in all cases, one continual lesson of the strictest morality, of justice, benevolence and universal charity. Paine acknowledges the leading trait of the character of Jesus to be philanthropy. Gibbon records his mild constancy in the midst of cruel and voluntary sufferings, his universal benevolence and the sublime simplicity of his actions and character. Lequine, a French unbeliever, speaks of him as the wisest and best man that ever lived, as a generous philanthropist; as having wholly sacrificed himself to the public good, giving his whole existence to the unhappy, never lying to his persecutors but teaching them virtue. Voltaire and Rosseau both acknowledged him to be infinitely superior to Socrates. Rosseau's memorable words are often adopted: "If the life and death of Socrates are those of a philosopher, the life and death of Jesus Christ are those of a God."

SCARLET FLANNEL.—I inclose a receipt for washing bright-colored articles. It is a German plan, and has been used for some years by my maid with perfect success in all woolen articles: A handful of flour mixed with a quart of cold water, and boiled for ten minutes. Add it to the water you have ready to wash in. The articles will require many rinsings in clean water after being washed in this mixture; but if carefully done, the most brilliant scarlet will lose none of its brightness. If flannel is soaked in cold water before making it up, I never find that it shrinks at all. My plan of soaking it is, to get a washing trough filled from the pump, and in this the flannel is placed. As soon as it sinks to the bottom it is taken out and hung out without any squeezing. It drains itself, and does not lose the appearance of new flannel when dry.

WEEPING BY STEAM.—A singular discovery has just been made in Milan. In one of the faubourgs of that city was a statue of St. Madelelus; which, from time immemorial, miraculously poured its tears on infidels and heretics. After the success of the Italian revolution, it wept copiously. It had happened that the venerated monument needed repairs, and it was necessary to remove the statue. What was the surprise of the workmen to find that it contained a little reservoir of water, which was heated by means of a furnace concealed in the base. The water, in evaporating, rose to the head of the statue, when it condensed and reached to two little tubes of the eyes, when it escaped and ran drop by drop over the cheeks.

M. E. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 6th, 1866.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

To our list of advertisements which cannot, for quality, be surpassed by that of any paper in the South-west, we add the following most responsible houses.

Messrs. PERKINS, SWENSON & Co., General Commission Merchants, 48 Carondelet street, New Orleans, and 26 Exchange Place, New York.

Messrs. WALKER & FISHER, General Commission and Forwarding Merchants, No. 6 Carondelet street.

Messrs. HAMILTON & DENNICA, Cotton and Tobacco Factors, and General Commission Merchants, 42 Union street.

Messrs. BANKS, LORING & Co., Cotton Factors and General Commission Merchants, 26 Carondelet street.

Messrs. WARREN, CRAWFORD & Co., Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants 45 Carondelet street.

Messrs. SHEPARD, ABBOTT & Co., Crockery, and Glass Ware, Plated Ware, house furnishing goods and kitchen ware, 55 Camp street.

Messrs. HORTER, PETERSON, & FENNER Manufacturers of Saddles, Harness and Trunks, importers of saddlery and coach hardware, 7 Magazine street.

PRICE'S PATENT TEXAS TONIC, Mr. T. K. Price, 59 Camp street, 3rd floor, up stairs. What shall we say of this most venerable Patent Medicine! It is more widely known than our own Advocate. Some families, with whom we are acquainted, lay it in annually, with other family stores, and do not feel entirely safe without it. It corrects bad humors of the system, "purging all meats." The certificates which appear in the advertisement are veritable, and we vouch for the high respectability of the writers.

Messrs. BROWN & FINNIGAN, successors to D. GENELLA. 112 Camp street, ground floor. Dealers in Crockery, China, and Glass-ware, Tin planished and Japanned ware.

J. P. WILSON, Printer, 77 Magazine street, does good work at cheap rates.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

INTRODUCTION OF PROTESTANTISM INTO MISSISSIPPI AND THE SOUTHWEST. — We notice that the articles which appeared first in this paper from the pen of the Rev J. G. Jones, are about to be published in book form. We are sincerely glad of it. We do not know of a more faithful and readable contribution to the history of early Methodism in this country. The author has the rare art of recollecting accurately those events and sayings of men which have crossed the field of his own observation during a long itinerant life.

THE LAND WE LOVE.—Mr. James A. Gresham, of 92 Camp street, has laid on our table, "The Land we Love" for Sept. edited by Lieut. Gen. D. P. Hill, (late of the C. S. Army,) and published at Charlotte, North Carolina. It is much such a Looking Magazine, as the "Blackwood's." It is edited with ability, and filled with, interesting and instructive articles. Terms, Three dollars a year in advance.

Lay Representation Endorsed.

MR. EDITOR: At the Fourth Quarterly Conference, for Pleasant Hill Circuit, Shreveport District, held Sept. 17th, 1866. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we heartily approve the action of our late General Conference, in regard to the introduction of Lay Representation, and the change of the name of the Church.

Resolved, That we respectfully recommend the Louisiana Annual Conference to concur in the same.

Resolved, That these resolutions be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

S. D. CHAPMAN, Sec'y.

Beulah, La., Sept. 17th, 1866.

BISHOP PIERCE passed through Macon last week, the Southern Christian Advocate informs us, on his way to his Conferences beyond the Mississippi. He is in excellent health and fine spirits. He has been preaching far and wide in Eastern Georgia, and reports the Churches in a flame of revival, and that the religious prospects of the country go far to neutralize the gloom that the failure of the crops and the political aspect of affairs would induce, but for the goodness of God in blessing His people.

The Rev. John F. Berry, a minister of the M. E. Church, and a member of the Georgia Conference, was killed by lightning, at his residence in Ellaville, on Wednesday last. Mr. B. was in charge of the Ellaville Circuit, and had just finished a discourse to his congregation and returned home; scarcely had he taken his seat when he received the stroke of lightning, which killed him instantly. Death found him ready for the summons.—Sumter Repub.

THE QUALIFICATIONS OF A GOOD PREACHER.

Dr. Horace Bushnell, of Hartford, Conn., delivered the annual address before the Porter Rhetorical Society at the late Andover Common Convert. His subject was preachers. He began by saying that there never was a time when talented preachers were more in demand than now.—Even the small villages and sparsely populated towns all want men of talent. And yet there is a great obscurity resting over the public mind as to what constitutes genuine pulpit power. The object of the speaker was to find the unknown factors which enter in to make a man a great preacher, and thus help to solve the problem. According to the general idea, he says, there are four talents needed in the ministry: (1) high scholarship, (2) metaphysical training, (3) rhetoric, or what is called style, (4) voice and manner. There was no intention, of course, to bring dishonor upon these qualifications, which he admitted to be of the utmost importance. These may be called the four canonical talents deemed necessary in the candidate for the pulpit. But a man may have high scholarship and be no preacher; he may be an acute metaphysician, and be no preacher; he may have what is called a finished rhetoric, and be no preacher; he may have a fine voice and manner, and yet be no preacher; and hence that a man may have all these, and still be no preacher. Dr. B. undertook to find the unknown factors which go to make one a man of commanding influence in the pulpit. These we give in the order of his discourse. 1. A capacity for growth. 2. Individualizing power. 3. A great soul. 4. A great conscience. 5. Faith in unseen things. 6. A certain atmosphere. 7. Administrative ability—the power to get on.

These qualities may be sufficient to constitute a "man of commanding influence in the pulpit," but a New Testament minister—the man with the Spirit of Power, in the pulpit and out of it,—the man of word and work—presents, to our mind, a somewhat different assemblage of gifts and graces. We start with the foundation of all true ministerial character, that impression of the Holy Spirit upon his mind which draws him away from every other pursuit, and shuts him up, by a holy necessity, to the work of preaching—"separates" him, to use the Apostle's own word, "unto the Gospel of God." Under this generic whole, we place the several constituent elements of a preacher; because, in a call to preach, the Holy Spirit does not find the desired qualities in the man, but brings them to him: 1. Faith, the power, supernatural of course, of apprehending the invisible things of God. Always and strongly impressed with the "end of all things;" to him the things seen are only "perishable things."

2. The power of affecting men's consciences, "commending himself to every man's conscience in the sight of God" by "the manifestation of the truth." How a man may do this we care not—with grammar or without; in his own or his Lord's atmosphere; roughly or gently; by speech, by action, by tears, by love unfeigned, by argument, by cheerfulness or sorrowfulness, by a certain pureness speaking louder than words, by poverty, by good report, or by gray hairs made glorious in a long life of consistent piety; the manner is nothing, that which is done is all that we care to notice.

3. The capacity of growing up into Christ. This man is a leader, an angel, an ensample to the flock; he must need therefore move on. The common law of the Spirit of life is motion. Whatever others believe, he must receive and experience the sanctifying influences of the Holy Ghost until the whole soul is "leavened." He must know what it is to glorify God in his body and spirit—to preach not himself but Christ Jesus the Lord; to think of self, if at all, only as the "servant" of God's people. "for Jesus' sake." Ordinary depths and heights of Christian experience cannot suffice for this. He must study over it, and settle the matter at whatever point the Spirit of God contemplates leaving him, whether a master over sin, or only a protesting servant of sin. This battle he must push until the gates are stormed. "Let him that readeth understand." This growth will imply and involve growth in intellect, in knowledge, and in all godly arts of saving souls, because increased devotion to God will develop greater application and industry in every department of a man's life.

4th. The power to get on, as Dr. B expresses it. This "getting on," the concrete expression of graces manifold, is the body of the soul of preaching. Sedentary zeal may have its uses, but from the days of Paul until now, preaching to the people is an highway, market-place, out-door business. Wisdom "standeth in the top of high places, by the way, in the places of the paths. She crieth at the gates, at the entry of the city, at the coming in at the doors." Amid the stir and jostle of this world, the minister of God must put forth his voice. If we do not place this as the prime quality of a preacher, we do affirm that without it a Methodist preacher drives heavily. Polish, and spirituality, and indomitable active zeal, are the three perfecting parts of an Itinerant. But if we must choose, let us have the second and third rather than the first and second.

5th. The power to rebuke must enter into the composition of this high character. In this the old Methodist preachers excelled. We need not name them; but recollect how, in earliest youth, this sterling virtue awed us into veneration as we listened to those "sons of thunder."—Never was there a grace more apostolic, for in the highest sense grace it is. "It was the characteristic of Chrysostom. The splendor of his pulpit power descends to us with peerless lustre. He is speaking, for instance, upon the "Atrocities and Evil Effects of the Stage:" "For even all the mire that is there poured out for you, by the speeches, by the songs, by the laughter, ye collect and take every man to his home, or rather not to his home only, but every man into his own mind. And what again is the applause—what the tumult, and the satanical cries, and the dovilish gestures? The women, their heads uncovered, stand without a blush, discoursing with a whole people, so complete is their practice in shamefulness; and thus pour forth all effrontery and impurity into the souls of their hearers. And their one study is to pluck up all chastity from the foundations, to disgrace our nature, to satiate the desire of the wicked demon.—Yea and these use both foul sayings and gestures yet fouler; and the dressing of the hair tends that way, and the gait, and apparel, and voice and flexure of the limbs; and there are turnings of the eyes, and flutes and pipes, and dramas, and plots, and all things, in short, full of the most extreme impurity. * * * What excuse, then, can we have, after all this, we the citizens of Heaven and partners in the choirs of the Cherubim, and in fellowship with the Angels, making ourselves, in this respect, worse even than the barbarians, and this when innumerable other pleasures better than these are within our reach?"

St. Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, who was martyred A. D. 258, and preceded Chrysostom nearly one hundred years, has also given a brilliant example of this pulpit grace. He is upon the "Signs of Penitence." "Are we to think that he makes lamentation with his whole heart, with fasting, weeping, and mourning, who from the first day of his sin, resorts daily to the promiscuous Baths, who fattening on rich repasts, and swoln with more abundant dainties, respires the unwholesome relics of yesterday, and never gives share of his meat and drink for the necessity of the poor? Or is she weeping and lamenting, who can find loisure to robe herself in precious raiment, without considering that robe of Christ which she has lost, and to take to her costly ornament and elaborate necklaces, never weeping at the forfeiture of her divine and heaveuly adorning? Naked thou art, though garbed in foreign draperies and silken robes. Now at least desist, in this time for sorrow, thou who stainest thy hair, and thou who edgest thine eyes with a painted line of black, now at least wash thine eyes clean with tears."

Isaac Taylor says that "to keep in full activity the POWER OF REBUKE demands qualities of a rare sort. * * * To speak in modesty, tenderness, and power of the approaching doom of the impenitent is a matter which must be left to those whose spirits have had much communion with the dread majesty on high. As the punishment of sin springs, by an ineffable harmony, from the first principles of the Divine nature, and infringes not at all upon benevolence, so must he who would rightly speak of that punishment, have attained to a more intimate perception of the coincidence of holiness and love than language can convey."

REV. C. K. MARSHALL.

We give below part of a well deserved tribute to the service of this true itinerant philanthropist, by one "who witnessed his labors," which appeared in the columns of the Vicksburg Herald of the 22nd ult:

The smoke of battle had hardly been dispelled, the precious blood shed at Manassas, (shed alas! in vain,) had scarcely grown cold on the soil it consumed, before this true and gallant soldier of the cross was at his post. Those who had the honor to serve in the army of Virginia, then called the "army of the Potomac," in 1861, do not require to be reminded of the wretchedly deplorable hospital arrangements for the sick and wounded of our gallant army—the "boys," blessings on them! The most of them young, fresh from schools, work shops and counting-rooms, and all were raw and unnured to the hardships as they were strangers to the novelties of camp life. It was not strange, therefore, that many fell sick. And now, when the hardships and dangers have passed, he ventures to affirm that not one of the bronzed and scarred veterans yet surviving, can recall, without a shudder, his first experience in hospital life.—With his ever active and his restless mind continually at work, Dr. Marshall saw the evils, and determined to remedy them. With the indomitable energy and force which forms so striking a characteristic of the man, for him to determine was to do! Before the plans, with which his busy brain were teeming, could have been revolved through the mind of an ordinary man, he was in Richmond, closeted with Dr. Moore, Surgeon General of the Army. The result was rapid, and the whole army soon saw, with delight, "State hospitals" springing up in all directions, under his magic touch. They were ably managed, worked in perfect harmony with the medical staff of the army, and in a brief period of time, order was worked out of the profoundest chaos, and blessings dispensed on every hand. This great good accomplished, his tireless energy soon found another vent of its expansion, another evil to be worked out. With him, to see was to resolve; and if the means with which to work were not found ready and at hand, he immediately, with the aptitude characteristic of all great minds, set his wits to work and created them!

Those who served in Virginia in 1861, will not soon forget the anomalous condition in which many things were found. The hearts of our people went gushing out to the gallant boys in grey, and each seemed to be vieing with the other to see who should do most for the soldiers. In every household in this broad land (of ours, as we then thought,) busy brains and busy hands were engaged in preparing something that should cheer and comfort the dear boys whose homes were dark without the sunshine of their eyes, and from each went forth the weekly contribution, and the weekly message of love from the fond ones there, to the idolized "Willies," and "Harrys," "Toms," and "Charlies," who were far away on the green hills of Virginia, battling for all that is dear and sacred on this earth, and bearing aloft, proudly, defiantly, in the very faces of their foes, the "bonny blue flag," which venerable, gray haired men of God had blessed and prayed for, and which mothers and sisters had wept over and bedewed with their tears! I have often stood near the railway when the cars were arriving at Manassas, and seen long, heavily burthened trains come in, one after another, filled, literally to repletion, with those love offerings of every thing that woman's ingenuity could devise, or woman's fairy fingers fabricate, and as I gazed upon them and thought of the devoted constancy, the unselfish and unfaltering courage of those fair and fond donors, in their far away homes in the then peaceful and untroubled west, I am not ashamed to say that I found my voice grow choked and hoarsey, and my eyes dim with the "spring dew of the spirit! the heart's rain." But while we knew what the kind friends at home were trying to do for us, we also saw how sadly their best intentions were thwarted, and what a small portion of the vast supplies that were sent forward, really reached us. The railroad from Richmond was infested with a lot of thieves who plundered what they chose, and wantonly destroyed what they could not conveniently appropriate. To the unsophisticated there seemed to be no remedy for this gigantic grievance, but Charles K. Marshall thought otherwise; and lo! in three short weeks the remedy was there, a palpable success, and seen by all. Dr. Marshall saw what was needed and with instinctive sagacity and energy that need was at once supplied. He established a "Mississippi Depot" at Richmond, to whose care our people were advertised to send all packages intended for Mississippi soldiers. This was his receiving depot, and at Manassas he built another for distribution. From Richmond he had all army contributions forwarded in locked and guarded cars, while from Manassas they were regularly forwarded by regimental wagons to the several regiments and brigades for which they were intended. System, order, method were established, agents were employed, and the depot system was an instant and perfect success. The crowd of lookers-on saw that what worked successfully for the troops and the people of Mississippi would, with equal success, meet the wants of the troops and the people of the other States, and the result was that a few brief weeks saw depots established and in working order for every State in the Confederacy. The amount of good that was effected by this simple plan, the amount of clothing and other valuable supplies thus saved, thus secured to those for whom they were intended, is absolutely incalculable!

As the war grew more gigantic in its proportions, and the field of operations became larger and wider, so widened and extended the duties of Dr. Marshall. Having successfully organized his system of hospitals and depots for the armies of Virginia, he directed his attention to the wide fields of the west, occupied by Bragg, Johnston, and other chiefs, and from that hour to the last and saddest, when a nation's hopes and a nation's flag went down together in darkness and in blood, there was scarcely a stricken field east of the great river, that did not witness the devoted and untiring labors of this faithful Christian warrior. His hospitals and his agents were everywhere. He visited and addressed every State Legislature, and wherever he went, he received contributions of material aid, as well from the people as from the State authories, and from the capacious fountain of his liberal and generous nature, there flowed perennial streams of goodness and blessings. He bore with him, wherever he went, charity for the destitute, encouragement for the sick and wounded, consolation for the dying, and above all bravo, hearty words of cheer for the despondent! In the darkest hour of our gloom, his voice sang out like a clarion, inspiring the brave, encouraging the timid, and almost converting cowards into heroes! Laboring, preaching, praying by day and night, at all hours and all seasons, he was ever at work, kneeling one hour at the lowly bed of some dying boy, breathing words of consolation into the ears of one who, with a liberal joy, had poured out the precious libation of his young heart's blood in defence of a cause dearer than life; at another binding up the bleeding wounds of some heart-broken wife, mother, or sister, who had just looked her last upon the cold clay which had made the sunlight of her existence, uttering words of christian sympathy to those to whom all this bright, glad world seemed so dark and desolate, his labors of mercy were never ended while aught remained to do.

AN IMPORTANT STEP.

A remarkable pamphlet has appeared in Great Britain, bearing the signatures of many eminent and evangelical Scotchmen, such as Professor Balfour, Edinburgh; Dr. Cairns, Berwick; Drs. Eadie and Fairbairn, Glasgow; Dr. Guthrie and Professor Smeaton, Edinburgh; Dr. Kesser, Wesleyan Tutor, London; John Blackie, sen., publisher, Glasgow, &c., &c.

The pamphlet has four separate sections. The first affirms that "the Bible is its own interpreter." Under this head are five propositions, as follows:

I. The Bible, which is the word of God, and the only rule of faith and duty to men, contains a divine record of doctrines to be believed, and precepts to be obeyed.

II. This divine record is infallible, and has only one true meaning; and, therefore, while all care for the purity of the text is necessary, equal care for the purity of the truth is, if possible, more necessary, the text being only the vehicle of the truth.

III. It is the duty of every man to study diligently and devoutly this divine and infallible record for himself, and he who does so will, from time to time, come to a certain and accurate knowledge of doctrines which he ought to believe, and precepts which he ought to obey.

IV. Whoever adopts or adheres to a false interpretation of any doctrine or precept taught in the Bible, whether secondary or fundamental in importance, though he do so only from thoughtlessness or prejudice, and not from design, cannot but be regarded as blameworthy, and as bringing reproach upon the word of God.

V. Since in every case of conflicting opinions, one of them must be wrong, the existence of conflicting interpretations of any of the doctrines or precepts of the word of God is a great evil in the Christian Church, the culpability of which attaches to the party whose interpretation is wrong.

If these propositions are well founded, the question naturally arises, Has the time not come to form an Association, with a view, as far as available in God's providence, by prayer and every other suitable means, to remove the scandal and injury to which the cause of Christ has been long exposed from the prevalence of conflicting interpretations of the Bible, even among Protestant evangelical communities. Secondly, with the foregoing object in view, it is proposed to hold a conference. A preliminary meeting had been held at Edinburg, and a committee was appointed to prepare a memorial, to be laid before the Council of the British Organization of the Evangelical Alliance. Signatures to the memorial are being obtained, and papers are to be published and extensively circulated.

We append a few extracts from the Memorial:—

"The Evangelical Alliance Executive Council gives expression to truly catholic sentiments, and, at the same time, maintains that real Christian union requires that Christians be of one mind and one accord as to doctrines and precepts as taught in the word of God. It sets forth that there has been much sinfulness involved, not only in the personal estrangement by which the existing denominational divisions have been attended, but also in these divisions themselves. It affirms that where neither party in an ecclesiastical division attempts to justify separation by an appeal to the word of God, the division is groundless and untenable, as it evidently springs from envying and strifes, and not from conscience towards God."

"When a Church allows, and much more, when it sanctions, by its authority, heresy in doctrine, or idolatry in worship, or tyranny in government, separation from its communion is not only lawful, but obligatory."

Further, "separation from a Church is forbidden by Scripture, so long as its terms of communion do not impose upon its members any thing contrary to their conscientious convictions, and so long as they have a constitutional mode of lifting up their testimony against any thing in doctrine, discipline, or government, which they believe to be contrary to the word of God."

Also, "separation from a Church on the plea of conscience towards God is justly called schism, unless the plea is supported by the authoritative teaching of Holy Scripture, recognizing the validity of the alleged grievance."

The Maryland Camp-Meeting Massacre.

This proves to be another Peisistratus mule case. The Methodists of the North had a mass meeting in Eighth street Church, Baltimore, to make the most they can out of this matter—politically. The Baltimore Episcopal Methodist concludes an account of the meeting with the following summary:

"Hereafter perhaps we may explain to the public what seems inexplicable in the conduct of Mr. Lanahan and the ministerial tail who have sustained him. We regard all concerned in this foul business as fairly amenable to public opinion. If in defending truth and decency; if in vindicating our Church, society and State from charges such as never before were made against civilized men, or assumed to be possible, except among savages, we shall be compelled to show the petit value of the clerical character brought to their support, none of these parties can reasonably complain. Whether they shall complain or not, we will only be limited by our sense of propriety. We owe no obligations to public slanderers like these, but to expose and denounce them.

Now, the reasonable reader will ask what was it about? Clearly it was a matter for magistrates, grand juries and courts. Had the magistrates refused to take evidence, and issue warrants? Had any disposition been shown to protect the guilty before Mr. Lanahan and his meeting undertook to threaten the great power of the Methodist Church in defense of the negroes in jail on charge of participating in this riot? Had anybody else attempted in any way to impose or interfere with the execution of the law? Negroes had every defense the white man has. The authorities are all appointees of the party that has had exclusive control of the State for several years. Judges, Sheriffs, the whole staff of justice is in the hands of Mr. Lanahan's friends. What need of this meeting? What did it do? What did it try to do, except to furnish vile, libelous falsehoods for Northern consumption, and win for the chief actor the credit and consequence of a radical champion, in a quarter where such a reputation is convertible into substantial benefits

* * * * * * *

Since our first form went to press, we have seen in the morning's Sun a full report of a meeting of citizens of Anne Arundel county, held at the late camp ground and scene of the riot. This meeting express their indignation at the mis statements of Mr. Lanahan and his followers, and publish in full the testimony taken in the case. We have only time to copy that of Mr. Benson, the young man who was "massacred" at the altar. Ex uno disce omnes. It turns out that he was not massacred, was not at the altar, and was shot by the blacks. This reminds us of Cuvier's objection to the proposed definition of a crab, a red shell fish that walks backward—"It is not a fish, it is not red, and it does not walk backwards."

Milton Benson testified that he was not shot while at the altar; he had been kneeling at the second bench when the firing commenced; heard several shots fired, and being afraid of being wounded, started to go; thinks the shot which wounded witness was fired by the blacks, from the range; has never stated to any one that he had been shot by the whites; witness was shot in retreating, about twenty yards from the altar.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Bishop Andrew, in a letter to the Baltimore Episcopal Methodist, says that extensive and glorious revivals are in progress in the section of country about Athens, Georgia.

A letter from Rev. J. J. Clark, Handsboro, Miss., in speaking of the protracted meeting at Biloxi, says: We commenced our second protracted meeting on the 25th Aug. He that hath "the care of the churches" was and is still with us, laboring in every department 'with the power and the demonstration of the spirit.' We had then twenty four more accessions, and twenty-one conversions. Each head of a family promised to erect a home altar.

Some of the New Orleans Methodists took hold, co operated and sustained the ministers.

A letter from the Rev. S. Hargiss, of the West Virginia Conference, dated Charleston, Sept. 25th, among many pleasant things in memory of his stay in the "Crescent City" as a Delegate to the Conference, says: "In ten miles of this place, during the Summer we have had two hundred accessions to the Church: and in Wirt county, our preacher has taken in two hundred and thirty members. One of our preachers in the Guyandotte District, we learn, has taken largely over one hundred. We have repaired some of our churches and have erected others."

The Memphis Christian Advocate has a letter from the Rev. G. W. Harris, on change of name and Lay Delegation, from which we extract the following pithy paragraph:

"That I might be able to act understandingly, and to reflect the will of the Church in regard to these questions, I have brought them before the several Quarterly Conferences in the Dyersburg District (carefully, and as I think, prudently,) withholding any opinions of my own in regard to them. The result is that I have not found a half dozen men that are not sternly opposed to any change in the name of our Church. And as it relates to Lay Representation, four-fifths of the people are perfectly indifferent about it, while a few declare themselves in favor of it."

REVIVAL IN ABERDEEN, MISS. — The Rev. W. M. Patterson, who has been appointed Assistant Agent of the American Bible Society in North Mississippi and West Tennessee, writes the Memphis Christian Advocate from Aberdeen, Sept. 12th:

There is a glorious revival now in progress in the Methodist Church of this place. Notwithstanding the rain that has been falling, the meetings have been kept up for nearly three weeks, resulting in thirty or forty conversions, and as many accessions to the Church. The membership are revived and at work. It is said to be the greatest revival that has visited the place for many years. The interest is unabated; penitents still crowd the altar. Bro. Lowe, from Jackson, Tenn., is assisting in the meetings, Bro. Kendall, preacher in charge, is an active, energetic, useful man, and much beloved by the people.

Interesting news from the Holston Conference appears in the last Nashville Advocate, besides several notices of revivals in the bounds of the Tennessee Conference, and at McKendry Church, Nashville. A correspondent says:

"Efforts, perverse and persisting, have been made to disintegrate or annihilate our Church within the limits of this Conference. But great expectations have resulted in small realities. Our Conference still lives, and is now prepared to occupy all its original territory. Great success has attended the gospel during the present year. Unusual revivals have visited many localities, and thousands have been brought into the Church. Definite figures cannot be given for other parts of our work; but within the Abingdon District, above 2 000 accessions have now been reported. On some circuits the reports is above 400, on some others 300, on others 200, and thence to smaller figures. Such results have attended the laborers on other districts, perhaps quite as great. The preachers in their various fields have manifested true devotion to the itinerant work. Their work has been done under heavy embarrassments. Some have done faithful and successful work, not receiving from the Church a support amounting to one hundred dollars."

NEWS FROM OTHER CHURCHES.

METHODIST E. CHURCH, NORTH.

Rev. H. Liw, a well-known member of the Michigan Conference, died suddenly on Sunday evening, 9th inst. Having an appointment at Mosierville, nine miles from Hillsdale, the seat of his Conference, he in the evening preached a sermon of more than usual power and unction. While pronouncing the benediction and when in the very act of asking God's blessing upon the people whom he had once served as pastor, he sunk suddenly upon his knees and died, with "Glory to God," upon his lips. He literally "died at his post," triumphing in Christ's Gospel.

Rev. E D Kinney, of Darien, preached his eight thousandth time on Sabbath, August twelfth, and the following Sabbath completed forty years since he began preaching. He has thus preached from a text two hundred times a year, on an average, during the last forty years. During his ministry he has seen eighty-three revivals of religion, in which three thousand souls professed to receive the Lord Jesus as their Saviour. Having recovered his unusual health, he has taken charge of the church on Long Ridge, Ct.

PRESBYTERIAN.

We copy the following from the New York Methodist:

"FINDING HIS FRIENDS. — Among the strangers in the city last Sabbath, was the notable Rev. Dr. Palmer, of New Orleans, who preached in Rev. Dr. Van Dyck's Church, Brooklyn. The latter is the member of the last O S. Presbyterian Assembly, who used his influence to favor the 'conservatism' of the border secession sympathizers. The sermon was a very able one, avoiding all reference to national affairs."

Milton Benson testified that he was not shot while at the altar; he had been kneeling at the second bench when the firing commenced; heard several shots fired, and being afraid of being wounded, started to go; thinks the shot which wounded witness was fired by the blacks, from the range; has never stated to any one that he had been shot by the whites; witness was shot in retreating, about twenty yards from the altar.

The Presbytery of Palmyra, Mo., at its recent meeting, Aug. 23, divided, and two Presbyteries, each claiming the name and records, were formed. The division stands thus: the Rev. Messrs. Leighton, Finley, Steed, Ponge, J. A. McAfee, and Boyle, with Elders Marple and Leslie, go with the Assembly; while the Rev. Messrs. Willis, Forman, Travis and Fuller, with eight elders, are with the Declaration and Testimony men.

Missions among the freedmen are established at Nashville, Vicksburg and Knoxville. Seven male teachers are employed and sixteen female. They are expected to enter upon their duties in September next.

BAPTIST.

The Second Baptist Church of Columbus, Ga., has been dissolved as a church organization owing to the small number and the resignation of their pastor.

The South Western Baptist, published at Atlanta, Georgia, says, "the condition of the Baptist Church in Middle Georgia is truly alarming," owing to a lack of interest on the part of the membership.

A very extensive revival of religion has just taken place at Goshen Bridge Baptist Church, Rockbridge county, under the ministry of Rev. William Jones, the pastor. There were over fifty conversions, twenty-eight of whom have been baptized and others are awaiting the ordinance.

A correspondent of the Congregationalist says, "The Baptist denomination in England may now be said to be upon communion. The churches holding and practising strict communion are, with very few exceptions, in a state of cold activity or gradual decay, and are so few, and so small that they have little, if any, power or influence."

EPISCOPAL.

SYMPATHY WITH DR. PUSEY.—Says the Episcopalian:

There are only two Episcopal publications in this country—The Western Episcopalian and The Episcopalian, in the East, which dissent from the views of Dr. Pusey and his sympathizers. A Southern Baptist paper says:

The Southern Churchman, we are sure, must be added to the number of these dissenters; but even with this correction, the state of the denominational press startlingly illustrates the wrong tendencies of opinion among Episcopalians.

The Episcopal Church was the first Protestant Church organization in the State of Maryland. Its early churches date from the colonial times, and its one or two colleges were among the earliest in the State. The majority of the first settlers were members of the Church of England, and the "succession" of its Bishop has been as regular as could be desired. And yet, with all this, after a century and a half of work, "the Church" number scarcely eleven thousand communicants.

DUTCH REFORMED.

The one hundredth and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Reformed Dutch church at Fishkill was celebrated on Wednesday of last week. The Rev. George H. Fisher, the only surviving expastor of the church, opened the services with prayer, after which the Rev. Francis M. Kipp, present pastor, delivered an historical address. The present church edifice was erected in 1754, and finished in 1790. The steeple, pulpit, etc., were built a few years after. Of the ten pastors who have filled the pulpit during the last one hundred and fifty years, two died in the service and two are still living.

METHODIST PROTESTANT.

One of the possible consequences of lay and clerical conference combinations, has developed in the case of the Ohio Meth. Protestants, as will be seen in the following item:

A number of the ministers of the Ohio Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, recently held a meeting in Sabina, and resolved, after earnest discussion, that they would decline taking appointments the ensuing year unless they were assured a salary of at least one thousand dollars.

WESLEYAN.

The Central Ohio Conference of the Wesleyan church, at its recent session, in Jelloway, Knox Co., Ohio, adopted the following resolution on the subject of the proposed union of the Non-Episcopal churches:

"Resolved, That after a full and free discussion of the subject of union with other Christian bodies, we deem it our duty to adhere with fidelity to our present organization; but should any events occur in the order of Providence, to render a change desirable, we recommend to our ministers and churches to consider with favor the propriety of adopting the congregational polity for their future fraternity and efficiency."

CITY NEWS.

HEALTH.—On Oct. 1th. 15 deaths from all diseases; of these 7 were by yellow fever and 9 from cholera.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—The rush of children to our schools is something marvellous. The schools opened with 12000 pupils. Every room is crowded. New school houses are needed and a considerably larger corps of teachers. Our people, many of them, are too poor to send to private schools, and many have come to appreciate more justly the excellent system of scholarship which characterized them before the war, and is again obtaining under the new management.

CALL FOR A PUBLIC MEETING.—The following call, which will explain itself, was issued yesterday:

J. Madison Wells, Governor of Louisiana, having written an official letter addressed to "Thos. H. Jones, Esq., Arcadia, parish of Bienville, La.," placing the residents of this State in a false position—such as, if not properly refuted, will be likely not only to continue military rule, but to extend the oppression; the subscribers therefore request the citizens of Louisiana to assemble at No. 24 Union street, at 6 o'clock P. M. on Saturday, the 6th inst., to express their opinion on the subject of said objectionable letter. Those from the Northern States, and particularly from Massachusetts, who have lately become residents and embarked in business, are particularly requested to attend, and if any of them have been interrupted in their business or social relations they are requested to come forward and give testimony in favor of the governor's statements, the object of the meeting being to elicit the truth, that Congress may act on the facts as they exist.

W. HENDERSON.	O. ROSELIUS
GEO. W. HYNSON.	SAM'L. BELL.
J. N. LEA,	JOHN FINNEY.
H. V. OGDEN,	CHAS. BARNES.
GEO. W. LEONARD.	A. MAXWELL,
W. B. LEONARD,	M. H. BRONAUGH.
H. CLARK,	D M HOLLINGSWORTH
GEO. RULEFF.	WILLIAMSON SMITH,
HU. LUCAS,	JACOB BARKER.
GEO. A. FREBET,	THOS. J. BECK,
SAM'L. M'CONNELL,	COL. JAS. MANN;
G. M. LEVY,	S. H. LEVY,
J. KOHLMAN,	BOWER & GARNER.

THE MERCHANTS' MEMORIAL.—Telegraphic entelligence from Washington seems to render it certain that the commercial delegates, from New Orleans and other Southern cities, have failed in their efforts to procure a modification of the existing regulations in reference to the collection of the tax on cotton. The reasons assigned are that the attorney general thinks that the cotton collection districts must necessarily conform, under the law, to the districts established for the collection of revenue from other sources, and that the secretary of the treasury thinks that very great inconvenience would result from a change, at this time, in the limits of the districts, when the collection of the revenue has already been begun, and the officers have already been designated under the existing system.—N. O. Crescent.

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

RICHMOND, VA., Oct. 2.—The Assistant United States District Attorney of this judicial district arrived this evening. He announces that no term of the Circuit or District Court will be held at this term. He further states that the November term will go by default, because of the neglect of Congress specially to assign Chief Justice Chase to this Circuit.

All looks like a persistent purpose of Chief Justice Chase to shirk the responsibility of the trial.

Mr. Davis's friends here are moving to have an application made to the State Judges for a writ of habeas corpus. No action, however, has yet been taken in the matter.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. The Secretary of the Interior decided in November last, that persons residing within the States lately in rebellion, and who had taken part in the rebellion, could not be allowed to perfect a claim for patent rights, until they had been pardoned by the President.

The Commissioner of Patents, deeming the decision inexpedient under the circumstances, resubmitted the question to Secretary Browning, who has just decided that as inventors and producers labor for the advancement of science and the perfection of the arts, and as no part of the people of the United States are now in insurrection against the General Government, that the law in reference to the granting of patent rights be impartially executed, and has instructed the Commissioner of Patents to make no distinction with regard to applicants from the States lately in rebellion.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Advices of Shanghae, China, state that the expedition against the pirates of Yong Chow had failed. Two Imperial detachments had been defeated, and two generals who were suspected of treasonable correspondence with the rebel leaders had their heads cut off by the Viceroy.

On the third Monday of this month a nolle prosequi will be entered in the United States Circuit Court in the case of Wm. R. Roberts, President of one of the Brotherhood of Fenians, and an order will be made canceling the bail bond given by him.

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—Charles Sumner delivered the opening lecture of a course before the Parker fraternity this evening. His subject was the Presidential policy. The one man power and Congress.

Cyrus W. Field arrived here this afternoon, and will leave for New York to-morrow.

On Monday evening, October 1, a banquet was given in Liverpool to celebrate the success of the Atlantic cable, and was presided over by Lord Stanley, the Minister of Foreign Affairs. During the festivities Mr. Field's health was proposed by Lord Stanley and drunk amid great enthusiasm.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 2.—It is asserted that Maximilian had sent an order countermanding the evacuation of Sonora, but the French Admiral having embarked all his troops, refused to disembark them.

WILMINGTON, DEL., Oct. 3.—At the election for Judges and inspectors of election, held throughout the State yesterday, the Democrats and Conservatives triumphed.

Newcastle county, the only Republican county, gave four hundred majority for the Democrats and Conservatives, a gain of thirteen hundred on the vote for Lincoln in 1864.

In this city they carry two wards, and gain 156 on the vote for Mayor, a few weeks ago. The Democratic majority is 500 in the State.

BOSTON, Oct. 4.—The National Union Men's State Convention yesterday nominated Thos. H. Switers, of Lowell, for Governor.

The resolutions endorse the Administration, favor eight hours as a legal day's work, and favor a license law for the sale of liquors.

The Democratic Convention subsequently indorsed the same ticket.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—The President has appointed Francis A. Hull, Register of the Public Land Office, and James McGuire, Receiver of Public Moneys at Monroe, La.

By a decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, coffee is held to be liable to a tax of one cent per pound when roasted, and to a similar tax when ground. If coffee is roasted and ground by the consumer the tax is two cents per pound.

The council of Jefferson Davis were to have had an interview with Judge Underwood this week, but failed, for some reason not made public. It is stated, however, on good authority, that Judge Underwood has declared that Jefferson Davis shall certainly be tried in November.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Charles O'Conor, of New York, Wm. B. Reed, of Philadelphia, and J. R. Tucker, of Virginia, counsel for Jefferson Davis, arrived here to-day.

It is believed their object is to make another effort to secure the release of Mr. Davis.

The Paris Exhibition.

An English magazine gives an excellent description of the work in progress on the Paris Exhibition building and ground, containing some items of information not before published in detail. We copy the material points:

THE THREE ZONES.

The first small zone or gallery, which immediately surrounds the central garden, is to be devoted to the History of Workmanship in fact, a retrospective museum of the art manufacture of all nations, from the earliest times to the past century. The second gallery, of considerably larger proportions, is to contain works of fine art, painting, sculpture, engraving, architecture. Next to this, again, is a smaller gallery, for the exhibition of the materials and practical applications of art; in short, all that appertains to the fine arts in any way. These three galleries form one portion of the building, and their walls are of solid stone, in order to exclude as far as possible the dust and noise, which are almost inevitable where large crowds are collected. A considerable portion of these walls is erected, and the forms of the galleries are now clearly marked out.

The next three, or "intermediate galleries," as they are called, are to be devoted to the exhibition of raw materials and ordinary manufactures of all kinds. Two of these are constructed of cast iron, and present no special features.

The great outer zone is the machinery court; or great nave, as it is called, in which are to be exhibited not only the machinery, but processes of all kinds, whether aided by mechanism or dependent solely on the fingers of the workmen. This stupendous hall of industry will be 107 feet wide, 82 feet high, and 4500 feet, or about four-fifths of a mile, in length. In order to have the benefit of comparison, we may state that the principal nave of the Exhibition building of 1862 was 85 feet wide, 100 feet high and 800 feet long. The superficial area of the floor of the former will be rather more than seven times that of the latter.

The great nave, with its lateral galleries, is erected in three sections, simultaneously, by different contractors. In consequence of the immense size of this portion of the building, the engineers who designed it wisely determined to construct it of wrought iron, and every portion of the pillars, roof girders, in fact, all the parts, with the single exception of the window frames, are made of iron plates riveted together like those of a steam boiler.

GIGANTIC PILLARS.

The great pillars are rectangular, about eighty-five feet high, and two by four at their broadest part. They are prepared in the workshops of the contractors, one of whom brings them on to the ground all complete, while the others convey them there in three sections, which are riveted together on the spot. The foundation for each of these pillars is carefully prepared beforehand; an iron shoe of the form of the base of the pillar being firmly secured by masonry set in concrete; the pillar is then raised by means of a crab or windlass, and, when erect, its foot is securely bolted to the shoe in which it is to stand for the next two years at least. There will be eighty-six pairs of these gigantic pillars, each pair being connected by a great curved girder, and by a pair of tie-rods above, which, in their places, look like threads stretched from pillar to pillar, but which are, in fact, one hundred and ten feet long, and nearly as thick as a man's wrist. When finished, there will be nothing between the floor of this grand gallery and its curved roof.

The roof is covered with stout corrugated iron plates, the waves being about twice as wide and deep as in ordinary corrugated iron, and is unpierced, the nave being lighted from the sides. The whole of the spaces between the columns will be filled with light iron window frames, so that there will be a complete clerestory all round, both on the inner and outer side of the nave. The upper ends of the pillars will be masked by iron or wood work, forming a running frieze all round the outside, and decorated with slight ornaments, but the building will not present any great architectural effect; it will be simple in appearance, and in good keeping with the object for which it is intended.

SMALL PILLARS.

In order not to interfere with the description of the great machinery court or nave, we have purposely avoided above any special mention of the lateral portions of this zone or section of the building. But they are extremely important parts of the structure itself and one of them will form a very interesting feature as regards both the appearance of the building and the convenience of the public. Beyond the great machinery court is a series of small pillars supporting lattice girders, with large brackets in all the angles; there are two of these small pillars to each of the great pillars. The whole of this portion is also of wrought iron, and its great object is to give support to the main building and relieve the girders and tie-rods above from a portion of the enormous strain which would otherwise fall upon them; the small outer gallery represents, in fact, the flying buttresses in a Gothic building.

THE FOOD COURT.

The space between the gigantic pillars of the great nave and the Lilliputian pillars of these flying buttresses is to form the Alimentary Court, which will include not only articles of food of all kinds, whether in a raw, prepared condition, but also cooked foods, drinks, tobacco and other matters. This gallery will form, in fact, an arcade all round the building, which the exhibiting nations, each in its own section, may not only show, but also sell, whatever man eats, drinks, or smokes; here, then, will be the restaurants, cafes, taverns, eating-houses, pastry cooks' shops, wine and beer counters, and luncheon-bars, of all Europe, perhaps of Asia and Africa, and almost certainly of America and Australia. Beneath this portion is a range of cellaring nearly a mile in length and about thirty feet wide. The occupants of the Food Court will be charged a fixed sum per metre for rent, and will, of course, have to fit up their own establishments. One of the rules laid down by the Imperial Commission will give a certain character to this part of the exhibition. Each nation will be strictly confined not only to the sale of articles used by its people, but also to its own proper methods of preparation and cooking. Gourmets are already talking of courses of comparative eating and drinking, and critical essays on all the various modes of culinary chemistry.

A PROMENADE.

The ends of the lattice girders already alluded to stretch out into space, as if trying to find a bracket or pillar upon which to rest their arms; no such resting place is to be provided for them. They are not only to remain thus extended and unsupported themselves till the end of exhibition June, but they are to give support to an iron or other roof, and to form, in short, what is called in France a marquise, and thus supply a covered promenade around the whole building. This terrace will be more than twenty two feet in width, and will lead by a gentle slope to the surrounding grounds or parc of the the exhibition. The shops and restaurants at the back will be upwards of thirty feet deep.

The Negro Suffrage Bill.

A contemporary [illegible] and horrible to regard as manifesting conservative sentiments, administers a reproof, to our simplicity, by certain "practical reflections on the constitutional amendment," the main conclusion of which seems to give the authority of that journal in favor of the policy of proposing the "proposed amendment with the ulterior view of augmenting the weight of the South in Congress, by an extension of suffrage in the negro race."

This idea appears to be very cleverly embodied in the following concluding remark or summing up of our neighbor: "The main hope of the South for accomplishing wholesome legislation in Congress is in a coalition of Southern and Western votes on questions in which the interests of the South are identical. In respect to such a coalition both have reason to deprecate a curtailment and to desire an increase of Southern representation."

We beg to dissent from this view. The main hope of the South rests upon its adherence to the Constitution and its own rights—its faithful maintenance of the original from and spirit of our Republican system, and a firm rejection of all such wild, fanatical and dangerous experiments as that of negro suffrage. Whenever it enters upon the dangerous and dishonest strategy of temporary expedients and nominally concessions merely to gain power and advantage, regardless of eventual result, of its honor and of the dignity and feelings of its people, it forfeits the reputation which it has heretofore won, loses that which alone has been left to it, and, which is of far more value than all else, that conscious pride and self respect of a brave, honest and manly race, too proud to submit to degradation even to obtain power and profit. Let that be the course and attitude of the Southern people. Let them scout all "bills," all offers and bribes, which look to the establishment, with their consent, of that most revolting and fatal scheme, of negro suffrage.—N. O. Times.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Later Mexican advices report Maximilian will put himself at the head of his army to fight the Liberals, and that he considers the Empire safe. The garrison at Chihuahua has pronounced in favor of Ortiega, killed Governor Ferreros, and compelled Juarez to fly to El Paso. This news needs confirmation.

A letter from Nevada to Mr. Randall, the Postmaster General, relates the discovery of a mountain of pure rock salt, without any admixture. The mountain is several thousand feet high.

Intelligence from Mexico confirms the report of the safety of the son of Marquis de Montholon, the French Minister, who had been reported shot by the Liberals.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

From the N. O. Price Current.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

The general market, with the exception of Flour and Cotton, has undergone no material change during the past few days. The movement in Sugar and Molasses have been to a limited extent, and transactions in Western Produce save Flour, which has advanced, have developed no material variation; while operations in our leading staple, in consequence of a heavy advance both at Liverpool and New York, have been attended with an unusual degree of animation, and factors have been enabled to establish a further improvement of from 3 to 4c per lb.

COTTON.—Yesterday the market opened with a liberal enquiry, to which the receipt of private dispatches, reporting a further advance at New York, imparted increased activity, and although the meager offerings afforded but little scope to buyers, there was considerable competition among the latter, and sales to the amount of 260 bales were effected, at prices indicating increased improvement.

With the remark that the market is very poorly supplied with the higher descriptions, we now quote as follows:

Low	— to —
Ordinary	33 to 34
Good Ordinary	36 to 37
Low Middling	39 to 40
Middling	41 to 42

TOBACCO.—A few buyers have been looking around, but very little was done, the sales on Saturday and Monday being confined to about 50 hogsheads, of which about 10 or 15 hogsheads were taken for the local trade at full prices. Trosted Lugs, for export at 3½c, 16 light Lugs at 4c, 12 Clarksville Refused at 4½c, and 4 wrappers at 12c per lb. The stock on hand is small, but the assortment is very good and is firmly held. We quote:

	Light.		Heavy.
Low Refused	¾ to —	— to 1½	Currency.
Good do	5 to —	— to 5½
Common Leaf	6 to —	— to 7½
Fair	8 to —	— to 10
Good	11 to —	— to 12
Fine	13 to —	— to 15
Choice Selec's	15 to —	— to 20

SUGAR.—The market is bare of supplies of Louisiana, and the stock on hand of the production of Cuba is small. Cuba Sugar is retailing in store, in boxes, at 12½ to 14c for Nos. 12 and 13, 13¾ to 14½c for Nos. 14 and 15, 15½ to 16½c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17½c for Nos. 19 and 20.

MOLASSES.—There is no Louisiana in market and very little of that of Cuba. What little is on hand is held by a few parties who are retailing it at 60 to 62c per gallon.

FLOUR.—There is a good demand for Superfine, and Single Extra, but the supply is very light, and, as will be seen by our report, and advance of fully 25c per barrel has taken place since last Friday. The quotations now are as follows: Fine $9 to 10, Superfine $11 25 to $11 37½, Single Extra $11 87½ to $12 50, Double Extra $13 75 to $14 50; and Choice Family $14 75 to $15 50 per bbl.

BACON.—There is a good jobbing demand, but little or no inquiry for round lots. Shoulders are held at 17½ to 18c, Ribbed Sides at 20c, and Clear Sides at 21 to 21½c per lb; Green Shoulders at 17½, Bacon Hams at 21 to 22c, and Sugar-cured do at 25 to 26c per lb.

PORK.—The market has been quiet, there being but a light demand for round lots and only a fair inquiry for retail parcels. In a small way dealers obtain $35 25 for Heavy Mess and $29 50 to $30 per bbl for Prime do.

LARD.—The supply in tierces is in excess of the demand, while that in kegs is very limited. The former is quoted at 20c in Prime, and the latter at 21 to 22c for Prime.

CORN.—The receipts have not been so liberal since our last report, and prices have in consequence ruled more in favor of holders. With a fair demand, the transactions on Saturday and Monday included 6000 sacks in lots at 83c for Ordinary Mixed, 85c for Yellow and Yellow Mixed, and 90c per bushel for White. Yesterday only a moderate business was carried on, the sales not exceeding 1500 sacks, of which 800 Yellow and Yellow Mixed at 85c, and 1000 white in lots at 90c per bushel.

OATS.—The greater part of the stock, being in store, and only of limited character, enables holders to dictate their own terms. There is a fair demand, which is being supplied at 52 to 55c per bushel, though large lots will not bring more than the inside figure.

BRAN.—The warehouses contain a fair stock, but the new receipts readily changed hands, on the levee at $1 15 per 100 lbs.

HAY.—The supply in store is amply sufficient to meet the demand, while there are only a few bales on the levee. The sales on Saturday and Monday were confined to 500 bales, of which 250 Ordinary brought at $20, and 250 Prime St. Louis $27 50 per ton.

BALE ROPE.—The market is quiet but steady and firm. We have no round sales to report, but fancy 17 to 18c as the quotation. There is a brisk demand for it in the country, which is being supplied at 14½ to 16c per lb.

IRON COTTON TIES.—The stock is very much reduced, but the demand is active at 11 to 12c per lb.

INDIA BAGGING.—The late arrivals, together with the unfavorable news from the country, and the absence of actual sales, we continue to furnish 34½ to 36c as the quotations for bales.

GUNNY BAGS.—There are but few in the market; we have heard of no sales of any importance for some time. We give 30c a piece as a fair quotation.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.—Choice Northern and Western Butter continues in fair supply and demand. The former is selling at 45 to 46c, and Western at 25 to 35c per lb. The middle figures for both are the rates for the larger lots. Cheese is in good supply and commands 15 to 16c for Western and Northern. We quote English Dairy at 20 to 25c per lb.

HOPS.—There is a very good demand for the new crop, but there are none to be had. Good Western will bring 85c to $1 30 per lb.

COFFEE.—Is in fair demand and the market is very firm. Dealers are supplying the demand at 27½ to 29c per lb currency for Fair to Prime Rio.

STAR CANDLES.—There is a good supply on hand and the demand has been active at 24c for 12 oz, 24½ for 14oz and 25c per lb for full weight. 12 oz me in demand for the country trade.

WHITE.—The supply is fair, and a good demand prevails at 15 to 18c for Louisiana Native, 18 to 22c for Texas ¾ to 4 Merino, 23 to 25 for do ¾ to 4 Merino; 28 to 30c for washed and 13 to 15c per lb for hurry.

HIDES.—Are in small supply, but the demand is beginning to slack, tanners being unwilling to pay the present high rates. Prices are ruling at 10 to 10½c for Green, 11 to 11½c for Kip Skins, 13c per lb for Dry Hides. Mexican Dry Hides command 18 to 21c per lb., and Pelts 20 to 25c per piece.

MALT.—There is but little demand, and we furnish the following quotations for reference. Canada at $1 70 to $1 72, and Western at $1 00 to $1 20 per bushel.

NAVAL STORES.—Are in request, but the market is nearly bare. Small lots of Rosin are held at $4 for No. 3; $4 50 to $5, for No. 2, $7 25 to $7 50 for No. 1, Pitch $6, Tar $3 00 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine may be quoted at 60 to 62½c per gallon. A few small lots have sold at 55 to 60c.

SALT.—A better feeling has existed and prices exhibit an upward tendency. We quote Liverpool $2 40 to $2 60 for fine, and $2 25 to $2 50 for Coarse in warehouse, and $2 15 for the former, and $2 10 for the latter in cargo.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $3 75 to $4 25 per bbl. Apples at $5 to $6 50 per bbl; Onions $1 75 to $2 50, and Cabbages 15 to 18c a piece.

POULTRY AND EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $5 to $6 for the young and $8 to $9 per dozen, for the large. Geese at $12 to $14 and Turkeys at $34 to $38 per dozen. Western eggs are selling at $30 to $35 per bbl.

FISH.—Are in small supply with an active demand. We quote No. 1 Mackerel at $26 per bbl, No. 2 at $23 to 23 No. 3 at $17. Codfish are selling at $1 90 to $ 2 00 per box.

RICE.—There is no Carolina in market. The demand for Louisiana is not active, but owing to light supplies rates remain the same. Choice new crop is held at 14c per lb. Choice old crop is selling in lots of 10 to 20 bbls at 13 to 13½c per bbl. India is quoted at 12 to 12½c per lb.

BEANS.—Are in good request, and meet with ready sale at $7 50 per bbl.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY, }
Wednesday evening, Oct. 2, 1866. }

Arrived since our last: 950 Texas Beeves, 596 calves and yearlings, 193 hogs, 853 sheep, and 51 milch cows.

Sold, 914 Texas Beeves, 486 calves and yearlings, 161 hogs, 858 sheep, and 21 milch cows.

Stock on sale: 953 Texas beeves, 968 calves and yearlings, 123 hogs, 1475 sheep, and 63 milch cows.

Western Beef, choice per lb net	— to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	— to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35 to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20 to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$12 to 20
Hogs per lb gross	13 to 15
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25 to $4 25
Creole Sheep, per head	— to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25 to $5 25
Choice Sheep, per head	— to $9
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80 to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50 to $80
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12 to $25
Yearlings, per head	$ 7 to $14
Calves per head	$8 00 to $15

MARRIED,

On the 30th August, in Baldwin Co., Ala., at the residence of Capt. Kelley, by Rev. J. J. Grace, Mr. JAMES LAND, of Missouri, to Miss SARSHA BRAHAM, of Baldwin Co., Ala.

On the 22nd Sept., in Baldwin Co., Ala., at the Church, near Danley's Mills, by Rev. J. J. Grace, Mr. EDWARD PATE, of North Carolina, to Miss JULIA FOREHAND, of Baldwin Co., Ala.

OBITUARIES.

MRS. ELIZABETH NORWOOD departed this life at the residence of her son-in-law, Gen. Collins, in East Feliciana Parish, La., on the 16th of September 1866, in the eighty-first year of her age. The deceased was a native of Darlington District, South Carolina, and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John and Ann Hodges. She was married to Mr. Noel Norwood on the 13th of May, 1808.

When quite young, sister Norwood became a member of the Methodist Church, and professed faith in Christ.

Her conversion was clear and satisfactory, her soul was filled with love, peace, and joy, so that even inanimate nature seemed to her to praise the God of her salvation. In her frequent conversations with her children on the subject of religion, she often referred to the blessed time when she first began to magnify the Lord, and to rejoice in the God of her Salvation. From the time of her conversion to the time of her death, she was uniformly pious.

Being naturally of a meek and quiet spirit, the graces of the Spirit of God in her, shone with peculiar lustre in the large circle of her family and friends.

The evidences of her love to God, were seen in her ardent love for the Church, for her she prayed, for her she lived. Christians and especially Christian ministers, were ever welcome guests with her, as many who enjoyed her hospitality can testify, and ever those who never saw her face were repeatedly partakers of the benefits she bestowed upon destitute ministers. It was her custom to send to the Mississippi Conference for distribution a box of clothing, the work of her own hands for the needy. Her children arise up to call her blessed, five of them had gone before her to Heaven, and five who survive her, are worthy members of the Church of her choice, may these be faithful till death, and meet their faithful affectionate mother where parents and children never part.

Although mother Norwood had been in feeble health for many years, her death was sudden and at the time unexpected, but not too soon for her. She was ready. When the power of utterance had failed, she was asked by her devoted daughter, Mary, if the Lord was with her, she nodded a most impressive yes, and in a moment entered her rest.

The Lord's "people die well."

J. L. FORSYTH.

Jackson, La., Sept 16, 1866.

Rev. WM. N PEAVY was born in Conecuh Co., Ala., November the 18th, 1827, and died in Monroe county, Ala., Aug. 19th, 1866, in the thirty-ninth year of his age, after an illness of only three days. It has seldom been our lot to be acquainted with one whose Christian life was so uniform and symmetrical as that of Bro. Peavy. At the early age of eight years he joined the Church, and made a profession of religion, and never in subsequent life did he forfeit his church membership.

While quite young he was licensed to preach and admitted in the Alabama Conference, and was ordained Deacon, in 1850, and Elder in 1855. For upwards of a decade of years he served his generation as a faithful itinerant preacher, but finally failing health compelled him to accept a supernumerary relation, with the hope that his shattered constitution would sufficiently recuperate to allow him to return to the regular work. In this, however, he was mistaken, and in 1862, such was the delicate state of his health, that he was compelled to locate. He settled on his farm in Monroe county, Alabama, where he died. His labors for the Church of his choice, and love and influence at his location, from the ranks of the traveling ministry, but he continued faithfully to preach as his health allowed, and many doubtless will rise up in the last day and call him blessed. We never knew a local preacher more punctual and conscientious, in attending to his appointments. To know him once, was to know him always; the same humble, unobtrusive, quiet, good man. Owing to the nature of his disease (congestion) and the suddenness of his death, he was not able to speak in his last hours, but we need no dying testimony from one who in life so beautifully exemplified the truth and power of the Christian religion. "His witness is in heaven, and the record is on high." "Precious in the sight of the Lord, is the death of his saints."

W. B. DENNIS.

MAGIC PRESS.
J. P. WILSON,
BOOKS AND JOB PRINTER,
77 Magazine Street,
oct6 6m NEW ORLEANS.

J. A. BRASELMAN & CO.,
Wholesale and Retail Dealers in
FOREIGN & DOMESTIC DRY GOODS
Possess great facilities for buying goods cheap which enables them to sell below market prices.
☞ Special attention given to orders.
Nos. 586 and 588 Magazine Street,
Corner of St. Andrew Street,
oct6 1y NEW ORLEANS.

BROWN & FINNEGAN,
Successors to H. Genella,
112 Camp Street—Ground Floor,
Dealers in
CROCKERY, CHINA & GLASS WARE,
Tin, Planished & Japanned Ware,
PLATED AND FANCY GOODS.
Families wishing supplies are invited to call and examine goods and prices. oct6 3m

BOOKS! BOOKS!
The Agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, at 112 Camp street, New Orleans, has just received from the steamships George Cromwell and Merrimac, and by the steamboats Mepham and Olivo Branch, ample supplies of Sunday School requisites: Catechisms, Spellers Questions, Dictionaries, Primers, Reward Tickets, etc., etc. Also, Clarke's and Benson's Commentaries, and Hymn Books in sheep and roan.
Address:
R. J. HARP, Agent,
sep1m 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

OPELOUSAS LAND AGENCY.—At the solicitation of numerous friends, the undersigned has consented to become an Agent for the sale and purchase of land in this healthy and much sought after country, above any high water overflow, and where the prospects for crops are so encouraging. He will take very great pleasure in shewing the land to any persons visiting this country, and in giving any other information that may be desired concerning it.
For reference I refer to the Editors of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
JAMES H. HOUSTON,
Sept 4, 1866. Opelousas, La.

E. GIQUEL,
Wholesale and Retail Dealer in
FOREIGN, FANCY AND STAPLE
DRY GOODS.
Also, a large and varied supply of
HOUSEKEEPING and
PLANTATION GOODS,
Constantly on hand, at
126 Canal Street,
sep1 1y NEW ORLEANS.

D. H. HOLMES,
Direct Importation of
FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,
AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.
No. 155 Canal Street,
sept 6m NEW ORLEANS.

S. ANDERSON, PHOTOGRAPHER
And PHOTOGRAPHIC STOCK DEALER,
61 Camp street, New Orleans.
Cartes de Visite,
Ambrotypes,
Pictures on Porcelain,
And every description of Pictures known to the Art.
All kinds of Photographic Materials at the lowest price for cash. sep1 1y

[Established in 1828.]
EVANS' FASHIONABLE RETAIL
Hat Emporium.
No 62 CAMP STREET,
Next door to the Picayune Office, New Orleans.
A complete assortment of the Latest Styles by every steamer, at Moderate Prices. al8 6m

PEET, SIMMS, & CO.,
Importers and Wholesale Dealers in
DRY GOODS,
Nos. 23 & 25 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS
E PEET—N WILLIAMSON
P SIMMS—J BOWING sep25 1y

LOEB, SIMON & CO.,
Importers and Jobbers of
FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,
86 Canal Street,
sept 3m NEW ORLEANS.

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1830.
HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c.
Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.
Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

SPEED, SUMMERS & CO.,
46 Carondelet street, New Orleans,
COTTON AND TOBACCO FACTORS,
General Commission Merchants,
And COMMERCIAL AGENTS. aug25 1y

J. H. CARTER,
Wholesale Grocer,
Nos. 8 and 10 Tchoupitoulas Street,
And 8 and 10 New Levee,
aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

S. M SWENSON, N.Y., late of Austin, Tex. W. M. PERKINS, late of Perkins & Co., N.O.
PERKINS, SWENSON, & CO.,
GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 48 Carondelet, corner of Union street
NEW ORLEANS.

SWENSON, PERKINS & CO.,
GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
20 Exchange Place, New York.
sep29 6m

NAT. H. THOMAS, Late of Alabama.
LITTELL & THOMAS,
FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
For sale of Bagging, Rope and Twine, Pork, Lard, Beef, Flour, Grain, Hay and Western Produce generally.
Sole Agent for the celebrated brand, "Grey Jacket" Flour.
No. 105 Poydras street, New Orleans.
Will give personal attention to the purchase of Merchandize and Groceries for the country. Cash orders solicited. Instructions strictly obeyed. sept 6m

S. W. BURBRIDGE. THOS. D. MILLER
J. W. BURBRIDGE & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants,
No. 100 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sept 6m

Gen. James Longstreet. W M Owen. E D Owen
LONGSTREET, OWEN & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
37 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug26 6m

W. S. HARPER. N. A. THAXTON.
S. HARPER & CO.,
Cotton and Tobacco Factors,
AND GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
No. 81 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

JACOB BURKETT,
GROCER,
And Dealer in Fine Wines & Liquors,
aug5 6m 110 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

CHENOWETH, CASEY & CO.,
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
For sale of Pork, Bacon, Beef, Flour, and Western Produce generally, 53 Gravier street, New Orleans.
sep15 1y

H M WRIGHT. O W ALLEN. J RIDDLESTON (1st August, 1865)
WRIGHT, ALLEN & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
182 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug25 1y

THOS. D. ALLEN, Memphis, Tenn. JAMES M. ALLEN } PERRY NUGENT, } New Orleans
T. H. & J. M. ALLEN,
(Successors to ROBSON & ALLEN),
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
192 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 1y

F F FOLGER. L FOLGER. W H THOMAS
FOLGER & CO.,
Dealers in
Hardware, Iron, & Ship Chandlery,
37 & 39 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
(Opposite the St James Hotel)
Nails and Castings; Hoop, Sheet and Bar Iron; Shovels and Spades; Sheet Copper and Zinc; Plows, Axes and Hoes; Lead Pipe and Sheet Lead; India Rubber Belting, Hose and Packing; Circular, Mill and Cross Cut Saws. aug25 1y

WM. EDWARDS & CO.,
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
27 Camp Street, New Orleans.
WM. EDWARDS.
EDWD. J. GAY. sep15 3m

ROBERT L. WALKER,
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans. ap21-1y

W A VIOLETT. R Y BLACK. S H SNOWDEN.
VIOLETT, BLACK & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
a15 6m 138 Gravier street, New Orleans.

W. H. LOTT, Madison County, Miss. O. W. WOOD, Canton, Miss.
LOTT, WOOD & CO.,
Wholesale Grocers & Commission Merchants
65 COMMON & 46 CANAL STS., NEW ORLEANS.
☞ Maj. G. C. Sebastian has charge of our sales Department. sep15 1y

E A BANKS, Memphis, Tenn. W W LORING, New Orleans. G W VENABLE
BANKS, LORING & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
26 CARONDELET STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep22 6m

R ATKINSON & CO: New York. JAMES HEWITT & CO., Liverpool.
HEWITT, NORTON & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And Commission Merchants,
188 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
☞ Cash advances made on consignments to us by HEWITT, SWISHER & Co., Galveston, Texas. sep15 1y

WILLIAM FELLOWES, JUN.,
(Successor to FELLOWES & Co.)
Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant
156 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
DAN. P. LOGAN, Agent. sep15 1y

OBER, NANSON & CO., New York. LEWIS, NANSON & CO., St. Louis.
OBER, ATWATER & CO.,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
38 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
sep15 1y

R BLEAKLY & CO.,
Wholesale Grocers,
COTTON FACTORS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
Nos. 56, 58, 60, 62 and 64 Poydras street,
Corner Poydras and Tchoupitoulas sts.,
NEW ORLEANS.
All cotton consigned to us will receive the personal attention of Mr. J. F. GIRAULT, (formerly with the house of Messrs Wright & Allen) who is specially charged with that department of our business. sep22 1y

E A HAMILTON, Memphis, Tenn. JOHN L. DUNNICA, New Orleans, La.
HAMILTON & DUNNICA,
Cotton and Tobacco Factors, and
GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
12 Union street, New Orleans.
sep22 1y

L E WALKER, Missouri. C B FISHER, New Orleans.
WALKER & FISHER,
Commission & Forwarding Merchants
NO 6 (GROUND FLOOR) CARONDELET ST., N O.
Solicit consignments of all kinds of Manufactured Goods, and will make liberal advances on same.
GEO. W. WALKER, JUN., late of the firm of Harper, Walker & Co., will give his personal attention to the sale of all consignments to our House. sep22 6m

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans.
W. H. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

A. HENDERSON PEALE & CO.,
Successors to Thos. Henderson & Peale,
Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants
No. 149 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
aug18 6m

J. W. CARROLL. JOS. HOY. CHAS. HARTENDERON
CARROLL, HOY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No. 30 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

C. L. WALMSLEY & CO.,
COTTON FACTORS,
And General Commission Merchants,
No. 31 Perdido Street, New Orleans.
aug18 1y

JOHN G. PARHAM, Of New Orleans. BEVERLY BLUNT, Of Hinds Co., Miss.
PARHAM & BLUNT,
COTTON FACTORS;
Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents,
No 20 Carondelet st (First Floor), New Orleans
aug11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY &

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

Ravens and Mockingbirds.

It was very hard work to get winter clothes for the little folks at Rose Cottage last year. It never had been particularly easy, but after the fall of Richmond, April 3d, it was very difficult to get food. When winter was coming, the little boys began to ask for thick jackets and shoes and hats. Mamma mended the old jackets, and continued to make them look really presentable. But she could not mend old shoes and hats. After awhile the new shoes came; and then the boys looked at their old straw hats, never very pretty, but now rather stained and torn, and they thought they never could wear them to Sunday-school again. It began to be quite a serious affair. So mamma told them that if they would trust the Lord for it, the hats would surely come. He had given them all the other things, and he would continue to provide. And they went away, satisfied and happy.

The next morning while mamma was preparing breakfast, she went to the kitchen door, and there, right over the door-way, was a beautiful mockingbird, which chirped "sweet, sweet," and seemed half determined to enter the door.

"Here, children," cried mamma, "drive this bird away, or the cat will catch it."

But he wouldn't go; he seemed trying to make their acquaintance.

"Why, it's somebody's pet bird," said Charlie. "I will catch it and carry it to the owner."

But diligent search for the owner proved fruitless. As the bird was a trouble and expense, mamma advised Charlie to sell it. It would not do to turn it ont, for it had been raised in a cage, and could not take care of itself.

"Yes, I'll sell it," said Charlie, "and get some money to buy hats for Willie and myself."

So he ran down to the store and found that he could get two nice, warm hats for three dollars.

"Three dollars I must have for the bird, then," said Charlie.

He soon found a purchaser in the market. Then he ran back to the store and got the hats, and hurried home to his mother and brother. In the evening, as they sat talking it all over, Charlie said:

"Mamma, when you told me that God would provide hats for us, I did not know he would send them by a little bird."

"Yes, Charlie," exclaimed Willie, "you know God did once send food by ravens, and I think it's as easy for him to send clothing by a mockingbird."

Counsels for the Young.

Never be worried by trifles. If a spider breaks his thread twenty times, twenty times will he mend it again. Make up your mind to do a thing, and you will do it. Fear not if troubles come upon you; keep up your spirits, though the day be a dark one.

"Troubles never stop for ever—
The darkest day will pass away."

If the sun is going down, look at the stars; if the earth is dark, keep your eyes on heaven. With God's promise a man or child may be cheerful.

"Never despair when fog's in the air!
A sunshiny morning will come without warning."

Mind what you run after. Never be content with a bubble that will burst, or a firework that will end in smoke and darkness. Get that which you can keep, and which is worth keeping—

"Something sterling, that will stay
When gold and silver fly away."

Fight hard against a hasty temper. Anger will come, but resist it stontly. A spark may set a house on fire. A fit of passion may give you cause to mourn all the days of your life. Never revenge an injury.

"He that revengeth knows no rest,
The meek possess a peaceful breast."

If you have an enemy, act kindly to him and make him your friend. You may not win him over at once, but try again. Let one kindness be followed by another till you have compassed your end. By little great things are completed.

"Water falling day by day,
Wears the hardest rock away."

And so repeated kindness will soften a heart of stone.

Whatever you do, do it willingly. A boy that is whipped to school never learns his lessons well. A man that is compelled to work, cares not how badly it is performed. He that pulls off his coat cheerfully, strips up his shirt sleeves in earnest, and sings while he works, is the man for me.

"A cheerful spirit gets on quick;
A grumbler in the mud will stick."

Evil thoughts are worse enemies than lions and tigers, for we can keep out of the way of wild beasts, but bad thoughts win their way every where. The cup that is full of good thoughts, bad thoughts find no room to enter.

"Be on your guard, and strive and pray
To drive all evil thoughts away."

George Alfred Townsend, who was traveling in Europe, saw Kossuth at Paris, and thus describes him: "It is at the Cafe Florian—a man of hairs so white that you do not note their thinness, bowed down and meek and silent, yet very kindly eyed, but never flushed by any period to which he comes, past the young dreams of a grand, free State, but waiting yet; though death seems closer than freedom, reading the journal all apart, so respected that not the busiest intruder does more irreverence than look with mild and loving askantness toward where he sits, alone, aged, very thoughful. This is Louis Kossuth, the man of glory when I was a little boy, the rescued, praised, assisted man, whose thought toward our country is childlike yet, although our warm welcome made him hope too well."

Turnips.

In this country our farmers do not place a proper estimate upon the green or root crops. The cereal crops occupied their attention to the neglect of others. The turnip is by far the most valuable of the root crops. It contains a large amount of nutrition, and as a food for cattle, it is unsurpassed. In producing turnips, the demand for the cereals is lessened and as the cultivation of the latter, generally, is more laborious and difficult than that of the former, an advantage is to be secured by a change in our system of farming. In Great Britain and other countries, the turnip is regarded as an important product of the farm, and it is cultivated on a large scale. In some districts, it constitutes the principle article of food for cattle during the fall and winter. Nothing aids more in improving the condition of cattle and horses than a free supply of good and sweet turnips. While they afford nourishment, they keep the bowels regular, and the system in a healthy state. Many of our most sucessful breeders feed their fine horses upon turnips and carrots in the winter, and when they form an article of food, the animals thrive and look well. Nothing gives such a smooth and glossy coat to the race horse as a judicious supply of turnips. We trust that our farmers will soon learn to place a high value upon the root crop, and cultivate them upon a larger scale than they do at present. —Field and farm

The Pepper Cure for Delirium Tremens.

The greatest difficulty in the treatment of this too frequent and distressing disease, familiarly known under the name of mania-a potu, is to procure sleep, which is the indispensable condition for recovery. We shall not, on this occasion, discuss the relative merits of ardent spirits, opium, digitalis and chloroform, each of which has its advocates. Our object is to call attention to a remedy easily obtained, and of the precise dose of which and its general effects on the system we need not have any apprehensions, if baffled on our attempts at cure by its agency. We refer now to capsicum or red pepper. In a case of delirium tremens treated by Dr. Lyons, and recorded in a Dublin medical journal, a sixty-grain dose made into a large pill, was taken without any difficulty. The immedeate and sensible effects were a burning sensation in the mouth and throat, and a sense of diffused warmth through the stomach and bowels for a brief period subsequently. In less than an hour after the pill was taken, the patient fell into a quiet sleep, and, after two or three hours, awoke perfectly calm, conscious and convalescent. The results obtained by Dr. Lyons in the use of this condiment are fully borne out by the experience acquired, on a far larger scale of observation, in the West Indies and in the Melville Hospital, Dublin. In the records of this hospital not less than from seventy to eighty cases are reported to have been successfully treated by the use of this drgn in single or repeated doses, ranging from twenty grains upwards. No disorder of the stomach, or other unpleasant symptom has been at any time noticed. For general employment, the use of capsicum offers many advantages over either opium or digitalis, which are contra-indicated by enfeebled action of the heart.

DIPTHERIA.—In a communication, Dr. Bailhache, of Springfield, Illinois, says: "The local application of a solution of persulphate of iron (Liguor ferri persulphatis,) in cases of diptheria and ulcerated sore throat, acts almost as a specific in arresting the ulcerative inflamation of these two alarming diseases. It should be applied undiluted by means of a probang (or a rag securely fastened upon the end of a stick) immediately to the ulcerated patches or sloughs.—Two or three such applications, together with the usual tonic treatment, will restore the parts to a healthy condition in twenty-four hours."

PILL FOR AN ACHING HOLLOW TOOTH.—The following is clipped from an exchange; we cannot vouch for its valne. The proof is in the application: "Take half a grain each of opium and yellow subsulphurate of quicksilver called turpeth mineral; make them into a pill, and place it in the hollow of the tooth an hour before bedtime, with a small piece of wax over the top, when it is said never to fail of effecting a complete cure. It was originally communicated, with many other medical recipes, by a learned physician at York."

TO CURE A FELON.—As soon as the parts begin to swell get the tincture of lobelia, and wrap the part affected with a cloth saturated thoroughly with the tincture, and the felon is dead. An old physician says he has known it to cure in scores of cases, and it never fails if applied in season.—Journal of Med.

A NEW THING UNDER THE SUN.

PRICE'S

Patent Texas Tonic.

PURELY VEGETABLE.

It is a certain antidote against Constipation of the Bowels, Torpor of the Liver, Palpitation of the Heart, Determination of Blood to the Brain, Indigestion, Pain in the Head and Vertigo; also a remedy for

CHILLS AND FEVERS.

For particulars, see accompanying Envelope with each bottle.

For sale at 59 Camp street, New Orleans,

THOS. K. PRICE, Vendor.

Read the following opinions of some of our old and well known citizens of

PRICE'S PATENT TEXAS TONIC,

Or, Vegetable Medicine.

T. K. PRICE, Esq., Vender of "Price's Patent Texas Tonic," or Vegetable Medicine:

DEAR SIR—After a fair and deliberate use and experiment of your Vegetable Medicine, known as PRICE'S PATENT TEXAS TONIC, we give it as our decided opinion, that it is the best recipe that we have ever known, for Indigestion, Torpor of the Liver, Constipation of the Bowels and Dyspepsia. We consider your Vegetables Medicine worthy of all commendation, and therfore feel no hesitation in recommending its use to all our friends, as well as the public at large, and that in doing so we are contributing to all the afflicted. Many of us have been suffering from these evils from ten to fifteen years, and have been greatly benefitted.

Wishing you great success in introducing this valuable medicine,

We remain yours truly,
J. J. MULLON, Pastor St. Patrick's Church.
J. H. CALDWELL, of Gas Works, City N. O.
SAM'L. SUMNER of Home Insurance Office
T. GREENFIELD, of house of Fellowes & Co
LEWIS ELKIN, Merchant, New Orleans.
GEO. W. HENSON, Ship Agent.
JACOB BARKER, Bank of Commerce.

New Orleans, June, 1863.

TERMS:

4 oz Bottles.....$2 00
6 " " 2 50
8 " " 3 00
12 " " 5 00

Sold to Druggists by the dozen bottles or more at 33⅓ per cent discount off retail price.

All orders will meet with prompt attention.

sep22 1y THOS. K. PRICE.

W C SHEPARD. A L ABBOTT. R C HUTCHINSON

SHEPARD, ABBOTT & CO.,

No. 55 Camp street, New Orleans,

Nearly opposite Picayune Office,

CROCKERY AND GLASS WARE,

PLATED WARE,

House Furnishing Goods,

AND KITCHEN WARE.

We beg leave to inform our friends and the public in general, that we have on hand a large and well selected stock of the above goods, and are constantly receiving them directly from the manufactories in France, England, and the United States; and we flatter ourselves that we can sell our goods as low as any house in the city.—For variety in the house-furnishing line, our stock is unequalled in the South.

Call in and see for yourself before purchasing elsewhere.

SHEPARD, ABBOTT & CO.,

sep22 1y 55 Camp street, New Orleans.

E. L. PIERSON & CO.,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

CLOTHING,

AND

GENTLEMEN'S FURNISHING GOODS,

No. 97 Magazine Street,

Corner of Gravier street,

sep22 6m NEW ORLEANS.

A GOOD COOKING STOVE

Is one of the most necessary and desirable articles of household economy, and if properly managed, will promote the health, comfort, and happiness of every member of the family.

Time, money, and extreme vexation, by delays of your daily meals, may be saved by using the

CHARTER OAK COOKING STOVE.

Over 10,000 of these celebrated cooking stoves are in daily use throughout the city of New Orleans. Every one of them has been sold under a full guarantee, and we offer them as a reference wherever found.

The Improved Charter Oak Stove with Extension Top

has but one damper, and is so simple in its construction that a child can manage it. The ovens are larger, bake more uniform, and the stove heavier than any cooking stove of corresponding size ever made.

The Hot Water Reservoir Boiler furnishes a constant supply of hot water at all hours of the day, and for hours after the fire has been extinguished, without additional cost for fuel, a practical illustration of the economy in using the Charter Oak.

The Reflector Gridiron, original with the Charter Oak, and used on no other stove—the most perfect manner to broil meats and poultry, whereby the offensive odors arising from meats during the process of broiling are carried up the pipe, and juices of the meats preserved.

The Hot Closet, in which meats and pastry are kept warm for hours when there has been a delay at meals, besides enabling the cook to furnish the greatest variety of dishes and desserts, and place them hot upon the table.

The Charter Oak Stove will do one-third more baking in a given time, and use 25 per cent less wood than any other stove now made.

Importers and Dealers in Hardware, Nails, Cast Ings, Guns, Carpenters and Coopers' Edge Tools, etc.

RICE BROS. & CO., Sole Agents,
93 and 95 Camp street, near Poydras,
and 565 Magazine street, near Magazine Market
sep1 1y

G HORTER, T K PETERSON, E C FENNER,
Late of Magee & Knease, N.O. Late of Goff & Peterson, Philadelphia. NowYork

HORTER, PETERSON & FENNER
(Sign of the Black Horse,)
MANUFACTURERS OF SADDLES HARNESS, AND TRUNKS.
Importers of Saddlery & Coach Hardware
7 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS.
s22 1y

VICK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF HARDY BULBS,

For the Autumn of 1866, and

FLORAL GUIDE,

Is now Published. It contains Descriptions of the Best Hyacinths, Tulips, Crocuses, Lillies, etc., With full descriptions, and plain and full directions for Planting, Culture, Prices, etc. Illustrated with numerous fine engravings, and a beautiful colored plate of the Single and Double Tulip and Scilla. My importation from the best Bulb Growers of Holland is this season larger than ever before, and I flatter myself the finest lot of Bulbs ever brought to this country. This Catalogue and Guide is published for the benefit of my customers, and I will forward it to every one as rapidly as possible. To all others I charge ten cents per copy, which is not half the cost. Postage prepaid to all. All lovers of flowers who design to plant Bulbs this fall will find it to their interest to obtain my Catalogue. Address

aug. 25. JAMES VICK Rochester, N. Y.

INSTRUCTION ON THE PIANO.

A lady whose high attainments as a composer and as a performer on and successful teacher of the Piano, can be well attested, proposes to give lessons to a few pupils in the city, commencing in September or October.

Reference: Rev J C Keener, D D; Rev J B Walker, D D; Rev L Parker.

For particulars address: "Pianist," Christian Advocate Office 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,
Jackson, Louisiana,

was established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and transferred to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1845. It is now under the joint patronage of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences.

The College exercises were necessarily suspended during the war; but were regularly resumed, after reorganization, on the first Monday in October, 1865. The approaching session will open on the first Monday of October next.

Tuition, $75 per annum, payable semi-annually, in advance.

Boarding can be obtained at from $20 to $25 per month

The Buildings, Libraries, Apparatus, Laboratory and Society Halls, the location in point of beauty, health, ease of access and good society, are all unsurpassed by those of any institution in the Southern States.

The past history of the College is the pledge of its future prosperity.

The Board and Faculty promise the public that nothing shall be wanting on their part to secure the thorough education of the young men committed to their care, in both Preparatory and Collegiate Departments.

The old students, alumni, and friends of the institution, are requested to give publicity to the full reorganization and opening of the College, as stated above.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,
GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught

TERMS:

Tuition fees per term,.....$40 00
Contingent fee,..... 5 00

Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month

aug4ft W M WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

STONEWALL INSTITUTE.

The President of this Institution is gratified to announce to its patrons and friends that the regular scholastic year will open on the

FIRST MONDAY OF OCTOBER NEXT,

under the following Corps of Teachers:

D. C. B. CONNERLY, M. A., PRINCIPAL, AND TEACHER OF ANCIENT LANGUAGES,
G. M. CALLEN, M. A., TEACHER OF MATHEMATICS.
H. Y. WEISSINGER, M. A., ASSISTANT IN ANCIENT LANGUAGES AND ENGLISH LITERATURE.
JNO D LELAND, M. A., ASSISTANT IN MATHEMATICS AND MODERN LANGUAGES.

This school for boys and young men is located in the high and healthy hills of Perry County, Ala., thirteen miles North of Selma, and five miles North of Summerfield; and can be reached in a three hours' dove from Selma. Its locality is healthy almost beyond comparison. It is the property of no sect or set of men, and is not controlled by Trustees. It is the property solely of the Principal, who alone is responsible to the patrons of the Institute, for its management and discipline.

The Principal has engaged these three gentlemen of energy to join him in giving to the rising generation rare opportunities for acquiring an education. With the experience of fifteen years in controlling boys, and with the devotion and energy which will be given to the interest of our pupils, we think it proper to say that every right-minded man, who sends us a good boy, shall be satisfied with the results.

We do not intend to exhort men to send to us; but we do intend to make it the true interest of our friends to commit their sons to our charge.

Our experience during the past year enables us to say that here we have power to control, and subject to study, our pupils, far greater than we ever had in any village.

From October to July, we shall carefully superintend the morals, manners, and intellectual training of our students.

No boy will be received whose moral character is not satisfactory; nor do we purpose going beyond eighteen pupils to the teacher, thus giving great advantages to our classes. For Board, including washing, and tuition by night and by day, from October to July, no matter what the age of the boy is, and no matter what he studies, our charge is Three Hundred and Sixty Dollars; one hundred and eighty paid on entering and the remainder Feb. 14th, 1867.

Each student must furnish two blankets, two sheets, two pillow cases, and his own towel and lights.

Besides, every one must bring money, from ten to twenty dollars to pay for his books and stationery. These terms must be literally complied with.

If a student is dismissed for any cause, or if he has to retire, and does so with our approval, his money will be refunded, but if he leaves without this approval, or runs away, his money will not be refunded; nor will any deduction be made for absence unless occasioned by a protracted sickness of one month's duration.

The patrons of this school embrace many of the most distinguished men of Central Alabama. Their sons can furnish the best evidence and strongest assurances that all our plans and management look to the progress of the pupil; and that around the entire establishment we constantly throw an air of home and contentment.

Parties wishing to commit their sons and wards to a school all of whose movements are systematically controlled to advance the real mental training of inmates, and whose daily and weekly schedule, even on Saturdays and Sundays, is moved by the clock, are cordially invited to address the undersigned by letter.

D. C. B. CONNERLY,
Stonewall Institute, near Summerfield, Ala.

SOUTH-WESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Where is it located? Its Depository and Bible-House is at its own building, No. 163 Camp street, New Orleans.

When was it established? 1850.

Who is its General Agent to whom correspondence on its business should be addressed? Rev. James Beattie.

Where is the Society's field of labor? All of Louisiana, and all of Mississippi, south of the 33rd parallel of North latitude.

What is the object of the Society? To explore and supply (gratuitously where needed) the destitution of the Holy Scriptures.

What are the resources and whence the Income of the Society? From the annual contributions of its members. Collections of Churches within its field, collections at public meetings and anniversaries. Appropriations of the surplus funds of its auxiliaries, the donations of generous individuals, testamentary bequests, and the annual donation in Books of the American Bible Society.

What is the Society's method of work? By cultivating its own local work in the city and district of New Orleans: then through Auxiliary Societies established or to be established in every Parish and County in the field, and the employment by them of such means as will accomplish the object of the Society.

What are the terms of membership?

The payment of $30 at one time constitutes a life member.

The payment of $150 at one time, constitutes a life Director.

The payment of $1000 at one time, constitutes a life Patron.

The payment of $3 annually, constitutes a member.

The taking up of a collection by a church constitutes the Pastor an honorary member.

Having thus briefly stated the main features of the Society's work, income and expenditure, the Board of Directors for the current year confidently ask the aid of all lovers of the Bible, whether professors of religion or not: to strengthen the hands of the S. W. B. S: by founding or reviving Auxiliaries, by donating and urging donations, by exploring and reporting the destitution of the Scriptures, by commencing or renewing memberships of all grades and by establishing connections with the Society as the Lord has prospered them according to that Scripture which says "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal." To ministers and professing Christians of every Orthodox Protestant Church, the Board of Directors, representing in its body all such within our bounds, appeals with confidence to aid them by judicious effort, a prompt performance of duty and a prayerful commendation of the Society to the blessing of Almighty God, for except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it, except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain.

Our last thought is the heart-cry of the Great Reformation. "No forbidding of the Word: no tampering with the text: no man's note or comment on God's Word: Christ's Word: the Holy Spirit's Word: Free: Free: Free. a25 1y.

WOODVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE SECOND SESSION

Will begin October 3rd 1866, and close July 10th, 1867. The system of instruction aims at the truest, mental, moral, and social culture. The discipline seeks to embrace whatever is helpful to this end, and to exclude what is hurtful to it. Obedience to rightful authority, is a necessary to membership in the school.

TERMS PER SESSION.

Board, with fuel, lights and washing.	$300 00
Tuition in Preparatory course,	60 00
" Academic "	80 00
" Collegiate "	100 00
Music,	80 00

Other ornamentals as low as can be afforded.

The Collegiate course embraces Latin and French without any extra charge. These charges are made from the beginning of the half month in which the pupil is entered, to the end of the session, and must be paid, one half in advance, and the other on the 1st of March, nor will assignment of a pupil to room, seat or class, be made until this demand is met. A sum sufficient to get books, music, and medicines for slight sickness, must be deposited with the Principal. Each boarding pupil must be provided with a supply of plain, neat clothing suitable to the season, and also with towels, table napkins—all marked in the owner's name. When a pupil, not residing in the Seminary, or one not remaining in it during her illness, is sick more than twenty consecutive days, a deduction of one half the charges for the time will be made.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Principal.

Woodville, Miss., Aug. 8th, 1866. aug25 3m.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.

The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.

TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40.—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March.

Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.

Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.

Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.

As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.

W. H. N. MAGRUDER.

Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE

HUNTSVILLE, NORTH ALABAMA,

REV. J. G. WILSON, A.M., President.

Healthy location; refined community; commodious building; competent teachers; thorough course of study.

Next annual term opens first Monday in September.

For circulars containing terms, etc., address the President.

Huntsville, Ala., July 1st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A.M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.

The Fall Session of this Institution will open on the 26th day of September next.

This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattrasses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.

The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no Institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:

For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks,	$67 50
Regular Tuition, ...	25 00
Incidental Fee, ...	2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of instrument	37 50
French or Spanish, ...	15 00

Ornamental branches at usual prices.

☞ All fees for tuition payable in carrency at par.

The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.

After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.

For other information address

CHARLES B. STUART, President;
ng4ft Mansfield, La.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. GEO. F. THOMPSON, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Milsaps, Rev. George H. Clinton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.

Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.

The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Jan. 31, 1867.

For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. u18ft

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M.,	President, Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs. A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Marie S. Maxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bedclothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September.

Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT,
D. G. HARRIMAN, Pres. Board of Trustees.
jy14 6m

CENTENARY FEMALE COLLEGE

SUMMERFIELD, ALA.

The next scholastic year begins Monday, Oct. 1st, 1866. A quarter of a century in successful operation, with hundreds of cultivated daughters in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, and under the immediate care and patronage of the Mobile and Montgomery Conferences, this institution can afford and is determined to maintain a high standard of scholarship. Only experienced and skillful educators are employed by the Trustees. Among the recent additions to the Faculty are two gentlemen for nearly of years Professors in the State University.

Those desiring really thorough culture for their daughters, will do well to investigate the claims of this institution.

For particulars or a circular apply to the President, Rev H. K. Burgess.

s18 1m A. H. MITCHELL, Pres. Board.

NORTH, BRUSH & MASON,

Wholesale Dealers in

Fancy Goods,

STATIONERY, PERFUMERY, CUTLERY,

HOSIERY,

Furnishing Goods, etc.,

35 MAGAZINE STREET,

Opposite the St. James Hotel, New Orleans, La
aug25 1y

CHAS. B. CHURCHILL.

GUNS.

WARE AND

TAYLOR & CHURCHILL,

DIRECT IMPORTERS,

PETER G. TAYLOR. (Opposite St. James Hotel,) NEW ORLEANS, LA.

HARDWARE

41 MAGAZINE STREET, and 20 BANK PLACE,

We have in stock, and are constantly receiving some choice patterns of English and American Table and Pocket Cutlery, to which we invite the attention particularly of country merchants. Also, a large stock of Trace, Ox and Log Chains, English and American Planters' Hoes, Anvils, Vices and Bellows; Scales, manufactured by the Novelty Iron Works; Files, English and American.

COTTON AND WOOL CARDS, NOVA SCOTIA GRIND STONES, PLOWS.

Hall & Speer's Peacock Plows, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; Hall & Speer's Cast Valley Plows, Nos. 1 & 2; King Cary (wood mould board) Plows.

HOLLOW WARE, SAWS, TIN WARE, AXES.

GUNS. NAILS. All the above is offered for sale at the lowest market quotations. Of all patterns and brands. All orders from the country are respectfully solicited by TAYLOR & CHURCHILL, 41 Magazine street, and 20 Bank Place, opposite St. James Hotel. Established in New Orleans without intermission, by the present senior member of the firm, in 1832.

aug25 1y

W. H. HENNING & CO.,

Grocers and Commission Merchants,

95 and 97, CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Offers to Families, Planters and Traders a full stock of Fancy and Staple Goods, consisting in part of

CHAMPAGNE,
BRANDIES,
WHISKIES,
CLARET,
CORDIALS, ETC.

Also, a large lot of Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Pork, Beef, Bacon, Salt, suitable for Plantation supplies,—all of which will be offered at the Most reasonable Rates.

☞ Country orders will receive the most careful and prompt attention.

W H HENNING & CO,
a25 6m 95 & 97 Camp street, New Orleans

WALLACE & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, and

PLANTATION CLOTHING,

No. 74 CANAL STREET, AND 91, 93 AND 95 COMMON STREET, (SLOCUMB BUILDING), NEW ORLEANS

☞ Sales guaranteed at New York prices.

a18 1y

JAMES SYME,

Wholesale Druggist,

139 Canal Street, (Toro Buildings,)

NEW ORLEANS.

Importer and Dealer in Fine

DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS,

DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES,

Fancy Goods and Perfumery.

Surgical Instruments,

French, English, and American, of every variety

Also—

Medicine Chests and Medical Saddle-bags.

aug25 1y

A. S ORISWOLD. W. M. GOODRICH

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,

Corner of Canal and Royal streets,

[Late HYDE & GOODRICH],

Established in New Orleans Fifty Years!

MANUFACTURERS OF JEWELRY & SILVER WARE,

Importers of Watches, Diamonds, Clocks, Bronzes, Porcelain, Plated Ware, Cutlery, Fancy Goods, Guns and Pistols.

The largest assortment in the South always on hand. aug25 6m

A. D. GRIEFF,

Wholesale Grocer,

COMMISSION MERCHANT, AND DEALER IN SOUTHERN AND WESTERN PRODUCE,

48, 50 and 52 Old Levee st., corner Blanville st., aug26 6m NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN SHOE MANUFACTORY

DRAKE & MARKHAM,

Manufacturers of

Men's, Boys', Ladies', Misses' & Children's

BOOTS AND SHOES,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

No. 56 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

We call the attention of the public to our extensive stock of fine custom-made Creole Boots and Shoes, for Gents, Boys, Youths, Ladies, Misses and Children, made of the best imported stock, by skillful workmen.

We design furnishing goods that combine elegance with durability, at a less price than common goods are usually sold for in this city.

OUR LAST-FOR-EVER BOOTS!

Every man in this State should have a pair of our Last-for-ever Boots. They are warranted waterproof, and to last one year, or the money returned.

Our stock of Family and Plantation Shoes are the best that can be made.

One pair will outwear any three pairs bought at auction. Country Merchants will do well to make a note of this.

We have better goods and sell them lower than any house in Louisiana.

Orders filled at ten per cent. on the original cost of manufacture.

All goods warranted to satisfy, or they may be returned. Planters will instruct their Commission Merchants to buy their shoes of

DRAKE & MARKHAM, 56 CAMP-STREET.
aug18 1y

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY

Established in 1837,

VANDUZEN & TIFT,

Of the late Firm and Successors to GEO. W. COFFIN & CO.,

102 & 104 East Second street,

Cincinnati, Ohio,

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. je16

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrances on Carondelet. This Institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address

f3-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 26 St. Charles st., corner Common, founded in 1856, chartered in 1861. A Southern Institution. Open day and evening. We have no class system and no copying from books.

Instructions given in Book-keeping, Penmanship, Commercial Calculations, Commercial Law, English, French, Spanish and Latin Languages, Algebra, Geometry, Surveying, Mechanics and Navigation, Geometrical, Architectural, Perspective and Topographical Drawing and Telegraphing.

For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address

f3 1y GEO. SOULE, N. I.

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD

Established, August, 1861.

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January, 1866

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET, 18

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURE to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

C. E. CATE & CO.
feb17 18 Camp st., N. O.

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St. Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32, 24 by 36, 26 by 38, 27 by 43, 32 by 44, and 36 by 48.

Agent for the sale of R. Hoe & Co's Printing Presses; the "Liberty" Job Presses; Adams' Cottage Presses; and Jas. Conners & Sons' Type. apr1

J. B. JENNINGS. J. W. WICKS. M. J. WICKS.

JENNINGS, WICKS & BRO.

Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, corner Camp and Common streets, New Orleans. apr14 1y

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 39. WHOLE NUMBER 603.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1866.

$3 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE OFFICE—124 CAMP STREET.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

OUR GERMAN CORRESPONDENCE.

GOTTINGEN, Sept. 4th, 1866.

MR. EDITOR: Perhaps no study is more interesting than that of history. Look, e. g. to Italy, from the mythical origin of Rome to to day—what repeated evolutions have not been witnessed there. Once inhabited by comparative barbarians, then by rare patriots, then again transformed, the Italians became the most cultivated people on the globe. But, alas! the refinement was carried on to such an unnatural extent that after a while nothing more than the mere polish remained: the solid substance was lost in corruption. Charge it to Catholicism or to any other cause; at all events, the Italians fell, deeply fell, and have continued in a comparative prostration for near eighteen hundred years.

Peculiar, indeed, it is that with the commencement of Popery, the dated decay first began, and, also, with the downfall of Popery in the country of Cesar, that country again raises its head. Little cares Victor Emanuel about Pio Nono's anathemas and excommunication; he owes the union of his country, not to the Pope or his subjects, but to the aid of Protestant Prussia. Say what you will, for the cause of Protestantism was the noble daring of Luther before the Reichsrath at Worms not more momentous than the battle of Koniggratz, or Sadowa, as some call it. The only remaining power that had hitherto supported the Pope through thick and thin, was Austria. But the importance of that power has now been permanently destroyed: both in Italy and Germany her influence has been irrevocably abolished. Who will yet support Popery? Perhaps Louis Napoleon will make a faint attempt to retard the precipitous collapse; howbeit, Popery, so far as it existed in contradistinction from modern Catholicism, will only belong to the things that were.

By the way, though here rather out of place, I must tell you to what cause a recent Vienna paper attributed the Austrian disasters. Here is its language verbatim: "The Holy Mother neither sleeps nor slumbers; but inasmuch as her worship was in those last years been woefully neglected and as the holy mass and auricular confession have, to a great extent, been impiously set aside; her curses have at last touched us. Indeed, when it is considered that Marshall Benedek issued an order prohibiting the holy Jesuitic Fathers from following his army, — an order that was not even given by heretic Prussia, — it is a matter of surprise that Austria has not been altogether swept from the face of the earth," etc. What exquisite logic!

You say I am straying mightily from the theme with which I started. Perhaps not; for I can conceive that its religion constitutes the most important part of a nation's history. Describe to me a man's religion, and I describe to you the man pretty correctly. The same holds true with regard to nations.

Interesting as is the history of Italy, is also that of Germany. Of the German's exceeding bravery speaks Cesar, and of their conscientious honesty speaks Tacitus in very approving terms. Their great chieftain Hermann did for them what Washington did for the Americans. In short, the country prospered: the country was happy and free. After Venis legions in the Teutiburger— Walde had been almost abolished, the Romans no longer attempted to aggress on the rights of the fatherland. But then came Popery. Kings were baptized, and these kings did then fanatically force their subjects to be baptized. Some revolted; but after a short while all the Germans were Roman Catholics. As now in Italy the policy of the Church had been "divide and rule," so was that same policy employed in Germany. And well that policy operated for many centuries; but at last it was doomed to lose its power. Luther arose, and for the first time recognized no other authority, either civil or ecclesiastical, than that of the Bible; or, in other words, he laid the foundations of Constitutional Government.

But Luther died, and with him died much of Luther's spirit. It was not long until, through Austria's savage generals Tilly and Wallenstein, after the "Thirty Years' War," Catholicism, or rather Popery was again in the ascendant. Austria ruled Germany, and Austria was the abject slave of the Pope. There is, indeed, little doubt that Rome would have again, through her results, absorbed the entire country, had not Napoleon I, suddenly disappointed the Holy See. Since then, the north of Germany was more and more actuated by the spirit of Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, until finally, in Prussia, it has found its true exponent. The remainder is known: through one of her Protestant children, Prussia, Germany is being again resuscitated.

That in Protestant countries the people are generally more intelligent is generally admitted. Look to the difference between the Prussians and Austrians, the Swabians and Italians, the Americans and Mexicans, the English and the lower French! You say this last is an excellent exception. Perhaps it is; but it is to be remembered that the French of to-day are not such Catholics as they were before 1790. — Hereafter, intelligence, and not dogmatism can unmuzzle nations; and I ween that it is Protestantism especially which has unfettered the human intellect, preparing it for the highest state of intelligence.

All these thoughts were suggested to me, when observing how the disguised Jesuits are now endeavoring to contruct Bismarck's programme of consolidating Germany into one government. In the Prussian Legislature, now in session, the Catholic members have in every instance voted against every measure recommended by the Prime Minister. But, perhaps, we may let them work on, for > "Error, wounded, writhes in pain,

> And dies amid her conquerors."

May only you and I not be found wanting in well playing our part in life's grand drama, in order that, when life ceases, I may still call myself your Christian brother,

J. B. A. AUBENS.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LAY REPRESENTATION—No. VI.

MR. EDITOR: We wish to avoid this lay representation system for another very important consideration. It is this. If we introduce it into our General Conference, it will inevitably become

A PERMANENT FIXTURE.

If we wed ourselves to this plan, in all human probability, we shall never be able to obtain a divorce, however much such a result may be desired. Whether the plan works well or ill; when it is once a part of our system, we must "cleave unto" it, as our "better half," faithfully, and forever; for, we can not reasonably expect our lay brethren to vote themselves out of the General Conference, when they are once in it, and when they are the half of it, and when they have equal rights, privileges, and power, with all others composing the body, in all matters, save ministerial character and relations. It would be requiring too much of human nature to ask them thus to divorce themselves. And though the system were to work ever so disastrously; and though the ministry might be ever so anxious to dispense with it, yet they might not be able to do so. It is not as though we were adopting any other measure, as a boundary or a course of study, or a name; for, if the boundary, or a course of study, or the name did not suit us, after trial, or when we pleased, we could alter or reject any one of them, or all of them, by our votes, without any resistance on the part of the measures themselves. But it will be far otherwise in this case. If we adopt this system, we adopt a living, voting power, that has strength equal to our own; and before making the attempt to "shear" or struggle it, we should, doubtless, consider the "resistance." And then, whether we considered the resistance or not, if we were to make the attempt, and our lay brethren were not willing to be thus thrust out, they could most easily forever prevent it. By the proper turn of that wonderful fifth wheel, that "patent break," which divides the house, and checks legislation, they could divide, and then refuse to "cooperate," and the thing could never be done.

But suppose the system, after its adoption, should work so disastrously, that it should become not only desirable, but actually necessary to eject the lay element; and suppose the ministry able to do it: and suppose it done; what would be the result? Such ejectment would doubtless rend our beloved Zion into a thousand fragments. Some of our sister churches have deposed their Bishops, and destroyed Episcopacy in their ecclesiastical economy, but when did they destroy the lay element where it was once fully incorporated into their church polity? Nor have the laymen deposed themselves. Nor does any one expect them to do it; for we could not look for human nature anywhere thus to ignore itself. We hear it said: "Let us try the experiment." But, if we adopt this measure, it is to be no experiment; but, as we have shown above, it is to be a permanent part of our itinerant economy, a permanent fixture. We need not lay the flattering unction to our souls, that we will try it a while, and then, if it does not suit us, we will lay it aside. No, if we take it, we must make up our minds, to take it "for better or for worse;" and we must "cleave unto it, and to it only, so long as we both shall live." And it will only die, as the parasite dies, which has eaten the life out of the giant oak, die when the oak is dead; the oak that sustained it, and held it up toward heaven, to the sun light, and to the rain.

CONFESSION.

The action of our late General Conference, on this subject, involves the most stupendous and humiliating confession; viz: That, for one hundred years we have been in error, upon a fundamental principle of church economy; and that, consequently, for a hundred years we have deprived the laity of our church of their ecclesiastical rights. Who does not know that for all the period of our existence, we have theoretically and practically vested the legislative and executive departments of our church government in the hands of the ministry! And who does not know that our teachings and practice have excluded the laity from these departments? And then, who does not know, that all of this time we have been subjected to opposition and the severest criticism from the advocates of the lay representation plan? Is it true, is it possible, that, during all this time we have really been in error on this subject? If so, was it an error of the head? Have we all of this time been "blind, leaders of the blind?" Have we always misunderstood the teachings and practice of Christ and the Apostles on this subject? If this is the case, why not frankly say so? Why not confess our former ignorance, ask forgiveness, and then give the scriptural reasons for our conversion, and for our now calling the laity to oversee and govern the church? Or, if the heart has been wrong, and we have knowingly and wilfully oppressed our lay brethren, and withheld from them their scriptural rights; then, if "confession is good for the soul," why not confess this, our great wickedness, as we come to restore these rights and privileges, so long and so iniquitously withheld? but no; there is no confession, no reasons given for the long withholding of rights, nor for the offer of them, now, to the laity. But there is a silent, indirect begging of the question, a virtual confession of wrong, but nothing is said about it; and the world, and especially our former opponents on this subject, wonder after the means of our conversion.

Mr. Editor, did you, or your reporter give the speeches and proceedings of that General Conference correctly? And did you print all the arguments and scriptures, adduced on that occasion, in favor of lay representation? We have been looking over the minutes of that effort, so successful in recommending this plan, and we find almost nothing but this; that, on a bright May morning, in the city of New Orleans, the General Conference, of the M. E. Church, South, saw a great light, which was supposed to be a new revelation, "an inspiration from heaven;" and it was on this very subject, lay representation. If it differed from the old, no matter, as age is an objection in the eyes of many. If it savored a little of "higher law" than the Bible, no matter, for, "an inspiration of heaven" must be an end of all controversy; and so all months were immediately stopped; and in a few moments, the lay system was adopted by a majority of forty. The honored instrument bringing this last revelation to the knowledge of the General Conference was the Rev. Dr. P. M. Lee, of the Virginia Conference. In his remarks, favoring lay representation, he concluded by saying that "He believed as honestly as any member here could, that this is an inspiration from Heaven guiding the Church, governing it and leading it in the way in which it ought to go. He was as honestly attached to everything that is divine in the Methodist economy as any other man, but what is merely human he regarded only as such and was willing to submit to change in that respect. For this reason he repeated the settled conviction in his mind, that this movement in our church for the introduction of the laity into councils and government of the church, is an inspiration of Heaven. If the laity clamored for it, if they were agitating the church to secure it, he might question that conviction, but they were quiescent and the ministry is active."

We have italicised some of the words above, which he emphasized, not only to call attention to the repeated "inspiration of Heaven," but also to the implication that the government of the M. E. Church, South, by the ministry, is "merely human," and hence, he "was willing to submit to a change in that respect." Thus he closed. No more was said. All were ready to vote. The vote was taken, and the result was as stated above. We do not think the proper theory of government, for the Church of God is merely human, and hence we can not, so indifferently, "submit to change."

"CHANGE."

Change seemed to be the order of the day, and indeed of all the days of that General Conference. Now, in our opinion, change of forms, ceremonies and economy, is not what our church most needs; she has done well in the past, and will do better in the future. True, she staggered under the blows inflicted by the war; nor has she yet entirely recovered from the stunning effects of these blows. The "indifference," the "apathy" of which you speak in your issue of the 15th inst., is still, to some extent, on our Israel, but time and the blessing of Heaven will restore her. We need more faith, more trust. We must stay ourselves on God till our strength returns. We need more communion with Him. We need a new dedication, an entire consecration to God and to His work. Ministers and laymen must make this consecration. We need the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on all of our hearts. We must pray. We must fast. We have ceased to fast, and yet, if the Divine Redeemer were here, He might say: "This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting." The war demon, this mad lunatic must be cast out. God only can do it. We must call upon him. We must take ourselves and each other to Christ. Will we do it? Nothing else will revive us. Change in these outward matters will not do it. Nothing will do it but the power of God.

The General Conference extended the term of the pastorate, and made many other minor changes in our discipline. Let that suffice. Now let us rest. Do not urge us into so many new measures, till we have time to gather up our scattered thoughts and forces, and stand again firmly on our feet; nor then unless the changes are scriptural and necessary. Our name, M. E. Church, South, looks well, sounds well, and works well nearly everywhere. Let it remain. We do not wish to be re-christened just now. And so we say of the government of our church. It works well. We do not wish to revolutionize now. We want rest from war, from strife, from agitation. God has not forsaken our church. She may be in the wilderness, but God is with her, and she will come forth "leaning on the breast of her beloved." The ark may have been from "home;" but while we bring it again to its former resting place, do not let us be too anxious about it. The oxen may stumble, but God will steady the ark. Let us trust in Him. Let us "trust in Him, and do good," and we "shall dwell in the land, and verily," we "shall be fed."

LOCAL ITINERANT.

Louisiana, Sept. 30th, 1866.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

THE EXPERIMENT.

Will the experiment succeed?

What experiment?

The experiment of sustaining Christianity on our circuit, in our station.

Why, I thought that miracles, prophecies, and eighteen centuries had settled the question of Christianity long ago.

One would have thought so,— but still it is discussed in its financial aspects as though its success and perpetuity were in some sort doubtful. A man wants a dwelling, store house, or warehouse—and he sets to work and builds it without any ado or discussion, and arranges promptly to pay for it. Not so in church affairs. A large and wealthy community want a church, not for the heathen, but for themselves. How do they proceed? The preacher, or some self-sacrificing man, tries to stir up the people— talks, calls meetings, makes speeches. Some think, in view of the times, the proposition is inexpedient, and moves to postpone for better times. Another feels that they need and ought to have a Church, but he rather fears to undertake; however, he will promise to do something, though he can't promise much. —The minister, and a few zealous friends, with a zeal that many think almost rashness, determine to make the venture.

The work is begun, part of the means subscribed, and more partially, conditionally, and cautiously promised. The house by and by is to be dedicated. A popular minister is secured—ample notice is given, an eloquent sermon is delivered. The people are congratulated and praised for building themselves a house in which to worship, instead of worshipping out of doors, or not at all.

Then the indebtedness is stated, and the speaker modestly ventures to hope that the people will pay the workmen who have furnished the materials, and built the house. That they will pay—actually pay, and not propose to have a house, in which to preach justice and honesty, without paying for it: Now comes the tug of war—"Who will give a hundred dollars?" People nervous and uneasy—and much as if they were awaiting their turn for a tooth pulling, an amputation, or some painful surgical operation. After a long and severe strain — applauding, complaining, praising, blaming, — most of the debt is arranged for — and a few liberal brethren assume and pay the balance. A general feeling of relief and congratulation, that a very difficult and very generous thing has been done in paying the builder for a house for their own use!

Once more—a man is wanted for a steamboat captain, or a hook keeper, or a good salesman. Those wishing such a man agree to pay him one, two, three, or five thousand dollars for his services, the wages regulated by the value of his services, extent of the business, or the expenses of living. The bargain is struck in five minutes. The employer never thinks a moment but what he will pay the full amount, and the employee takes it for granted he will receive his salary; he knows how much he has to spend, and now arranges affairs accordingly.

Not so in church affairs. The community wants a minister; one comes to them. They appear to like him. What shall we pay him? How little can he live on? Nice calculations are made; then the stewards bring their grave heads together. They feel that they can afford to give so much, but there is a large deficit. Now who is able to give? Who is willing to give? There is no little discussion and analysis of character. Then the effort is made with various results. These matters are reported and discussed, stewards seem anxious, doubtful as to the final result. The pastor, an honest man, but a man, and therefore has wants, he struggles between his fear of going in debt, without a probability of paying, and the actual needs of his family.

Perhaps towards the close of the year the promised amount, with great worry and struggle, is raised. Sometimes it is not raised, and the end of the year cancels the debt, it must be forwarded, be audited and accounted for at the great day of God's wrath, when it shall be said "inasmuch as ye did not unto the least of my little ones, ye did not unto me."

Now, shall financing and ministerial support never rise above the character and position of an experiment? Will people never come to feel their obligations to ministers enough to support them and their families with decent comfort, all they ask, just as other men of perhaps not superior talents or diligence? Is not all this anxiety and worry upon the minister and his family, an unnecessary burden and a wrong. Is it wonderful that so many of them, turn teachers, doctors and merchants, to live and escape the painful uncertainty and dependence of their situation.

May we not hope that people will be educated up to the point of duty, and that church financing will assume a more systematic and less uncertain and spasmodic character?

METHODIST.

RAINDROPS ON MT. LEBANON.

MR. EDITOR: The raindrops, as Bro. Shaffer, of Columbus, Miss., calls them, in a note accompanying the one dollar continue to come, and if they continue to descend, will doubtless float off the debt of Mt. Lebanon Church.

The following is an extract from the note of some good sister of Brandon, Miss. The name of this sister I do not know, wish I did. The preacher of Brandon, doubtless, will know as soon as he reads the extract, because there is seldom more than one such soul in one community, and preachers generally know them. Preachers never suffer when surrounded by that kind of faith.

Brandon, Miss., Sept. 10.

BRO. UPTON: I see in the Advocate, your request for one dollar, from each subscriber to the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Once wealthy, the war has left me poor, so poor I scarcely know one week where bread shall come from the next, but is speaking as man. Faith, all sustaining faith, bears me up, and I know my Father will provide.

I have three dollars, one I send you, asking God to bless the mite.

Your sister, in Christ.

God bless it my sister.

Bro. Shaffer wishes he were able to send one hundred dollars, instead of one dollar.

Send on these rain drops, my brethren, and relieve us from our pecuniary embarrassment.

Below I send you a list of the names of those who have favored us with the amounts affixed to their names respectively since my last.

E. S. William,	Clinton, Miss.	$1 00
A. M. Campbell,	Mansfield, La.	1 00
Jas. V. Williams,	" "	1 00
S. F. Walker,	" "	70
Rev. C. B. Stuart,	" "	1 00
Rev. J. Shaffer,	Columbus, Miss.	1 00
Nameless Sister,	Brandon "	1 00

Your Brother,

THOS. J. UPTON.

Mt. Lebanon, La., Sept. 28th, 1866.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

Lands in the Opelousas Country.

MR. EDITOR: If among the many who are now looking for new homes, there are any pioneers, I have somewhat to say to them. Land upon which they may be sure of good livings, and increasing profit, if they are industrious, may be had in St. Landry at a very low rate.

Prairies, Mermentau, Mammoth, and Mallet, are points of especial interest.

On Mallet the lands are good. There is already a settlement of Americans and Protestants. Plenty of wood land, and fine range for cattle, hogs, sheep, etc. Well water is good, and easily obtained. Bro's. Jenkins, Mayo and others, who have just commenced there invite good, industrious people to come and settle. They are about twelve miles west of the Opelousas. The price of land is reasonable.

Mermentau is an immense horse shoe cove about forty miles southwest of Opelousas. Several hundred families could obtain comfortable homes here at a low rate. The Bayous Que de Tortue and Mermentau are deep clear streams abounding in fish. The swamps that lie on either side are full of fine cypress. The land will afford a good living to the industrious. Fine range for stock. A company of gentlemen intend to go down next week to explore, with a view of settling thirty or forty families there. One, or a half-dozen, honest Americans would stand no chance in there against the jayhawker thieves who hold possession. But the beauty of the place,—its many advantages, should tempt a goodly number to move in.

Mamouth is, if possible, more inviting than Mermentau. The land is about the same quality, and the range the same, but it is gently undulating, and though level enough for ease to the resident, is more varied in appearance. The population here is better, though sadly in need of improvement. It was in this prairie that Dr. Keener, Austin, Rayne and others, settled during the war, only to be driven from their beautiful retreats by the increasing band of jayhawkers.

The lands on Mallet command much higher prices than those of the last named places, because they are better and have a better population. But the others have good lands that will improve with proper cultivation, and if a number of families would go into each as colonists, they would have no trouble with the present residents, who like Indians retire before civilization.

Hundreds of men are killing themselves with hard work among the roots, stumps, and pine hills of North Louisiana, who could make more on Mamouth or Mermentau, in two years, than they make there in five, and with less labor.

The farmers here will do well if they make half a crop of cotton; and less than half the usual crop of former years was planted. The rains and worms have been destructive.

F. T. R.

Plaquemine Brulé, La., Sept. 18, 1866.

WHAT DOES BABY THINK?

What is the little one thinking about?
Very wonderful things no doubt—
Unwritten history!
Unfathomed mystery!
Yet he laughs and cries, and eats and drinks,
And chuckles and crows, and nods and winks,
As if his head were as full of kinks
And curious riddles as any sphinx.
Warped by colic and by tears,
Puncture by pins and tortured by fears,
Has little nephew will lose two years:
And he'll never know
Where the summers go:
He need not laugh, for he'll find it so!

Who can tell what a baby thinks?
Who can follow the gossamer links
By which the manikin feels its way
Out from the shore of the great unknown,
Blind and wailing, and alone,
Into the light of day?
Out from the shore of the unknown sea,
Tossing in pitiful agony—
Of the unknown sea that reels and rolls,
Specked with the barks of little souls—
Barks that were launched on the other side,
And slipped from heaven on an ebbing tide?

What does he think of his mother's eyes?
What does he think of his mother's hair?
What of the cradle-roof that flies
Forward and backward through the air?
What does he think of his mother's breast—
Cyclet of life and couch of his rest?

What does he think when her quick embrace
Presses his hand and buries his face
Deep where the heart-throbs sink and swell
With a tenderness she can never tell,
Though she murmur the words
Of all the birds—
Words she has learned to murmur well!
Now he thinks he will go to sleep!
I can see the shadow creep
Over his eyes in soft eclipse,
Over his brow and over his lips
Out to his little finger-tips!
Softly sinking, down he goes!
See! He is hushed in sweet repose!

From the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

CHRISTIAN UNION CHURCH.

Various papers referring to the acts and doings of a council of the Christian Union Church, lately held in Illinois, have reached this office. There is not space in this paper for the publication of all of them. The following are those likely to be most interesting to the public generally, and they fully explain themselves.

"Memorandum of Remarks made by Bishop Doggett before the Council of the Christian Union Church, at Clinton, Illinois, Sept. 14, 1866:

Bishop Doggett was introduced to the Council by the President, Rev. M. R. Jones. After a short interval, Bishop Doggett was requested to make any remarks he might be inclined to make to the Council.

Thanking them for the opportunity, he said he was not in the habit of using notes, either in speaking or preaching, but that he would take the liberty of using them on the present occasion for the sake of perspicuity and precision. He then spoke as follows:

I desire, at the outset, to define my exact position before this body. I was sent, in connection with Rev. Dr. Linn, of Louisville, Ky., as a fraternal messenger from the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, in response to a deputation from this body to that Conference, in the person of the Rev. Jacob Ditzler. I was not appointed by the General Conference by name, but a resolution was passed, appointing Dr. Linn and one of the bishops as messengers. Subsequently the Board of Bishops requested me to perform that duty, my tour of Conferences being contiguous to that of the Council. I deeply regret the absence of Dr. Linn, and was very much surprised not to find him here, but a letter from him, received this morning, dated 11th inst., explains the cause of his absence, that is, personal indisposition.

Bishop Doggett said, I wish it to be distinctly understood, that the General Conference did not send Dr. Linn and one of the bishops with any other purpose than as fraternal messengers. We were not sent with any direction or purpose to extend at this time the jurisdiction of the M. E. Church, South, into this State.

He said, if it were proper to do so, I feel myself authorized with discretionary power to act in the premises, but from my inquiries into the actual state of affairs among you, I am persuaded that you are not prepared to take action satisfactory, either to yourselves or to me as an officer of the General Conference.

It becomes me, therefore, to discharge the specific duty for which I was sent, and this I proceed to do with the greatest pleasure.

It was my purpose, from the beginning, to fulfill this mission, and made my arrangements at great personal inconvenience accordingly, such was my deep personal interest in your movement.

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, understand that you are purely a religious body; that you have organized with an exclusive purpose of promoting evangelical piety; that your doctrinal and ecclesiastical views harmonize with our own; that you are not complicated as a Christian body with political questions or political parties; on the contrary, that it is your avowed object to keep yourselves aloof from all political entanglements so far as your ecclesiastical operations are concerned, and that in these respects the hand of God is with you.

It is in these respects, and these alone, that the General Conference sympathize with you, and they do it cordially. I am authorized officially to extend to you the hand of fellowship, to offer to you their hearty congratulations, and in your mission to save souls, to bid you God speed!

The M. E. Church, South, which I represent to day, is not a political Church in any sense of the word. Its ministers do not preach politics, and never have; its Conferences, quarterly, annual and general have abstained from all political questions. This is their unimpeachable record. I challenge successful contradiction. I felt a noble pleasure at the Baltimore Conference, held in Alexandria, when it was admitted into the M. E. Church, South, by Bishop Early, in saying, that so far as my memory served me, I did not recollect an instance in which a regularly constituted body of the M. E. Church, South, had ever recorded a resolution on a political question. I appealed to the Bishop for the truth of the statement, and he confirmed my recollection. If there has been any such instance, I do not remember it, and it is an exception to the general statement.

The M. E. Church, South, is in a state of great harmony and of gracious success. It has arisen from the calamities of war with astonishing vigor and power; it has renewed its youth like the eagle's, and is ready for a grander gospel achievement than ever.

The Bishop further said, that the late General Conference had introduced several important measures into the economy of the Church, which he thought it important to mention it in their presence: First. Change of name to "Episcopal Methodist Church," which he believed would be accomplished. Second. Lay delegation, which he thought would also be accomplished. Third. The probationary system, which had been abolished. Fourth. The mode of receiving members into the Church, which he thought was a great improvement. These are, perhaps, the most important measures which were introduced.

The great want of the Church and of the world, he said, is the unadulterated truth of the gospel, and our mission, as a Church, is to preach that form of Christianity which we believe to be comprehended by a pure Wesleyan Methodism. He concluded by saying: We invoke God's blessing upon you in the name of the Church, and especially in the name of our common Lord and Master, in all your deliberations, duties and trials; and when the proper time shall arrive, when you, as a body of ministers and members, shall desire it, and when you are free from embarrassments in a manner satisfactory to yourselves, we will rejoice to form a more intimate association with you.

Report of Committee on Plan of Union with the M. E. Church, South:

WHEREAS, The unity and harmony of the Church are essential to its efficiency, prosperity and peace; and,

WHEREAS, There are several religious bodies in this country, all holding the same fundamental principles of Christianity, the unity of which in one body would greatly promote the interests of Christ's Kingdom; and

WHEREAS, The M. E. Church, South, the most powerful and influential of these bodies, has taken steps in common with us to secure so desirable an end, in that at her late General Conference at New Orleans she agreed, with great unanimity, to drop the restrictive adjunct to her title, subject to confirmation by the style and title of the Episcopal Methodist Church, as contradistinguished from the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States, and did make changes agreeing in substance with our economy; therefore,

Resolved, That we do become a Conference of said Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with the same style and title, as part of the same, by the adoption of her doctrines and Discipline, with the change of the aforesaid style and title, provided that a majority of the members of the Christian Union Church, voting, shall sanction the same at an election called for that purpose.

Resolved, That the pastors shall call and superintend the elections in each society, and make returns of the same to the Superintendent of the district in the bounds of which said elections shall be held; and that upon the event a majority of the members present and voting at the elections favor such a union, the Superintendents shall meet at some convenient place and make official announcement of the same; and shall proceed to call a session of the Annual Council of the Christian Union Church, and invite one of the bishops of the M. E. Church, South, to be present and organize the aforesaid Christian Union Church into an Annual Conference of the aforesaid Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with the aforesaid change of style and title.

APPOINTMENTS OF THE PREACHERS.

PEORIA DISTRICT—R P Holt, Superintendent.—Peoria, to be supplied; Canton, D T Sherman; Lewistown, David Rose; Midway, to be supplied; Yates City, J L D Proctor; Ottowa, to be supplied; Magnolia, O M T Samuels; Neecoma, and Edgington, J Richmond, B Beagle; Smithville, T R Kendall.

SPRINGFIELD DISTRICT—R Smithson, Superintendent.—Springfield, to be supplied; Clinton, W R Howard; Jacksonville, to be supplied; Blandinsville, to be supplied; Lima, Oscar Smithson; Quincy, to be supplied; Barry, J M Posey; Mt. Sterling, to be supplied.

SALEM DISTRICT—M R Jones, Superintendent.—Salem, N P Paisey; Xenia, D Standford, J Beagle; Rome, J D Gray; Effingham, to be supplied; Fairfield, P Titsworth; Ashley, R F Hester; Stanton, J R Pritchett.

CAIRO DISTRICT — J W Westcott, Superintendent.— Cairo, to be supplied; Marion, Jos. Dines; Chester, A Caldwell; Murphysboro, D L Myers; DeSoto, J B Frost.

Rev. Thomas B Deeds, Agent for the Western Seminary.

A CATHEDRAL FOR HONOLULU. — The visit of Queen Emma to England has led to Mr. Slater, the architect, receiving instructions to put in hand immediately the first portion of his design for a church which is to form the modest cathedral of the newest and smallest of national churches, and the monument of the late king, who was the founder of that church in his island kingdom. The style is English-Gothic of the early Decorated period.

Mobile has a population of 40,902, of which about 12,400 are colored. Of Confederate soldiers in the late war the city had 315 killed, 171 died, and 352 disabled.

Right Rev. Bishop Elder, of Natchez Miss., has actively commenced to repair the disasters of war in his diocese. He is about to establish a school at Holly Springs, Miss., and has been offered $3500 by some liberal Protestants of the place to commence immediately.

N. O. Christian Advocate.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 13th, 1866.

QUARTERLY MEETING, at Baton Rouge, 20th and 21st October.

J. C. KEENER, P. E.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT STEWARDS MEETING, will be held at 112 Camp St., on Wednesday, 17th, at 5 P. M.

The news of the death of the Rev. Dr. S. D. BALDWIN, the author of "Armageddon," reaches us through the secular papers. It is stated that he died in Nashville, of cholera. It comes by the telegraph to the city papers, but we yet hope there may be some mistake in the statement.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

We insert this week the cards of a number of our most reliable merchants, some of whom are too well known to need anything from us.

Messrs. KEEP & CAULFIELD, Western Produce and Commission Merchants, No. 77 and 79 Poydras street.

Messrs. A. Brousseau & Co, Importers of Carpeting and oil cloths, of all qualities, cornices, curtains, mattings, etc., No. 17 Chartres street. This is one of the oldest establishments in the city.

Messrs. G. and T. F. SEARING, Manufacturers and Dealers in Clothing and Plantation Goods, No. 29 Magazine street, corner of Gravier street.

Messrs. CAMPBELL, ECKFORD & Co., Cotton Factors, Forwarding and General Commission Merchants, No. 58 Camp street. These gentlemen are both recently from Mobile, and have been for years among the oldest and most reliable of the Commission Merchants of that city.

Messrs. H. WARE & SON, Cotton and Wool Factors, and Commission Merchants, No. 64 Carondelet street. Mr. W., senior, is an old citizen of East Texas; has been a Cotton Planter and Manufacturer in Harrison county. He had at the conclusion of the war several thousand bales of cotton, in evidence of his success in both these departments of industry. Few men have had greater success, or are better acquainted with the people of Texas.

Messrs. THOMAS B. BODLEY, & Co., Dealers in all Description of Mill and Plantation machinery, steam engines, saw mills, cultivators, etc., No. 9 Perdido St.

Messrs. S. H. ABY & Co., Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants, 1c6 Gravier street.

Messrs. HARVEY, M'MAHON & Co., Cotton Factors, Commission and Forwarding Merchants, 122 Carondelet — Davidson's row.

J. H. MASSEY, Wholesale Dry Goods, 100 Common street, is one of the most reliable of merchants and thoroughly acquainted with his business, having been engaged in it for a score of years in this city.

Messrs. PITKIN & Co., Fashionable Clothing Emporium, No. 13 and 15 Camp street. During the war these gentlemen supplied, distributed, and gave away hundreds of dollars worth of clothing to prisoners and soldiers of the South.

JAS. A. GRESHAM, Bookseller and Stationer, 92 Camp street. Mr. G. presents to the public a good assortment of Church, Masonic, school, medical and law books.

Messrs TURNER & COHEN, Photograph and Fine art gallery, No. 57 Camp street. Their colored miniatures on china and life size portraits, for delicacy and accuracy, are not surpassed by any that we have seen.

Messrs. NOLLE, DAY & Co., Cotton Factors, Commission Merchants, 158 Common street.

Messrs. GAINES & RELY, Importers and Dealers, wholesale and retail, in earthenware, glass and china, Japan, plated, and silver ware, fine cutlery etc., No 100 Canal street.

L'ELEIN, Importer of carpets, oil cloths, curtain materials, damasks, window-shades, etc., No 3 Carondelet street.

Messrs. SLARK, STAUFFER & Co., Importers and Dealers in Hardware and Agricultural implements, No 71 Canal street: This immense establishment has renewed its energy and youth. It has long been a principal depot of hardware goods, and presents as usual a large stock for the supply and choice of planters and country dealers:

We are indebted to the attention of W. Stramer of the SOUTHERN EXPRESS Co., for a file of late Mississippi and Texas papers.

During the past few weeks numbers of families have left the iron and coal districts of South Wales for the United States, and the mania for emigration has taken such a permanent hold of the miners and iron workers that the exodus is expected to keep up for some time, notwithstanding the improved prospects of the staple trades of the district.

THE "BENEFICENT RESULT."

If the scarlet whore of the Apocalypse signifies the political prostitution of the Church, it will be seen, by the following, how deeply Northern Methodist preachers have been enamored of her:

THOROUGHLY RADICAL.—The N. W. Christian Advocate says of the Northern Methodist papers:—The whole Methodist press is now, we believe, without an exception, on one side of the present national controversy. It is thoroughly "radical" for the restoration of the Southern States on the most uncompromised principles of universal rights and loyalty; the rebuke and legal punishment of treason; the protection of Southern loyalists; the enfranchisement and elevation of our emancipated population; and the stern repression of every remnant of the rebellion. That press is a power in the land; we doubt whether there is another journalastic power equal to it. It cannot be bribed and it cannot be intimidated; and, as it appeals to the moral sense, the conscience of its millions of readers, it wields a force which may, in the highest sense, be called the "balance of power." The political leaders of the hour seem not to be aware of its capacity, if indeed, of its existence. It would be well for them to take account of it. They will not fail to do so in the issue, if not earlier.

To this we add the further evidence of the remarks, in the last Methodist Quarterly Review, of its able Editor, Dr. Whedon. The Doctor, it will be seen, returns to his original direction, like a brook which, for awhile, has been diverted in its flow by roots and rocks, but now glides into its place with brawling satisfaction:

"That we long cherished the hope of harmonization in State, aided by its counterpart in Church; that we earnestly advocated the spirit and the measures tending to such a harmonization, on the high platform of freedom and right, is to us a happy recollection. Its failure was no fault, no error, no mismanagement of ours. We took no step which we regret; we wrote no line which, "dying, we would wish to blot." That we were right is evident from this: that those who have assailed us as derelict to our high principles of freedom have ever evaded stating our true positions, namely, that we desired fraternity only on the basis of eternal truth and righteousness."

It will be seen in this item that he refers to his "fraternity" interval. That he plumes himself on that honest and far-reaching effort of Charity. He lays the blame of failure—upon whom? Not upon the South certainly; for he himself admitted that it was by some accident that the fatal omission of "praying for the peace of the country" occurred in the Southern response. He even took back all that may have been said by him reflecting upon the Southern General Conference. After all this it will be seen that there is a fierce spirit of hate in the Doctor against the South. He says:

If we read Mr. Johnson's nature aright, he is and ever has been at bottom as intensely sectional a southerner as Robert Toombs or Jefferson Davis. But as those haughty oligarchs repudiated him as a "mean white," he denounced them at the crisis, and found himself compelled by the current to a broad radical position of defiance to the rebellion, adherence to the government, confiscation and division of great landed estates, the supremacy of southern loyalty, and even negro suffrage. When, however, he was placed at the head of the government, and southern oligarchy was prostrated at his feet in flattery and supplication, his full ancient nature repossessed him. The ancient dogma, that the oligarchy of the South shall rule the nation, again becomes an axiom. For this he has struggled to withdraw all protection from the southern negro; has opposed a constitutional amendment, in order to add twelve more votes to the South concentrated into the hands of the rebel oligarchy; and has opened an exterminating war upon the national Congress, authorizing his organs to menace a military coup d'etat unless the representatives of the people obey the menaces of their accidental dictator. He has placed a military equipment for 200,000 soldiers in the hands of the rebels. Such are the alarming results of all our expenditure of blood and treasure. For four years of war we had the firm feeling that an honest patriot held our helm. Now the days are returned when our ruler is a traitor to the cause of truth and freedom, who stands to Buchanan as king Stork stands to king Log. His reign is cruel to the North, but far more misleading and destructive to the South; and the true patriots of both sections, just so far as they clearly realize their country's good, will unite in opposing his disastrous "policy."

So far as our Church is concerned, never on any great moral and political question, dividing the nation, were we so perfect a unit. Ministers and laymen, as citizens and voters, stand politically one; and morally one on the great moral question, underlying the political, whether manhood shall attain and possess its "unalienable rights." We shall through our various Church agencies—our missionary, church extension, and freedman's aid organizations—prosecute (in, we trust, the most Christian spirit) the great work of raising the humblest manhood of all our land to the full capacity for all its rights. The blood of our missionaries may again redden the southern fields; but the voice of that blood will awaken God and man to more decisive action. Not doubtful, and we believe not very far distant, is the beneficent result, in which the emeacipated South as well as the North will have abounding cause for joy.

The burden of this denunciation is the "slave oligarchy." He cannot allow that ad captandum epithet to pass away with the institution of slavery. He will only use one part of it to call up the other. He will arouse the prejudices of his readers by the familiar cry of the ante-war and war periods. He will call up the spectre which had been laid by four long years of fire and blood.—Is he really still afraid of the "Rebel Oligarchy?" Nonsense. If he wants a plea, why not declare the real one—the plunder that may be yet raked out of the ashes of the South! Why not argue further punishment and righteous vengeance, rather than talk about enfranchising blacks while he himself refuses to enfranchise the white man of the South? The truth is, the Doctor is much more concerned about his own status with the Oligarchy of Northern Methodism at No. 200 Mulberry Street than with any other oligarchy. He got out of line in a charitable fit; he now gets into line by denouncing the President and the "Southern Oligarchy." Let him succeed

If the reader will now contemplate Dr. Whedon as the most conservative man in Northern Methodism; and then consider that Methodism as the "salt" of that part of the earth, he may form some adequate idea of the "beneficent result" that awaits the South. To this "result" the Doctor will have contributed his influence.—He adroitly prepares the public to expect it. He advertises the South that it is "again in deep danger of being victimized" by the "turbulent class of her politicians, aided by her uneducated, unprincipled, loose population."—How considerate and tender! for, he adds, there is a "true-hearted South" "for and with which we have the profoundest sympathy." If the Doctor is sincere, he is self-deceived. He evidently does not know the strength of his own "deep" prejudices against the South. He is the victim of long years of fanatical hatred and systematic opposition to the "Southern Oligarchy." He still sees the horrible creation of a distempered mind. If the trouble comes, that "beneficent result" will not be set down by history to any "turbulent class in the South," but to such educated, earnest men as the Doctor himself; men of the Church, of prayer, men who have these long years gone aside from the doctrines of the Gospel to meddle with great "moral and political questions;" men who boast that "ministers and laymen stand politically one;" who boast that "we shall, through our various Church agencies, prosecute the great work of raising the humblest manhood of all our land to the full capacity for all its rights."

At the recent Centenary meeting of Northern Methodism in Cooper's Institute, the eloquent Sewall found the field and theme of achievement so large that he wandered round its precincts "looking where he could get in." We suggest to him three gaps, for future discourse. First, the significant fact that during this past year, the one hundredth of its glory, a large number of Southern Methodist churches have been violently wrested out of the hands of the "North Church" by the President of the United States. Second, that during the year large and peaceable Lovefeasts have been held by 1,000 Eastern Methodist ministers, in Boston, Mass., and 600 Western Methodist ministers, in Bloomington, Ill., in order to see eye to eye. And that now, that which never could have been said in any previous year, can this year be said by authority, that the whole "North Church," "ministers and laymen, as citizens and voters, stand politically one." After these two, let the brother pause, invoke the shade of John Wesley, and then pass on to the third opening, to wit: the spectacle of entire deadness to the world which his Church presents to Angels and men in this the glorious Centenary of its existence.

With the rage of war full in his veins, this able minister, the Theological custodian and highest literary officer of Northern Methodism, Dr. Whedon, utters the rallying cry of every inflamed passion of civil contest, muffles his head, and in the attitude of prayer, awaits the "BENEFICENT RESULT!"

O Lord, Thou that "restrainest the remainder of wrath," we pray Thee to turn the counsel of this enraged "North Church" into foolishness!

From the inquiry which has been held with regard to the sinking of the Affondatore, which went down somewhat after the fashion of the Royal George, it appears that the ill-fated vessel was pulled to the bottom by her own anchors; she was made so fast that she could not rise to the waves, and, her lower ports having been left open, the water rushed in and down she went. She now lies in a muddy bottom, and it will be a difficult work to raise her to the surface.

The Palmyra Presbytery, has recently divided, after the manner of the Louisville Presbytery.

Monthly and District Meetings.

In a letter to the Nashville Advocate, the Bishop commends these new elements of Methodism. We extract the following:

I sat down to say a word on the Monthly Meetings of the Church, and the District meetings. As to the first, it is my deliberate judgment, that if preachers and people are faithful in holding them, and working out the plan, they will, under God, bring back the Church to primitive power and renew the scenes of old. These meetings condense into a living, active form, and augment the influence which has been vainly sought for in pastoral visits. They bring the members of the Church into acquaintance, sympathy, and fellowship with each other. They rouse the activity of the Church by a proper distribution of the work to be done. The poor, the Sunday-schools, the Church papers, the finances, come up for consideration; new interest is awakened; liberal plans are devised, and the resources of the Church are developed and applied. They will restore discipline, and this is the life of the body. Disorderly members will be brought to an account. Dram-drinkers and dancing Methodists, without prompt confession of wrong, deep humiliation, and solemn pledges never to repeat, will be (or they ought to be) cut off.

The preachers, I trust, will cease to rely upon talking and coaxing, and let all these old offendes know that the Church cannot, will not tolerate these vices and follies. If it be said that our young members will quit us and go to other Churches, I answer, let them go. We lose nothing but numbers, and others gain nothing that a Church of Christ ought to have. For one I say, any Church desiring such accessions are welcome to all the Methodists, so called, who can be bought by the privilege of dancing.

I have recently attended a District Meeting at Athens, and was delighted and profited. My hopes of the future were greatly revived. I was and am opposed to the District Conference project, for reasons too tedious to mention now. The District Meeting is another and a better thing. It is all the better that it is not a legal, official convention, but a voluntary association, without the restriction of arbitrary rules, and the stiffness of prescribed formularies. A time and place are set, and the brethren come together, not under the constraint of a routine duty; but from a spontaneous impulse—the unfeigned love of the Church. There is a freedom, a heartiness in these meetings, truly refreshing. The fact carries out in beautiful development that the laity are alive to the great moral questions which burden the ministry—that they are thinking on these things—that they feel and are ready to co-operate in every feasible plan to deliver the Church from the world—restore her power, and start her upon a new and wider career of usefulness.

Moreover, these meetings antagonize those feelings of isolation and independence, which are sure to grow up in the Churches, unless they meet and mingle occasionally in consultation over their common interest. Methodism is essentially a connectional system. Disintegration would be ruin. The bonds of unity must be cherished. The stations and the circuits must be taught that, however distinct, they are parts of a common whole. Where there is no hostility there may be alienation and indifference; and this will be, unless there be some rallying point—some place of fellowship — some association which invokes community of feeling and action. This was one of the great benefits of camp-meetings. They brought the people together — identified the Churches one with another—each with all—promoted brotherly kindness, confidence, and charity, and compacted the organism "by that which every joint supplied," "making increase of the body, unto the edifying of itself in love."

These District Meetings, I think it likely, will, in a measure, take the place of camp-meetings, and will perpetuate some of their most useful functions. In one important respect they will have a great advantage— in that they will call together the leading members, officers, and others of a whole District. This will unify the Church in that territory—give uniformity of administration to discipline and finance—give opportunity to compare modes and measures for the management for Sunday-schools—provision for the poor—the distribution of service, and the better organization of our entire work.

I beg to commend these meetings to the Presiding Elders, preachers, and people everywhere. They will grow in value as they are better understood, and as their wholesome fruits begin to ripen.

Young Men and the Ministry.

The following remarks were by Bishop Janes upon the occasion of their being but one candidate for full admission into the M. E. Indiana Conference.

The condition of the Conference and of the times seems to indicate the propriety of a few words. Why is it that so few are now entering the ministry? Formerly there were more young men annually knocking at the doors of our Conferences than the Church could employ. But now see what a paucity! But one before us for admission. There is an error somewhere. I cannot admit that it is in my Lord. May it not be in the way of our good brethren—editors, preachers, and others—speak and write on this subject? Do they not unconsciously make an impression on the mind of community adverse to the interests of our Lord's kingdom? Do not their teachings cause us to look almost altogether to the universities and colleges for the supplying the pulpit? Our doctrine has always been that God calls men to the ministry. Could we go back fifty years in this respect, and practice upon the plan of our fathers, our Conferences would be supplied with young men who could go second men in our circuits, and all these neighborhoods now without the Gospel, where souls are perishing, would be supplied. And we would have men to send, also, into the newer regions of our country, and missionaries to foreign lands would be numerous.

It is urged that we have now a more intelligent people to preach to than formerly. But I am not prepared to admit this. If ever there was a time when there has been a conflict of mind and when wit was sharpened, it was during the Revolutionary War, when our Church began its conquests. Then there was much intelligence among the people. And then our preachers went to high and low, and preached to the learned and the ignorant. And there "were ministers for the times;" "there were giants in those days."

But admit that the people are more intelligent now than formerly; if God calls men now, as he does always, from among the people, will they not be more intelligent than formerly, as much more so as the people are, from whom they are selected?

God calls men from the bench, from the counters of the merchant, from the plow, and from the anvil. And has he not always called "men for the times?" When he needed a Wesley, he called on Wesley; when he needed a Coke, he called on Coke; when he needed a Fletcher, he baptized him for the work which needed to be done; when he needed an Asbury, he called on Asbury by his Spirit and by his providence, and designated him to the field which he should fill. I want you to support your educational institutions efficiently and liberally. But we can't wait for them to prepare our preachers. There is no better school than the itinerancy. No problem in mathematics exercises and improves the mind more than the preparation of sermons, upon themes as divine as God as high as heaven, as lasting as eternity. The preacher that will not read, that has no taste for reading, let him, as the Discipline says, acquire a taste for reading or return to his former business.

Red tape in the State is bad; red tape in the Church is worse. I rejoice that our people are becoming educated; I am to meet educated laymen in prominent positions. But, brethren, I protest against the impression being made on the minds of our young men, that they must not preach till they have passed through a university course, or a theological school. While you hold them back souls are perishing for whom my Lord shed his precious blood.

Let our children be educated as well as possible. And if a young man, who feels that God has called him to labour in his vineyard, can quiet his conscience while he obtains an education, let him obtain an education; but I repeat, don't hold them back in whose hearts the Spirit has kindled a burning desire to save souls. No, brethren, take them in their first love, and thrust them out into the field. Get them out of the way before the professors get hold of them and take them to the University. I can't have full confidence in the generalship of the pastor of the Church, if he does not have his young men holding a dozen prayer meetings all around their circuits. Let the presiding elders take them around their districts, forty at a time, to assist at their quarterly meetings; and then they would not have to complain of small attendance on Saturdays at their quarterly meetings. The people would come in crowds, for they would hear that God is with you. This was the plan of our fathers, and it was God's plan. This is the lesson that a hundred years has taught us—that God calls his workmen. By this plan men go into the work right from among the people; from the sympathies of humanity, of which their hearts are full, and not after colleges and schools have secluded them from society, and, in some measure, cooled those sympathies and their youthful ardor. I am ready to endure all the odium that may be cast on me for these views. I have given them utterance, because they have nestled in my heart for years; and I expect to proclaim them while I live, for they are convictions in my heart, clear and deep. I will speak for souls, precious souls, for they are perishing all around me.

A REQUEST.

We publish the following Request of the Rev. W. W. Bennett, of the Virginia Conference, and hope that our preachers will promptly respond to it:

The undersigned has in course of preparation a narrative of THE GREAT REVIVAL which prevailed in the Southern armies during the late war.

Desiring to make the record of that extraordinary work of grace as complete as possible, he earnestly solicits the aid of ministers and laymen of the different denominations who witnessed and participated in the revival.

Information under any of the following heads will be most gratefully received.

1. Beginning, progress, and incidents of the revival in the regiments, brigade, division, corps, army, fort, or hospital with which the writer was connected.

2. Notices of pious soldiers, officers and privates, living or dead, who were prominent in promoting the cause of religion.

3. The formation of Christian Associations, Camp Churches, Sunday schools, and Bible-classes, with some account of their operations and results.

4. Scenes in hospitals, or on battle-fields, in illustration of the power of faith.

5. Recollections of the prison life of Southern soldiers, with special reference to the religious interest that prevailed among them in prison. He would also be thankful for the use of any private matter that would assist him in his work; and if desired, all such matter will be carefully returned to the persons presenting it. It is earnestly desired that all who can lend a helping hand will do so with as little delay as possible.

W. W. BENNET,
Blacks and Whites P.O., Nottoway co., Va.

Will other religious papers please copy this request?

Russia vs. Radicals.

It was a grave departure from this sentiment and rule of conduct on our part when Congress turned aside from its proper duties, to adopt resolutions of sympathy and congratulation to the Romanoff Emperor, on his escape from death at the hands of one of his subjects. It was quite apparent, however, that this manifestation was prompted more by domestic partisan views and feelings, than by any real interest in the fate or regard for the welfare and longevity of the Russian.

The resolution adopted by Congress, on the motion of Thaddeus Stevens, congratulated the Emperor on his escape from assassination at the hands of an infuriated ex-slave holder—driven to his infamous design by the brutal passions kindled by slaveholding.

And now, we have the Emperor's response as delivered by Prince Gortchakoff, to Mr. Fox, our envoy extraordinary—and certainly a very humiliating and galling one—though accompanied by every expression of amity and good feeling on the part of the Russian Government; humiliating in that it convicts our Congress of the supreme silliness of basing one of its solemn acts on an idle invention or rumor,—a mere newspaper canard, of the most flimsy and unauthentic character. "You are altogether mistaken, 'quoth the Russian,' it is a grave error, and if uncontradicted by us might be a very hurtful one—to give it out to the world that the madman, who sought the life of our great and good Emperor, was instigated by revenge—any real or imaginary sense of wrong and injury—on account of these annexations of serfs. On the contrary, the Prince says, all rejoice in that act and applaud the Emperor for it. The man who attempted to assassinate the Emperor was an ordinary lunatic, who never owned a serf or had any wrongs to avenge."—N. O. Times.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

We learn from the Southern Christian Advocate that there has been a great revival at Athens, Ga. For the last few weeks a revival has been in progress at Athens, and for the past two weeks there has been a wonderful display of divine power. We learned about the middle of last week that above 200 persons had presented themselves for prayer at one time. We have heard from the meeting down to Monday. Old Christians have never seen any thing like it. All business was suspended, and the community en masse was at the prayer meeting. Some 85 or 90 had joined the Methodist, 26 the Presbyterian, and three the Baptist Church. Revs. J S Key and G F Penree were assisting the pastor Rev H H Parks.

NEWS FROM OTHER CHURCHES.

METHODIST E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

Held a grand Centenary meeting at Cooper's Institute. After the regular addresses had been made the meeting fell in a sort of natural way into the hands of Rev. Dr. M'Clintock. It was soon seen that the Central Committee had conspired to make this occasion the commencement of pecuniary crystallization. There had been several important rumors afloat of a financial sort in respect to the Centenary year, but hardly any thing had as yet absolutely gone on paper. And Dr. M'Clintock began by pledging Daniel Drew, of New York, who was on the platform, to a subscription of moneys and lands of a half a million of dollars. Fifty-two thousand dollars for a female college in Carmel, N. Y., and the grounds and buildings for a Central Biblical Institute, and an endowment of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in cash. Dr. M'Clintock next called upon the members of the Central Committee for their subscriptions, and Mr. J. Bishop, of New Jersey, responded in $30,000; Oliver Hoyt, Esq., of New York, in $25,000; C. C. North, A. M., a merchant of this city, in 10,000; the Dr. himself in fifteen hundred, and the two editors, Dr Curry and Dr. Crooks, in five hundred each. The list was then opened for competition, and Mr. J. H. Ockerhausen, a sugar refiner of New York, gave $22,000. W W Cornell Esq., $7,000, and ministers and laymen then added their subscriptions of from $50 to $1,500, till three quarters of a million of dollars were that night given to Methodism. This whole subscription was made by fifty persons, leaving, as you see, a pretty wide margin among the Methodists of this region for further contributions. The two New York Conferences will give not less than two millions and a half to the Centenary fund.

The Corner-stone of the Memorial church, which Mr. Peabody, the London Banker, is building at Georgetown, Mass., laid on the 19th, if the programme was carried out. The Church will be of brick and stone, and cost $100,000.

ILLINOIS REUNION.—One of the grandest occasions of this great Centennial year, was the reunion of the four Illinois Conferences at Bloomington, on Monday and Tuesday of last week. In the middle of the afternoon, the Central Illinois Conference, with their President, Bishop Simpson, arrived from Lexington, and crowded the church where the Illinois Conference was yet in session, Dr. Cartwright in the chair, and greetings of joy made further business almost impossible. Bishop Ames had been compelled to leave, in order to meet the Iowa Conference, to assemble in Knoxville, Iowa, on Wednesday. Shortly after the Rock River Conference, with Bishop Clark at their head, entered the church, the citizens retiring to the gallery to make room for them. A few from the Southern Illinois Conference arrived during the evening. Meetings were held in the Presbyterian and Methodist churches, and addresses delivered. In the Methodist church, Rev. Wm. H Hunter, of the Central Illinois Conference, presided. Rev. S R Beggs, Rev. Charles R Adams, D. D. and Rev. L Hitchcock, D. D., spoke. Dr. Raymond and Rev. Wm. Cummins also spoke.

PRESBYTERIAN.

The Presbytery of Tuscaloosa held their regular session on the 20th of September, at Lexington, Ala., nine ministers and ten ruling elders present. The Committee on Education reported that there were three candidates for the ministry, under the care of and dependent on the other Presbytery, for whose maintenance during the current year, $12,000 were needed. Resolutions were passed enjoining the churches to take up collections to meet the amount. The Presbytery animadverted upon the "State Lottery for the relief of the State University," and warned all their members against indulging in a practice so "injurious and virtually immoral."

At the Meeting of the New York Synod of the United Presbyterian Church of North America, now being held in Galt, resolutions were adopted denouncing Feminism in strong terms. This, we believe, is the first instance where any American religious body has expressed an opinion on the subject. The friendly feeling evinced towards Canada does credit to the body, and will meet a hearty response from Canadians.

EPISCOPAL.

LIBERAL GIVING. — Five Episcopal Churches in Massachusetts have contributed for religious purposes, for the year ending May, 1866, $107,617 26. Four of them are situated in Boston, and one in Brooklin. We give some statistics taken from the Journal of the Convention: Church of the Advent, Rev. Dr. Bolles, Rector, has 591 communicants, and has contributed $26,820, being on an average, $45 38 to each communicant. Emanuel, Rev. Dr. Huntington, Rector, 500 communicants, contributes $24,386, an average of $48 77. Trinity, Bishop Eastburn, Rector, 400 communicants, contributions, $22,242, an average of $55 68. St. Paul's, Rev. W. R Nicholson, Rector, 400 communicants, contributions, $20,535, an average of $51 34. St. Paul's, Brooklin, Rev. Dr. Wharton, Rector, 180 communicants, contributions, $13,634, an average of $76 for each communicant.

A movement is on foot to establish in the Episcopal Church in this country the grades in the ecclesiastical hierarchy which have been disused since the separation from the mother Church of England. The Diocese of Illinois, in convention have resolved that it is expedient to re-establish the office of Dean; and a resolution favoring what is called the Provincial system, was referred to a special committee, with considerable likelihood of being adopted.

A most beautiful tribute to the memory of the late Bishop of the Diocese is to be seen at St Paul's Church, on Camp street, of which the Rev. Chas. Goodrich, D.D. is the Rector. It is a beautiful square tablet of pure white marble, surmounted by a cross, being a token of remembrance and affection from the congregation, and which bears this inscription: "Rt. Rev. Leonidas Polk, Bishop of Louisiana. Born April 10, 1806. Died June 14, 1864. Numbered with thy saints in glory everlasting."—Church Visitor.

BAPTIST.

The Crescent City church, New Orleans, of which the Rev. Mr. Seymour was pastor, and for whose new meeting-house he had made earnest effort to obtain Northern subscriptions, has been disbanded.

Rev. S. Jones, a Baptist minister, has "changed his views with regard to baptism" and has been received into the Canada Presbyterian Church. A slight modification of one's "views" as to "church government" is likewise involved, one would suppose, in going from the Baptists to the Presbyterians.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The foundation walls of the First Congregational meeting house, Washington City, are progressing rapidly. The probability now is that the installation of Dr. Boynton, pastor elect, and the laying of the corner-stone, will occur at the same time, the first week in October.

The Rev. B. Emmerson, D.D., was installed as pastor of the South Congregational Church, Salem, Mass, over fifty years ago. A few days since he attended the funeral of the only remaining member who was in the church when he began his labors there.

CATHOLIC.

WHAT WILL THE POPE DO!—Dr. Cullen, the new Irish Cardinal, on his return to Dublin, spoke at some length on this interesting question. To the language of an Irish correspondent of a New York paper, "as he has just returned from Rome and has had access to the highest authorities, his views are deserving of attention. The future of Italy fills him with the gloomiest forebodings. He regards the September Convention as a plot and a snare, and believes the Garibaldians will be in Rome before many months. To all appearance, says he, the time is now come when the Catholic world must look on while the sanity remnant of the pontifical kingdom, and even Rome itself, shall become the prey of the sacreligious scum of the Catholic Church. The Emperor Napoleon has left the Pope to the mercy of men who avow the deadliest hatred to the Pope and religion, and who will not hesitate on the first opportunity to pounce upon Rome and destroy the Pope's authority. It is very probable that within a few months his holiness may be reduced to such a condition as not to know where he may turn his steps. Affairs in the kingdom are conducted on principles of infidelity and opposition to the Holy Father, and every effort made to destroy the influence of the church. One of the leaders of the revolutionary party at a public dinner in Florence said, "now that we have overthrown Austria, the bulwark of Catholicism, we must next overthrow the Pope and the god of the Pope."

His Eminence does not say whether the god of the Pope is Louis Napoleon or some unmentioned being not allinded to as responsible for what is now occurring. But as to the rest of his speech, it is quite clear that a great crisis has come, and that the temporal power of the Pope is not much altered, if not entirely destroyed. Victor Emanuel has already seized the monastic establishments in his kingdom and dismissed the monks, and rumor says that, in despair, the Pope has offered the Vicarate of the papal states to the Emperor of the French.

A WARNING.—The Catholic priest of Lee, Mass., publicly reprimanded one of his people in church on Sunday the 12th, for being slack in paying his pew rent. The eloquent arose and "spoke out in meeting" in reply, whereupon the reverend father laid aside his dignity, came down from the pulpit, and shook the offending member by the collar till he subsided into a respectful silence.

The Report of the Military Commission on the New Orleans Riot.

This is before the public. It asserts great impartiality. But charges the Lieut. Governor and the Mayor of the city, virtually, as the authors of the riot. A New Orleans citizen, who was outside the Convention and not a party to the barefaced attempt at revolution, which can hold these public officers to any responsibility. They sought to arrest the Conventionists in the incipiency of the plot, but were prevented by the military. This is the whole affair in one word. The riot ensued because the military would neither take steps to prevent it peacefully nor suffer any one else to. Why did they not permit the Sheriff to arrest a body of men who contemplated subverting the settled and acknowledged Government of the State who announced their purpose? the dignity and power of the State to be placed at the mercy of any set of disaffected schemers who chose to disturb and defy it? The President affirms it to have been a barefaced attempt at revolution, and every man, not excepting the gentlemen of the Commission, must regard it When the course of civil process and law was violently interfered with, the consequences should not be charged against the Mayor and the Lieut. Governor. The following letter from Mr. Glenn is in point. Mr. G. is a lawyer, and the official reporter of the State Supreme Court—a gentleman of honor and education:

To the Editor of the N. O. Times—Your conclusion respecting the report of the Military Commission upon the facts of the 30th July riot are correct. After the shooting fired, and as the procession, approaching the stampeda took place, I was the only white spectator on Dryades street. I ran from Common to Canal, and found them highly incensed crowd of citizens, for because I was ignorant, but I retraced my steps to Merchants' Hall, went immediately into Mrs. Snethen's room, saw Judge Howell and Mr. Alfred Shaw, remonstrating with them about the negro procession. Saying that it would cause disturbance. They both instantly concurred with me, when I asked to have it dispersed. Judge Howell said he had already sent one message to them, and would send another for that purpose. On leaving, I saw a tall man calling the crowd together from where they had squatted on the curbs, and presume that he was the person indicated. I went towards Common street and stopped at Perrone until the general melee took place. Although Gen. Mower knew that I had seen the initiation of this sad affair, I was not called upon to testify; and my recent experience East, as well as once here, leads me to the inevitable corollary that the military were, alone, to blame in the matter.

Very respectfully, L. S. F. GLENN.

No. 188 St. Charles Hotel.

The animus of the Commission is no secret. It cannot be mistaken by any one here on the spot. The single item below tells the whole story, and shows that the report has been gotten up for the entertainment of a distant audience;

"In conclusion, the Board will state that, it is by no means their opinion that hostility to Northern and Union men so pervades the community at large, as of itself either to endanger their life or property, provided they refrain from claiming freedom of speech concerning subjects on which, like that of slavery before the war, no difference of opinion is tolerated."

Crops in Texas and Louisiana.

The Galveston News Price Current looks hopefully upon the coming cotton crop of Texas. Probably no State is more elastic in its agricultural resources than Texas, and too much rain or too little rain will not discompose seriously its veteran farmers:

The weather could not have been more favorable than we have had for the past two weeks or more, for gathering what remains of our crops, and we feel much inclined to hope that more cotton will be saved than the most sanguine anticipated two or three weeks ago. We believe this fine cool and dry weather has extended, generally, all over the State. After the very heavy rains that almost inundated this lower country about three weeks ago, a very decided change took place, from excessively hot weather with continual showers, to cool and dry weather, which has continued to this time, though it is now considerably warmer than it has been. We notice that several of our exchanges, in the Interior, express the opinion that the cotton worms have done about as much good as they have harm, as they stripped off the leaves, causing the sun to dry off the ground much sooner and thereby prevent much of the cotton from rotting, especially the bolls on the lower stalks, where the cotton had a rank growth. Some good judges are of opinion that as much cotton will be made as the treedmen can be induced to pick out, and that if everything had been favorable to a large crop, it would only have been made to be left and lost in the fields for want of sufficient labor.

Per contra, we insert the following from the Houma (La.) Guard:

Another rainy week has passed since our last issue, and the army worm continuing its depredations. We have never seen our citizens appear more despoding then at the present time. We have seen our people endure the insults and robberies of hostile armies and military governments; we have seen their growing crops disappear, as if by magic, before the devastation of the army worm; or swept away by the floods of the Mississippi; yet there was hope left in the heart, and men looked bravely forward for "better luck next time." But there is a point beyond which even human endurance cannot pass, and it would seem, (if we may judge by the evident despondency of those we meet,) that we are approaching that point. This despondency is the more apparent as it has been but a few days since all were in the finest spirits.

The season had been unusually favorable for cotton, and many, who had ventured their last dollar on the present crop, felt that the venture was a success, and the future looked cheering, compared with what they had passed through. But alas! just at the moment when they were beginning to gather the fruits of their year's labor, once more comes the dreaded army worm, and with it the destructive rains, blasting all their bright prospects and destroying the last hope of many a brave heart.

To add to the general gloom, creditors seem to have steeled their hearts against every generous impulse; the utmost rigor of the law is enforced in almost every instance, and the "pound of flesh" is unblushingly demanded. Once fine plantations are seized, and sold for a tithe of what they cost; crops growing in the fields are attached; and houses are stripped of every vestige of furniture, and sold under the pitiless hammer. And the end is not yet.

End of the Mexican Empire.

The London Times talks over the whole affair as if the Emperor had already packed up, and wanted only a fair wind to bid a final adieu:

The year 1866, which has been so fatal to Germanic thrones, will witness also the collapse of a more modern monarchy in the New World. It is not to be dissembled that the Mexican enterprise is a hopeless failure, and that the empire founded in the capital of the Aztecs by Napoleon III. has withered away without so much as a taking root in the soil. The Empress arrived in Europe a short time ago, and the Emperor, it is expected, must soon follow his spouse. The country, in fact, must be abandoned by its imperial occupants, like a worthless settlement or an untenable colony, and Mexico will once more be left at the disposal of a population which has hitherto exhibited an absolute incapacity for any form of self-government.

Four years ago the Emperor of the French commenced the adventure which is now drawing to a close. He did not stand alone in his opinion that the condition of Mexico was a scandal to the civilized world, and that the deeds of its rulers, if such they could be called, had provoked the intervention of European arms in the suppression of so inveterate a nuisance. England and Spain were entirely agreed with France in their estimate of Mexican deserts, and both Powers actually joined in the original expedition against the country, but England discerned at an early period of the operations that no commensurate profit was to be expected from their continuance, while Spain, though willing to do all that France did if left to herself, was unwilling to act as a shareholder in the undertaking. So the Emperor of the French alone and single-handed carried out the scheme to what cannot be denied was its logical and natural conclusion.

It would be of no great advantage, under present circumstances, to investigate the history of the failure. All the conditions of the enterprise turned out more or less unfavorably to the design of Napoleon III., although the prince whom he had selected for the new throne proved, by common consent, a sovereign of excellent intentions and more than average capacity. But a sovereign, however wise, or however worthy, must have some support for his Government, especially in a disorganized country, and yet, as events showed, there was no kind of support to be procured in Mexico, and no sufficient support to be contributed from without. It was thought, and we share the impression, that if there were such things as a public and a public opinion in Mexico, they would be attracted to a prince who offered, at any rate, government instead of anarchy, and law instead of disorder. But either there were no such things or they were repelled by a foreign dynasty, and Maximilian could reckon for active support on the French garrison only.

It happened, too, that the French people, though so addicted to military enterprise in general, conceived a strong aversion from this expedition. The troops themselves disliked the service, and their country men at home hardly wished for their success if it was to involve the continuance of the unpopular protectorate. Then the United States, though long distracted by their own war, regarded the adventure from the outset with an unfortunate jealousy, which was sure to pass ultimately into more active opposition, and which presently took the form of menacing protests. The American Government, in fact, at least forbade the dispatch of any fresh European forces to American territory, though so unpromising as well as unpopular had the enterprise gradually become that the views taken at Washington did but coincide with the resolutions already adopted in Paris. In the meantime the small French garrison, irresistible in a fair field, but powerless in so prodigious an extent of territory, could do little more than protect the capital and the highroads to the coast; the old factions, at one time almost driven across the border, recovered strength and daring; and, as events brought them greater and greater encouragement, they have closed round the Emperor and his guards on every side. All this while, too, the sinews of war and government have been wasting. The French could not have been expected to find the revenue for an American empire, and the empire could find none for itself. As with more ancient monarchies, the final catastrophe is said to be financial. The Emperor must quit Mexico, if for no other reason, because he cannot steal like his predecessors, and because otherwise he cannot get a dollar to live upon.

CITY NEWS.

ESCAPE.—On Thursday morning we had been greatly impressed with the wonderful genius of the inventor of the steam fire engine. Surely he is among the benefactors of the age! There is, or was, a petroleum or vapor stove establishment within two doors of our office. A most delightful modern improvement is this store, which we looked in on with profound interest, having seen gentlemen cooking their own breakfasts in the back parlor during a recent visit to the North; and not knowing what we were coming to. In front of the establishment there has been a kettle boiling faithfully for six months. Well, sad to say, the whole establishment took fire; a large quantity of coal oil being on store. Thanks to the great and generous exertions of our fire companies, and the fire engine, this immense blaze and heat was confined to the one building where it broke out and we escaped. We trust that the parties who were burned out were insured.

On Tuesday evening a mass meeting was held in the Olympic Hall, to consider Gov. Well's letter. Speeches were made by J. P. Freret, Christian Roselius and Mr. A. B. Bacon. Mr. Roselius in a speech of excellent point, vindicated the South from the charges which have been so freely made against it of disloyalty and violence; and read the following letter in confirmation of his views:

"NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 5, 1866.

"Sir—Being unable, on account of sickness, to attend the meeting to-night called for the purpose of showing to the world the true position and feelings of this part of our country towards the Government and more particularly towards Northern men sojourning here. For myself, I desire to give my testimony in the most positive manner to the perfect security of person and property to Northern men, to the love of law and order, and to the best disposition to promote harmony and good feeling between people of both sections. Since the war ended I have traveled in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana. I have met with many Southern men, and had as much personal evidence and practical expression as to the state of public sentiment as perhaps any Northern man. As a Government officer, I have been all over the northern part of this State—have conversed and done business with thousands of its citizens—and I have yet to receive the first insult or feel the least insecurity on account of my Northern and Union antecedents.

"Respectfully, your obd't serv't,

"LEWIS B. COLLINS.

"Col. Int. Rev., Third District, La.

"To C. Roselius, Esq., New Orleans, La.

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

One of the most terrible calamities of the sea has occurred in the loss of the steamship "Evening Star," on her way to this port from New York. Nearly three hundred persons are supposed to have perished. Comparatively but few of our own citizens were passengers. Some few are deeply lamented: Gen. Palfrey, wife and child, and Mr. George Hillman, son and daughter, are supposed to be among the lost.

A very large number of the passengers were theatrical characters, some twenty or more ballet girls, and the whole French Opera troupe, besides some fifty females, it is said, who were being imported from New York for the haunts of the profligate.

LATEST.

SAVANNAH, Oct. 9, 6 P. M.—The New York mail steamship Evening Star, Capt. Knapp, from New York, encountered a very severe gale on the 2d inst., and weathered it bravely for seventeen hours. She foundered on the morning of the 3d. It seems, there were only three or four lifeboats on board, in one of which the chief engineer and purser, with six of the crew and two passengers, succeeded, after being capsized several times, in keeping afloat until they were picked up by the Norwegian bark Fleetwing, and saved.

In this boat were Robert Fingar, chief engineer; Eller S. Allen, purser; John Long, water tender; Frederick Scaller, coal passer; George Smith, seaman; John Powers, seaman; Dennis Sannon, waiter; Rowland Stephens, waiter; Edward Lanner, passenger; and H. Harris, passenger. All of these have arrived here.

The second boat launched from the sinking vessel took sixteen persons, among whom were Capt. Knapp and the second mate. This boat arrived at Fernandina on Sunday morning, the 7th inst., with six of the sixteen who embarked, and two dead bodies. The names of the living on this boat are Thos. Fitzpatrick, third mate; Jno. Dempsey, seaman; John Campbell, seaman; J. Howe, seaman; Chancellor Mason, steerage steward, and Frank Girard, passenger.

The other and last boat is supposed to have been lost, and all on it drowned. If any got away from the ship it is not certainly known. Among the passengers lost, are all the French Opera troupe—fifty-two in number.

THANKSGIVINGS DAY.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The President has issued a proclamation recommending that Thursday, November 29th, be observed throughout the country as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Almighty God, who has been pleased to vouchsafe to us as a people another year of that national life which is an indispensable condition of peace, security and progress; that year has moreover been crowned with many peculiar blessings; the cruel war that so recently closed among us has not been anywhere reopened; foreign intervention has ceased to excite alarm or apprehension; lutrusive pestilence has been benignly mitigated; domestic tranquility has improved; sentiments of conciliation gave largely prevailed; and allegiance of loyalty and patriotism have been widely renewed; our fields have yielded quite abundantly; our mining industry has been richly rewarded, and we have been allowed to extend our railroad system far into the interior recesses of the country, while our commerce has resumed its customary activity in foreign seas. These great national blessings demand a national acknowledgement. He recommends also that on the same solemn occasion the people do humbly and devoutly implore God to grant to our national councils and to our whole people that Divine wisdom which alone can lead any nation into the ways to all good.

THE ELECTIONS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—Returns from the municipal election in Baltimore state that John Lee Chapman is elected Mayor by 2840 majority. The whole Republican council ticket is elected.

The vote was very light, being controlled by the original registration list.

Returns from Indiana are very incomplete. Republicans are elected to Congress in the Third, Fifth, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth and Eleventh Districts. Democrats are elected in the First and Second. In the Fourth and Seventh Democrats are said to be elected, but are doubtful yet. Sufficient returns have not been received to indicate the complexion of the Legislature.

The Republican State ticket is doubtless elected by about fifteen thousand majority. Returns from forty five counties in Ohio give a Republican majority of 45,700. The remaining forty-three counties, it is reported, will reduce the majority to 45,000. Gen. Morgan, Democrat, is elected to Congress in the Thirteenth District.

The Republican majority in Pennsylvania is about twenty thousand. There are eighteen Republicans and six Democrats elected to Congress. Philadelphia gives a Republican majority of 4469, which shows a large Democratic gain.

From Iowa the returns are very meagre, but sufficient are received to indicate Republican gains and a Republican majority in the State of from 25,000 to 30,000. The Republicans have elected every Congressman.

Gold in New York has gone up to 153, today from the effect of a canard sent from this city last night to the Philadelphia Ledger, stating that the President had requested the Attorney General to give an opinion on several interrogatories propounded by him as to whether the present Congress was a legal Congress of the United States. The report has created a great sensation, but it is officially pronounced a mere fabrication.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—The mad spirit prevails here, and the political excitement was higher than for many years on Friday night. Three Democratic headquarters were gutted by Republican rowdies. Last night there were riotous proceedings in different parts of the city, and several persons were shot.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—By the treaty between Italy and Austria, the former acquires the Venetian frontier, while the latter assumes her debt of thirty millions of florins. A complete amnesty has been accorded by Italy to all political prisoners.

The Cornish miners are leaving their homes by thousands. Many are emigrating to Australia and America, while others are seeking employment in the coal fields of South Wales and of the North of England. The advance which has taken place in the price of copper and tin leads to the hope that the worst of the crisis is now over.

The Pope appears to be preparing for his departure from Rome. His Holiness has dispatched a special messenger with an autograph letter addressed by him to Queen Victoria, and during the last few days repeated interviews have taken place between Mr. Odo Russell and the French Ambassador at the Papal Court.

We have East India intelligence to Aug. 21th. The famine is still decimating the native population of Bengal.

Seventy miles of railway have been flooded in Scinde, and in other districts whole villages have been destroyed.

PLEDGE AGAINST PEW RENTS.—The "pledge," which has long been a favorite weapon in the total abstinence and other movements, has at last been applied against pew rents. The following has been put into circulation by the Free Church Society: "I, the undesigned, believing that any 'charge' for the means of grace, or for the ordinances of Christianity, and any 'respect of persons' in God's house because they pay or don't pay, is against God's command in Holy Scripture, and unjust to the poor, engage never to pay any pew rent so long as I continue a member of the——— Free Church Society."

There is reason to believe that a marriage is not unlikely to be arranged on the part of the King of the Greeks calculated to add very materially to his position as a European sovereign. It is understood, however, that the arrangement must be dependent upon certain conditions of a nature to promote the position of the Greek Government in the eyes of the world.

OBITUARIES.

Died, at home in Catahoula parish, Sept. 12th, 1866, aged 38 years, Mrs. ELIZA ANN, wife of Rev. E. W. Yancy, of the Louisiana Conference. Sister Y. was born at Alexandria, in this State. She made a profession of religion, and joined the Methodist Church in 1840. Brother Y. remarked to the writer, "We lived together twenty-five years; I knew her well, her daily walk was that of a Christian," and to this effect is the testimony of others who knew her. She suffered much and long, but amidst all was meek, patient and resigned. Wasted by disease to the merest shadow, when death came, without a struggle, a moan, or a sigh, quietly she passed away. The survivors of the household are a husband and seven children. May they in this their time of need be enabled fully to stay themselves upon Him who alone can minister comfort to the bereaved and sorrowing. P. M. GODWYN.

PARISH OF CALDWELL, Sept. 25, 1866.

TURNER & COHEN,

Photograph and Fine Art Gallery,

NO 57 CAMP STREET.

Trusting that the liberal patronage of our friends and the public will continue, we have engaged the services of Mr. E M HOWELL, an operator who cannot be surpassed for skillful and artistic ability. Our artist, Mr. REICHMAN, is second to none in the country.

These gentlemen, with many others for our business, have lately arrived from New York, and we are now prepared to make pictures from the smallest miniature on your watch dial to full life size portraits.

The public are invited to call and make a critical examination for themselves of the many specimens we have of well known citizens of this city. o13 1y

EDW'D NALLE, W. C. DAY

NALLE, DAY & CO.

Cotton Factors, Commission Merchants,

118 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS

o13 1y

JAMES A. GRESHAM,

BOOKSELLER AND STATIONER

92 Camp Street, New Orleans.

School, Medical and Law Books, Church and Masonic Books.

Job Printing and Binding executed at lowest market prices. oc13 1m

CLOTHING, CLOTHING.

For the Fall and Winter of 1866-67.

Now receiving and opening for inspection, at

R. PITKIN'S

FASHIONABLE

CLOTHING EMPORIUM,

Nos. 13 and 15 Camp Street,

The Largest, best selected and most Fashionable Stock of Superior

READY-MADE CLOTHING

AND

GENTLEMEN'S FURNISHING Goods

Of the season, all of which were manufactured under his personal supervision, and selected with the utmost care and taste, expressly for the Southern market. His stock consists of every article in his line of business, viz:

Superior Dress Frocks,
Sacks, Overcoats, Shawls,
India Rubber Goods,
Business Suits,
Walking Coats,
Black and Fancy Dress Pants,
Vests, Drawers,
Undershirts,
Collars,
Gloves,
Cravats,
Suspenders,
Pocket Handkerchiefs,
Linen and Linen Bosom Shirts of every description.

CLOTHS, CASSIMERES, AND VESTINGS.

A large assortment of superior French Cloths, Cassimeres and Doeskins, Black and Fancy Vestings of the most fashionable styles,

FOR CUSTOM WORK.

He takes great pleasure in informing the citizens of New Orleans, and the public, that he has secured the services of that consummate Artist, and gentlemen of skill, taste and experience, so favorably known in this community,

MR. E. M. HOUGHTON,

as Principal Cutter, who will superintend the manufacture of goods ordered from measure—a Perfect Fit Warranted.

WHOLESALE DEPARTMENT.

Merchants from the country visiting the city, will find his Wholesale Department well fitted up, and replete with the most desirable articles adapted to their trade. He would especially call the attention of

MERCHANTS AND PLANTERS

To his

Very Large Stock of Cheap Clothing

suitable for the laboring classes, made of strong material, with neatness and durability.

Also a large assortment of

YOUTHS' AND BOYS' CLOTHING,
TRUNKS,
VALISES,
CARPET-BAGS,
UMBRELLAS, ETC.

A call from the public is respectfully solicited.

R. PITKIN,

Fashionable Clothing Emporium,

13 and 15 .... CAMP STREET, ... 13 and 15

ROBERT STARK, WM. A. KENT,
ISAAC M. STAUFFER, CHAL. MACREADY

STARK, STAUFFER & CO.,

No. 71 Canal St., No. 11 to 23 Dorsiar St., and 52 to 56 Customhouse Street.

Importers and Dealers in

HARDWARE:

Iron, Steel, Nails, Hoes, Axes, Rope, Tin Plates, Copper, Block Tin, Spelter, Lead, Shot, Paints, Oils, Glass, Hollow Ware, Circular Saws

MILL STONES,

INDIA RUBBER GIN BAND,

PLANTATION SADDLERY, ETC.

Constantly on hand a large assortment of

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS,

Comprising PLOUGHS of the following celebrated makers: James B. Hall & Co., for Sugar and Cotton; Garrett & Cottman, for Sugar and Cotton; Calhoun and Atkinson, for Cotton; Hall and Speer, Wrought and Cast, for Cotton; B. F. Avery, Cast, for Cotton; John and Albert King, "Carey," for Cotton; Peoria Premium Steel, or "Prairie Plough;" Yost's Patent Ploughs and Scrapers.

Agents for the Vieille Montagne Co.'s SHEET ZINC and ZINC PAINTS, of Belgium. o13 1y

GAINES & RELF,

Importers and Dealers, Wholesale and Retail, in

EARTHENWARE,
GLASS, CHINA,
JAPAN WARE,
PLATED WARE,
SILVER WARE,
FINE TABLE CUTLERY,
WATER PURIFIERS,
HOUSEKEEPING ARTICLES.

All articles carefully packed for shipment to the country.

No. 100 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

NEW CARPETS.

L. ELKIN,

3, Carondelet Street, 3.

Has just received from England, per steamship Laxor, a large assortment of superior

WILTON, BRUSSELS, TAPESTRY & INGRAIN

CARPETS,

RUGS,
WINDOW SHADES,
CORNICES,
OIL CLOTHS,

And a complete assortment of Curtain Material, such as Brocatelles, Satin de Laines, all-Wool Damasks, etc., with corresponding Trimmings.

HARVEY, McMAHON & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

Commission and Forwarding Merchants,

122 Carondelet street, Davidson's Row,

NEW ORLEANS.

R B Harvey, New Orleans.
Thomas McMahon, Madison county, Miss.
Wm. Forstall, New Orleans. oc13 6m

J. H. MASSEY,

(Formerly of Joseph H. Peabody & Co., for the last ten years in the House of Tompkins & Co.)

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS

No. 104 Common Street,

Opposite C. H.

I am now receiving my Fall and Winter stock and respectfully solicit an examination, on your next visit to the city. Having twenty years experience in my line in this city, I flatter myself it will not be hard for me to please any and all of my old friends and patrons, and also including new ones. My stock is new and fresh, and I will be in frequent receipt of all the new and desirable styles.

Very respectfully,

oc13 3m J. H. MASSEY.

THOS. B. BODLEY & CO.,

No. 9 Perdido Street, New Orleans,

Dealers in all descriptions of

MILL AND PLANTATION MACHINERY,

AND AGRICULTURAL INSTRUMENTS.

Sole Agents in the Southwest for the celebrated Wood & Mann Steam Engines, 1 to 25 horse power; Coleman's Corn and Wheat Mills; Scranton Corn and Wheat Mills, Smut Machines, Bolting Cloth; Todd's Circular Saw Mills; Wool Carding Machines, Flowery Machines; Stafford Sulky Cultivators; Stanley Many Plows; Plows, Wheelbarrows, Belting, Saws, etc.

Send for descriptive circulars and price lists. oc13 6m

CARPET WAREHOUSE,

17 Chartres Street

Lately received Carpeting of all kinds and qualities; Floor Oil Cloth of all qualities, which we cut to suit rooms; Curtain Materials, Lace Curtains, Cornices and Bands in great variety; Window Shades, Hair Cloth, Crumb Cloths, Table and Piano Covers, China and Cocoa Mattings of all widths.

oc13 1y A. BROUSSEAU & CO.

G. & T. F. SEARING,

Manufacturers and Wholesale Dealers in

CLOTHING & PLANTATION GOODS

No. 29 Magazine Street,

Corner of Gravier street,

oc13 1y NEW ORLEANS.

D. L. CAMPBELL, F. M. ECKFORD,
Of Mobile. Late Eckford & Weaver, Mobile

CAMPBELL, ECKFORD & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

Forwarding & General Com'n Merchant,

o13 No. 58 Camp street, New Orleans. 1y

S. H. ABY & CO.,

Cotton Factors, Commission Merchants

166 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

oc13 6m

E. S. KEEP. L. CAULFIELD.

KEEP & CAULFIELD,

Western Produce,

AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Nos. 77 & 79 Poydras street, New Orleans.

oc13 1y

HENRY WARE, WM. H. WARE,
Of Texas. Of Texas.

H. WARE & SON,

Cotton and Wool Factors,

AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No. 63 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

oc13

JOB PRINTING.

COLLEGE CATALOGUES, CONFERENCE MINUTES,
SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORTS,
PAMPHLETS, CIRCULARS, CARDS,

And everything else in the line of job printing, executed in

The Very Best Style, at Moderate Prices.

Send your orders to J. WILKINSON, Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans

BOOKS! BOOKS!

The Agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, at 112 Camp street, New Orleans, has just received from the steamships George Cromwell and Merrimac, and by the steamboats Mephaa and Olivia Branch, ample supplies of Sunday School requisites: Catechisms, Spellers Questions, Dictionaries, Primers, Reward Tickets, etc., etc. Also, Clarke's and Benson's Commentaries, and Hymn Books in sheep and roan.

Address:

R. J. HARP, Agent,

sep1ft 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

OPELOUSAS LAND AGENCY.—At the solicitation of numerous friends, the undersigned has consented to become an Agent for the sale and purchase of land in this healthy and much sought after country, above any high water overflow, and where the prospects for crops are so encouraging. He will take very great pleasure in shewing the land to any persons visiting this country, and in giving any other information that may be desired concerning it.

For reference I refer to the Editors of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

JAMES H. HOUSTON,

Sept 4, 1866. Opelousas, La.

PEET, SIMMS, & CO.,

Importers and Wholesale Dealers in

DRY GOODS,

Nos. 23 & 25 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS

E PEET—S WILLIAMSON
P SIMMS—J BOWLING

aug25 1y

LOEB, SIMON & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

86 Canal Street,

sep1 3m NEW ORLEANS.

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c.,

Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.

Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

SPEED, SUMMERS & CO.,

46 Carondelet street, New Orleans,

COTTON AND TOBACCO FACTORS,

General Commission Merchants,

And Commercial Agents. aug25 1y

J. H. CARTER,

Wholesale Grocer,

Nos. 8 and 10 Tchoupitoulas Street,

And 8 and 10 New Levee,

aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

S. M. SWENSON, W. M. PERKINS,
N.Y., late of Austin, Tex. R. L. KERNION,
Of Perkins & Co., N.O.

PERKINS, SWENSON, & CO,

GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No. 48 Carondelet, corner of Union street,

NEW ORLEANS.

SWENSON, PERKINS & CO.,

GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

26 Exchange Place, New York.

s29 6m

NAT. B. THOMAS, late of Alabama.

ETHELL & THOMAS,

FACTORS,

And Agents at Commission Merchants,

Dealers in Bagging, Rope and Twine, Pork, Lard, Bacon, Flour, Grain, Hay and Western Produce generally.

Agents for the celebrated brand, "Grey Jacket" Flour.

No. 105 Poydras street, New Orleans.

Will give personal attention to the purchase of Merchandize and Groceries for the country. Cash orders solicited. Instructions strictly obeyed. sep1 6m

L. W. BURBRIDGE. THOS. D. MILLER

J. W. BURBRIDGE & CO.,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants,

No. 130 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

sep1 6m

Gen. James Longstreet. W M Owen. E Owen

LONGSTREET, OWEN & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

37 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

aug25 6m

B. S. HARPER. N. J. THAXTON.

B. S. HARPER & CO.,

Cotton and Tobacco Factors,

AND GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No. 81 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

aug18 1y

JACOB BURCKETT,

GROCER,

And Dealer in Fine Wines & Liquors,

s15 6m 910 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

CHENOWETH, CASEY & CO.,

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

For sale of Pork, Bacon, Beef, Flour, and Western Produce generally, 53 Gravier street, New Orleans.

sep15 1y

H. M. WRIGHT O. W. ALLEN J. MIDDLETON
(1st August, 1865)

WRIGHT, ALLEN & CO.,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

160 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

aug25 1y

THOS. H. ALLEN, JAMES M. ALLEN, } New
Memphis, Tenn. PERRY NUGENT, } Orleans

T. H. & J. M. ALLEN,

(Successors to ROBSON & ALLEN),

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

192 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

aug18 1y

F. F. FOLGER. L. FOLGER. W. H. THOMAS

FOLGER & CO.,

Dealers in

Hardware, Iron, & Ship Chandlery,

37 & 39 MAGAZINE STREET NEW ORLEANS.

(Opposite the St James Hotel)

Nails and Castings; Hoop, Sheet and Bar Iron, Shovels and Spades; Sheet Copper and Zinc; Plows, Axes and Hoes; Lead Pipe and Sheet Lead; India Rubber Belting, Hose and Packing; Circular, Mill and Cross Cut Saws. aug25 1y

WM. EDWARDS & CO.,

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

27 Camp Street, New Orleans.

WM. EDWARDS.
EDWD. J. GAY. } sep15 3m

ROBERT L. WALKER,

Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans. ap21-1y

W. A. VIOLETT. R. Y. BLACK. S. H. SNOWDEN.

VIOLETT, BLACK & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

s15 6m 138 Gravier street, New Orleans.

W. B. LOTT, O. W. WOOD,
Madison County, Miss. Canton, Miss.

LOTT, WOOD & CO.,

Wholesale Grocers & Commission Merchants

65 COMMON & 16 CANAL STS., NEW ORLEANS.

Maj. G. C. Sebastian has charge of our sales Department. sep15 1y

E. A. BANKS, W. W. LORING, O. W. VENABLE

BANKS, LORING & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants.

26 CARONDELET STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

sep22 6m

R. ATKINSON & CO: JAMES HEWITT & CO.,
New York. Liverpool.

HEWITT, NORTON & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And Commission Merchants,

188 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Cash advances made on consignments to us by HEWITT, SWISHER & Co., Galveston, Texas. aep15 1y

WILLIAM FELLOWES, JUN.,

(Successor to FELLOWES & Co.)

Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant

186 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

DAN. P. LOGAN, Agent. sep15 1y

OGDEN, NANSON & CO., LEWIS, NANSON & CO.,
New York. St. Louis.

OGDEN, ATWATER & CO.,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

38 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

sep15 1y

R. BLEAKLY & CO.,

Wholesale Grocers,

COTTON FACTORS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Nos. 56, 58, 60, 62 and 64 Poydras street,

Corner Poydras and Tchoupitoulas sts.,

NEW ORLEANS.

All cotton consigned to us will receive the personal attention of MR. J. F. GIRAULT, (formerly with the house of Messrs Wright & Allen) who is specially charged with that department of our business. sep22 1y

E. A. HAMILTON, JOHN L. DUNNICA,
Memphis, Tenn. New Orleans, La.

HAMILTON & DUNNICA,

Cotton and Tobacco Factors, and

GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

42 Union street, New Orleans.

sep22 1y

I. E. WALKER, C. E. FISHER,
Missouri. New Orleans.

WALKER & FISHER,

Commission & Forwarding Merchants

NO 6 (GROUND FLOOR) CARONDELET ST., N. O.

Solicit consignments of all kinds of Manufactured Goods, and will make liberal advances on same.

GEO. W. WALKER, JUN., late of the firm of Harper, Walker & Co., will give his personal attention to the sale of all consignments to our House. sep22 6m

J. R. POWELL, COTTON FACTOR and Commission Merchant, No. 17 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

W. R. STUART, late Stuart & James. ap7

A. HENDERSON PEALE & CO.,

Successors to Thos. Henderson & Peale,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

No. 109 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

aug18 6m

J. W. CARROLL. JOS. HOY. CHAS. HARDENBERGH

CARROLL, HOY & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

No. 36 Perdido Street, New Orleans,

aug18 1y

C. L. WALMSLEY & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

No 31 Perdido Street, New Orleans.

aug18 1y

JOHN Q. PARHAM, BEVERLY BLUNT,
Of New Orleans. Of Hinds Co., Miss.

PARHAM & BLUNT,

COTTON FACTORS,

Forwarding and Commission Merchants and Purchasing Agents,

No 28 Carondelet st. (First Floor), New Orleans

aug11 1y

S. H. KENNEDY & CO.,

General Commission Merchants and

COTTON FACTORS,

57 Poydras street.

Cotton Office—102 Common street—in charge of RICHARD J. NUGENT. aug4ft

STEWART, GALBREATH & FIZER

Commission Merchants & Cotton Factors,

46 UNION STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Andrew Stewart, New Orleans.
Wm. R. Galbreath, } Memphis.
Wm. Stewart, }
John C. Fizer, }

sep1 3m

SAM'L. BARRETT. CHS. LE SASSIER.

BARRETT & LESASSIER,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants

CORNER COMMON AND BARONNE STREETS,

Entrance, 43 Baronne street.

aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

JOHN A. STEVENSON. A. H. MAY

STEVENSON & MAY,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

No 40 Perdido Street, New Orleans.

aug18 6m

P. H. FOLEY,

Of the Firm of FOLEY, AVERY & Co.

Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant

No. 32 Perdido Street, New Orleans.

aug 18 6m

HARLOW J. PHELPS, S. S. BUCKNER,
Of New Orleans. Of Kentucky.

HARLOW J. PHELPS & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

No 142 Gravier Street, New Orleans.

aug18 6m

W. C. TOMPKINS. H. R. ALSOBROOK.

WM. C. TOMPKINS & CO.,

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS,

No. 2 Magazine st., corner Canal, New Orleans.

A complete assortment of goods constantly on hand for the country trade. a18 6m

PAYNE, HUNTINGTON & CO.,

Cotton Factors,

No. 34 Union Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

J. U. PAYNE, G. W. HUNTINGTON,
W. C. H. DAMERON, H. M. PAYNE.

je23-1y

TOM HENDERSON, SAM HENDERSON,
Late of Henderson, Late of Violett, Black Terry & Co. & Co.

TOM & SAM HENDERSON,

COTTON FACTORS

AND

General Commission Merchants,

190 COMMON STREET,

je9 1y New Orleans

J. C. M'ALLISTER, late of Memphis, formerly of Jackson, Miss.
K. M'NAIR, late of Arkansas, formerly of Miss.
H. GARDES, late of Washington, Arkansas.

McALLISTER, McNAIR & GARDES, Wholesale Grocers, 74 Common Street, New Orleans, La. sp7

CARY W. BUTT. WM. FLASH. THOS. T. A. LYON

BUTT, FLASH & LYON,

Cotton Factors, General Commission and Forwarding Merchants, corner Carondelet and Union streets, New Orleans.

Orders for all descriptions of merchandise will meet prompt attention.

Liberal advances made on consignments of Cotton and Produce to our care. 6p14-6m

J. O. ELLIS. W. C. CHAMBERLIN

ELLIS & CHAMBERLIN, COTTON Factors and Commission Merchants, 23 Carondelet street. Jan 20-1y

R. M. DENMAN. D. M. HOLLINGSWORTH

R. MARSH DENMAN & CO.,

Carriage Repository, corner Carondelet and Gravier streets, New Orleans. f3 tf

J. P. HARRISON & SONS,

COTTON FACTORS,

And General Commission Merchants,

51 UNION STREET,—UP STAIRS,

New Orleans.

J. P. Harrison, (formerly of Payne & Harrison)
Edward Harrison,
J. P. Harrison, Jun.,
Sidney Harrison,
John N. Harrison. july7 1y

R. E. WALKER. THOS. M'KNIGHT. J. P JOHNSON.

R. K. WALKER & CO., COTTON Factors and General Commission Merchants, No. 75 Carondelet street, New Orleans jan 20-1y.

WATTS, GIVEN & CO., Paducah, Ky. WATTS, CRANE & CO. New York.
W. C. WATTS & CO., Liverpool, England.

GIVEN, WATTS & CO., COTTON Factors & General Commission Merchants, No. 103 Poydras street, New Orleans. Parties shipping their Cotton to us, can make their election, and have their choice of this, the New York or Liverpool markets. Advances made on consignments to our houses, Watts, Crane & Co New York, and W. C. Watts & Co. Liverpool. feb3-1y

W. A. BELL. FRED N. OGDEN. H. B. WITHERSPOON

WM. A. BELL & CO.,

General Commission Merchants,

And dealers in Bagging, Rope, Iron Ties, Gunny Bags, Coffee and Western Produce,

41 NATCHEZ STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

Particular attention given to the filling of orders for Factors, for Country Merchants and for Planters. je30-1y

J. J. WARREN T. W. CRAWFORD F. B. FLEITAS

WARREN, CRAWFORD & CO.,

Cotton Factors & Commission Merchants,

45 CARONDELET STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

sep22 6m

GEO. W. RACE. W. H. FOSTER. E. T. MERRICK, Late Chief Justice La.

RACE, FOSTER & E. T. MERRICK,

Attorneys at Law,

CORNER OF CAMP STREET & COMMERCIAL PLACE,

ep15 1y New Orleans.

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

"I Have Orders not to Go."

"I have orders, positive orders, not to go there; orders that I dare not disobey," said a youth who was being tempted to a smoking and gambling saloon.

"Come, don't be so womanish! come along like a man," shouted the youths.

"No, I can't break orders," said John.

"What special orders have you got? Come, show them to us, if you can. Show us your orders."

"John took a neat little book from his pocket, and read alond:

"Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go not into the way of evil men. —Avoid it! pass not near it! turn from it, and pass away!"

"Now," said John, "you see my orders forbid my going with you. They are God's orders, and by his help I mean to keep them."

A Story with a Moral.

A young man who was paying special attention to a young lady, met with the following incident during one of his visits.

Being invited in the parlor to await the lady's appearance, he entertained himself as best he might for some time, and was becoming very weary, when a little girl abont five years old slipped in and began to converse with him.

"I can always tell," said she, "when you are coming to our house."

"You can?" he replied, "and how do you tell it?"

"Why, when you are going to be here, sister always begins to sing and get good, she gives me cake and pie, and anything I want, and she sings so sweetly when you are here, and when I speak to her she smiles so pleasantly, I wish you would stay here all the while, then I would have a good time. But when you go off, sister is not good. She gets mad, and if I ask her for anything she slaps and bangs me about."

This was a poser for the young man.

"Fools and children tell the truth," quoted he, and taking his hat, he left and returned no more.—Sunday School Paper.

How Long Can I Wait?

The following article, which we find floating in our Presbyterian exchanges, teaches two things: 1. That some people, by everlasting talk, in place and out of place, but almost always the latter, succeed in keeping some people from becoming religions; and, 2. That in leading others to Christ we must exhibit the wisdom of the serpent; with the harmlessness of the dove. Dr. Nettleton was a master in management. But to the article:

Dr. Nettleton had come from the evening service in some country town to his home for the night. The good lady of the house, rather an elderly person, after bustling about to provide her guest with refreshments, said, directly before her daughter who was in the room, "Dr. Nettleton, I do wish you would talk to Caroline. She don't care nothing about going to meeting, and about the salvation of her soul. I've talked, and got our minister to talk, but it don't seem to do no good. I wish you'd talk to her, Dr. Nettleton." Saying which, she soon went ont of the room.

Dr. Nettleton continued quietly taking his repast, when he turned round to the young girl and said:

"Now just tell me, Miss Caroline, don't they bother you amazingly about this thing?"

She, taken by surprise at an address so unexpected, answered at once:

"Yes, sir, they do; they keep talking to me all the time till I am sick of it."

"So I thought," said Dr. N. "Let's see, how old are you?"

"Eighteen, sir."

"Good health?"

"Yes, sir."

"The fact is," said Dr. N., "religion is a good thing in itself; but the idea of troubling a young creature like you with it all the time, and you're in good health, you say. Religion is a good thing. It will hardly do to die without it. I wonder how long it would do for you to wait?"

"That's just what I've been thinking myself," said Caroline.

"Well," said Dr. N., "suppose you say till you are fifty? No, that won't do; I attended the funeral the other day of a lady fifteen years younger than that. Thirty? How will that do?"

"I'm not sure it would do to wait quite so long," said Caroline.

"No, I do not think so either; something might happen. Say, now, twenty-five? or even twenty, if you could be sure you would live so long. A year from now; how would that do?"

"I don't know, sir."

"Neither do I. The fact is, my dear young lady, the more I think of it, and of how many young people, as well apparently as your are, do die suddenly, I am afraid to have you put it off a moment longer. Besides, the Bible says, now is the accepted time. We must take this time. What shall we do? Had we not better kneel right down here and ask God for mercy through his Son, Jesus Christ?"

The young lady, perfectly overcome by her feelings, kneeled on the spot. In a day or two, she, by grace, came out rejoicing in it, finding she had far from lost all enjoyment in this life."

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

From the N. O. Price Current.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

The general market has undergone no material change during the past few days. Sugar and Molasses have exhibited no variation, and Western Produce has been attended with about the usual movement, While operations in our leading staple have been to a limited extent, in consequence of the drooping tendency of the New York and Liverpool markets, and prices have suffered a further decline of fully 2c per lb.

COTTON — Yesterday the market opened with a limited enquiry, but subsequently the demand became more general, and although the movement was checked by the poorly assorted offerings, and the refusal on the part of the holders to make any concessions, still the sales at the close amounted to 1400 bales at prices showing, in some instances, a tendency to easier rates, but on the whole within the range of our quotations.

Low	—	to —
Ordinary	29	to 31
Good Ordinary	33	to 34
Low Middling	35	to 36
Middling	38	to —

TOBACCO—There has been some enquiry on foreign account, but without resulting in any sales. The stock on hand is small and is very firmly held, factors refusing to make any concessions whatever from previous prices.

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused.	3½ to —	— to 4½	Currency.
Good do	5 to —	— to 5½
Common Leaf	6 to —	— to 7½
Fair	8 to —	— to 10
Good	11 to —	— to 12
Fine	13 to —	— to 15
Choice Selec's	15 to —	— to 20

SUGAR—There is no Louisiana Sugar in the market, and the stock on hand of the production of Cuba is small. It is retailing at 12½ to 13c per lb. Cuba Sugar, in boxes, is retailing in store, at 12½ to 13c for Nos. 12 and 13, 13½ to 14½c for Nos 14 and 15, 15½ to 16½c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17½c for Nos. 19 and 20.

MOLASSES— There is no Louisiana in market and very little of that of Cuba. It is quoted by the cargo at 51½ to 58c per gallon.

FLOUR—Holders continue firm in their pretensions and evince no disposition whatever to yield to the views of buyers, so long as the scarcity of those brands requisite to supply the local demand exists; nevertheless, there have been parties who have entered the market and purchased to a considerable extent those grades desirable for the Northern trade at the following prices: Unbranded $11, Superfine $12, Single Extra $12 50 to $13, Double do, $13 50 to $13 75, Treble do $14 to $14 75, Choice Family do $15 to $15 50 per bbl. Yesterday the market was very quiet, and the sales did not exceed 250 bbls at $10 for Fine, $12 for Superfine, and $12 50 per bbl for Single Extra.

BACON—There is a good jobbing demand, but little or no inquiry for round lots. Shoulders are held at 18c, Ribbed Sides at 20c, and Clear Sides at 21c per lb; Green Shoulders at 17½c, Bacon Hams at 21 to 22c, and Sugar-cured do at 25 to 26c per lb.

PORK—A good demand has prevailed since the date of our last review, and prices have been very firm. Retail parcels command $35 25 for Heavy and $29 50 to $30 per bbl for Prime do. Yesterday, however, we heard of a sale of 200 bbls Mess at $34 50 per bbl.

LARD—There is a large supply in tierces on hand, while that in kegs is light. The market is very dull, and 18½c is the outside figure paid for the former, and 21c per lb for the latter.

CORN—The stock on hand is confined chiefly in store, and in the absence of fresh arrivals, prices present a further improvement of 2½ to 5c per bushel on our previous quotations, which were 85c for Mixed, and 90c per bushel for White. Yesterday there was considerable enquiry, resulting in sales of over 300 sacks, from store, in lots, at 90 to 92c for Yellow Mixed, 95 for Prime Yellow and White.

OATS.—The limited character of the supply, both in store and on the levee, has induced sellers to adhere to full prices. Yesterday about 860 sacks changed hands at 53 to 54c per bushel.

BRAN—The small stock now contained in warehouse is controlled by only one or two parties, who are but little disposed to sell except at prices greatly in their favor, $1 30 per 100 lbs being an actual advance of fully 10c per 100 lbs.

HAY.—Prices since last Friday present little or no alteration. The supply in store is amply sufficient to meet the demand. Yesterday 100 bales were disposed of at $25 for Ordinary and $28 per ton for Prime St. Louis.

BALE ROPE—The market is quiet but steady and firm. We have no round sales to report, but furnish 17 to 18½c as the quotation. There is a brisk demand for the country, which is being supplied at 18½ to 19c per lb.

IRON COTTON TIES—The stock is very much reduced, but the demand is active at 11 to 12c per lb.

INDIA BAGGING—There has been considerable movement, the particulars of which have been suppressed. Round lots are quoted at 35c in rolls, and 35½c per yard in bales, and retail parcels at 36c for the former, and 37c per yard for the latter.

GUNNY BAGS—There are but few in the market; we have heard of no sales of any importance for some time. We give 30c a piece as a fair quotation.

BUTTER AND CHEESE—The market is overstocked with Western Butter, which is very dull at 20 to 30c per lb. Northern Butter is selling at 45 to 46c per lb. The inside figures for both are the rates for the larger lots. Cheese is in good supply and commands 17 to 18c for Western and Northern. We quote English Dairy at 20 to 25c per lb.

CORN MEAL—We noticed a sale of 50 bbls kiln-dried, White, at $5 per bbl. Retail lots commands $5 25 to $5 50 per bbl.

HOPS—There is a very good demand for the new crop, but there are none to be had. Good Western will bring 95c to $1 30 per lb.

COFFEE—Is in fair demand and the market is very firm. Dealers are supplying the demand at 27½ to 28c per lb currency for Fair to Prime Rio. We quote Prime at 19½c per lb gold, duty paid.

STAR CANDLES—There is a good supply on hand and the demand has been active at 20c for 12 oz, 21c for 13 oz and 25c per lb for full weight. 12 oz are in demand for the country trade. Yesterday 100 boxes 12 oz. sold at 20c per lb.

WOOL—The supply is fair, and a good demand prevails at 16 to 18c for Louisiana Native, 18 to 22c for Texas ¼ to ½ Merino, 23 to 25 for do ¾ to ⅞ Merino; 28 to 30c for washed and 13 to 15c per lb for burry.

HIDES—Are in small supply, but the demand is beginning to slack, tanners being unwilling to pay the present high rates. Prices are ruling at 10 to 10¾c for Green, 11 to 11½c for Kip Skins, 13c per lb for Dry Hides. Mexican Dry Hides command 18 to 21c per lb., and Pelts 20 to 25c per piece.

MALT — There is but little demand, and we furnish the following quotations for reference. Canada at $1 70 to $1 72, and Western at $1 00 to $1 20 per bushel.

OILS—There is some demand for Linseed at $2 to $2 05, and also for Coal in cans at 82½ to 85c per gallon.

NAVAL STORES.—Are in request, but the market is nearly bare. Small lots of Rosin are held at $3 25 for No. 3; $4 to $4 50, for No. 2, $6 to $7 for No. 1, $8 for White, Pitch $6, Tar $3 00 to $4 per bbl. Spirits Turpentine may be quoted at 60 to 62½c per gallon.

SALT — We have little or no alteration to note; prices remain about the same and we continue to quote Liverpool $2 40 to $2 60 for fine, and $2 25 to $2 50 for Coarse in warehouse, and $2 15 for the former, and $2 10 for the latter in cargo.

ESCULENTS.—Potatoes are selling at $2 50 to $2 75 in sacks, and $3 25 to $3 50 per bbl. Apples at $7 to $7 50 per bbl, Onions $2 50 to $3 00, and Cabbages at 12 to 15c per crate.

POULTRY AND EGGS.—Chickens sell on the landing at $6 to $7 for the young and $9 to $10 per dozen, for the large. Geese at $12 to $14 and Turkeys at $36 to $38 per dozen. Western eggs are selling at $35 to $40 per bbl.

FISH—Are in small supply with an active demand. We quote No. 1 Mackerel at $24 to $25 50 per bbl, No. 2 at $22 to $22 50, No. 3 at $17. Codfish are selling at $1 90 to $2 00 per box.

BEANS—Are in good request, and meet with ready sale at $4 to $7 50 per bbl for Western, and $10 50 to $13 per bbl for Northern. There is an active demand for the latter.

RICE—There is no Carolina in market. The demand for Louisiana is not active, but owing to light supplies rates remain the same. Choice new crop is held at 11c per lb. Choice old crop is selling in lots of 10 to 20 bbls at 13 to 13½c per lb. Patna is quoted at 12 to 12½c per lb.

Cattle Market.

JEFFERSON CITY,
Wednesday evening, Oct. 9, 1866.

Arrived since our last: 764 Texas Beeves, 418 calves and yearlings, 284 hogs, 854 sheep, and 20 milch cows.

Sold, 734 Texas Beeves, 342 calves and yearlings, 64 hogs, 546 sheep, and 33 milch cows.

Stock on sale: 550 Texas beeves, 746 calves and yearlings, 295 hogs, 2824 sheep, and 71 milch cows.

Western Beef, choice per lb net	—	to —
Western Beef, 2d quality, per lb net	—	to —
Texas Cattle Choice per head	$35	to 50
Texas Cattle 2d qual, per head	$20	to 35
Texas Cattle 3d qual, per head	$12	to 20
Hogs per lb gross	13	to 15
Sheep in lots per head	$3 25	to $4 25
Creole Sheep, per head	—	to —
Texas Sheep, per head	$3 25	to $5 25
Choice Sheep, per head	—	to $9
Milch Cows, choice per head	$80	to $100
Milch Cows, per head	$50	to $80
Texas Cows, with Calves	$12	to $25
Yearlings, per head	$ 7	to $14
Calves per head	$8 00	to $15

MONETARY.

The Coin Market, in sympathy with the course of prices at New York, has been attended with considerable irregularity. Gold opened on Saturday at 147¼ to 147¾, but subsequently receded, and closed at 140½ to 146½; it opened on Monday at 147, and owing to a decline in Wall street, it fell off and closed weak at 112 to 146½; and opened yesterday at 147, and after some trifling fluctuation, closed at 146¼ to 146½.

E. GIQUEL,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

FOREIGN, FANCY AND STAPLE

DRY GOODS.

Also, a large and varied supply of

HOUSEKEEPING and

PLANTATION GOODS,

Constantly on hand, at

146 Canal Street,

sep1 1y NEW ORLEANS.

D. H. HOLMES,

Direct Importation of

FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,

AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

No. 155 Canal Street,

sep1 6m NEW ORLEANS.

W. C. SHEPARD. A. L. ABBOTT. H. C. HUTCHINSON.

SHEPARD, ABBOTT & CO.,

No. 55 Camp street, New Orleans,

Nearly opposite Picayune Office,

CROCKERY AND GLASS WARE,

PLATED WARE,

House Furnishing Goods,

AND KITCHEN WARE.

We beg leave to inform our friends and the public in general, that we have on hand a large and well selected stock of the above goods, and are constantly receiving them directly from the manufactories in France, England, and the United States; and we flatter ourselves that we can sell our goods as low as any house in the city.—For variety in the house-furnishing line, our stock is unequalled in the South.

Call in and see for yourself before purchasing elsewhere.

SHEPARD, ABBOTT & CO.,
sep22 1y 55 Camp street, New Orleans.

E. L. PIERSON & CO.,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

CLOTHING,

AND

GENTLEMEN'S FURNISHING GOODS,

No. 27 Magazine Street,

Corner of Gravier street,

sep22 6m NEW ORLEANS.

J. A. BRASELMAN & CO.,

Wholesale and Retail Dealers in

FOREIGN & DOMESTIC DRY GOODS

Possess great facilities for buying goods cheap which enables them to sell below market prices.

☞ Special attention given to orders.

Nos. 586 and 588 Magazine Street,

Corner of St. Andrew Street,

oct6 1y NEW ORLEANS.

BROWN & FINNEGAN,

Successors to D. Genella,

112 Camp Street—Ground Floor,

Dealers in

CROCKERY, CHINA & GLASS WARE,

Tin, Planished & Japanned Ware,

PLATED AND FANCY GOODS.

Families wishing supplies are invited to call and examine goods and prices. oc6 3m

S. ANDERSON, PHOTOGRAPHER

And PHOTOGRAPHIC STOCK DEALER,

61 Camp street, New Orleans.

Cartes de Visite,

Hallotypes, Ambrotypes,

Pictures on Porcelain,

And every description of Pictures known to the Art.

All kinds of Photographic Materials at the lowest price for cash. sep1 1y

MAGIC PRESS.

J. P. WILSON,

BOOK AND JOB PRINTER,

77 Magazine Street,

oct6 6m NEW ORLEANS.

[Established in 1828.]

EVANS' FASHIONABLE RETAIL

Hat Emporium,

No 62 CAMP STREET,

Next door to the Picayune office, New Orleans.

A complete assortment of the Latest Styles by every steamer, at Moderate Prices. a18 6m

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 60 Camp Street, corner Natchez—open day and evening.

This is a full course Commercial or Business College, in all its departments perfect. Banks and stores are connected, goods actually bought and sold, the books regularly kept, and all the attendant duties of the clerk, book-keeper, correspondent and merchant are practically performed by the student.

For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address

GEO. SOULE.

6 1y

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address

6 3-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,

GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught.

TERMS:

Tuition fees per term	$40 00
Contingent fee	5 00

Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month

aug4ft W. M. WIGHTMAN, Chancellor.

SOUTH-WESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Where is it located? Its Depository and Bible-House is at its own building No. 163 Camp street, New Orleans.

When was it established? 1851.

Who is its General Agent to whom correspondence on its business should be addressed? Rev. James Beattie.

Where is the Society's field of labor? All of Louisiana, and all of Mississippi, south of the 33d parallel of North latitude.

What is the object of the Society? To explore and supply (gratuitously where needed) the destitution of the Holy Scriptures.

What are the resources and whence the income of the Society? From the annual contributions of its members. Collections of Churches within its field; collections at public meetings and anniversaries. Appropriations of the surplus funds of its auxiliaries the donations of generous individuals, testamentary bequests, and the annual donation in Books of the American Bible Society.

What is the Society's method of work? By cultivating its own local work in the city and district of New Orleans: then through Auxiliary Societies established or to be established in every Parish and County in the field, and the employment by them of such means as we will accomplish the object of the Society.

What are the terms of membership?

The payment of $30 at one time constitutes a life member.

The payment of $150 at one time, constitutes a life Director.

The payment of $1000 at one time, constitutes a life Patron.

The payment of $3 annually, constitutes a member.

The taking up of a collection by a church constitutes the Pastor an honorary member.

Having thus briefly stated the main features of the Society's work, income and expenditure, the Board of Directors for the current year confidently ask the aid of all lovers of the Bible, whether professors of religion or not: to strengthen the hands of the S. W. B. S: by founding or reviving Auxiliaries, by donating and urging donations, by exploring and reporting the destitution of the Scriptures, by commencing or renewing memberships of all grades and by establishing connections with the Society as the Lord has prospered them: according to that Scripture which says "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal." To ministers and professing Christians of every Orthodox Protestant Church, the Board of Directors, representing in its body all such within our bounds, appeals with confidence to aid them by judicious effort, a prompt performance of duty and a prayerful commendation of the Society to the blessing of Almighty God, for except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it, except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain.

Our last thought is the heart-cry of the Great Reformation. "No forbidding of the Word: no tampering with the text: no man's note or comment: God's Word: Christ's Word: the Holy Spirit's Word: Free: Free: Free. a25 1y.

BELLS! BELLS!! BELLS!!!

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY

Established in 1837.

VANDUZEN & TIFT,

Of the late Firm and Successors to G. W. COFFIN & CO.,

102 & 104 East Second street,

Cincinnati, Ohio,

Manufacturers of BELLS for Churches, Academies, Plantations, etc.

Made of Genuine Bell Metal, and mounted with our improved Rotary Yoke.

All Bells warranted to prove satisfactory, or subject to be returned.

Illustrated Catalogue and Price List sent free upon application. je16

A NEW THING UNDER THE SUN

PRICE'S

Patent Texas Tonic.

PURELY VEGETABLE.

It is a certain antidote against Constipation of the Bowels, Torpor of the Liver, Palpitation of the Heart, Determination of Blood to the Brain, Indigestion, Pain in the Head and Vertigo; also a remedy for

CHILLS AND FEVERS.

For particulars, see accompanying Envelope with each bottle.

For sale at 59 Camp street, New Orleans,

THOS. K. PRICE, Vendor.

Read the following opinions of some of our old and well-known citizens of

PRICE'S PATENT TEXAS TONIC,

Or, Vegetable Medicine.

T. K. PRICE, Esq., Vendor of "Price's Patent Texas Tonic," or Vegetable Medicine:

DEAR SIR—After a fair and deliberate use and experiment of your Vegetable Medicine, known as PRICE'S PATENT TEXAS TONIC, we give it as our decided opinion, that it is the best recipe that we have ever known, for Indigestion, Torpor of the Liver, Constipation of the Bowels and Dyspepsia. We consider your Vegetables Medicine worthy of all commendation, and therefore feel no hesitation in recommending its use to all our friends, as well as the public at large, and that in doing so we are contributing to all the afflicted. Many of us have been suffering from these evils from ten to fifteen years, and have been greatly benefitted.

Wishing you great success in introducing this valuable medicine,

We remain yours truly,

J. J. MULLEN, Pastor St. Patrick's Church.
J. H. CALDWELL, of Gas Works, City N. O.
SAML. TURNER of Home Insurance Office
T. GREENE, I. D. of house of Fellowes & Co
LEWIS ELKIN, Merchant, New Orleans.
GEO. W. H. NIXON, Ship Agent.
JACOB BARKER Bank of Commerce.

New Orleans, June, 1863.

TERMS:

4 oz Bottles	$2 00
6 " "	2 50
8 " "	3 00
12 " "	5 00

Sold to Druggists by the dozen bottles or more at 33⅓ per cent discount off retail price.

All orders will meet with prompt attention.

sep22 1y THOS. K. PRICE.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,

Jackson, Louisiana,

was established by the State of Louisiana in 1825, and transferred to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1845. It is now under the joint patronage of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences.

The College exercises were necessarily suspended during the war; but were regularly resumed, after reorganization, on the first Monday in October, 1865. The approaching session will open on the first Monday of October next.

Tuition, $75 per annum, payable semi-annually, in advance.

Boarding can be obtained at from $20 to $25 per month

The Buildings, Libraries, Apparatus, Laboratory and Society Halls; the location in point of beauty, health, ease of access and good society, are all unsurpassed by those of any institution in the Southern States.

The past history of the College is the pledge of its future prosperity.

The Board and Faculty promise the public that nothing shall be wanting on their part to secure the thorough education of the young men committed to their care, in both Preparatory and Collegiate Departments.

The old students, alumni, and friends of the Institution, are requested to give publicity to the full reorganization and opening of the College, as stated above.

WOODVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY,

THE SECOND SESSION

Will begin October 3d 1866, and close July 10th, 1867. The system of instruction aims at the truest, mental, moral, and social culture. The discipline seeks to embrace whatever is helpful to this end, and to exclude what is hurtful to it. Obedience to rightful authority is a necessary to membership in the school.

TERMS PER SESSION.

Board, with fuel, lights and washing,	$300 00
Tuition in Preparatory course,	60 00
" Academic "	80 00
" Collegiate "	100 00
Music,	80 00

Other ornamentals as low as can be afforded.

The Collegiate course embraces Latin and French without any extra charge. These charges are made from the beginning of the half month in which the pupil is entered, to the end of the session, and must be paid, one half in advance, and the other on the 1st of March, nor will assignment of a pupil to room, seat or class, be made until this demand is met. A sum sufficient to get books, music, and medicines for slight sickness, must be deposited with the Principal. Each boarding pupil must be provided with a supply of plain, neat clothing suitable to the season, and also with towels, table napkins—all marked in the owner's name. When a pupil, not residing in the Seminary, or one not remaining in it during her illness, is sick more than twenty consecutive days, a deduction of one half the charges for the time will be made.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Principal.

Woodville, Miss., Aug. 8th, 1866. aug25 3m.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.

The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.

TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $10.—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March,

Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.

Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.

Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.

As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.

W. H. N. MAGRUDER.

Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A. M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, Jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.

The Fall Session of this institution will open on the 26th day of September next.

This institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattresses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Stuart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.

The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:

For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—
Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks,	$67 50
Regular Tuition,	25 00
Incidental Fee,	2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of instrument	37 50
French or Spanish,	15 00
Ornamental branches at usual prices.

☞ All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.

The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.

After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.

For other information address

CHARLES B. STUART, President,
ug4ft Mansfield, La.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. Geo. F. Thompson, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Millsaps, Rev. George H. Clinton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.

Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.

The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Jan. 31, 1867.

For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. a18ft

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M., President,	Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Preceptress of Primary School.
Miss Marie S. Muxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bedclothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September. Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT.

D. G. HUMPHREYS, Pres. Board of Trustees.
jy14 6m

NORTH, BRUSH & MASON,

Wholesale Dealers in

Fancy Goods,

STATIONERY, PERFUMERY, CUTLERY,

HOSIERY,

Furnishing Goods, etc.,

35 MAGAZINE STREET,

Opposite the St. James Hotel, New Orleans, La.

mar25 1y

CHAS. H. CHURCHILL. PETER G. TAYLOR.

HARDWARE AND GUNS.

TAYLOR & CHURCHILL,

(Opposite St. James Hotel,) NEW ORLEANS, LA.

DIRECT IMPORTERS,

41 Magazine Street, and 30 Bank Place.

We have in stock and are constantly receiving some choice patterns of English and American Table and Pocket Cutlery, to which we invite the attention particularly of country merchants. Also, a large stock of Trace, Ox and Log Chains, English and American Planters' Hoes, Axes, Vices and Bellows; Scales, manufactured by the Novelty Iron Works; Files, English and American.

COTTON AND WOOL CARDS, NOVA SCOTIA GRIND STONES, PLOWS.

Hall & Speer's Peacock Plows, Nos. 1, 2 and 3; Hall & Speer's Cast Valley Plows, Nos. 1 & 2; King Cary (wood mould board) Plows.

NAILS, HOLLOW WARE, SAWS, TIN WARE, AXES.

GUNS, RIFLES, PISTOLS.

Of all patterns and brands. All the above is offered for sale at the lowest market quotations. Orders from the country are respectfully solicited by TAYLOR & CHURCHILL, 41 Magazine street, and 20 Bank Place, opposite St. James Hotel. Established in New Orleans without intermission, by the present senior member of the firm, in 1832.

W. H. HENNING & CO.,

Grocers and Commission Merchants,

95 and 97, Camp Street, New Orleans,

Offers to Families, Planters and Traders a full stock of Fancy and Staple Goods, consisting in part of

CHAMPAGNE,

BRANDIES,

WHISKIES,

CLARET,

CORDIALS, Etc.

Also, a large lot of Coffee, Sugar, Molasses, Tobacco, Pork, Beef, Bacon, Salt, suitable for Plantation supplies,—all of which will be offered at the Most reasonable Rates.

☞ Country orders will receive the most careful and prompt attention.

W. H. HENNING & CO,
a25 6m 95 & 97 Camp street, New Orleans

WALLACE & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS, and

PLANTATION CLOTHING,

No. 74 Canal Street, and 91, 93 and 95 Common Street, (Slocume Building), New Orleans

☞ Sales guaranteed at New York prices.

A. B. GRISWOLD. W. M. GOODRICH

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,

Corner of Canal and Royal streets,

[Late Hyde & Goodrich],

Established in New Orleans Fifty Years!

MANUFACTURERS OF JEWELRY & SILVER WARE,

Importers of Watches, Diamonds, Clocks, Bronzes, Porcelain, Plated Ware, Cutlery, Fancy Goods, Guns and Pistols.

The largest assortment in the South always on hand. aug25 6m

JAMES SYME,

Wholesale Druggist.

139 Canal Street, (Touro Buildings,) New Orleans.

Importer and Dealer in Fine CHEMICALS, DRUGS, MEDICINES, DRUGGISTS' SUNDRIES, Fancy Goods and Perfumery.

Surgical Instruments, French, English, and American, of every variety

Also—Medicine Chests and Medical Saddle-bags. aug25 1y

A. D. GRIEFF,

Wholesale Grocer,

COMMISSION MERCHANT, AND DEALER IN SOUTHERN AND WESTERN PRODUCE,

48, 50 and 52 Old Levee st., corner Bienville st., aug26 6m NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN SHOE MANUFACTORY,

DRAKE & MARKHAM,

Manufacturers of

Men's, Boys', Ladies', Misses' & Children'

BOOTS AND SHOES,

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL,

No. 56 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

We call the attention of the public to our extensive stock of fine custom-made Creole Boots and Shoes, for Gents, Boys, Youths, Ladies, Misses and Children, made of the best imported stock, by skillful workmen.

We design furnishing goods that combine elegance with durability, at a less price than common goods are usually sold for in this city.

OUR LAST-FOR-EVER BOOTS!

Every man in this State should have a pair of our Last-for-ever Boots. They are warranted waterproof, and to last one year, or the money returned.

Our stock of Family and Plantation Shoes are the best that can be made.

One pair will outwear any three pairs bought at auction. Country Merchants will do well to make a note of this.

We have better goods and sell them lower than any house in Louisiana.

Orders filled at ten per cent. on the original cost of manufacture.

All goods warranted to satisfy, or they may be returned. Planters will instruct their Commission Merchants to buy their shoes of

DRAKE & MARKHAM, 56 Camp street.
aug18 1y

A GOOD COOKING STOVE

Is one of the most necessary and desirable articles of household economy, and if properly managed, will promote the health, comfort, and happiness of every member of the family.

Time, money, and extreme vexation by delays of your daily meals, may be saved by using the

CHARTER OAK COOKING STOVE.

Over 10,000 of these celebrated cooking stoves are in daily use throughout the city of New Orleans. Every one of them has been sold under a full guarantee, and we offer them as a reference wherever found.

The Improved Charter Oak Stove with Extension Top

has but one damper, and is so simple in its construction that a child can manage it. The ovens are larger, bake more uniform, and the stove heavier than any cooking stove of corresponding size ever made.

The Hot Water Reservoir Boiler furnishes a constant supply of hot water at all hours of the day, and for hours after the fire has been extinguished, without additional cost for fuel, a practical illustration of the economy in using the Charter Oak.

The Reflector Gridiron, original with the Charter Oak, and used on no other stove—the most perfect manner to broil meats and poultry, whereby the offensive odors arising from meats during the process of broiling are carried up the pipe, and juices of the meats preserved.

The Hot Closet, in which meats and pastry are kept warm for hours when there has been a delay at meals, besides enabling the cook to furnish the greatest variety of dishes and desserts, and place them hot upon the table.

The Charter Oak Stove will do one-third more baking in a given time, and use 25 per cent less wood than any other stove now made.

Importers and Dealers in Hardware, Nails, Castings, Guns, Carpenters and Coopers' Edge Tools, etc.

RICE BROS. & CO., Sole Agents, 93 and 95 Camp street, near Poydras, and 565 Magazine street, near Magazine Market sep1 1y

CATE'S SHOE FACTORY,

HAMMOND STATION, ON JACKSON RAILROAD

Established, August, 1861,

Destroyed, May, 1863.

Re-established, January, 1866.

SALES ROOMS,

C. E. CATE & CO.,

18 CAMP STREET, 18

Under the City Hotel.

We respectfully call the attention of all parties desirous of encouraging HOME MANUFACTURE to the various styles of

LADIES' SUPERIOR CALF WALKING SHOES AND DRESS BOOTEES, MISSES' HEAVY SCHOOL SHOES, CHILDRENS' STRONG SHOES AND MEN'S AND BOYS' CALF, AND KIP BROGANS,

Which we are now daily receiving from our Factory. These goods are made here, of Louisiana Tanned Leather, and we flatter ourselves fully demonstrate that manufacturing in the South is no longer an experiment, but with the proper encouragement from all who are interested in such enterprises, we promise better stock, more faithful workmanship and superior goods every way, to any Eastern goods, and for the same class of work at as low prices.

We aim to manufacture all the goods we sell, and to that end we are turning out new styles every week.

A trial for this work is cordially solicited from Merchants, Planters, and all persons requiring good Shoes.

C. E. CATE & CO.
feb17 18 Camp st., N. O.

GEO. H. VINTEN,

PAPER WAREHOUSE,

No. 140 Poydras street, between Camp and St. Charles streets, New Orleans.

Newspaper of the following sizes: 22 by 32,

The New Orleans Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE METHODIST E. CHURCH SOUTH FOR THE MOBILE, MONTGOMERY, MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA CONFERENCES.

VOLUME XII.—NUMBER 16.
WHOLE NUMBER 608.

NEW ORLEANS, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1866.

$3 00 A YEAR IN ADVANCE
OFFICE—124 CAMP STREET.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LETTER FROM PLAQUEMINE, LA.

DEAR ADVOCATE: Since you call for news of all sorts that will interest but not weary, you may expect your sanctum to witness the disposal of many a letter, for I suppose all your friends will "do their best" to supply you.

This place, (P. B.) is one of the most desirable portions of Western Louisiana. Its soil is good, its climate healthful, its citizens good neighbors. Good congregations assemble every Sabbath at its neat little church. A large number are members thereof. The church has its petroleum lamps, but it needs painting.

We live in a prairie, a cove fifteen miles long, three miles wide. The jayhawkers did not hurt us, they thought too much of their lives. The federals came but once. Land may be bought here for about $2,50 in specie, prairie and woodland. Improved places sell higher. There is fine summer and winter range for a stock of all kinds. Sheep, hogs, horses, and horned cattle are seldom fed at all, yet owners grow rich on them.

Opelousas is twenty miles from our church, Grand Coteau and Vermillionville, eighteen. The line of the Texas rail road is about fifteen miles from here. Twenty miles with us is a drive of two and half hours, our roads are so level.

The farmers here were much hindered by the Spring rains, but generally they have made good corn crops. Cotton was doing pretty well, but the worm has come! No great damage was being done by it till recently. We had for some ten days had a great deal of rain, and I'm told the worm now hard at work. Nothing but clear weather will enable the farmers to save what is already opened or opening.

Our cattle are very fat, and likely to continue so quite late in the winter. There is a fine young mast, so that hog-meat will be abundant.

Persons looking out for homes in a good country, among clever people, "would do well to give us a call before enquiring elsewhere."

Concerning the religious state of the church, I cannot speak so favorably. Through the parish, as far as I can learn, Christians are somewhat discouraged. They feel their poverty, their political condition, etc., drive back their faith. But I believe, the most of them, though discouraged somewhat, are determined to hold on to the "Old Ship." A series of protracted meetings will soon commence (D. V.) from which you may hear.

The negro has done pretty well here. Not as well as in the days agone, but still pretty well. The blacks here are in sense, rather above the average of plantation hands, they know the determined character of the white citizens, and are twenty miles from a Bureau Agent!

If you wish I will write of other portions with which I am acquainted.

Fraternally,

F. T. R.

Plaquemine Brulie, La., Sept. 6, 1866.

Rev. Wm. Authur.

Among many good things said by Mr. McAuthor of London, in a speech on the recent Centenary occasion at Cooper's Institute, was the following from which we extract from the N. Y. Christian Advocate and Journal:

He (the speaker) would like to see a volume written, shewing how Methodism had rescued talent of the highest order, where it was buried and never would have appeared, unless, in the language of an eloquent English writer, Methodism had "gone into the mine, from whence, we are told, nothing good could be extracted, and brought up immortal gems, flashing with the light of intellect, and adorned with the graces of every Christian grace." In a remote district in Connaught, where there were only seven Protestants to every ninety-three Roman Catholics, a Methodist missionary found his way to a little cabin. He preached the Word of life to a very small congregation; but in that assemblage was a lad who had never known anything of Methodism before, and was induced to go to hear the preacher. The Word reached his heart. He became deeply convinced of sin, and in the agony of his soul sought for pardon. One day while he was pleading with God the Lord lifted upon him the light of his countenance. That young man knew nothing of Methodist phraseology, and was ignorant of the lyrics of Charles Wesley, but he had read the British poets and revelled in the luxury of reading Thomas Moore's Lalla Rookh; and when God spoke peace to his soul he got up on his feet and exclaimed: "Oh, if there be an elysium on earth, it is this—it is this!" That young man, although very young, and dressed in a little round jacket, commenced to preach, was sent to an institution in England, went out as a missionary to India, returned again, filled important positions in England, and that lad—the fruit of Methodist missions in the west of Ireland—is now the Rev. Wm. Arthur, president of the British Wesleyan Conference. (Applause.)

In the year 1855, when the Irish Methodist Church had lost one third of its members, a meeting was held in the town of Belfast. It was then the day of small things, and great depression existed; but Carey's motto was adopted—"Attempt great things for God and expect great things." At that meeting a plan was devised for the increase of Methodist agency in Ireland, and his friend, Rev. Dr. Scott, a devoted and zealous servant of the connexion, who, it is did not originate, had promoted the movement from the beginning—Dr. Scott urged the people to do something more than they had done for the propagation of Methodism, and he (the speaker) would never forget the effect produced when one speaker recited with deep emotion a verse of one of our hymns:

> "O, ye of fearful hearts, be strong;
> Your downcast eyes and hearts lift up,
> Ye shall not be forgotten long—
> Hope to the end—in Jesus hope.
> Tell Him ye wait his grace to prove,
> And can not fail if God be love."

It was felt then that there was hope for Irish Methodism, and at that meeting not less than £8000 were collected, which was subsequently increased to £13,000. It was then suggested that American Methodists would help Ireland, for the Irish Methodist Church had not only been instrumental in sending Philip Embury to these shores, but was constantly giving from year to year, thousands of her best members. It was remembered that the Presbyterians who visited America brought back £10—000, and the Irish Methodists accordingly sent over Rev. Messrs. Arthur and Scott, who met with a very warm reception. It was suggested that they should get $100,000. They received $48,000, and that sum added to the money they had collected, gave the first impulse to the movement in Ireland, and enabled them to plant fifty additional schools, add ten more to the ministry, and increase and strengthen their whole agency in the country.

From the Nashville Christian Advocate.

INDIAN MISSION CONFERENCE.

The Rev. J. H. Carr, Secretary of the Indian Mission Conference, writes us, Bloomfield Academy, Chickasaw Nation, Sept. 15: "The Indinn Mission Conference has just closed its 21st session—Bishop Marvin presiding. We had truly an interesting and in every way pleasant session." The following interesting and important commenication has been sent us by Bishop Marvin:

MR. EDITOR:—I am now holding the Indian Mission Conference, at the Bloomfield Academy, in the Chickasaw Nation. The fruits of the war are painfully manifest in the diminished numbers of this missionary band. There are only sixteen names remaining upon the Conference roll, and of these only seven are in attendance. Of the rest, some are sick, and some without means of traveling. The schools have all been suspended since the beginning of the war.

Yet we have very encouraging reports from many quarters. The native preachers, traveling and local, and the exhorters, nearly all continued faithful throughout the trying period of the war, and have been doing a good work since its close. In the course of the past summer there have been several extensive revivals—some of them of an extraordinary character. The people generally are as ready to hear the gospel as ever, and in many places they crowd eagerly together at every appointment. Some camp-meetings have been held with happy results.

But the work has been sadly embarrassed by the straitened circumstances of the preachers, and this must continue until they can get help from the Missionary Board. They have been looking hopefully to this time for relief, and are disappointed. Many of the Cherokees lost everything by the war, and were compelled to flee for their lives. Most of the refugees have returned to their homes, but they have gone back in absolute destitution. Some have not even been able to get back. These brethren must have help, or they cannot devote their time to preaching.

Several of the white missionaries have been compelled to abandon the field and retire to other Conferences, or resort to secular employments to obtain support for their families. A large portion of the country formerly occupied, especially among the Chicasaws and Choctaws, is now wholly unsupplied; nor have we now the men or means to send them the gospel. To us they look, but at present in vain. It makes me sad to append to so many names of circuits, "to be supplied," with the assurance that there is no "supply" available. What is to be done?

The Mission Schools have all been suspended for several years. The war cut off the means of subsistence for them entirely. They were supported in part by annuities from the Government, and in part by the Missionary Treasury. The annuities will now soon be available again, and the Conference has taken such steps as the circumstances allowed toward resuming operations in this department. It remains to be seen what the Missionary Board can do for them. We must not think of allowing this vital adjunct of our work to pass out of our hands.

The Indian work has special claims upon the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The people have attached themselves to us, and we have acknowledged the obligation thus imposed. We are bound to them by history. The past blessing of God upon our labors among them must not be discredited by any neglect in the future. Missionary outlay has seldom been more fruitful than here. And now that the foundation is laid, it will not do to quit the task before the walls are erected and the building finished. This work must not stop.

If the Missionary Society is trammeled for want of means, it seems to me to be good policy to husband its resources by using them here where the work, already begun, may be carried on at a smaller cost. Distant operations, involving the heavy expenditures incident to the establishment of a new mission, may be delayed with propriety. Little will be lost in a year or two. No special obligations will be violated. We may begin when we shall have become more prosperous. But here delay is dead loss. Every day's postponement is a calamity. The fields are white to the harvest. Already the hardy hand of the reaper is chided by the waste. Let it be the first care of the Board to re-invigorate the Indian Missions, and place them on a firm footing. Let us do the work well which we already have in hand. This accomplished, we shall be ready for larger enterprises.

Besides all this, the aboriginal inhabitants of this country have the very first claim upon us. We have entered into their inheritance. Our plow turns the sod upon the graves of their fathers. Our steamers vex the waters on which once floated their light canoes. Our cities and plantations have devoured the range of the elk and the buffalo. They have melted before us like the frost before the morning sun. We have driven them to these western prairies, and confined them to these furrow limits, and we now owe them the gospel.

I have intimated above that there is economy in spending money where the foundation is already laid. One fact will illustrate this: There are among the Indians now several native preachers, who are very useful men among their own people. They are satisfied to work for small salaries—very small. But they must have something—a bare subsistence—or else labor with their hands for bread. Two or three of them may be employed for what it would cost to support one white missionary. Thus, former missionary outlays become productive, and it is suicidal now to neglect this means of growing from our former work. We must enter into our own labors, and reap the harvest of our own sowing; especially since the cost of reaping is so much less than the cost of sowing.

I am earnest in this matter. The Indian work must be held second to none in its claims upon the Church. The Christian heart of the country will respond to it generously. The prayers of thousands will go up to God in its behalf. And we shall meet multitudes of our red brothers on the shore of immortality, and in the city of God.

I inclose you a list of the Appointments of the Conference.

E. M. MARVIN.

Bloomfield Academy, Chickasaw Nation, Sept. 16.

APPOINTMENTS.

John Harrell, Superintendent of Indian Missions.

CHOCTAW DIS.—John C. Robinson, P. E.
Doak-ville Circuit, John N. Hamill, Simon P. Willis.
Mountain Fork, to be supplied.
Kiamichie, to be supplied.
Mashalatubbee, to be supplied.
Sanboy, to be supplied.

CHICKASAW DISTRICT—John H. Carr, P. E.
Chickasaw Circuit, John Talbot.
Jack's Fork, to be supplied.
Perryville, John Page.
Fort Arbuckle, to be supplied.
Chickasaw Academy, John C. Robinson, Superintendent.
Bloomfield Academy, John H. Carr, Superintendent.

CHEROKEE DISTRICT—John Ewing, P. E.
Tahlliquah & Port Gibson, to be supplied.
Grand River, David B. Cumming, Elijah Butler.
Salesaw, Isaac Saunders.
Flint, Standlingman.
Canadian, Walker Cary.

CREEK DISTRICT—Thos. Bertolf, P. E.
Creek Agency, James Mellenry.
North Fork, to be supplied.
Little River, to be supplied.
Asbury Manual Labor School, Thos. Bertolf, Superintendent.
James G. Walker, transferred to the West Texas Conference.

Most of the points to be supplied will be served by native Indians.

N. W. TEXAS CONFERENCE.

We give extracts from the interesting letter of the Editor of the "Texas Christian Advocate."

CONFERENCE ROOM,
Saturday Morning, Sept. 29.

We find the Conference well advanced in its business. Bishop Marvin in the Chair, fully confirming the expectations of his friends respecting his admirable executive abilities; and charming all by the kind cheerful and earnest spirit which marks the performance of his official duties. He is just from the Indian Mission Conference. I send you the list of appointments for publication. The names of many of the appointments are harsh to our ear, and many of the preachers, and nearly all the supplies are native Indians. The Bishop says many of them are noble specimens of their race, and that all of them are earnest, active and devout Methodist preachers. They are meeting well the demands of the gospel among their own people, and their prospects of success are cheering. The warm greeting we had met the night before in church made us feel that we were among old friends.

This young Conference numbers near forty members. Many of them have had hard times during the last year. Heavy work on circuits large enough for districts, their path-ways along the frontier, beset by the savages, none receiving more than a pittance towards their support, and yet there is no talk of location among them. We feel stronger as we look upon these weather-beaten men, the marks of toil on their frames, but the traces of calm, religious resolve upon their countenances. They discussed the various questions of church interest, which came before them, with an earnestness which indicated that this was their business on earth, and that the trials they encountered were the mere accidents of life, which, in the presence of their sacred obligations, scarcely deserved a thought. The soul gathers strength from contact with such men. We feel ashamed of ourself when we remember that we have murmured at the vexations of our own lot. Here is one who received thirty dollars last year, and is willing, if the interests of the work demand it, to go back to the same field again. Here is another who lost nothing last year, by the Indians, but his horse—feels thankful, that under the providence of God, they did not get his scalp, and is quietly awaiting the appointment that may send him along the same trail next year. Here is another who put his wife in the carryall and they wandered all over the district, when they found that they could not secure enough to enable them to have a home; willing to give up all the joys of their own fireside, that the husband might preach Christ and Him crucified. Here are near two score of men, made out of the same material that composes the rest of men, susceptible of the same pains, with the same nature—relish for ease, or wealth, or honor, loving their wives and their children, often sad when they see them suffer, and yet they have given up the world, and are here to plan their work, not by reducing it to a shape more agreeable and pleasant, but to shape it so that men's souls may be converted to God. I am glad they admitted me within their bar, and glad they call me brother, and the bond that unites us distance cannot dissolve nor absence sever. These have but little quarterage to report, but they bring up something better. Many report revivals of religion upon their circuits, and expect the coming year that their labors will be abundantly blessed. They have a noble field before them. May God help them to meet their sacred trust.

I have seldom met a more generous and hospitable people than we have in Waxahachie. The church they have erected is an evidence of their liberality and public spirit. It is large, well seated, with a new pulpit, and well lighted. Every one is impressed with the air of cheerful quiet that prevails, as well as by the spirit of enterprise this growing town exhibits. There is not a grog shop in the place, and hence those scenes that so often offend the eye are never witnessed here.

The town is situated in the midst of a large section of rich land, and from the size of the congregation the country is rapidly filling up.

The missionary meeting Saturday night was a decided success. The address of Bishop Marvin kindled the missionary spirit in the hearts of both preachers and people, and the collection, amounting to some five hundred dollars, is a generous offering in view of the financial condition of the country.

The Sabbath was both pleasantly and profitably spent. The sermon of Bishop Marvin, addressed especially to the preachers, awakened in every heart an earnest desire to be a better christian and a more effective preacher. The ordination services were solemn and impressive. Bro. Hughes gave us an earnest, feeble sermon in the afternoon, and at night, after a sermon from the editor, closing with a call for mourners, the altar was filled and some five or six were converted. A deep spirit of inquiry is abroad in the community. Last night and to-night the altar was crowded, and some twenty have professed religion. Bro. Veal and some other preachers will remain and carry on the meeting, and we hope it will result in a general and powerful revival throughout this region.

The action of General Conference respecting the change of name, and the introduction of lay representation into our economy, were adopted unanimously.

We part with our brethren of this Conference with the most grateful recollections. Their words of encouragement, their prompt support of all the measures which were designed to promote the interests of the Advocate and the Book Depository, will cheer us on amid the anxieties and toils which are before us.

After the administration of the Lord's Supper, one of the most solemn and impressive occasions of the kind we ever witnessed, the appointments were read, and within a few hours, saddle-bags already packed were thrown across the saddle, words of parting were heard, and the preachers passed out by every road to their appointed fields. God bless them all! They went forth in the spirit of their Master, and may that spirit in its power attend their labors.

We leave in the morning, in company with the Bishop and several preachers, for Marshall, the seat of the East Texas Conference.

APPOINTMENTS.

WACO DISTRICT—L. B. Whipple, P. E.
Waco Station, John Carpenter.
Waco Circuit, to be supplied.
White Rock, J. P. Sneed.
Belton Circuit, J. W. Ledbetter.
Georgetown Circuit, J. F. Cox.
Cameron Circuit, O. M. Addison. J. H. Addison, supernumerary.
Marlin Circuit, J. P. Massett.
Waco Colored Charge, to be supplied.

LAMPASAS DISTRICT—J. M. Johnson, P. E.
Lampasas Circuit, to be supplied.
San Saba Circuit, Theodore M. Price
Palo Pinto Mission, Milton Jones.
Sulphur Springs Circuit, William Monk.
Stephensville Mission, to be supplied.
Meridian Mission, Peter W. Gravis.
Bosqueville Circuit, George W. Graves.
Gatesville Mission, to be supplied.
Camp Colorada Mission, to be supplied.

WAXAHACHIE DISTRICT—W. G. Veal, P. E.
Waxahachie Station, Thos. Stanford. F. P. Ray, superannuated.
Waxahachie Circuit, Jerome B. Anais. S. S. Yarbro, supernumerary.
Hillsboro Circuit, R. B. Womack.
Grand View Circuit, one to be supplied.
Action Circuit, Jesse L. Boyd.
Weatherford Circuit, John F. Neal.
Fort Worth Circuit, J. M. Jones.
Waxahachie Color. Charge, to be supplied

SPRINGFIELD DIS.—Jno. S. McCorver, P. E.
Springfield Circuit, Wm. McMathes.
Corsicana Circuit, Saml. C. Littlepage.
J. Y. Brice, superannuated.
Village Creek Mission, Milton H. Jones.
Fairfield Circuit, T. G. Gilmore.
Clear Creek Mission, Drury Womack.
Owensville Circuit, Jackson L. Crabb.
Port Sullivan Station, A. L. P. Green.
Port Sullivan Male and Female College, J. O. Church.
Port Sullivan Col. Charge, to be supplied
Springfield Colored Charge, Reuben Long
Wm. McK. Lambdin, Agent Depository and Advocate.
M. Gill, Robt. Crawford and J. P. Stanfield, superannuated.

The Archbishop of York.

A correspondent of the Presbyterian tells the following anecdote of Dr. Thompson, Archbishop of York, who was elevated from an Oxford professorship to an arch-episcopal chair by Lord Palmerston:

It was all unexpected, this elevation, by himself, and especially never dreamed of by Mrs. Thompson. The story goes that, one day at Oxford, Dr. Thompson came from his college into his house, and said suddenly to his spouse, "My dear, I am Archbishop of York!" The good lady looked up with astonishment and affright, and began to weep. Then she said, "Poor man, I see that—your brain has been overtaxed. I was afraid of this. Your mind is disordered, poor fellow! You must go to bed immediately. You must keep quiet, or you will go mad altogether!" And the lady wept afresh. Nevertheless, her husband was not "mad," and he was at that moment an elected archbishop, with a splendid income, a vast patronage, and greater in precedence and rank than all the ordinary bishops, and nearly the whole of the nobility! Well, he has a head on his shoulders; he can preach, and speak, and write; and better still, "the root of the matter" is in him. His father was once a linen draper in Whitehaven, in Cumberland; and his father's father was probably a Scottish packman, who had crossed the borders with his stock in trade strapped across his brawny shoulders, and by indefatigable energy, industry, and thrift, laying the foundations of future prosperity.

SOMETHING FOR THEE.

> Something, my God, for Thee,
> Something for Thee:
> That each day's setting sun may bring
> Some penitential offering;
> In thy dear name, some kindness done:
> To Thy dear love some wanderer won—
> Some trial meekly borne for Thee,
> Dear Lord, for thee
>
> Something, my God, for Thee,
> Something for Thee;
> That to Thy gracious throne may rise
> Sweet incense from some sacrifice—
> Uplifted eyes undimmed by tears:
> Uplifted faith unstained by fears,
> Hailing each joy as light from Thee,
> Dear Lord, from Thee.
>
> Something, my God, for Thee,
> Something for Thee:
> For the great love that Thou hast given,
> For the dear hope of Thee and heaven,
> My soul her first allegiance brings,
> And upward plumes her heavenward wings
> Near to Thee.

Gospel Trumpet.

From the Watchman.

THE REV. DR. HAWKS.

The departure of our dear friend demands something more than a mere notice in the columns of the latest literary journal in which he was interested. His commanding talents and position entitle him to special notice in all literary circles. He was an ornament to the profession of letters, a scholar, a philosophor, and an orator. In us he was more. He was an ardent, open-hearted friend, a kind and wise counselor. The week his been darkened by his death. He had planned a series of articles for this journal which he had submitted to us, and we were hoping that his valuable life would be spared that he might finish what would not only have added reputation to The Watchman, but have been most useful to the whole country. God saw otherwise. After he sank too low to see us, he sent beautiful and loving messages; and from his bed of death performed an act of kindness which will embalm the name of Dr. Hawks in the hearts of our family forever.

Francis Lister Hawks, D. D. and LL. D., was born in the city of New-Berne, North Carolina, June tenth, 1798. He received his baccalaureate degree from the University of North Carolina, in 1815, and was admitted to the bar in 1819. At the early age of twenty-three he was a member of the legislature of his native State. Shortly afterward he devoted himself to theology, and was admitted to the diaconate of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in 1827. His first service was in New Haven, and subsequently in Philadelphia. In 1831 he became rector of St. Stephens; and when we first visited New York, in 1839, we found him at St. Thomas's. In 1844 he went to New Orleans, where he remained five years, during which period he was elected President of the University of Louisiana. In 1849 he returned to this city as rector of Calvary church. When the difficulties of the country came he had trouble with some of his congregation, and exchanged rectorships with Dr. Arthur C. Coxe, now Bishop of Western New York, Dr. Hawks taking his place in Baltimore. Soon after the return of peace he was recalled to New York to take charge of the congregation of the Chapel of the Holy Saviour. His friend, Mr. Nibio, provided a lot upon which is now the beginning of that structure, in which it was hoped his eloquent voice would be heard preaching the Gospel of Jesus. The Head of the Church hath willed otherwise, and His servant hath been dismissed from his toils.

Dr. Hawks was a laborious man. In 1837 he established the New York Review, of which he was an editor, and to which he was the principal contributor. He was also historiographer of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and made a voyage to England to obtain papers bearing on the history of that branch of Christ's Church in this country. In 1833 appeared his Contributions to the Ecclesiastical History of the United States; in 1840, his Egypt and its Monuments; in the same year, Auricular Confession in the Protestant Episcopal Church; in 1854, a translation of Rovero's and Tschudi's Antiquities of Peru. He wrote, also, two volumes of the History of North Carolina, published by Mr. Hale, in Fayetteville; and he edited the papers of Alexander Hamilton. Before entering the ministry he prepared four volumes of Reports of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, and a Digest of all the Cases Decided and Reported in North Carolina. In addition to all this, his contributions to periodical literature were really voluminous.

We think it was in 1837 that Dr. Hawks projected the school for boys at Flushing. It was a magnificent project, whose very liberality involved him pecuniarily, from which, however, he was finally extricated. Divers times he was elected to presidencies and professorships in colleges, and four times he declined the episcopate. One of his latest utterances to us was: "Yea, and forty-and-four times would I have done the same." He wisely valued the pastorate above all clerical positions.

The close of this laborious life was triumphant. Every interview with Dr. Hawks deepened in us the impression that he was a pure Christian ripening for heaven. Our intercourse with him has done more than increase our admiration of his exalted intellectual powers. It has edified us spiritually, and greatly strengthened us in our own work of the ministry of the Gospel of the Son of God. "Live closer to Jesus," was a constant word with him. When asked if he was comfortable, he replied, "All is perfect peace; I am perfectly happy." His addresses to the members of his family, after partaking of the Holy Communion, were most tender and impressive. He retained his senses to the last. He followed the prayer for the dying, and repeated his favorite hymn—

> "When I survey the wondrous cross."

Failing a little in the beginning of the second stanzas, one of his daughters prompted him. "No," said he, "let me repeat it unaided.

> "Forbid it, Lord, that I should boast
> Save in the death of Christ my God,
> All the vain things that charms me most,
> I sacrifice them to His blood."

"Do not rely upon your good works. Only believe. Only Jesus." These were his views in dying. When his wife remarked that he always awoke smiling "Oh," said he, "I seem to have such insights into heaven."

His "warfare is accomplished." He has entered that rest of which glimpses were vouchsafed his faith. There are many other sweet and beautiful things we might record. Let this assure his distant friends that he "died well." In his shroud he lay so calm and noble, clasping the cross of beautiful flowers which his friends had laid upon his breast, while an anchor of flowers lay over his feet, and a crown of flowers stood at his head, that as we prayed alone beside that cold brow and those silenced lips, in the chamber in which he had so counselled and cheered us, we felt how blessed are the dead who die in the Lord.

He was carried to Greenwood from Calvary church last Saturday afternoon. A crowd of clergyman and laymen filled the church. The services were most solemnly conducted by Dr. Washburne and Bishop Potter. The body was placed in the vestibule, and all the people filed past it to look for the last time upon that face which had been so radiant with genius and kindness, and that month, which had so taught and blessed them, now sealed in the last silence.

North and South the name of Francis L. Hawks is a household word, and the memory of Francis L. Hawks will be long and most tenderly cherished by all who admire genius and generosity and manliness and patriotism and faith unfeigned, and that blessed charity which is greater than all. After life's day of labor the Lord "giveth His beloved sleep."

PROSPECTS OF THE PAPACY.

There are three foundations on which a church may build. It may build on the countenance and support of politicians and worldly men. In this case the church may secure for itself wealth and influence. But this wealth and influence are purchased at the dear price of the loss of freedom. The kings of this earth are wise in their generation, and if they pay wages they will expect in return faithful service. On this foundation the Church of Rome has been building for centuries. To the despots of Europe it sold itself, getting in return honor, and riches, and political influence. Bismarck and the needle-gun have blown up the last of this foundation into mid-air. In the downfall of Austria the last bulwark of intolerance and Papal despotism in central Europe has fallen. "One feels," says Dr. Cairns, of Berwick, "as if a great iceberg had been suddenly dissolved, or the apocalyptic mill-stone cast into the sea. To the upholders of anti-Christian thraldom it is almost the hour of supreme anguish; to its countless martyrs and victims that of triumph and hope." Now and forever the sword of the civil power is taken out of the grasp of Rome. Spain is politically dead or dying, France is infidel, Italy is revolutionary, and Austria is shattered. But there is a second foundation on which yet to build.

Churches, when destitute of wealth and secular influence, have built on the ignorance and superstitious fears of the multitude. This source of strength the Romish Church understood well, and on this foundation it has built a vast superstructure. But this foundation also is being shaken and dissolved. The printing-press, the telegraph, the steam-engine, are extending the triumphs slowly but surely through the Roman Catholic countries of Europe, and working their way into the heart of Rome itself. The masses of Europe are learning to read, and no power on earth can keep the Bible and Newspaper hid any longer from them. On popular ignorance and superstition the Church of Rome can henceforward build but little. The age of authority is gone for Europe, and the age of reason has set in with a force that threatens to overturn things whose foundation in truth lies deeper than the foundation of the Church of Rome. And if in the fiery ordeal the Bible itself can scarcely be saved, where will the doctrines and traditions of men appear?

But there is a third foundation which is unmoveable as the rock, and against the church that builds on this foundation no enemy can prevail. "It is the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." The question of life or death for the Church of Rome is just the question, whether it, driven from these two foundations of sand, will begin to build on this rock. In other words, is the church of Rome prepared to let go its temporal, and its superstitious power, and is it ready to build its claims on the truth. Is the church of Rome prepared to let go its mediævalism, its infallibility, its auricular confession, its priestly celibacy? Is the church of Rome prepared to come down of its own accord, from the lofty pinnacle, whence it looks out with contempt on the Protestant Churches, and whence it utters unchristian curses against all that differ from it? Is it prepared to come down from this height without waiting to be hurled down? Is it prepared to take its position, side by side, with the Lutheran and Calvinistic churches as another branch of the Reformed Church of Christ? Is the Church of Rome with all its wealth, and pride, and influence, and prestige prepared for this sacrifice painful as the agonies of crucifixion itself? This question the Romish church is at length forced to face. There is no retreating possible now. This question must be answered, nay or yea. In the bosom of the Romish Church there are thousands of priests and millions of people who would, if allowed liberty of judgment, choose the yea, and who would gladly see the church undergo radical reformation. But it is otherwise we fear with the men who rule in the Romish Church. With a blindness that is partly a misfortune, partly a crime, and partly a Divine judgment, the men who direct the councils of that church seem determined to commit the church to the protection of the modern rifle and of the ancient superstition. The downfall of Austria has broken the arm of civil power; the progress of popular knowledge the arm of tradition, and to a church that knows no other support there can be no other fate than a speedy and complete downfall.—Montreal Review.

A gigantic melon was sold recently at the Halles Centrales, the largest that has been heard of in the memory of man. It weighed no less than seventy-four pounds, and was grown in a garden at St. Denis.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

REVOLTING SCENE NEAR CALCUTTA.

A gentleman who has traveled nearly 300 miles through the districts south-west of Calcutta, in which the famine is raging, has sent to the Times the following details of the sickening spectacles which met his view at various parts of his journey:—

"I started from Midnapore, a civil station about 70 miles south west of the capital, on the morning of the 26th of June, and had hardly proceeded some seven miles when commenced the painful sights which, varying only in intensity, continued until I again returned to this place.

"Rain had fallen heavily during the night, and the palki men were trudging slowly through the mud, when a little after daybreak I saw two bodies under a tree. As there seemed to be a slight motion in one I alighted, and on going up to it found, covered under an old cloth, with just a spark of life left in him, an old man slowly dying from hunger. He appeared as if he had a thin piece of transparent India rubber tightly drawn over his skeleton frame, so emaciated had he become. I gave him some beer, and he slowly faltered out his tale of woe. He said that he and his companion had left their homes, after seeing their families die from the effects of cholera or famine, and had got this far on their journey towards Midnapore, hoping to get relief there, when one, struck by damp and hunger, dies on the road under a tree, and the other awakes to find his friend a corpse, and himself, exhausted and drenched by the heavy rains that had fallen during the night, unable to move. The dogs and jackals feast on the body, while this living but a few paces off is powerless to prevent them. He faintly begs from the passers-by, but in vain. Hunger is gnawing their vitals also. They all turn a deaf ear to his cry. The beer seemed to revive him, and I went to my palki to get some biscuits, but returned to find the poor sufferer in a state of coma, and in a few minutes he was dead. The half picked body of his companion attested his tale. I continued my journey, passing at intervals the dead as they lay unburied and in every stage of decomposition on the side of the road. Sometimes I would see a cluster together. In one place there were 22 bodies within the space of half a mile, in another six close together—all more or less mangled and torn by jackals, dogs, and vultures. Pushing my way through the jungle and over paddy fields, often obliged to swim sundry streams swollen by the late floods, in one of which my palkin was upset, I traversed 120 miles of country, when I reached the house of a Mr. Falls, an assistant in Messrs. Watersen & Co.'s indigo concern here. That gentleman informed me that a woman had died by the roadside, and that a living child was said to be at her breast. He sent out his servants, who returned saying that they had found the corpse and the child, but the mother's arm clasped the latter so tightly that in bending it back, stiff and cold, it broke. They say that the living and the dead had thus lluked together for two days; at any rate, the poor little infant, exhausted by exposure and want, died as it was released.

"The above gentleman and myself were traveling through a dense jungle. Miles away from any human habitation we perceived a famished native, of the Santhal tribe, lying on the ground; he had thrown himself down to meet a certain death; but a little brandy rekindles the vital spark, and loth to leave him to be a prey for the jackal and leopard, we have him placed on the roof of a palki. The palki-bearers, however, refused to budge an inch, saying their caste would be gone. "Suaviter in modo" is tried, but "no go;" "fortiter in re" then came into play. They murmured, looked at the palki, asked for a bottle of grog, and then trudged along with their tipsy burden—the brandy had been too strong for him. I am glad to add that in twenty-four hours after this the burden was walking about.

"The misery entailed by the famine has brought out all the worst qualities of the lower class of natives. As a rule, affectionate and fond of their homes, they have in too many instances fled, leaving their wives and families to starve; but as an eye-witness in two cases where nobler feelings held their sway, I here record them:—

"A woman, with her three young children, crawls up to a planter's house just as luncheon was being carried from the table; she begs for the remains of curry and rice, which are at once taken into the verandah and placed before her. Without attempting to eat, she quietly seats the three children round the dish, who in a few minutes demolish its contents, and although the mother is wasted to a skeleton, yet, mumbling her thanks, she turns away grateful that her offspring have been fed, even while she herself still hungereth.

"In another village we met a little girl and her mother, lying under a mango tree. Both were faint from hunger, they had been trying to keep life together by feeding on snails picked out of ponds, berries and lizards, where they could obtain them, but, daily feeling weaker, they had sunk down under a tree, awaiting a lingering death. We got some boiled rice and put it before them. The younger is the stronger; the mother is too weak to raise herself. Although the child's big eyes flashed with hungry gleam, yet her little hands, well filled, first seek the mother's mouth, and not until half the rice is thus gone she herself eat.

"It is impossible to judge of the numbers that have died from actual want, as no returns are kept; but taking the three districts of Balasore, Cuttack, and Midnapore, I should say quite 1200 a day. In Balasore large plague pits have had to be dug near the towns to receive the bodies of those found dead near their precincts, but in too many instances the bodies are left to rot on the roadside."

CANON MILLER.—A correspondent of the Presbyterian states that the finest orator he has heard, either in the pulpit or the parliament of England, is Canon Miller, the leader of the Low Church party. He has recently been called to an old, diluted, forsaken church in London, and already the pews are taken, and about three thousand crowd there, Sabbath after Sabbath, to listen to his burning messages of gospel love.

They are the slaves who dare not be in the right with two or three.

N. O. Christian Advocate

Official Organ of the Montgomery, the Mobile, the Mississippi, and the Louisiana Conferences of the M. E. Church South.

OFFICE: 112 CAMP STREET.

Three Dollars a Year, in Advance.

Address: Rev. J. C. Keener, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans.

Agents.—All the members of the patronizing Conferences.

CONFERENCE PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

FOR MOBILE CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. Hamilton, D.D.,
Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D.D.,
Rev. Thos. W. Dorman, D.D.

FOR MONTGOMERY CONFERENCE:
Rev. H. N. McTyeire, D.D.,
Rev. M. S. Andrews,
Rev. William A. Shapard.

FOR MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE:
Rev. W. H. Watkins, D.D.,
Rev. H. H. Montgomery,
Rev. William P. Barton.

FOR LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:
Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D.,
Rev. J. B. Walker, D.D.,
Rev. Linus Parker.

NEW ORLEANS:
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20th, 1866.

Omission.—The admirable letter on District and Monthly Meetings, which we published in the last paper, was from the pen of Bishop Pierce.

In Memoriam.—Among those on board the ill-fated Evening Star, was Miss Nellie Sloo, the daughter of our esteemed fellow citizen Mr. Thomas Sloo. She was beloved of all; in the early bloom of youth, she was called away from the fading life of earth, to the Eden of God. How else could youth be represented in the home of the angels—than by the translation of the young from this world? Who can refuse to let a beloved child pass out of sight for a little while, to obtain the benefit of that noble fellowship and that higher training. If our Heavenly Father consulted us, we might often refuse, from the selfishness of an earthly love, to part with our dear children; though manifestly for their advantage and happiness. So that he takes them to himself sometimes on a sudden, while we, all in tears, only wish they might stay.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. B. Powell, Cotton Factor and Commission Merchant, 100 Common street.

Mr. Wm. R. Stuart, formerly of Stuart and James, is now connected with this responsible house. Though long a Commission Merchant of this city, we recognize in him the best qualities of a Marylander, having seen him fairly tested during the sitting of our late General Conference. Mr. Powell has been for years a large and successful planter in Madison county, Mississippi.

Garthwaite, Lewis & Stuart, Wholesale and retail dealers in Clothing, Furnishing Goods—Trunks, Valises, etc., No. 31 and 33 Camp street.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Methodist Quarterly Review, Oct. 1866. Carlton and Porter, New York.

This number sustains the high character of the Review. The Editor, Dr. Whedon, is to us always, as a writer, bold, distinct, full and original. His word-power alone is sufficient to interest, and it lifts every theme which employs his mind into a clear atmosphere.

Contents: The origin of Revolutions in Public Opinion; The Greek Church in its relations to the Protestant; Worship of Relics; Childhood Conversion: Voltaire; Frederick W. Robertson; Milton's early life; Foreign and Religious Intelligence; Foreign Literary Intelligence; Synopsis of the Quarterlies—Book table.

The Catholic World: Monthly. October —Laurence Kehoe; Publisher, 145 Nassau street.

Contents: Principles of the Age; Cervantis; Silent Grief; The Godfrey Family; The Resurrection; Mystery of the Thatched House; Aubry de Vere; My Soldier; Rise and Progress of Books; St. Catherine at Florence.

Home Monthly, (M. E. Church, South,) Nashville Methodist Publishing House. $3 00 per annum.

Contents: Our Art Element; The Marriage Ring; The Troubled Nest; Progress of Music; Stray Thoughts; Homes and Husbands; Whatever is, Is Right; Extract from the papers of a Maniac; The Old Dead Oak; Louise De Mere's Choice; Seed Thoughts from George Elliot. In the Department of Poetry: I miss thee; My Mother; Memory; Honor to the Tolling Hand; The Heart's Remembrance; Editorial Department.

The Marriage Ring, by Dr. Summers, and the Troubled Nest, by Mrs. Jane T. H. Cross, are alone worth the subscription price of the Monthly. We trust that the Editor and the Publishers will be sustained by a large list of patrons.

Cholera in Nashville.—A letter from Rev. R. J. Harp, dated Nashville, October 9, says that this dreadful plague has kept all business at a dead lock. At one time, it is thought, the mortality exceeded one hundred per day.

MARRIED.

Married at the residence of the bride's father, Sept. 12th, by Rev. A. L. P. Green, D. D., Allan B. Read, Esq., of Baton Rouge, La., to Miss Mattie J. McClelland, daughter of Col. W. L. McClelland, of Marshall county, Tenn.

THE METHODIST ANTINOMIAN.

An antinomian night is steadily falling upon the Church. It already shrouds some of the fairest regions of Protestant Christianity. Those bright beams which constituted the light of the world have gone out one by one, and left thousands to die in the dark. That great demonstrative period when converted men were, by God's providence, called upon to suffer martyrdom in evidence of the truth, sent up from ten thousand blazing stakes a light only less glorious than that of those divided tongues of flame which came down from Heaven. Those fires vanquished the darkness of Paganism and gained the conquest of the world. The man whose faith quailed before the tongs of the executioner, was held to be unworthy of Christ; and a violent death was but a "reasonable service." Had he not the example of that pre-apostolic race which lived "in dens and caves of the earth," which was "sawn asunder," which was "tortured," "not accepting deliverance," which "took joyfully the spoiling of their goods," and the brighter example of God's own Son? Cyprian, who himself afterward gave the emphasis of his own martyrdom to his words, says in his Epistle to the Martyrs and Confessors in Christ Jesus: "How blessed is our Church whom the greatness of the Divine favor thus illuminates! On whom, in these our times, the glorious blood of Martyrs sheds Divine radiance! Before, she was white in the good works of the brethren; now is she empurpled in the blood of Martyrs. Her garlands lack neither the lily nor the rose. Now let every one contend for the fullest meed of either honor. Let them win a crown either white with good works, or purple with suffering. In the heavenly camp both peace and war have their own garlands, wherewith the soldier of Christ may be crowned for victory."

The corner-stone and the first layer of the strong foundations of Christ's Church were cemented in blood. The first race of Christians came to believe that the servant was not above his Lord, and that suffering a violent death was the only proper stylo of leaving this world. The Church soon learned better. But upon that glorious early record of heroic faith the surrounding nations gazed in admiration, and learned to accept and feel the divinity of Truth. The miraculous march of Israel through the wilderness did not strike the Dukes of Edom with greater awe, nor more certainly prepare them for accepting the authority of the "fiery Law" of Sinai.

To impress the world by the supernatural sustaining forces of divine grace, as displayed in the lives of His People, has ever been God's method of advancing his kingdom. But a Church which is in the world only as the world, which enjoys all, receives all, and does all, that the world does, is, in so far as that world is concerned, without demonstrative power. If God has determined his people shall be seen, and heard, and that, being unseen and unheard, they shall cease to be his, we may well tremble for the fate of a member of the Church without self-denial, without gifts upon the altar, without missionary zeal, without an altar; who, amid a flood of prosperity, has paid no tithes, and now, amid desolation and want, rages with "thirst of gold." Men who give neither their blood, their reputation, their time, nor their possessions to the service of God, give no evidence of that faith which lives because it works. The challenge of St. James, "Show me thy faith without thy works," Protestant Christendom has seriously accepted. The universe of the Heathen demands the evidence of works; the Catholic world looks for it; the outside Protestant believer expects it; and St. James insists upon it. The Saviour says he who has no works of mercy to show, shall in the last day be cursed as one unknown. St. John declares that every man shall be judged according to his works. And from the days of Abraham, men who have been justified by faith from past sins, have been called upon to show that faith by the sacrifice and offering up of that which was dearer to them than their own lives.—The life of Christ in the soul begins in the act of faith in his blood; until that moment naught is expected; but when that gift of God is received, then "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away; and every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit." "Fruit" is the condition of continued life. "Fruit," "more fruit," is what the Savior demands but no one say that works, more works are not essential to his justification at the last day. Such is not Mr. Wesley's nor Mr. Fletcher's Methodism. In the "Extracts from the Minutes of some late conversations between Mr. Wesley and others, at a public Conference held in London August 7th, 1770," are these words: "With regard to working for life.—This also our Lord has expressly commanded us. 'Labour,' literally 'work for the meat that endureth to everlasting life.' And in fact every believer, till he comes to glory, works for as well as from life. * * Who of us is now accepted of God? He that now believes in Christ, with a loving, obedient heart. * * * Is not this salvation by works? Not by the merit of works, but by works as a condition. * * * * Does not talking of a justified or a sanctified state tend to mislead men—almost naturally leading them to trust in what was done in one moment? Whereas we are every hour and every moment pleasing or displeasing to God according to our works; according to the whole of our inward tempers and our outward behaviour."

So says Mr. Wesley in a review of his position and of what he said in 1744. Twenty-six years taught him the tendency of his people to separate faith from works, and he gives them this timely check.—Reader, have you brought forth thirty fold of the fruit of that righteousness which is by faith? Does the spirit of Christ slumber in your boues, giving scarcely any indication, by life or conversation, of its existence? And do you hope to get to Heaven? An antinomian is one "who holds doctrines that clearly supersede the necessity of good works and a virtuous life." (Watson's Dictionary.)

DEATH OF JOHN W. BURRUSS.

The Methodists of the Southwest and of the whole South will deeply deplore the announcement of the decease of this true son of our Church. She has not produced, so far as we know, any one purer in life or superior to him in mental power and polish. As a writer his style was in the highest degree terse, lucid, nervous and epigrammatic. With a boundless wealth of illustration he had but to begin and straightway there flowed from his pen the richest periods of thought and the finest turns of expression. That he wrote so little must now be the regret of all who knew him.—We had hoped this winter, upon the restoration of his health, to present our readers with many of his suggestive and rich contributions.—This is but a single view of the high qualities of our dear friend. He was a whole-souled Methodist, the son of a Methodist Traveling Preacher—the venerable John C. Burruss. In all the interests of Methodism in the South he felt a lively concern, and gave liberally to the support of its churches and its institutions of learning.

Early in life he chose the better part, and has ever since been known as a friend of the Saviour. We first knew him in the Wesleyan University holding, as a student, the very first place in position, scholarship and influence. He graduated during the Presidency of Doctor Fisk with the highest honors of the University. We wait for a more extended tribute to the memory of this noble christian from those who have been associated with him in the more important and intimate relations of social life.

The following letter is from his Pastor:

Mr. Editor: Feeling that you can appreciate the great loss entailed by the sad event, I have to tell you that the pure, large hearted, noble-minded Jno. W. Burruss, is no more on earth. He died at the house of Dr. Kennard, in St. Louis. His son and his daughter Kate were with him.

What the family of our beloved brother have lost, they only can tell; what this community has lost, it will never know, for it never appreciated their blessing in him, though it yielded him an unconscious deference and reverence which told well of his power and influence, and spoke the highest eulogy for his integrity. The Church here has lost the only man that is fully competent to lead and guide in her affairs, and willing to do. To the pastor of this church he was always the friend and counsellor. He was keenly alive to all defects, as well as excellencies, but he yielded himself fully to the power of the truth, and covered infirmities with his large charity. His intercourse with any preacher that could appreciate him, and sympathize at all with his terse, laconic, nervous, vigorous style, was formation in its influence, especially with the younger ones. To me he was a friend—a brother—to whom I could go for advice with certainty of a candid, definite answer.

He rested all on Christ, thought Christ could save many people that society and church restriction might throw out, had little use for dogmatic theology, believed in a liberal charity of the Church towards her members, particularly the young; wanted to see a higher culture and integrity in our ministry. He yielded life reluctantly, because he thought he could do so much more work here. I have no doubt of his safety in heaven.

W. T. J. Sullivan.

DEATH OF REV. DR. BALDWIN.

Among the victims of the terrible scourge of cholera at Nashville is this distinguished preacher. We insert a notice of his decease from the Nashville American. The Methodist Church South has lost a most valuable and earnest minister of the Gospel. His death ensued upon a season of revival in his congregation, which called forth his great energy in labors abundant. During this meeting the cholera broke out in Nashville, when he became prompt and efficient in waiting upon the sick. His last hours, says the Dispatch, "were calm; he saw the fields of Eden before him and myriads of angels beckoning him onward."

Rev. Samuel Davies Baldwin, D. D., whose illness we have noted in these columns for several days, was seized with cholera on the 26th ult., and after a lingering and painful illness, expired yesterday evening at 8:15 P. M. His bedside was watched with unremitting medical and friendly care, and though his disease was violent, strong hopes were entertained that he would survive. But they were not to be realized, and a gifted Minister of God and good man rests from his labors, and his people mourn for him.

Dr. Baldwin was born in Worthington, Ohio, Nov. 24th 1818. His parents were of the middle class in society, but poor and unable to give their children the advantages of liberal education. That received by him before he set out in life to achieve his own fortune and destiny, was such only as was afforded by the common schools of the country. He left home a youth, to relieve his parents of the burden of sustaining him, and found employment for the athletic constitution which nature had given him, as a deck-hand on a western steamboat. How long he continued in this humble sphere is not known, but he felt the sacred thirst for knowledge, and an inward prompting that he was born for higher things. One who has the aspirations which accompany genius rarely fails to manifest it, and to command the aid which assists the first steps up the steep assent where "Fame's proud temple shines afar." The next that is known of him, he is entered at Woodward College, Cincinnati, from which institution he graduated, in due course, with high honors in the class with George H. Pendleton, Hon. George E. Pugh, of Ohio, and Rev. Dr. Huston, formerly of this city. While at college he became impressed with the truths of religion, and shortly after graduating, commenced preparation for the ministry of the Methodist church. As an evidence of the energy and force of character he possessed, it may be stated that during this portion of his life, he suffered from an affection of the eyes—the result of exhausting application to his studies—which, for several years, deprived him of sight, and compelled him to rely upon others for assistance in his studies. His first service for the church was in the Louisville Conference, and in the city of Louisville, where he labored acceptably for several years. In 1846 he was transferred to the Tennessee Conference, in which he has ever since remained, filling the pulpit in all the principal stations with learning, power and eloquence rarely surpassed. At the outbreak of the war he was the pastor of McKendree Church in this city, and during the suspension of the Conference he preached and labored in this city and the surrounding region. Last year he was assigned to duty at the same post, and it was at this work, in the midst of a season of revival, and in constant attendance upon the sick and disconsolate, that he was stricken with the epidemic which has so sadly bereaved his church in his death.

While his name and memory will be cherished by his church as one of the most brilliant and popular of its preachers, and by numerous communities in which he has served, as a true Christian, and a man of pure heart and upright in his walk, and by a wide circle of personal friends who knew the gentleness and goodness which, while he upheld himself, were shown in the generally absorbed and somewhat abrupt student, by the general public he will be chiefly remembered for his published writings. Of these the most notable is "Armageddon," a work which has been widely read, and made the subject of criticism by pens in foreign languages. This is not the time or place to adduce an opinion in regard to it, but it is conceded to be marked by originality, profound research into the Scriptures and sacred history, and to give evidence that the vast subject of prophecy was in the grasp of a master mind. Several years after the issuance of this book, Dr. Baldwin published "Dominion," a work levelled at ethnological infidelity, and a tracing of the primordial laws of Providence in reference to the tribes and races of men, and the relations they hold to each other. In style this work is superior to the first. He had just given to the publishers in Philadelphia a new work on matters germane to his former publications, the proofs of which he will never see, though he had spent much thought and labor in its preparation. In these and his unpublished discourses and addresses he has left an impression on the time in which he lived, which secures him an enviable fame.

Dr. Baldwin's mind was of a high order, quick, analytical and imaginative. It was this last faculty that led him to the subject which engrossed so much of his attention. He was a thorough student, and the master of many languages. His diction was fluent, and brilliant, his delivery animated, and at times he was truly eloquent. The church has lost in him a powerful advocate, and the society of good men, a benevolent, genuine christian, who never wearied in well-doing, whether it was before the crowded audience, or at the bed of the lone, the sick, and the humble.

He leaves a large family of orphaned children, their mother having preceded him by a few months to the grave. His funeral takes place at McKendree Church at 9:30 A. M., to-morrow.

"CRUELTY TO TURTLES."

We asked a gentleman of French extraction what he thought was the meaning of "cruelty to turtles." He replied very promptly that he believed it to be some new style of Fanaticism they were getting up at the North. It is attracting considerable attention in the papers there, and evidently exercises the public mind, if we may judge from the correspondence between Mr. Henry Bergh, the President of the New York Society for the Protection of Dumb Animals, and Prof. Agassiz. The inhuman treatment to which the sea turtles have been subjected, has been presented before the courts in that city, and made a matter of legal investigation. From the conflicting testimony of the physiological experts, the court was in doubt, and gave the defendants the benefit of the doubt, which was in the true spirit of mercy, however it might ultimately affect turtles.

It seems that, during what might be called the "middle passage," from the West Indies to New York, the turtles are tied together, back to back, by the flippers, and in various ways restrained and forced into unusual and even unnatural attitudes. That upon being landed, and exposed at the restaurants, they are laid with their fins up, and are allowed no use of their locomotive faculties; whereupon the restaurant man is brought up before the bar of common justice. Disappointed in the decision of the court, the President of the Society takes his appeal to the philosophical world. Agassiz answers.

As there is a good deal of "fellow feeling" here of some sort, we should like to know of what kind it is. We are anxious to know what is the political complexion of this Society in behalf of Animals—whether they belong to the same party with Gov. Brownlow. There is certainly none of this tenderness in his programme for the invasion of the South. He proposes to divide the invading army into three bands: the first to be armed with swords to kill every thing; the second with torches to burn everything; and the third with surveyor's compass and chain to divide out the lands anew for the sole benefit of the loyal. All this bodes no good to the smaller animals. The raid of Gen. Sherman through Georgia, and that of General Sheridan through the valley of Virginia, left but a small margin for turtles. We only hope that this sentimentality which consults the present comfort of the turtle, that he may make a little better soup, and then eats him, may not be significant of the intention of these people toward ourselves.

There must be some deep philosophy in the whole thing. Is it the outgoings of a superabundant benevolence, which having embraced all the tribes of earth, now proposes to invade the sea? Or, is it the reaction from an opposite class of sentiments, beginning with the Crustacea? If so, anything like tears in the neighborhood of the crocodile, is liable to suspicion. Or, is it some monstrosity of abused nature, with a form which can only be designated by Barnum's "What is it?" We read of a conqueror who, with callous gaze, stood on the battle-field surveying thousands of wounded and dead men, but on a sudden gushed into tears at the sight of a wounded dog. If it be anything of this sort, this cry for turtles augurs no good. Let us, however, dismiss these surmises, and simply conclude that having successfully disposed of the curse of the African, this immense wealth of Northern sentiment seems disposed to seek a new object, and has taken an unlooked-for direction.

Notwithstanding the opinion of the French Professor, we are disposed to think that our friends are wasting their sensibilities, and that there is no warm-blooded animal that can get along so well without the interference of the courts as the turtle. He has great constitutional repose. That great source of anxiety—hunger—which enrages or disquiets all living things beside, he has under perfect control. While most animals must need regulate their food by their stomachs, he regulates his appetite by his food.—We have known a relative of the sea turtle, the "gopher," go for a twelvemonth without eating anything excepting only a few pieces of stone-coal. He is evidently put up for a long voyage. Now an animal that can defy hunger is constituted so differently from the rest of us, that in attempting to feel for it, one is in danger of wasting sympathy upon fibres which have no nervous sensibility. We shall certainly restrain our own feelings from going out that way until we know more exactly about the nature of his nerves and his stomach. And we think it quite unfortunate that the Northern mind should waste its best parts in feeling for a creature which in all probability has no feeling for itself. It indicates either an overtaxed sensibility, in articulo mortis, or, a mock-turtle sentimentality in excess.

We subjoin the following letter from Prof. Agassiz:

Nahant, Sept. 26, 1866.

Dear Sir—It would give me the greatest pleasure to co-operate with your society, for I sympathize heartily with the object you have in view.

But my life is absorbed with other duties, and with the best will I cannot do more than what I have already engaged to do.

Excuse me, therefore, if I answer but briefly your special questions. To meet you in New York and expound publicly my views upon such a subject is out of the question.

I need not tell you that men have always excuses enough to justify their wrong doing. So it was with the slave-trade; so it is to-day with the turtle market. And though black men are more likely to be protected hereafter, their former sufferings during long sea voyages are on record, and humanity shudders at the tale. Whether men may ever be refined enough to feel their guilt when they torment animals, remains to be seen, and your society will no doubt do its share in educating them in that direction. But to say that turtles do not suffer when dragged from their natural haunts, tied that they may not be able to move, turned upside down, etc., etc., is simply absurd. It is true that they can live for a long time without food or drink; but they do feel pain, and are indeed very sensitive to some injuries. That of turning them upside down among others is sufficient, for instance, to prevent their eggs from hatching. Their suffering may be inferred by the violent and convulsive movements to which the perturation of their fins gives rise. And yet to this proceeding dealers in turtles generally resort in order to tie them more closely and pack a larger number in a smaller space. Of course, when tied in this manner, they may suffer less by being turned upon their backs, because the fins are thus relieved from the pressure of their whole weight; but the best evidence I can afford that they suffer in that position is that they die if it is much protracted; and yet turtles are among the animals which resist longest privations of all kinds. Is not the fact that they may die merely from the attitude in which they are forcibly kept the most complete evidence of their suffering? For what else would cause death, if not pain and the unnatural pressure of parts brought into unaccustomed position.

Having gone so far, let me call your attention to the dangers arising from ill treatment of beef cattle before slaughtering them. While in Brazil, I learned that the city of Para suffered from the quality of beef sold in the public market, deteriorated because the oxen and cows killed in the city were brought in from a considerable distance, and were often kept many days without food. The mutter grew so bad that a company was formed to bring, by steam, beef killed upon the farms; and everybody felt the difference in the condition of the meat and its nutritive qualities.

Very respectfully yours,

L. Agassiz.

Henry Bergh, Esq.

NEWS FROM THE CHURCHES.

Dear Advocate: For the encouragement of our friends, let me say, God continues to visit us in mercy on the Homer circuit. We commenced a meeting at Pisgah Church, Sept. 1st, which was continued until the 9th. More than twenty professed pardon, one of whom (an old man) had not heard a sermon for twenty five years. Many professors whose love had grown cold, were restored to comfort; and the church was greatly revived. Some twelve or fifteen joined the church. We were assisted by Bros. Upton, Truslow, Smith and Gordon. All of whom labored zealously, successfully. Friday evening 7th, we left the meeting in charge of Bros. Smith and Gordon, having an appointment at Lisbon, commencing the 8th. On our arrival, we found our local brethren, Williams, Akin and Clements, had already commenced the battle, which proved indeed a successful one to God's people. We have seldom attended a meeting where the power of God was so wonderfully displayed. The subjects of converting grace where young people principally. Years of usefulness lie before them. Conviction was pungent and conversions clear. Backsliders were reclaimed, and the members of the church greatly blessed; twenty-nine professed the pardon of sins, nine whites, and seven colored were baptized, seventeen whites and six colored joined the Church. I ought to have said that Dr. Gaskel came to our assistance, and with the other named brethren rendered effective service, for which we tender our sincere thanks.

N. A. Cravens.

Homer, La., Oct. 4th, 1866.

We insert a letter from Rev. J. P. Jones, of the Montgomery Conference, Haw Ridge Circuit, dated October 9. Sorry that we have so few communications from the Preachers of that vigorous body of Itinerants.

Mr. Editor: It may be gratifying to some of our friends to hear from Haw Ridge, and if you see proper you can give the following a place in the Advocate.

We found our work in a disorganized condition, and greatly demoralized from the effects of the war. In pruning, we have dropped and expelled 112, and by letter 18 whites, and 25 colored. Have just closed our seventh protracted meeting; during which we received from the world 86, from probation 45, and by letter 22 whites and 29 colored.

The good Spirit comes down in power in many places where all were lifeless and barren. The work goes still goes on. You see from the report that we had to discharge all the rubbish before we could get the old ship off of the sand bar. While we were doing this the water fowls were flying round and shouting to our passengers to plunge the water, give the sign which Jonah gave, and then take shipping on their water craft, but we think most of them are convinced that we have all the signs, seals, and tokens duly administered on board the old ship, without running the risk that Jonah did.

May I say one word here to my brethren in the ministry in the form of a question. Does not every interest of our Church demand a thorough elucidation of our doctrines, and particularly that of baptism? Are there not thousands of our people who are immersionist and opposed to infant baptism? And are we not recreant to our highest interests when we fail to enlighten the church on these subjects? And has not our love for peace on those points become a sin instead of a blessing.

J. P. Jones, P. E.

Rev. C. Carter writes from Bastrop, Louisiana Conference, Oct. 1st, 1866: We commenced a protracted meeting in this place on the night of the 12th Sept., and closed last evening, the 30th. We have cause to praise the Lord for the great things He has done for us. During this meeting there have been about thirty conversions and fifty-four accessions to the Church. I doubt if the church here ever before witnessed a scene like the one we had presented to us on Sabbath morning. The Pastor baptized twenty-one persons, and received forty-seven into full connection. The spectacle of the old man of seventy and the boy of ten, and the strong young man, and the lovely maiden, and the middle-aged, all bowing together around the altar of the church, and taking upon themselves the solemn vows of church fellowship, moved and melted many hard hearts, and suffused the eyes of Christians with tears of gladness. While the congregation sang the hymn 884, the members of the church came forward and cordially welcomed the new members, and bade them God-speed in the Christian race. It was indeed a precious season, especially refreshing to those who have been mourning over the desolations of Zion, and weeping over her sad, yet holy memories.

I feel myself much indebted to Bros. Wright, Ivy, Storm and Shurlock, for stirring exhortations, earnest prayer and effective sermons.

Rev. J. W. McNeil writes that he commenced a protracted meeting at Hazlehurst, on 27th ult., under somewhat discouraging prospects, but after a few days of faithful labor the sky brightened with glorious results. The church was revived — Impenitents convicted — and numbers of seekers crowded the altar. "On the 12th I was taken very ill, and on the 14th had to leave for home from that cause. Up to this time there had been some thirty accessions, about twenty conversions, and many made happy and caused to praise God aloud." Other brethren have taken his place and the good work progresses with unabating interest."

Rev. W. H. Carter writes from Milton, Florida, and says that at a meeting at Coon Hill, "over fifty persons joined the church in about ten days, and many were converted. The interest was deep and widespread. I never saw so pleasant a meeting in every respect, and I believe there was more good accomplished than I have seen at any meeting for years."

We take from the Southern Christian Advocate cheering news of the Athens meeting still in progress:

Athens and Augusta.—The Rev. J. S. Key has returned from Athens, and gives such an account of the work of God in that place, as would make every Christian hearer wish he had been there. He left the meeting still in progress with wonderful power; and says it was such a revival as one does not often see—many, not more than once in a life time. He paused two or three days in Augusta, on his way home. A good work is in progress there, under the ministry of Rev. A. Wright. Some twenty or more persons had joined the Church, among them several heads of families.

NEWS FROM OTHER CHURCHES.

METHODIST E. CHURCH, NORTH.

Monument to Philip Embury.—The National Convention of Local Preachers recently convened in Brooklyn, N. Y., resolved to foster the work inaugurated by the Troy Conference, of building a monument to this pioneer of American Methodism. He, a local preacher from Ireland, first announced the Methodist doctrines in this country, and there is a beauty and fitness in this response of gratitude and veneration, springing spontaneously from the Local ministry.

Rev. Peter Akers, D. D., of the Illinois Conference, was recently made the recipient of a valuable gift, which was greatly enhanced by the manner in which it was made. A house and lot, valued at $4,000, was purchased for him in the city of Jackson, and the deed, fully executed, was conveyed to him in a letter.

Rev. T. N. Ralston, D. D.—This gentleman who has been for several years a minister of the M. E. Church (North,) and who had withdrawn in good standing from that Church, with a letter of commendation from Bishop Morris, at his own request was readmitted to the Kentucky Conference, he having for years, in the past, been a member of that body. After the vote was taken and his readmission announced the Bishop said: "I am happy to inform you, Bro. Ralston, that you have been unanimously readmitted to this Conference."

Dr. Ralston replied: "I am equally happy, Bishop, to be so informed, and I now announce to you that I feel more at home in my ecclesiastical connection than I have since I last met you as a member of your body."

PRESBYTERIAN.

The minutes of the New School General Assembly for the present year have just been published, showing 1538 churches, 1739 ministers, and a total membership of 150 501. This is an increase of 50 churches, 45 ministers, and 6,755 members over last years.

Pursuant to call a number of persons met in Dunlapsville, Indiana, to consider the propriety of organizing a Presbyterian Church on basis of the old standard, to the exclusion of all the deliverances of the assemblies touching political questions, and passed resolutions of which we give a brief summary, viz:

"Whereas, the Presbyterian Church, (Old School,) with which we have hitherto been connected, has by various deliverances through her several courts, transcended her sphere which is only to "preach the word;" and,

"Whereas, in reply to the many and earnest efforts of those who have patiently waited and protested against those departures from the old paths—the General Assembly in May 1866 declared that it "had nothing in matters aforesaid to change, nothing to modify, nothing to take back, nothing to amend in any way, shape or form whatever;" and,

"Whereas, The apostacy of which we complain is so grievous that it ought not to be borne; and,

"Whereas, It is the duty of all who profess themselves followers of the Lord Jesus, to be united ecclesiastically as far as possible with those who hold with them the form of sound words; and,

"Whereas, The Presbytery of Louisville, of which Rev. B. H. Cowan is moderator, and Rev. Robert Morrison, is stated clerk, holds as we believe, "The faith as it was once delivered to the saints," therefore,

"Resolved, That we whose names are hereunto subscribed, do and hereby petition said Presbytery of Louisville, to take such steps as they may deem best to organize us into a Church to be under their care and control."

BAPTIST.

The building of the First Baptist Church, Salem, Columbiana county, Ohio, was sold lately by the Sheriff, on execution in favor of the late pastor, to satisfy a judgment of court for arrears of his salary. The house was bought by the Unitarian Society, and will be used by them for a place of worship.

CHARITIES.—Says the Christian Index: "Dr. Fuller, of Baltimore, has been visiting Boston for a week or two, preaching at the Baptist churches, and receiving generous contributions for the destitute and suffering people at the South, whose cases of distress are constantly coming to his notice.

Starvation at the South.

DEPLORABLE CONDITION OF THE NEGROES—A FEARFUL PICTURE.

The following is an extract of a letter from North Carolina to the New Haven Register:

The Southern country is in an awful condition. It must be seen to be believed—the corn crop, their principal article of food, having failed this season on account of the drought. It is expected starvation must take place in some sections before next spring. Corn is now selling at $2 30 per bushel, and bacon at 25c. per pound. God knows the radicals need not wish the Southern people to suffer more than they are suffering. If they were barbarians, they could not treat them worse than they do now.

The negroes have no hesitation in saying they were better off slaves than now. It is evident to a candid mind they have never been worked very hard, from the fact that, since their freedom, they have rented lands from their former owners, and have eaten, during the time they have been raising their crops, more than they have raised altogether. This does not leave a very wide margin for them to live on from harvest to harvest, and yet they claim to have worked a "heap" harder than ever before. They have no conception in managing for themselves.

They deserve compassion. They have been robbed from good homes for an idea, to wander, like vagabonds, broadcast through the country to starve. This same gentleman, Dr. Tate, in conversation remarked, with all the warmth of a parent, "What can we do for our poor negroes? We are unable to assist them, having lost all; and yet we would willingly share with them rather than have them suffer, but we have nothing left to divide—they must starve."

This is really their condition. When the war closed, the darkies got it into their heads they could not be free unless they left their old homes—under the impression given them by these abolition demagogues. The novelty of freedom has passed—the reality stares them in the face. He has no one to feed, clothe, and give him any little potion he may fancy, as formerly. They begin to realize fully their condition, a hungry stomach being a faithful monitor, and as soon as they need anything they put back to their old masters, begging for shelter and something to eat. They cannot refuse them, so they lay around their old homes untill their former owners are compelled, for their own protection, to tell them to go away.

The Trial of Jefferson Davis.

The President has addressed the following letter to the Attorney General in regard to the trial of Jefferson Davis:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, D.C., October 6, 1866.

Sir—A special term of the Circuit Court of the United States was appointed for the first Tuesday of October, 1866, at Richmond, Virginia, for the trial of Jefferson Davis on the charge of treason. It now appears that there will be no session of that Court in Richmond during the present month, and doubts are expressed whether the regular term, which by law should commence on the fourth Monday in November next, will be held.

In view of this obstruction and the consequent delay in proceeding with the trial of Jefferson Davis, under the prosecution for treason, now pending in that Court, and there being, so far as the President is informed, no good reason that the civil Courts of the United States are not competent to exercise adequate jurisdiction within the district or circuit in which the State of Virginia is included, I deem it proper to request your opinion as to what further steps, if any, should be taken by the Executive, with a view to a speedy, public and impartial trial of the accused, according to the Constitution and laws of the United States.

I am, sir, very respectfully, yours,

ANDREW JOHNSON.

To Hon. HENRY STANBERY, Att. Gen.

In response to the above, the Attorney General on the 13th inst. states: "I am clearly of the opinion that there is nothing in the present condition of Virginia to prevent the full exercise of the jurisdiction of the civil courts. The actual state of things and your proclamation of peace and of the civil order, guarantee to the civil authorities, Federal and State, immunity against military control or interference. It seems to me that in this particular there is no necessity for further action on the part of the Executive in the way of proclamation, and especially as Congress, at the late session, required the Circuit of the United States to be held at Richmond on the first Monday of May and the fourth Monday of November in each year, and authorized special or adjourned terms of that Court to be ordered by the Chief Justice at such time and on such notice as he might prescribe, with the same power and jurisdiction as at the regular terms. This is an explicit recognition by Congress that the state of things in Virginia admits the holding of the United States Courts in that State."

He also states Mr. Davis remains in custody at Fortress Monroe, precisely as he was held in January last, when, in answer to a resolution of Congress, you reported communications from the Secretary of War and the Attorney General, showing that he was held to await trial in the civil courts. No action was then made by Congress in reference to the place of custody; no demand has since been made for his transfer into civil custody. The District Attorney of the United States for the District of Virginia, where Mr. Davis stands indicted for treason, has been notified that the prisoner would be surrendered to the United States Marshal upon a capias under the indictment, but the District declines to have the capias issued because there is no other place within the district where the prisoner could be kept or where his personal comfort and health could be so well provided for. No application has been made within my knowledge by the counsel for Mr. Davis, for a transfer of the prisoner to civil custody. Recently an application was made by his counsel for his transfer from Fortress Monroe to Fort Lafayette, on the ground chiefly of sanitary considerations. A reference was promptly made to a board of surgeons whose report was adverse to the change, on the score of health and personal comfort. I am unable to see what further action can be taken on the part of the Executive to bring the prisoner to trial. Mr. Davis must for the present remain where he is until the court which has the jurisdiction to try him shall be ready to act, or until his custody is demanded under lawful process of the Federal courts. "The Attorney General suggests that to avoid any misunderstanding on the subject, an order be issued to the commandant of Fortress Monroe to surrender the prisoner to civil custody whenever demanded by the United States Marshal upon a process from the Federal courts.

Mr. Stanbery incloses a letter of the United States District Attorney for Virginia, who states, in answer to the question why no demand had been made upon the military authorities for the surrender of Jefferson Davis, in order that he might be tried upon the indictment found against him in the United States Circuit Court at the term held at Norfolk, in May last, that two reasons had influenced him in not removing him from their custody. He says: "The one relates to the safe keeping; the other to his own personal comfort and health. I have never had any doubt but that he would be delivered to the United States Marshal of the district whenever he should have demanded him on a capias or any other civil process."

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

QUEBEC, October 15.—The whole district west of Crown street to St. Xavier toll gate, nearly a mile in length, is burnt. Seventy churches and convents are destroyed. Two thousand houses are in ashes. Twenty thousand persons are rendered houseless.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 16.—The cotton market closed quite active, with sales to-day of 20,000 bales at 15½d. for middling uplands.

The weather is still unfavorable for the crops.

Breadstuffs tend upward. Corn has advanced to thirty shillings per cental for mixed Western.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—Consols 98¼. U. S. 5-20's 68¼.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—Arrived: Scotia from Queenstown, with dates to the 7th inst.

The following are the principal conditions of the treaty of peace between Austria and Italy: A mutual exchange of prisoners of war; Austria consents to the union of Venetia to Italy; the frontiers to be added to Italy are those which constituted the administration of Venetia while under the Austrian dominion; the amount of debt to be assumed by Italy is thirty million dollars, payable in eleven instalments in twenty-three months.

An Athens dispatch, dated September 29, says the French Minister, Montheir, has warned the Greek Government that France would break off diplomatic relations with Greece if the latter did not observe the strictest neutrality during the present insurrection in Creton National Assembly has called on the Greek nation to take part in the insurrection. The English and French Consuls in Candea are opposed to the movements.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—John Van Buren died two days since on board the steamer Scotia. His body has been brought on here.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—The President has appointed Augustus W. Norcross Assessor of the Internal Revenue for the First District of Louisiana, and Julius Ennemaser Assessor for the Third District of that State.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The Times of today, speaking of a Radical Republican meeting at the Cooper Institute last night, says it was very successful. The Hall was crowded till scarcely a foot standing room was left unoccupied, and five or six thousand people gathered about the outside stand. The principal addresses were delivered by Hannibal Hamlin, ex-Vice President, and Senator Wilson, of Massachusetts. It was a noticeable feature of the assemblage that the more radical were the utterances of these thoroughly radical orators, the greater the applause and enthusiasm of the crowd.

NEW ORLEANS—1866.

DIRECT IMPORTATION.

J. LEVOIS & CO.

Invite the attention of

Wholesale & Retail

Buyers to their importation of

PARIS NOUVEANTES,

For Fall and Winter,

Comprising

DRESS SILKS,

In Embroidered Brocade, Chines, and Solids, with a large assortment of

FOULARD SILKS,

In Printed and in Plain Colors, being designs printed exclusively for themselves.

Black and White Striped Silks,
Black and White Checked Silks,
Colored Silks, checked and striped,
Irish Poplins, plain,
Lyons Poplins, plain and fancy.
French Merinoes and Delaines,
Alpacas, colored and black,
Opera Flannels, all colors,
French Clothe, plain & plaid,
Grey and White Blankets,
Carriage Blankets,
German Knit Goods,
Nubias, Sontags, Capes, Muffs,
Black Cloth Cloaks,
Black Silk Cloaks, of the Newest shapes and designs; with every article required in Housekeeping Goods.

J. LEVOIS & CO.,

Invite the attention of merchants to their cases of

IMPORTED AND AMERICAN GOODS,

Which they offer in quantities to suit, at the Lowest Scale of Prices & on Liberal Terms

CONNER CANAL AND BOURBON STREETS.

oc20 1m

PHILIP WERLEIN,

82..... Baronne Street,.....82

Successor of the well known music houses of PH. P. WERLEIN and P. P. WERLEIN & HALEY, Dealer in

PIANO FORTES, MELODEONS,

GUITARS, VIOLINS,

And other musical instruments. Also, Music and Instruction Books, Music Folios, Note Paper—in fact everything belonging to music trade.

The repairing and tuning of Pianos will be attended to, arrangements having been made with that well-known Piano Maker, M. BURCHARDT, who will take charge of that department—charges will be reasonable and satisfactory.

Parties wishing can have their Pianos stored, sold on commission, boxed, or shipped to order.

Findings for repairing Pianos, such as Wire, Felt, Cloth, etc., constantly for sale.

Piano Stools, Covers of elegant patterns, etc., on hand.

Any information on musical matters cheerfully given. Teachers recommended.

Music neatly bound.

P.S.—P. P. WERLEIN will be found at times at the above place, and will aid in making selections. He recommends his son PHILIP WERLEIN to his former friends and customers, and solicits their patronage for him. oc20 1y

PAUL J. CHRISTIAN, Formerly of H. G. Stetson & Co.

JOHN W. MADDEN,

P. J. CHRISTIAN & CO.,

General Mercantile Stationers,

JOB PRINTERS, AND

BLANK BOOK MANUFACTURERS,

No. 73 Camp Street.

We beg to inform our friends and the public that we have established a complete BOOK BINDERY in connection with our business, and will hereafter be enabled to execute all orders with promptitude and dispatch.

We have secured the services of one of the most thorough workmen of this city, and our patrons can rely upon having their orders immediately and efficiently executed. o20 2m

D. H. HOLMES,

Direct Importation of

FANCY AND STAPLE DRY GOODS,

AT WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

No. 155 Canal Street,

sep1 6m NEW ORLEANS.

J. R. POWELL,

COTTON FACTOR,

AND

COMMISSION MERCHANT,

190 Common Street,

W. R. STUART, Late Stuart & James., NEW ORLEANS

☞ Represented by CAPT. J. A. BINFORD, Duck Hill, Miss. oc20 1y

TULANE BUILDING,

New Orleans, La.

We are now in the receipt of a full assortment of

CLOTHING,

SHIRTS,
FURNISHING GOODS,
TRUNKS AND VALISES,
UMBRELLAS, ETC.,

Which we are selling at very reduced prices, at

Wholesale and Retail.

GARTHWAITE, LEWIS & STUART,

oc20 1m 31 & 33 Camp street.

AUSTIN & GODDWYN,

Wholesale Dealers and Manufacturers of

TINWARE,

Also,

COOKING AND HEATING STOVES

Of all kinds, for sale.

25 Peters, formerly Front Levee,

Corner Customhouse street,

oc20 1y NEW ORLEANS.

CLOTHING, CLOTHING.

For the Fall and Winter of 1866-67.

Now receiving and opening for inspection, at

R. PITKIN'S

FASHIONABLE

CLOTHING EMPORIUM,

Nos. 14 and 15 Camp Street.

The largest, best selected and most Fashionable Stock of Superior

READY-MADE CLOTHING,

AND

GENTLEMEN'S FURNISHING GOODS

Of the season, all of which were manufactured under his personal supervision, and selected with the utmost care and taste, expressly for the Southern market. His stock consists of every article in his line of business, viz:

Superior Dress Frocks,
Sacks, Overcoats, Shawls,
India Rubber Goods,
Business Suits,
Walking Coats,
Black and Fancy Dress Pants,
Vests, Drawers,
Undershirts,
Collars,
Gloves,
Cravats,
Suspenders,
Pocket Handkerchiefs,

Linen and Linen Bosom Shirts of every description.

CLOTHS, CASSIMERES AND VESTINGS.

A large assortment of superior French Cloths, Cassimeres and Doeskins, Black and Fancy Vestings of the most fashionable styles,

FOR CUSTOM WORK.

He takes great pleasure in informing the citizens of New Orleans, and the public, that he has secured the services of that consummate Artist, and gentleman of skill, taste and experience, so favorably known in this community,

MR. E. M. HOUGHTON,

as Principal Cutter, who will superintend the manufacture of goods ordered from measure—a Perfect Fit Warranted.

WHOLESALE DEPARTMENT.

Merchants from the country visiting the city, will find his Wholesale Department well fitted up, and replete with the most desirable articles adapted to their trade. He would especially call the attention of

MERCHANTS AND PLANTERS

To his

Very Large Stock of Cheap Clothing

suitable for the laboring classes, made of strong material, with neatness and durability.

Also a large assortment of

YOUTHS' AND BOYS' CLOTHING,

TRUNKS,
VALISES,
CARPET-BAGS,
UMBRELLAS, ETC.

A call from the public is respectfully solicited.

R. PITKIN,

Fashionable Clothing Emporium,

13 and 15 .... CAMP STREET, ... 13 and 15

ROBERT SLARK, ISAAC H. STAUFFER, WM. A. KENT, CHAS. MACKEARY

SLARK, STAUFFER & CO.,

No 71 Canal St., No 11 to 23 Dorsiere St., and 52 to 56 Customhouse Street.

Importers and Dealers in

HARDWARE:

Iron, Steel, Nails, Hoes, Axes, Rope, Tin Plates, Copper, Block Tin, Spelter, Lead, Shot, Paints, Oils, Glass, Hollow Ware, Circular Saws

MILL STONES,

INDIA RUBBER GIN BAND,

PLANTATION SADDLERY, ETC.

Constantly on hand a large assortment of

AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS

Comprising PLOUGHS of the following celebrated makers: James H. Hall & Co., for Sugar and Cotton; Garrett & Cottman, for Sugend Cotton; Calhoun and Atkinson, for Cotton; Hall and Speer, Wrought and Cast, for Cotton; B. F. Avery, Cast, for Cotton; John and Albert King, "Carey," for Cotton; Peoria Premium Steel, or "Prairie Plough;" Yost's Patent Ploughs and Scrapers.

Agents for the Vieille Montagne Co.'s SHEET ZINC and ZINC PAINTS, of Belgium. oc13 1y

GAINES & RELF,

Importers and Dealers, Wholesale and Retail, in

EARTHENWARE,
GLASS, CHINA,
JAPAN WARE,
PLATED WARE,
SILVER WARE,
FINE TABLE CUTLERY,
WATER PURIFIERS,
HOUSEKEEPING ARTICLES.

All articles carefully packed for shipment to the country.

No. 100 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

NEW CARPETS.

L. ELKIN,

3, Carondelet Street, 3.

Has just received from England, per steamship Luxor, a large assortment of superior

WILTON, BRUSSELS, TAPESTRY & INGRAIN

CARPETS,

RUGS,
WINDOW SHADES,
CORNICES,
OIL CLOTHS,

And a complete assortment of Curtain Material such as Brocatelles, Satin de Laines, all-Wool Damasks, etc., with corresponding Trimmings.

HARVEY, M'MAHON & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

Commission and Forwarding Merchants,

122 Carondelet street, Davidson's Row,

NEW ORLEANS.

R. H. Harvey, New Orleans.
Thomas M'Mahon, Madison county, Miss.
Wm. Forstall, New Orleans. oc13 6m

JOB PRINTING

COLLEGE CATALOGUES, CONCERT BILLS,

PRIZE SCHOOL BILLS, &c.

PAMPHLETS, CIRCULARS, CARDS,

And everything else in the Printing line executed in the Very Best Style, at Moderate Prices.

Send your orders to the Christian Advocate Office, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans.

BOOKS! BOOKS!

The Agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, at 112 Camp street, New Orleans, has just received from the steamships George Trimmell and Merrimac, and by the steamboats Mepham and Olive Branch, ample supplies of Sunday-School requisites: Catechisms, Spellers Questions, Dictionaries, Primers, Reward Tickets, etc., etc. Also, Clarke's and Benson's Commentaries, and Hymn Books in sheep and roan.

Address:

R. J. HARP, Agent,

sep15 112 Camp street, New Orleans.

J. H. MASSEY,

(Formerly of Joseph H. Palmer & Co., and for the last ten years in the House of Townsend, Tompkins & Co.,)

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS,

No. 100 Common Street,

Opposite City Hotel.

I am now receiving my Fall and Winter stock and respectfully solicit an examination, on your next visit to the city. Having twenty years' experience in my line in this city, I flatter myself it will not be hard for me to please any and all of my old friends and patrons, and also including new ones. My stock is new and fresh, and I will be in frequent receipt of all the new and desirable styles.

Very respectfully,

oc13 3m J. H. MASSEY.

E. GIQUEL,

Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

FOREIGN, FANCY AND STAPLE

DRY GOODS.

Also, a large and varied supply of

HOUSEKEEPING and

PLANTATION GOODS,

Constantly on hand, at

126 Canal Street,

sep1 1y NEW ORLEANS.

G. & T. F. SEARING,

Manufacturers and Wholesale Dealers in

CLOTHING & PLANTATION GOODS

No. 29 Magazine Street,

Corner of Gravier street,

oc13 1y NEW ORLEANS.

D. H. CAMPBELL, Of Mobile. F. M. ECKFORD, Late Eckford & Weaver, Mobile

CAMPBELL, ECKFORD & CO.,

COTTON FACTORS,

Forwarding & General Com'n Merchant,

oc13 No. 58 Camp street, New Orleans. 1y

S. H. ABY & CO.,

Cotton Factors, Commission Merchants

186 GRAVIER STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

oc13 6m

E. S. KEEP. J. CAULFIELD.

KEEP & CAULFIELD,

Western Produce,

AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Nos. 77 & 79 Poydras street, New Orleans.

oc13 1y

HENRY WARE, Of Texas. WM. H. WARE, Of Texas.

H. WARE & SON,

Cotton and Wool Factors,

AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No. 63 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

oc13

R. BLEAKLY & CO.,

Wholesale Grocers,

COTTON FACTORS AND COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

Nos. 56, 58, 60, 62 and 61 Poydras street,

Corner Poydras and Tchoupitoulas sts.,

NEW ORLEANS.

All cotton consigned to us will receive the personal attention of MR. J. F. GIRAULT, (formerly with the house of Messrs Wright & Allen) who is specially charged with that department of our business. sep22 1y

PEET, SIMMS, & CO.,

Importers and Wholesale Dealers in

DRY GOODS,

Nos. 23 & 25 MAGAZINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS

E. PEET—S. WILLIAMSON
P. SIMMS—J. BOWLING
aug25 1y

LOEB, SIMON & CO.,

Importers and Jobbers of

FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS,

86 Canal Street,

sep1 3m NEW ORLEANS.

BOOTH & CO., ARCADE HAT STORE, 32 Magazine street, corner of Gravier, New Orleans, the oldest Wholesale Hat House in the city—established in 1839.

HATS, CAPS, STRAW GOODS, UMBRELLAS, &c.

Manufactured expressly for the Mexican and Southern trade.

Shipping Furs and Wool bought. jan20-1y

SPEED, SUMMERS & CO.,

46 Carondelet street, New Orleans,

COTTON AND TOBACCO FACTORS,

General Commission Merchants,

And Commercial Agents. aug25 1y

J. H. CARTER,

Wholesale Grocer,

Nos. 8 and 10 Tchoupitoulas Street,

And 8 and 10 New Levee,

aug18 1y NEW ORLEANS.

S. M. SWENSON, N.Y., late of Austin, Tex. W. M. PERKINS, D. L. KENNION, Of Perkins & Co., N.O.

PERKINS, SWENSON, & CO.,

GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

No. 48 Carondelet, corner of Union street,

NEW ORLEANS.

SWENSON, PERKINS & CO.,

GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

26 Exchange Place, New York.

s29 6m

EDW'D NALLE, W. C. DAY.

NALLE, DAY & CO.,

Cotton Factors, Commission Merchants,

168 COMMON STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

oc13 1y

CENTENARY COLLEGE,

Jackson, Louisiana.

The School by the State of Louisiana in 1845, succeeded to the Methodist Episcopal [illegible] in 1845. It is now under the [illegible] of the Mississippi and Louisiana [illegible]

The College exercises were necessarily suspended during the war; but were regularly resumed, after reorganization, on the first Monday in October, 1865. The approaching session will open on the first Monday of October next.

Tuition, $ per annum, payable semi-annually in advance.

Board can be obtained at from $20 to $25 per month.

The College Rooms, Libraries, Apparatus, Laboratory and Society Halls, the location in point of beauty, health, ease of access and good society, are all unsurpassed by those of any institution in the Southern States.

The past history of the College is the pledge of its future prosperity.

The Board and Faculty promise the public that nothing shall be wanting on their part to secure the thorough education of the young men committed to their care, in both Preparatory and Collegiate Departments.

The old students, alumni, and friends of the institution, are requested to give publicity to the full reorganization and opening of the College, as stated above.

W. H. WATKINS, President.

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY,

GREENSBORO, ALA.

The exercises of this institution will be resumed on the first Wednesday in October next. Instruction will be given in the Schools of Ancient and Modern Languages, Mathematics, Mental and Moral Philosophy, Chemistry, Natural Philosophy, and Biblical Literature. Civil Engineering and Analytical Chemistry will also be taught.

TERMS:

Tuition fees per term, ...$40 00
Contingent fee, ... 5 00

Board can be obtained at $20 to $25 per month

aug4ft W. M. WIGHTMAN, Chancellor

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT BATON ROUGE.

The ninth session of this school will begin on Wednesday, 3d October, 1866.

The object of the school has ever been to afford a good classical and practical education, or a complete preparation for any stage of a College or University course.

TERMS: Tuition and Board, per month, $40.—Payable $200 in advance; balance on the 1st of March.

Every student who enters the school is expected to remain to the close of the session in July, and will be held liable for the bills in all cases, unless protracted illness shall compel his removal.

Pupils are required to furnish their own bed clothing, towels, wash-basin, mosquito-bar, etc.

Circulars can be obtained by addressing me at Baton Rouge, or Rev. J. C. Keener, D.D., New Orleans, La.

As the number of students is limited, it is earnestly requested that application be made as soon as possible.

W. H. N. MAGRUDER.

Baton Rouge, La., August 2st, 1866.

WOODVILLE FEMALE SEMINARY.

THE SECOND SESSION

Will begin October 3rd 1866, and close July 10th, 1867. The system of instruction aims at the truest, mental, moral, and social culture. The discipline seeks to embrace whatever is helpful to this end, and to exclude what is hurtful to it. Obedience to rightful authority, is a necessary to membership in the school.

TERMS PER SESSION.

Board, with fuel, lights and washing, $300 00
Tuition in Preparatory course, 60 00
" Academic " 80 00
" Collegiate " 100 00
Music, 80 00
Other ornamentals as low as can be afforded.

The Collegiate course embraces Latin and French without any extra charge. These charges are made from the beginning of the half month in which the pupil is entered, to the end of the session, and must be paid, one half in advance, and the other on the 1st of March, nor will assignment of a pupil to room, seat or class, be made until this demand is met. A sum sufficient to get books, music, and medicines for slight sickness, must be deposited with the Principal. Each boarding pupil must be provided with a supply of plain, neat clothing suitable to the season, and also with towels, table napkins—all marked in the owner's name. When a pupil, not residing in the Seminary, or one not remaining in it during her illness, is sick more than twenty consecutive days, a deduction of one half the charges for the time will be made.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, Principal.

Woodville, Miss., Aug. 8th, 1866. aug25 3m.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE

FACULTY:—Rev. Charles B. Stuart, A. M., President; Dr. W. S. Donaldson; Mr. Robert C. Martin, jun.; Mrs. Lizzie Lee Stuart; Miss Hattie G. Gilmer; Miss Jemima Constantine.

The Fall Session of this Institution will open on the 26th day of September next.

This Institution, owned by the Louisiana Conference, situated in a healthy and delightful section of the State, and possessed of extensive buildings and grounds, presents at least all the usual facilities for systematic and thorough female education. It has recently been supplied with new mattrasses and pillows; and all the furniture, though plain, will be found to be fresh and substantial. The Boarding department will be managed by Mrs. John W. Steart, while the President and his lady will reside in the buildings and have an immediate and constant supervision of the young ladies. All pupils boarding in the establishment will be required to attend Sabbath School and Church.

The terms are very moderate; indeed it is believed that there is no institution of equal grade and reputation in the Southern country at which an education can be obtained at prices more reasonable.

TERMS:

For a session of four and a half months, payable one-half in advance, and the remainder at the middle of the session—

Board, including Washing, Fuel, and Room Rent, payable in gold or its equivalent in greenbacks, $67 50
Regular Tuition, ... 25 00
Incidental Fee, ... 2 00
Music on Piano or Guitar, with use of Instrument 37 50
French or Spanish, ... 15 00
Ornamental branches at usual prices.

☞ All fees for tuition payable in currency at par.

The daughters of traveling preachers belonging to the Louisiana Conference, will be charged no regular tuition.

After entrance no reduction will be made in either board or tuition, except in cases of protracted sickness. Each pupil desiring to board in the institution will furnish a pair of pillow slips, a pair of sheets, a pair of blankets, and a bed spread, and her own towels and lights; and will have every article of clothing distinctly marked with her name.

For other information address

CHARLES B. STUART, President,

aug4ft Mansfield, La.

PORT GIBSON, MISS., COLLEGIATE ACADEMY—A College for Young Ladies, with a Preparatory and a Primary School.

Officers.	Departments.
A. J. Wright, A.M.,	President, Natural Science and Belles Lettres.
Mrs A. A. Wright,	Principal.
Rev. J. A. B. Jones,	Mathematics and Mental Science.
Rev. Corydon Chamberlin,	Classical Literature and Elocution.
Mrs. M. M. Dwight,	Music, French, Drawing.
Miss Anna M. Ross,	Precepress of Primary School.
Miss Marie S. Muxwell,	Music and Elementary Branches.
To be announced,	Matron.

The course of study, successful completion of which secures a diploma, is a very full one; but daily exercises are continued throughout the whole in Orthography, Elocution, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Grammar and Rhetoric.

Boarders are under special charge of the Lady Principal. They should furnish their own bedclothing.

Board, with English Tuition, at $85 per quarter.

The next session commences 10th September.

Transportation from Grand Gulf is easy and regular. Apply to

A. J. WRIGHT.

D. G. HUMPHREYS, Pres. Board of Trustees.

jy14 6m

SOUTH-WESTERN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Where is it located? Its Depository and Bible-House is at its own building, No. 163 Camp street, New Orleans.

When was it established? 1850.

Who is its General Agent to whom correspondence on its business should be addressed? Rev. James Beattie.

Where is the Society's field of labor? All of Louisiana, and all of Mississippi, south of the 33rd parallel of North latitude.

What is the object of the Society? To explore and supply (gratuitously where needed) the destitution of the Holy Scriptures.

What are the resources and whence the income of the Society? From the annual contributions of its members. Collections at public meetings and anniversaries. Appropriations of the surplus funds of its auxiliaries, the donations of generous individuals, testamentary bequests, and the annual donation in Books of the American Bible Society.

What is the Society's method of work? By cultivating its own local work in the city and district of New Orleans: then through Auxiliary Societies established or to be established in every Parish and County in the field, and the employment by them of such means as will accomplish the object of the Society.

What are the terms of membership?

The payment of $30 at one time constitutes a life member.

The payment of $150 at one time, constitutes a life Director.

The payment of $1000 at one time, constitutes a life Patron.

The payment of $3 annually, constitutes a member.

The taking up of a collection by a church constitutes the Pastor an honorary member.

Having thus briefly stated the main features of the Society's work, income and expenditure, the Board of Directors for the current year confidently ask the aid of all lovers of the Bible, whether professors of religion or not: to strengthen the hands of the S. W. B. S: by founding or reviving Auxiliaries, by donating and urging donations, by exploring and reporting the destitution of the Scriptures, by commencing or renewing memberships of all grades aed by establishing connections with the Society as the Lord has prospered them: according to that Scripture which says "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth where moth and rust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal." To ministers and professing Christians of every Orthodox Protestant Church, the Board of Directors, represented in its body, all such within our bounds, appeals with confidence to aid them by judicious effort, a prompt performence of duty and a prayerful commendation of the Society to the blessing of Almighty God, for except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it; except the Lord keep the city the watchman waketh but in vain.

Our last thought is the heart-cry of the Great Reformation. No forbidding of the Word: no tampering with the text: no man's vote or comment: God's Word: Christ's Word: the Holy Spirit's Word: Free: Free: Free. a25 1y.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

Is located at Brookhaven, Miss. It is under the immediate care of Rev. GEO. F. THOMPSON, and under the supervision of the Mississippi Conference. The Board of Visitors consists of Rev. B. Jones, Rev. W. Milleaps, Rev. George H. Clinton, and Rev. William Price—all members of that Conference.

Its course of instruction is as complete as that of any other institution for the education of females in the State, and is sufficient to accomplish all that can be desired by the friends of our Church.

The exercises of the first term of its next session will begin on the first Monday in September 1866, and ends Jun. 31, 1867.

For further particulars apply to the Rev. G. F. Thompson, Brookhaven, Miss. a18ft

SOULE'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE and Telegraph Institute, 60 Camp Street, corner Nutches—open day and evening.

This is a full course Commercial or Business College, in all its departments perfect. Banks and stores are connected, goods actually bought and sold, the books regularly kept, and all the attendant duties of the clerk, book-keeper, correspondent and merchant are practically performed by the student.

For catalogues containing full information, call at the office, or address

f3 1y GEO. SOULE.

J. W. BLACKMAN'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, New Orleans, corner of Canal and Carondelet streets, entrance on Carondelet. This Institution is mainly devoted to qualifying young men as Clerks or Book-keepers in mercantile and other pursuits. It is open the entire year, both day and evening. Penmanship, Book-keeping, Mathematics, English, French, Spanish and German are practically taught by experienced professors. Persons from 12 to 50 years of age attend. The instruction is private to each student. A separate apartment for ladies. Young persons who have neglected their education, can here speedily perfect themselves in any branch they may wish. The Principal has been a practical teacher in New Orleans since 1851. For further particulars call at the College office, room No. 14, or address

f3-1y J. W. BLACKMAN, Principal.

OPELOUSAS LAND AGENCY.—At the solicitation of numerous friends, the undersigned has consented to become an Agent for the sale and purchase of land in this healthy and much sought after country, above any high water overflow, and where the prospects for crops are so encouraging. He will take very great pleasure in shewing the land to any persons visiting this country, and in giving any other information that may be desired concerning it.

For reference I refer to the Editors of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

JAMES H. HOUSTON,

Sept 4, 1866. Opelousas, La.

TURNER & COHEN,

Photograph and Fine Art Gallery,

NO. 37 CAMP STREET.

Trusting that the liberal patronage of our friends and the public will continue, we have engaged the services of Mr. E. M. HOWELL, an operator who cannot be surpassed for skillful and artistic ability. Our artist, Mr. REICHMAN, is second to none in the country.

These gentlemen, with many others for our business, have lately arrived from New York, and we are now prepared to make pictures from the smallest miniature on your watch dial to full life size portraits.

The public are invited to call and make a critical examination for themselves of the many specimens we have of well known citizens of this city. o13 1y

S. ANDERSON, PHOTOGRAPHER

And PHOTOGRAPHIC STOCK DEALER,

61 Camp street, New Orleans.

Cartes de Visite,

Hallotypes, Ambrotypes,

Pictures on Porcelain,

And every description of Pictures known to the Art.

All kinds of Photographic Materials at the lowest price for cash. sep1 1y

THOS. B. BODLEY & CO.,

No. 9 Perdido Street, New Orleans,

Dealers in all descriptions of

MILL AND PLANTATION MACHINERY,

AND AGRICULTURAL INSTRUMENTS.

Sole Agents in the Southwest for the celebrated Wood & Mann Steam Engines, 4 to 35 horse power; Coleman's Corn and Wheat Mills; Stranb's Corn and Wheat Mills, Smut Machines, Bolting Cloth; Todd's Circular Saw Mills; Wool Carding Machines, Flowery Machines; Stafford Sulky Cultivators; Stanley Cany Plows; Plows, Wheelbarrows, Belting, Saws, etc.

Send for descriptive circulars and price lists. oc13 6m

GEO. W. RACE. WM. H. FOSTER. E. T. MERRICK, Late Chief Justice La.

RACE, FOSTER & E. T. MERRICK,

Attorneys at Law,

CORNER OF CAMP STREET & COMMERCIAL PLACE,

sp15 1y New Orleans.

THE CHILD'S CORNER.

Indications of Character.

At a certain boarding-school, in one of the Northern states, the proprietor gave to such of the pupils as desired it a small piece of excellent land for garden. Most of the members of the school availed themselves of the offer, and, for a time, manifested great zeal and industry in the cultivation of their respective gardens.

As the weather began to grow hot, and the novelty to wear off, some of the gardens were neglected, and the weeds made known that neglect. The number of the delinquents became greater as the summer wore away, and when autumn came only two or three gardens were perfectly free from weeds.

A distinguished visitor, who came to attend the examination of the school, took occasion to examine the garden, and to enquire the names of those who had been thorough and persevering in their cultivation.

When the examination was finished, the teacher called his attention to those who had distinguished themselves by a diligent and successful attention to study.

"You have some fine boys here," said the gentleman, "and I should like to take one of them home with me. I want a lad in my office, and can give him a good chance to make a man of himself."

"I have several here," said the teacher, "who have their own way to make in the world. Any one of them would, I presume, be glad to take a place in your establishment. I can recommend young Evans."

"What is the number of his garden?"

"I don't know. Gardening is not his forte. He has a very quick mind, and is one of my best scholars."

"What kind of a scholar is Hartson? I have heard but a part of his examination."

Hartson was the owner of one of the gardens that had been kept in perfect order throughout the season.

"He is a fair scholar. His mind works slowly, but he is very careful and persevering."

"What are his circumstances?"

"He is an orphan, and is supported by a brother who designs to place him with some business man in the fall."

"Is he upright and trustworthy?"

"As much so as any boy I know."

"He is the boy I want."

The result was that the visitor, after having seen the lad's brother, took him home, and laid the foundation of a splendid fortune, the consequence of many years' faithful labor.

The teacher wondered that he did not select a brighter boy, young Evans, for example. But quickness of parts was not what the gentleman was in search of. He looked for indications of character. Habits of carefulness and perseverance were to him far better indications of success than brilliant talents.

The young should remember that character, that is, right habits, is ground of success in life. Good scholarship is valuable, but good habits are for more valuable. One is not the creator of his talents, but he is the former of his habits. In every department of effort, patient continuance in well-doing will be rewarded by success.—Examiner and Chronicle.

Caro the Bear, and his Little Friend.

A French nobleman owned a tame old bear, which he kept in a stable near his house. There lived old Caro.

One cold Winter evening a poor thinly-clad boy came that way, and because he had no where else to stay overnight, crept into the bear's stall, and made himself comfortable on Caro's soft bed. By and by the old bear came home. The beggar boy was already fast asleep, for he was very tired. Any body would have thought that the bear would have been very angry, and have torn the boy to pieces and eaten him up; but it was not so. He not only let the poor boy rest, but he clasped him with his paws and drew him close up to his thick fur, so that he might not be cold. This hotel seemed very fine to the boy, and the next evening he returned and was treated in the same friendly manner by Caro. Indeed, from this time he was the constant and welcome guest of the bear, who divided with him his meats, and became very fond of him.

After awhile the boy died. The bear grieved for him deeply, and ate but seldom.

SOMETHING WORTH LOOKING FORWARD TO.—It is related of a poor cripple, of almost full-grown body, and withered, helpless limbs, that he helped his mother by creeping on the floor and amusing the younger children while his mother was out washing. A lady on hearing him tell this remarked, "What a life to lead! What has he to look forward to?"

Although the lady did not intend these words for his ear, he overheard them and said in a low voice, with a smile:

"I am looking forward to having wings some day, lady!"

Was he not a happy child with his bright hopes of heaven? Are my little readers as happy with the free exercise of their healthy limbs? May you all so live as to have wings some day!

LEARNING TO WALK.

Only beginning the journey,
Many a mile to go;
Little feet, how they patter,
Wandering to and fro.

Trying again, so bravely,
Laughing in baby glee;
Hiding its face in mother's lap,
Proud as a baby can be.

Talking the oddest language
Ever before was heard;
But mother (you'd hardly think so)
Understands every word.

Tottering now and falling,
Eyes that are going to cry,
Kisses and plenty of love-words,
Willing again to try.

Father of all, O! guide them,
The pattering little feet,
While they are treading the up-hill road,
Braving the dust and heat!

Aid them when they grow weary,
Keep them in pathways blest,
And when the journey's ended,
Saviour, O! give them rest.

NEW ORLEANS MARKETS.

From the N. O. Price Current.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

With the exception of increased improvement in cotton we have no change of importance to notice in the general market during the past few days. Sugar and Molasses have exhibited no variation, and Western produce has been attended with about the usual movement, while operations in our leading staple have been on a very liberal scale, and owing to an improvement at New York and Liverpool prices have risen to the extent of 1c per lb.

COTTON — Yesterday the market opened with a limited enquiry, but subsequently the demand became more general, and although the movement was checked by the poorly assorted offerings, and the refusal on the part of the holders to make any concessions, still the sales at the close amounted to 1400 bales at prices showing, in some instances, a tendency to easier rates, but on the whole within the range of our quotations.

Low	—	to —
Ordinary	32	to 34
Good Ordinary	36	to 37
Low Middling	38	to 39
Middling	41	to —

TOBACCO—There has been some enquiry on foreign account, but without resulting in any sales. The stock on hand is small and is very firmly held, factors refusing to make any concessions whatever from previous prices.

	Light.	Heavy.
Low Refused	3½ to —	— to 4½	Currency.
Good do	5 to —	— to 5¾
Common Leaf	6 to —	— to 7½
Fair	8 to —	— to 10
Good	11 to —	— to 12
Fine	13 to —	— to 15
Choice Selec'n	15 to —	— to 20

SUGAR—There is no Louisiana Sugar in the market, and the stock on hand of the production of Cuba is small. It is retailing at 12½ to 13¼c per lb. Cuba Sugar, in boxes, is retailing in store, at 12½ to 13c for Nos. 12 and 13, 13½ to 14¼c for Nos. 14 and 15, 15½ to 16¼c for Nos. 16 and 18, and 17 to 17½c for Nos. 19 and 20.

MOLASSES— There is no Louisiana in market and very little of that of Cuba. It is quoted by the cargo at 57 to 58c per gallon.

